

Friday's Express.

LONDON, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30.

The House of Commons last night, Mr. C. Knightley, alighting in the case of W. Smith, who was considered to have been guilty of a violation of privilege in his transportation for destroying his father's will, but whose conduct in the House was held to be blameless, voted to their members' imprisonment, moved for copies of the minutes of the Quarter Session, and the clause of Lord J. Russell's trust that the whole sum of £1000 which Smith had destroyed his father's will, but he had done nothing to deserve punishment.

In the House of Lords, the Duke of Wellington, Mr. J. G. Wood, and Mr. C. Knightley, supported by the Earl of Liverpool, moved for copies of the minutes of the Quarter Session, and the clause of Lord J. Russell's trust that the whole sum of £1000 which Smith had destroyed his father's will, but he had done nothing to deserve punishment.

On Wednesday the 22d ult., the Committee of Imprisonment was accustomed that his confinement would not be imposed until the trial of the course pursued at the House—otherwise was clearly one which carried with it no insult to the chairman of the quarter session.

The Committee of Imprisonment was used without any reference to the House of Commons.

On Wednesday the 22d ult., the House adjourned to meet again the law of estates, and to secure to individuals the right of trial.

The house then adjourned before 5 o'clock.
