G L O S S A R Y,

EXPLAINING THE

SEVERAL TERMS

USED IN THE

SCIENCE OF HERALDRY.

A B A

A

A I S

THE letter A is used as a bearing in arms; as are also all the other letters of the alphabet. For example:

Gu. on a fesse ar. a Roman A, by the name of Aithoun.
ABAISSE', French. When the fesse, or any other armorial figure, is depressed, or situate below the centre of the shield, it is said to be Abaisse'.

ABATEMENT signifies some accidental mark annexed to the paternal coat of any family, as a symbol significative of some base and ungentleman-like behaviour, or infamy, whereby such coat is abated, or lowered, as to its dignity. These marks of Abatement are nine in number, and have been treated of in the former parts of this work.

ACCIDENTS of Arms can have no meaning in blazonry, although frequently mentioned by Authors, who affirm them to be no more than the strictures and marks of differences.

ACCIOCHE', a French term, to express any heraldic charge that is hooked in another.

ACCOLLE', a French term, used to express a crest or supporter collared. The French use the same word to signify two batons, swords, &c. placed behind a shield. The English use the word gorged, instead of collared.

ACORN. See Plate XIII. Fig. 13.

ACORN, slipped and leaved. See Plate XIII. Fig. 12.

ACORNED. When an oak-tree is represented with acorns on it, it is said to be acorned, or fruited. See Plate XIII. Fig. 2.

ACOSTED is a term not often used in English heraldry. It hath the same signification with cottised; as a bend fesse or pale, flanked by any thing. See Plate II. Fig. 22. which may be thus blazoned: Ar. a pale engrailed az. acosted by two pallets gu. But it would be better to blazon it thus: Ar. a pale engrailed az. between two pallets gu.

ACCRUED is a term used in heraldry, to express a tree full-grown.

ADOSSÉD, ADORSED, or ENDORSED. These three words are used, by different Heralds, to express the same meaning; when any two animals, birds, fish, or other bearings, are placed back to back; as in Plate X. Fig. 24. they are said to be adosséd. The two keys in Plate VI. Fig. 53. are termed endorf d, or adosséd.

ADVANCERS are the top branches shooting from the attire of a flag.

ADUMBRATION signifies the shadow only of any beast or charge, out-lined and painted of a colour darker than the field.—N. B. This sort of bearing is frequently to be met with in the French and German Authors; but I have not met with it in any English coat.

AFFRONTE', the same as Confronté. When a Savage's head is full-faced, it is said to be affronted. It is often made use of in the same sense as gardant.

AFFRONTE'. When any two animals, fish, birds, &c. are placed so as to face each other, they are said to be affronté, or confronté. Some of our modern Heralds have substituted the words respecting each other instead of affronté.

AIGLETTE, French, a small eagle. See EAGLETS.

AIGUISE', sharp or pointed, the same as Fitché. When a cross is made sharp in the under part of the shaft, it is called Aiguissé, or Fitché. The Latins say, Cuspidata, or Spiculata. The reason of having them so, was from an old custom of the Christians, who carried, in their pilgrimages, little crosses, sharp at the point, which they fixed in the ground before them, when at their devotions. See Plate IV. Fig. 35. In the English blazon it is called a Cross Urdé.

AIGUISE'E, or EQUISE. A Cross Equise is a cross coupé, voided, and pointed. See Plate IV. Fig. 35. In English blazon, it is called a Cross Urdée.

AISLE', winged, or having wings.—N. B. I have used the word winged throughout the work, in preference to Aissé.

ALAISE/E, coupé. Vide HUMETTE/E.

ALANT, a mastiff dog with short ears. It is one of the Supporters to the Arms of the Right Hon. Lord Dacres. See Plate X. Fig. 40.

A LA QUISE, or CUISSE, a French term for an eagle's leg erased at the thigh. See Plate XII. Fig. 20.

ALCANTARA, Order of Knighthood in Spain: for the description of which, see the thirty-fifth in the several Orders of Knighthood; and for the badge, see the First Plate of Orders, Fig. 16.

ALIECE', French. Coupé or cut off from the side of a shield.

ALLERIONS are eagles or eaglets, represented in arms, displayed, without beaks and feet, like the heraldic martlet. The Latins call them Aquila Mutile. See Plate XII. Fig. 30 and 31.

ALLUME/E, French. When the eyes of a boar or other beast are drawn sparkling and red, he is said to be Allumé.

ALTAR, as used by the Romans, is always drawn in Heraldry as an Altar inflamed. See Plate VIII. Fig. 21.

AMETHYST, the name of a precious stone, by which some Heralds, in blazoning the achievements of Peers, call the ground or charge when it is purple.

ANCHORS are too well known, to require any description in this place. When one or more anchors are used in coat-armour, they should be drawn and placed as in Plate XI. Fig. 57; but if they are placed in any other position, such position must be mentioned in the blazon.

ANCRE/E, ANCRE'D, or ANCHORED, is said of a cross when its extremities turn back like the flukes of an anchor; or terminate like the Cross Patonce, but in a sharper turn. See Plate III. Fig. 59.—N. B. Care must be taken not to mistake the Cross Ancrée for the Cross Molins, which is much of the same form, and by some of the old Heralds called a Cross Ancrée, or Anchored.

ANDREW, ST. Order of Knighthood. See the account of the different Orders, and Plate I. (of the Collars) Fig. 3.

ANGEL, with wings expanded, and hands in air, placed in an elevated position. See Plate V. Fig. 33.

ANGEL Volant. His dexter hand pointing to heaven; his sinister hand pointing to the base: from his mouth a scroll; thereon four letters, viz. G. I. E. D. signifying, Gloria In Excelsis Deo. See Plate V. Fig. 34.

AN ANGEL, with wings expanded, kneeling, and in a praying position. See Plate V. Fig. 35.

ANGLES (two) interlaced faltierwise; at each end an annulet. See Plate VII. Fig. 64.—N. B. Three pair of such are borne by the name of Waffley.

ANILLE, French. A millrind, or fer-de-moline.

ANIME', a French term, used when the eyes of any rapacious creature are borne of a different tincture. In the English, we blazon it incensed.

ANNULET, a ring, from the Latin Annulus. See Plate II. Fig. 1. A pale between two Annulets.—N. B. The colour of the Annulet must always be expressed.

ANNULETS (two) conjoined in fesse. See Plate II. Fig. 23.

ANNULETS (three) conjoined in triangle. See Plate XV. Fig. 50. in base.

ANSHENT, or ANCIENT, a small flag or streamer set up on the stern of a ship, or on a tent.—N. B. The guidon used at funerals was called an Anshent.

ANT, an insect. When borne in coat-armour, it must be drawn as in Plate VII. Fig. 58.

ANTE, or ENTE, Fr. signifies pieces engrafted into each other.

ANTELOPE, a well-known small-limbed animal, of the deer kind, with two straight taper horns. In arms granted by the modern Heralds, this beast is drawn according to nature; but the ancient Heralds painted a strange fictitious animal, under the name of an Antelope. The body is like that of a stag, with the tail of a unicorn, a tuft issuing from the tip of the nose, a row of tufts like ornaments down the back part of the neck, and the like tufts on his tail, chest, and thighs. See Plate X. Fig. 57.—N. B. When, in the course of this work, I have occasion to speak of the Antelope, as granted by former Heralds, I call it an Heraldic Antelope.

ANTIQUÉ TEMPLE, as borne in the arms of Templar. See Plate VIII. Fig. 14.

ANVIL, a tool used by Smiths, and borne in arms, as in Plate VII. Fig. 39.

APAUME/E is a French term, to express a hand open and extended, so that the full palm appears. See Plate XIV. Fig. 19 and 20.

APPLE. This fruit is painted in armory with a small stalk, as in Plate XIII. Fig. 22.

APRES, a fictitious animal, used as the sinister supporter to the arms of the Moscovy Merchants. It is drawn as a bull, with a short tail like that of the bear.

ARCHES are borne in coat-armour, both double and single; and must be drawn as springing from, or supported by, pillars, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 15, and 16.

ARGENT, the common French word for Silver; of which metal all white fields, or charges, are supposed to consist.—N. B. Formerly Silver was commonly used in arms and crest; but, as it very soon turned black, white was substituted in its stead. If a field of a coat is argent, and is intended to be represented on a copper-plate, or seal, it is left plain. See Plate I. Fig. 3.

ARK, (i. e. Noah's Ark.) When borne in armorial bearings, must be drawn as in Plate V. Fig. 65.

ARM Erect, coupé at the elbow, proper, grasping a truncheon. See Plate XIV. Fig. 22.

ARM Erect, coupé at the elbow, vested az. cuffed ar. holding in the hand proper, a broken dart. See Plate XIV. Fig. 23.—N. B. When the sleeve of the vestment has a cuff, it is generally of a different tincture.

ARM. Three arms embowed and conjoined in fesse proper, habited az. as in Plate XIV. Fig. 24.—N. B. In blazon, you are to say, Three arms proper, although nothing is seen but the hands, because you afterwards mention the habit over the arms.

ARM. Two arms rending a horse-shoe. See Plate XV. Fig. 48.

ARM. Two arms erect, and embowed proper, supporting a cup. See Plate XIV. Fig. 27.

ARM, in armour, embowed proper, coupé below the wrist, the hand dropping; therein a spear. See Plate XIV. Fig. 67.

ARM Armed, is an arm in armour embowed, the hand clinched, as in Plate ~~VIII~~ Fig. 10.

ARM Erect, in armour, holding in the hand proper, a truncheon. See Plate IX. Fig. 12.

ARMARIUM HONORIS. See CABINET DES ARMES.

ARMED. French, Armé: Latin, Armatus. When the horns, teeth, hoofs, of any beast, or the beak, or talons, of any bird, are borne of a tincture different from that of the creature itself, it is said to be armed so and so.

ARMED at all Points. A term used for a man completely covered with armour, except his face. See one so armed on horseback, in the middle of Plate IX. Fig. 53.

ARMING BUCKLES. A buckle in the shape of a lozenge. See Plate VI. Fig. 11.

ARMORIE, or ARMORY. The name given to the knowledge of coat-armour, and ensigns of nobility and honour.

ARMOUR for a Man's Body. See Plate IX. Fig. 9.

ARMOUR for a Horse's Head. See Plate IX. Fig. 19.

ARMS of ULSTER; viz. an escutcheon ar. charged with a sinister hand coupé gu.—N. B. This is worn on the paternal coat of each English Baronet, as in Plate I. Fig. 13.

ARMS. The names given to such devices, as, when painted on a shield, form the coat.

ARONDIA, Fr. signifies any thing circular; as for example, Gironny of three, arondia. See Plate XV. Fig. 44.

ARONDIE. See CROSS ARONDIE.

ARRACHE',

ARRACHE', the French term for erased, or forcibly torn off. See ERAZED.

ARROW barbed and feathered. See Plate IX. Fig. 33.

ARROWS, in bundles or parcels, are usually called Sheaves of Arrows; and must be drawn in coat-armour as in Plate XV. Fig. 47.

ASH KEYS. The seeds that grow in bunches on ash-trees. See Plate XIII. Fig. 38.—N. B. They are generally called, in Armory, Ash Keys.

ASPERSED. This term is used by some Authors instead of powdered, or strewn.

ASPIN LEAF. See Plate XIII. Fig. 14.

ASSEMBLE, in French, the same as Droe-tail in the English Blazon.

ASSIS, sitting. See SEIANT.

ASSUMPTIVE Arms. For a full account of Arms of Assumption, see the Treatise on Blazoning, at the beginning of this Work.

ASSURGENT, a term used for a man or beast rising out of the sea.

ATCIEVEMENT signifies the arms, crests, and supporters, which a person has a lawful right to bear, with all the exterior ornaments, as helmet, mantle, motto, &c. See Plate XVII. Fig. 1. See also FUNERAL ATCIEVEMENTS.

ATTIRE, a single horn of a stag. See Plate X. Figure 64.

ATTIRED, a term used in speaking of the horns of a stag, hart, or buck.—N. B. The horns of bulls, unicorns, rams, &c. are called arms.

ATTIRES of a Stag, are both the horns.—N. B. If they are borne fixed to the scalp, that circumstance must, in the blazon, be mentioned thus—The Attires of a stag affixed to the scalp. See Plate X. Fig. 63.

AVE, the first word in the Latin Salutation of the Holy Virgin, is used as a bearing in arms; as, Gu. on a fesse ar. the word AVE, by the name of Nadler.

AVELLANE, a term peculiar to the form of a cross, whose quarters resemble the Nux Avellana, or Philbert-nut. See Cross Avellane.

AUGMENTATION to ARMS has been already treated of, in the Treatise on Blazoning.

AVIS, an Order of Knighthood. See the different Orders, and Plate I. of the Collars, Fig. 12.

AX, or HATCHET. See Plate VI. Fig. 65.

AX, Bricklayer's. See Plate XV. Fig. 50. viz. in chief a Bricklayer's ax.

AX, i. e. Slaughter-Ax, as in the Butchers' arms. See Plate VIII. Fig. 70.

AX, of Lochabar, in Scotland. See LOCHABAR AX. See Plate XV. Fig. 29.

AYLETS, or SEA-SWALLOWS, are generally painted sable beaked and legged gu. They are often called Cornish Choughs.

AZURE signifies blue. The French, in their blazon, use the same word. It is always expressed, in engraving of arms, by horizontal lines. See Plate I. Fig. 5.

B

BADÉLAIRES, French. Crooked swords or cutlasses.

BADGER, as in Plate X. Fig. 69.—N. B. This being the common position, you need not say Passant.

BAG OF MADDER, as drawn in the Dyers Arms. See Plate VII. Fig. 5.—N. B. In Coats of Arms, Bags of Madder, and all other bale goods, are represented as packed in the same manner as here depicted.

BAILLONE', a French word, intended to express a lion rampant, holding a baton in his mouth. This term is never used in English armory.

BALE CORDED, the same as Bag of Madder. See BAG OF MADDER.

BALISTA, is an engine used by the Ancients for throwing stones at the time of a siege. When painted in armory, it is represented as charged with a stone. See Plate IX. Fig. 41.—N. B. Segar, Guillim, and other Heraldic Writers, call it a Sweep.

BALL, fired proper. See FIRE-BALL.

BANDE', or in bend. The only use of this word, in heraldry, is to express the position of a lion when he is placed diagonally in the field, in which case the blazon is thus, Ar. a lion bandé; but I think that it would be better to blazon it, Ar. a lion in bend.

BANDÉD. When the band of a garb, or wheat-sheaf, &c. is of a colour different from that of the garb itself, it is said to be banded: For example, Ar. a garb. gu. banded or. See the BAND on the Garb, Plate XIII. Fig. 59.

BANDEROLE, a streamer affixed by small lines or strings immediately under the crook on the top of the staff of a crosser, and folding over the staff. See Plate XIV. Fig. 56.

BANNER developed. See Plate VIII. Fig. 54.

BANNERET, an Order of Knighthood, supposed to have been instituted in 736, conferred by sovereign Princes on valiant and heroic men under the royal standard in the field. See a further account of BANNERETS in the different Orders of Knighthood.—N. B. In France, this Order is hereditary.

BANNER-ROLLS are banners used at funerals. See the Account of Funerals, as also Plate XVII. Fig. 8.

BAR. This is an ordinary, in form of, but less than, the Fesse, of which it is a diminution. It hath already been treated on in the Introductory Discourse. The French call it Fiste. See Plate II. Fig. 32. viz. Per bend sa. and ar. a Bar counterchanged.—N. B. This Ordinary differs from the Fesse in the following particular: it may be placed in any part of the field, but the Fesse cannot.

BAR-GEMEL is a double bar, or two bars placed near and parallel to each other. Fr. Jumelles. Lat. Jugaria Fasciola, Fasciola Gemella, and Fasciola Duplices. See Plate III. Fig. 21.

BAR-SHOT, a small bar of iron, having a ball or shot at each of its ends. See, Plate IX. Fig. 28. a bar-shot between a steel cap and the cronel of a tilting-spear.

BARs. You may place any number of bars on a field, only be sure to name the quantity: for example, Gu. four bars ar. as in Plate II. Fig. 31.

BARBED. The five petals or leaves which appear on the outside of a full-blown rose, are in Heraldry called the Barbs. A rose gu. barbed and seeded proper, is to be represented in painting thus: The rose gu. the barbs vert, and the seeds in the centre gold. See Plate XIII. Fig. 56.

BARBED ARROW, means an arrow whose head is pointed and jagged. See Plate IX. Fig. 33.

BARBED HORSE, or a horse barbed at all points, is a war-horse completely armed, furnished, and accoutred. See Plate IX. Fig. 53.

BARBED and CRESTED, a term used in blazoning, to express the comb and gills of a cock, particularly if they are of a different tincture from the body. The usual term in the English blazon is combed and wattled.

BARBE', or CROIX BARBE'. See BARBED CROSS, under the article CROSSES.

BARBLE, a fresh-water fish frequently met with in coats of arms; and, although quite strait, is always drawn by Heralds embowed as a dolphin.

BARNACLE, a large water-fowl, somewhat resembling a goose. See Plate XII. Fig. 62. The Barnacle hath a flat broad bill, with a hooked point; the fore part of the head is white, with a bead of black between the eyes; the neck, and fore-part of the breast, are black; the belly is white and brown; the thighs blackish; the back black and brown; the

- the tail black; the wings black, brown, and ash colour; and the legs and feet brown.
- BARNACLES, an instrument which Farriers place on the upper lip of a horse, in order to cow and keep him quiet when they bleed him. They were originally made in the form as engraved in this Work: in arms, they are borne either closed, or extended. See Plate VI. Fig. 12.
- BARON, a title of honour, being the next degree beneath that of Viscount.
- BARON'S CORONET. The Barons of England originally wore scarlet caps turned up with white: they afterwards wore crimson caps turned up with ermine, and on the top a tassel of gold. This they continued 'till the reign of Charles II. when, on their petition, they had a coronet granted to them by patent, bearing date the 6th of July, 1661. See Plate XVI. Fig. 19.
- BARON AND FEMME, terms used in Blazonry, to express the arms of Husband and Wife impaled, or marshalled together: as thus, He beareth Baron and Femme. These words are used by the French; and, literally translated into English, are, Man and Woman. The modern expression is, He beareth impaled; which, in my opinion, is the best mode. See Plate I. in the Line of Shields, No. 7 and 8.
- BARONET of England, an hereditary dignity, next to that of the Peers of the realm; instituted by King James I. anno 1611. The badge worn by each Baronet is the Arms of Ulster; viz. On an escutcheon ar. a sinister hand coupé and erect gu. which should always be borne on the centre or chief of the arms, and not on a canton. See Plate I. Fig. 13.
- BARRE UNE, French. A bend sinister.
- BARRELET, or BARRULET, a diminution of the Bar, consisting of the quarter part thereof. See Plate III. Fig. 20. as also Fig. 22. Or, three torteauxes between two Barrulets engrailed gu. Plate VII. Fig. 72. a barrulet on a chief, enfiled with an annulet.
- BARRULY. The field of the shield of Arms is so called, when it is divided barways into many equal parts.
- BARRY. When the coat is divided transverse into several equal partitions, and consisting of two or more tinctures, interchangeably disposed, it is called Barry of so many divisions, as of six, eight, ten, or twelve, it being necessary to specify the number; as thus, Barry of six; over all a fustl. See Plate II. Fig. 64.
- BARRY BENDY COUNTERCHANGED, is when the bars are crossed by lines bendwise, as in Plate II. Fig. 21.
- BARRY INDENTED, is when the lines which cross the field to form the bar are indented.
- BARRY WAVY, and BARRY NEBULE, are formed in the same manner by the lines being wavy nebule. See the lines of Partition in Plate I.
- BARRY LOZENGIE, Counterchanged. See Plate XV. Fig. 26.
- BASE. The bottom of the shield is called the Base; and the charges thereon are said to be in Base. See Plate I. Fig. 1. with the letters A, B, C, D, &c. thereon, in which figure, G, H, I. denote the base of the escutcheon.
- BASILISK, an imaginary animal, represented in shape like the fictitious heraldic wivern or cockatrice, and with the head of a dragon at the end of its tail. See Plate XI. Fig. 39. —N. B. It is called the Amphisfen Cockatrice, from having two heads.
- BASKET with a handle, as in the arms of Wolfston. See Plate VI. Fig. 50.
- BASKET, or SHRUTTLE, for winnowing corn. See Plate VI. Fig. 48. —N. B. By some called a Fan, by others a Winnowing-Basket.
- BASKET OF LOAVES, as in the arms of Bethlem hospital. See Plate VII. Fig. 46. —Three such Baskets of bread are also the arms of Milton Abbey.
- BASKET, as borne in the arms of Littleborne. See Plate III. Fig. 37.
- BASTON. See BATTON.
- BATCHELORS (Knights). See the account of the several Orders of Knighthood in the former part of this work.
- BATH (Knights of the) See the several Orders of Knighthood, and Plate I. of the different Collars, Fig. 3.
- BAT, or RERE-MOUSE. When a Bat is borne in coat-armour, it is to be represented as displayed, as in Plate XI. Fig. 40. —N. B. As there is no other position to place a Bat in than displayed, that word may be omitted in blazoning; it being sufficient to say a Bat, and no more.
- BATTLED ARRONDE'E, signifies that the battlement is to be circular on the top.
- BATTLED EMBATTLED is one battlement upon another.
- BATTERING-RAM, an engine used in the siege of a town, citadel, or fortification, before the invention of gun-powder. Battering-Rams were made of large pieces of timber fastened together with iron hoops, and had an iron head in shape like that of a ram. These being suspended at a proper height, were swung against the walls in order to make a breach therein. See Plate IX. Fig. 50. viz. in chief a Battering-Ram, in base a Galtrap.
- BATTLE-AX, an instrument used in war. See Plate IX. Fig. 24 and 27.
- BATTON, or BASTON, as properly written, Staff; by the English variously called, as Batton, Battoon, and Bastune; signifying a staff or truncheon. When in arms, it is usually a mark of bastardy. All nations make the Batton coupé; that is, so short that its extremities do not touch either the dexter chief or sinister points of the shield. The French make the Batton very short, and call it Baton Peri. See Plate II. Fig. 42.
- BAT'S WINGS. Both the dexter and sinister wing are borne in arms, and may be drawn from the Figure above referred to, under the term Bat.
- BAUDRICK, a broad belt which anciently Knights used to wear over the right shoulder, and under the left arm, whereat hung a sword. Some of the old French Heralds suppose, that the Bend is intended to represent the Baudrick.
- BAUTEROLL. See BOTTEROLL.
- BEACON. See FIRE BEACON.
- BEAKED. In French, Beequé, or Bequé, the bill or beak of a bird. When the beak and claws of a bird are of a different tincture, they are blazoned, beaked and clawed, or membered; but the beak and claws of all birds of prey are called Arms. Thus when we say, an eagle proper, armed or, we mean that the bird is to be painted of its natural colour, and that its beak and claws are to be gold.
- BEAM, the main horn of a buck.
- BEAR, a beast of prey. A bear passant, muzzled, see Plate X. Fig. 43.
- BEAR rampant, muzzled. See Plate X. Fig. 44.
- BEAR'S head and neck erased and muzzled. See Plate X. Fig. 45.
- BEAR'S paw erased and erect. See Plate X. Fig. 46.
- BEAVER. See Plate X. Fig. 67.
- BEAVERS TAILS. Three Beavers Tails erect, two and one. See Plate X. Fig. 72.
- BEE. See Plate XII. Fig. 69.
- BEE-HIVE, beset with bees promiscuously volant, as in Plate XII. Fig. 36.
- BEFFROY, the same as Vair.
- BELLFREY, that part of the Steeple or tower of a church in which bells are hung. Such is the Crest of Porter. See Plate VIII. Fig. 55.
- BELLOWS, when in coat-armour, are to be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 49.
- BELLS. Those fixed to the legs of a hawk are, in Heraldry, to be represented as round. See Plate XII. Fig. 20.—

N. B. When Bells are fixed to the legs, the hawk is said to be belled.
BELLS, such as are hung in steeples, are called in Heraldry Church-Bells, to distinguish them from those which are tied to the legs of hawks. See Plate VI. Fig. 41.
BEND, in French Bande, is one of the nine ordinaries already treated of: it occupies one third part of the field when charged, and one fifth when plain, and is drawn diagonally from the dexter chief to the sinister base. See Plate II. Fig. 24.
BEND SINISTER, Fr. is drawn diagonally from the sinister chief to the dexter base. See Plate III. Fig. 10.
BEND EN DEVISE, Fr. The same as BENDLET.
PER BEND, the field divided by one diagonal line, as in Plate II. Fig. 23.
PER BEND, sa and ar. a bar counterchanged. See Plate II. Fig. 32.
BEND RAGULY. See Plate II. Fig. 28.—N. B. In the shield here referred to, are two Bends Raguly, the under one coupé, which the French term Alliéé.
BEND FLORY COUNTER-FLORY, is a Bend with fleurs-de-lis issuing from its sides. See Plate III. Fig. 1.
BEND ENGOULE', a French term for a Bend, each end whereof enters the mouth of lions, leopards, dragons, &c. See Plate VII. Fig. 70.
BEND between two cottises indented. See Plate III. Fig. 2.
BEND fimbriated, fimbriated, or bordered all round. See Plate III. Fig. 3.—N. B. When the border doth not pass all round the Bend, it is called a Bend surmounted of another.
BEND charged with three chevrons. In charges of this sort, the points of the chevrons must be placed in the middle of the Bend, and on a line with the dexter chief point. See Plate III. Fig. 5.
BEND per Bend indented. The Bend is here of two colours, and divided with indents like those of a faw. See Plate III. Fig. 4.
BEND Gobony, or Compony, or and az. See Plate III. Fig. 6.
BEND Compony counter-compony. See Plate III. Fig. 7.
BEND Chequy. See Plate III. Fig. 8.
BEND debruised, fracted, or removed between two cottises. See Plate II. Fig. 27.
BENDLET is the first diminutive of the Bend, and possesses one half of the breadth of the Bend. See Plate II. Fig. 25. a Bendlet between a garter in base, and a cottise in chief.
BENDWAYS, or in BEND. By this term we are to understand such charges as are placed so as to occupy that part of the escutcheon to which the Bend is allotted, or such as are placed obliquely, resembling a Bend.
BENDY, a term used in Heraldry, when an escutcheon is divided bend-ways into an equal number of partitions: as for example, Bendy of six az. and ar. in Plate II. Fig. 26.—N. B. The field may be bendy of eight, ten, twelve, or more.
BENDY of six per bend sinister, counterchanged. See Plate II. Fig. 40.
BEQUE'. See BEAKED.
A BESOM, or BROOM, as borne in arms. See Plate VIII. Fig. 59.
BEVILE is by some used to express any thing broken or open like a Bevel or rule used by carpenters, bricklayers, &c. See Plate I. Fig. 3.—N. B. It seldom occurs in English armory.
BEZANTIE. When the field is powdered with bezants, or when supporters or crests are strewed with them, the proper heraldic term is Bezantie. When a border is charged with eight bezants, that being the limited number, you need not express the number, but say, a border sa. bezantis.

BEZANTLIER signifies the second branch of the horn of a hart or buck, that shoots from the main beam, and is the next above the brow-antler.
BEZANTS represent, in armories, round and flat pieces of gold or silver without any impression on them, being, as it is said, the old money of Byzantium, or Constantinople, whence they took their name. Bezants are always gold; but the foreign Heralds make them both gold and silver.—N. B. There is one instance wherein the Bezant changes its name for that of Roundel, viz. Per pale or and gu. on three roundels, counterchanged.
BILLETTE'. When a charge in a coat, or supporters, is strewed with billets, it is termed Billetté.
BILLETS are square figures, whose length exceeds their breadth. Authors differ much in regard to the Billet, and have not yet determined what it was originally intended to represent. It is a French and German bearing, as well as English; and the Heralds of France and Germany make them in the same form. See Plate V. Fig. 21, viz. Six Billets, three, two, and one. Fig. 22, in chief three Billets, two and one.
BILLS. See FOREST or WOODBILLS.
BIRD-BOLT is a small arrow with a blunt head. See Plate IX. Fig. 23.—N. B. Bird-Bolts are often represented in armory with two or three heads rounded, as in Fig. 23, before mentioned; but in such case the number of heads must always be mentioned.
BIRDS of all sorts are used in Heraldry, and expressed by their respective names; but the English blazonry of many coats calls such charges Birds only, being so styled in the original grant. When this is the case, the Birds are always drawn as in Plate XII. Fig. 26.
BISHOP, habited in his pontificals, sitting in a chair of state, leaning on his sinister foot, and holding in his left hand a crozier; being the arms of the See of Clogher, in Ireland. See Plate XIV. Fig. 3.
BITT, belonging to a manage-bridle. See Plate IX. Fig. 22.—N. B. This sort of Bitt is called a Manage Bitt.
BITT, SNAFFLE, as in the arms of Milner. See Plate IX. Fig. 39.
BLADED is a term made use of in Heraldry when the stalk or blade of any kind of grain or corn is in arms borne of a colour different from the ear or fruit. Thus, Ar. an ear of wheat or, bladed vert. See Plate XIII. Fig. 60, 61, 62, 63.
BLANCH LYON, an ancient title of one of the officers formerly belonging to the College of Arms, London.
BLAZING-STAR. See COMET.
BLAZON, or BLASON, Lat. Blasonia, a word used to signify the description of things borne in arms in such manner as they ought to be represented according to the rule of Heraldry. It originally signified the blowing or winding of a horn, and was introduced as a term in Heraldry from an ancient custom used by the Heralds, at jousts and tournaments, of winding of a horn when they proclaimed and recorded the achievements of the combatants.
BLAZONRY, the same as BLAZON.
BLOCK-BRUSHES, a term made use of by Heralds to express a bundle or bunch of kneeholm, or bastard myrtle, used by butchers to clean the surface of their chopping-blocks, &c. For Block-Brushes, as made a charge in the arms of the Company of Butchers, see Plate XV. Fig. 24.
BLOOD-HOUND, when borne in armory, should always be drawn on scent, as in Plate XV. Fig. 8.
BLUE-BOTTLE, i. e. a flower of the Cyanus. See Plate XIII. Fig. 68.
BLUE-MANTLE, a title of one of the Pursuivants in the College of Arms, London.
BOAR, in Heraldry, is always understood to mean the Wild Boar; therefore it always should be drawn as in Plate XI. Fig. 25.

BOAR'S HEAD erased. See Plate XI. Fig. 31.
BOAR'S HEAD erect and erased. See Plate XI. Fig. 30.
BOAR'S HEAD and NECK coupéd. See Plate XI. Fig. 29.
BOATS of various denominations are used in armorial bearings; but that which Herald's deem to be the principal one is always to be drawn as in Plate XI. Fig. 55.
BOLT AND TUN is, in Heraldry, a bird-bolt in pale, piercing through a tun, as in Plate VII. Fig. 21.
BONFIRE. See Plate V. Fig. 59.
BONNET, a Cap of Velvet, worn within a coronet.
BOOK with seven Seals. See Plate VI. Fig. 51.
BOOK, or BIBLE, (garnished and clasped). See Plate VI. Fig. 52.
BORDER. Fr. Bordure. Lat. Bordura, Limbus, Margo, and Fimbria, or Fimbria. The Border is looked upon by the French Herald's as an honourable ordinary, and with them, like all other ordinaries, possesses one third part of the shield; wherefore Monf. Baron says, that it is a shield surrounding a shield, diminished to a third part. With us it is considered not as one of the honourable ordinaries, but as a mark of difference, to distinguish the one part of a family from the other; as were Bends, &c. &c. and it is certainly much more to the purpose than are those small insignificant marks now made use of. When used as a distinction of houses, the Border must be continued all round the edge of the field, and be of an equal width, taking up one fifth part of the field, as in Plate V. Fig. 5. It must not have any shadow, but be parted from the field with a fine line only, except when there is a chief in the coat; in which case the Border runs under the chief. When any other ordinary, as a chevron, fesse, pale, bend, &c. is in the coat, the Border passeth over them, as in Plate II. Fig. 14. If a coat be impaled with another, either on the dexter or sinister side, and hath a Border, the Border must finish at the impaled line, and not proceed round the coat, as is too often practised. See Plate V. Fig. 18. If the Border is plain, as at Fig. 5, it is blazoned thus: Azure, a Border ar. if a Border is charged with bezants, plates, billets, or pellets, then it is to be termed a Border sa. Bezzantée, Platiée, Billetée, or Pelletée. All other charges must be expressly mentioned as to number and colour. Borders are borne many different ways, as

BORDER per Border indented.	See Plate V. Fig. 1.
BORDER Flory Counter-flory	— — Fig. 2.
BORDER Invested Gobony	— — Fig. 3.
BORDER Dovetail	— — Fig. 4.
BORDER Gobony	— — Fig. 7.
BORDER Gobony Counter-gobony	— — Fig. 8.
BORDER Chequy	— — Fig. 9.
BORDER per Pale, charged with six roundels counterchanged	— — Fig. 10.
BORDER Quarterly, ermine and gu.	— — Fig. 11.
BORDER Indented	— — Fig. 12.
BORDER of France and England	— — Fig. 13.
BORDER Vaire	— — Fig. 14.
BORDER Nebulée	— — Fig. 15.
BORDER Bendy	— — Fig. 16.
BORDER Crenellée, or Embattled	— — Fig. 17.
BORDER Engrailed on the dexter side, and invested on the sinister	} — Fig. 18.

BORDER point in point indented. This differs from the Border per Border indented, as the indents must be from line to line, as in Plate V. Fig. 19.
BORDER of the Field. See Plate V. Fig. 20. This Border is never used in English armory; although very commonly, both in the French and German.
BORDER Entier, or, as commonly called, Entoyer or Entoire. So called when charged with inanimate things, as bezants, escallop-shells, &c.
BORDER Enaluron. So called when charged with birds.
BORDER Enurny, when charged with lions.

BORDER Verdoy, when charged with vegetables.
BORDER Purflewed, when it is shaped like vaire.
BORDER Waved, when the border is parted from the field by a waved line.
BORDURE, Fr. a Border.
BORDURED, bordered.
BOSS of a Bit, as borne in the arms of the Loriners, or Bit-makers Company. See Plate VII. Fig. 32.
BOTEROLL, according to the French Herald's, is the tag of a broad-sword scabbard, and is esteemed an honourable bearing. See Plate VIII. Fig. 52, on the dexter side a Boterail, on the sinister, a flesh-hook. I am of opinion, that the crampet, which is the badge of the Right Hon. Earl De La Warr, was meant for the same ornament of the scabbard.
BOTONE. See CROSS BOTONE.
BOTTLE, Leather. See Plate VII. Fig. 30.
BOURDONNE. See CROSS BOURDONNE.
BOUTTONNE, Fr. The same as the English seeded. Thus, when a rose is represented with its heart of a different tincture from the body, the English call it seeded; but the French call it BOUTTONNE.
BOUGET. See WATER-BOUGET.
BOW, an archer's Bow. See Plate IX. Fig. 39: in chief a Bow lying fesswise.
BOWL, a platter, or large deep dish, for such an utensil having thereon a boar's head coupéd ar. See Plate VII. Fig. 44.
BRANCHED signifies any thing that spreads into branches.
BRANCHES OF LAUREL, in saltier, part of the crest of Daniel, must be painted as in Plate VII. Fig. 68.
BRANDS. See FIRE-BRANDS. Plate V. Fig. 60.
BRAZED, the same as Braced; and in Heraldry is used to express such charges as are folded or interlaced. Thus in the arms of Danby, three chevrons BRAZED, or as properly, INTERLACED. See Plate II. Fig. 39.
BREAST. See WOMAN'S BREAST.
BRETESSED, a term used by French Herald's to express any charge that is embattled on both sides opposite to each other; a form very different from embattled counter-embattled. See Plate III. Fig. 13, viz. a fesse breteffed; also in Plate II. Fig. 13, a pale breteffed.
BRICKLAYER'S AX, a tool used for cutting bricks. See Plate XV. Fig. 52.
BRIDGES of various forms, as borne in arms, some with one, some with two, others with three arches; all which should be specified in blazoning. See in Plate VIII. Fig. 12, a Bridge of three arches, with streams transfluent proper; on the Bridge a fane, being the Coat of Trowbridge.
BRIGANDINE, or BRIGANTINE, a jacket or coat of mail, being part of the armour of a Chevalier. See Plate IX. Fig. 35.
BRIQUES, or BRICKS, are made in the same shape as billets; but, when borne as charges in armory, they are to be drawn so as to shew their thickness.
BRISE, in French armory, signifies broken, and implies an ordinary with part of it broken off. The English blazon it by the word coupéd; as thus, a bend coupéd.
BRISTLED, an heraldic term used to denote the hair on the neck and back of a boar. See Plate XI. Fig. 29, a boar's head and neck bristled.
BRISURE, or Difference. The marks of distinction of houses, as a bend, fesse, &c. when borne for that purpose, are called Brisures.
BROAD ARROW. It differs from the pheon by having the inside of its barbs plain. See Plate VII. Fig. 31 and 72.
BROAD AX, as borne in arms. See Plate VIII. Fig. 56.
BROCHES, instruments used by Embroiderers. For brocher, as borne in the arms of the Embroiderers Company, see Plate VIII. Fig. 66.

BROGUE, Irish. A sort of shoe.—N. B. Brogues, when borne in armory, are drawn as in Plate XIV. Fig. 51.

BRONCHANT, Fr. A term used by the French to denote the situation of any beast, when placed on a field strewn with fleurs-de-lis.

BROOMFLOWER, an Order of Knighthood. See the different Orders; as also for the Collar, see Plate I. of Collars, Fig. 23.

BROOM-PLANT, or BROOM-SPRIG. See Plate XIII. Fig. 28.

BROW-ANTLIER is the first branch of the horn of a hart or buck, that shoots out of the main beam next the head.

BUCKET. See Plate VI. Fig. 36. Bucket with feet, as in Fig. 37, is always called a hooped bucket, and is so borne in the arms of Pemberton.

BUCKLE, as in the arms of Sapeot, in the ordinary, viz. Ar. three Buckles sa. See Plate III. Fig. 20.

BUCKLER, or shield.

BUCKLES, by some authors called Armour-Buckles, by others, Fermailles, from the French. They are borne of various shapes, as oval, round, lozengy, and masculy.—N. B. The particular shape of the Buckle, as borne in the arms, must be expressed in the blazon: for example, An oval Buckle, or a lozengy Buckle, or a round Buckle, with the tongue pendent. See Plate VI. Fig. 11.

BUFFALOE, is drawn in the same shape as the bull, with the addition of a high lump of fleshy substance growing on the withers of his neck and shoulders.—N. B. Bulls heads, in old blazon, are often called Buffaloes heads.

BUGLE-HORN. It is most commonly borne stringed and garnished, which circumstances must be mentioned in the blazon. The garnish consists of the rims round the horn: the strings are always tied as in Plate XIV. Fig. 57; but in some coats the strings are omitted. When they have not any strings, and are adorned with rings, they are said to be verolée; but the common method of blazon is a bugle-born sans strings.

BUNDLE OF LATHS, as borne in the Bricklayers arms, See Plate VIII. Fig. 62.

BULL, a beast too well known to need any description.

BULL-RUSH, an aquatic plant. See Plate XIII. Fig. 34.

BULL'S HEAD caboched, or cabossed. See Plate XI. Fig. 34.

BULL'S HEAD couped. See Plate XI. Fig. 35.

BURELLE, a French term for blazoning barry, and as such used by Columbiers, for barry of ten pieces.

BURELLE, Fr. the same as the English BARRULET.

BURGANET, a steel cap, formerly worn by foot-soldiers in battle; it must be drawn as in Plate IX. Fig. 6. Three of these caps are the arms of Évington.

BUR, a broad ring of iron behind the place made for the hand on the tilting-spear, which Bur is brought to the rest when the tilter charges his spear; serving there to secure it, and make it easy.

BURLING-IRON, an instrument used by Weavers, and borne in the Arms of the Weavers Company of Exeter. See Plate XV. Fig. 35, in chief a key, in base a Burling-Iron.

BUSTARD, a kind of wild turkey, of a brownish colour, chiefly met with on Salisbury Plain. See Plate XII. Fig. 38.

BUTCHER'S AX, or SLAUGHTER-AX, as in the Butchers arms. See Plate VIII. Fig. 70.

C

CABINET DES ARMES, Fr. in Lat. Armorium honoris, is a square table, or Cabinet inclosed within a frame, and which, upon the conclusion of the funeral of any nobleman or gentleman, is, in Flanders and other foreign countries, usually fixed against a wall in the inside of the church in which the defunct is buried. In the centre of this Cabinet hang the tabard, helm, and crest; on one side of them the sword, and on the other the gauntlets; at the bottom the spurs, and in the four angles the paternal and maternal shields of arms of the deceased. See HATCHMENT, and ATCIEVEMENT.

CABLE, a rope.

CABOCHED, or CABOSSED, from the French Caboche. This term is used to express the head of a buck, or any other animal that is placed full-faced or affronté, and without any part of the neck being visible. See Plate X. Fig. 61 and 62, and Plate XI. Fig. 34.—N. B. This bearing is by some called Trunked.

CABRE, a French term, signifying erect.

CADENCY. See DISTINCTIONS OF HOUSES.

CALAMINE-STONE, a mineral, which, when mixed with copper, turns it into brass. It is part of the crest of the Mineral Company, and is borne as in Plate XV. Fig. 16.

CALATRAVA, an Order of Knighthood in Spain. See the account of the different Orders of Knighthood; as also Plate I. of Collars, Fig. 14, for the Collar and Badge.

CALTRAPS, CALTROPS, or, according to others, CHEVAL-TRAPS. Mr. Gibbon calls them Gal-Traps. They are instruments of iron, formerly used in war to gall and wound horses feet; they consist of four points, so placed, that whichever way it lies on the ground, one point will be always erect, and thereby prevent the enemy's cavalry from following the army on a retreat. See Plate IX. Fig. 40. a scaling-ladder between two caltraps, and in the base of Fig. 50. in the same Plate, a caltrap embued, which signifies bloody at the point.—N. B. The French call them Chausse-trapes; the Latins call them Murices, or Tribuli.

CALVARY. A Cross Calvary takes its name from the resemblance it bears to the cross on which our Saviour suffered. This cross is commonly painted on three griefes, degrees, or steps. See Plate IV. Fig. 25.

CAMEL, a beast that sometimes occurs in coat-armour, but not often. See Plate XI. Fig. 27. It is usually drawn as in Plate XV. and in the base of Fig. 16.

CAMELEON, in armory, is drawn as in Plate XI. Fig. 41. and coloured pale green.

CAMELOPARD, said by heraldic authors to be a beast engendered between a camel and a leopard; but whoever chuses to read Dr. Goldsmith's History of the Earth, and other Writers of Natural History, will find the Camelopard to be a distinct species of beast.—N. B. This beast is the crest of Crisp.

CAMELOPARDEL, a supposititious beast of heraldic creation, formed by fixing two straight horns in the head of the Camelopard. See Plate XV. Fig. 12.

CANDLE-STICK. See Plate VIII. Fig. 23 and 24.—N. B. Fig. 23 is called a taper Candlestick, in the blazon of the Arms of the Founders Company.

CANELLE. See INVECTED.

CANNETS, Fr. Ducks represented without beaks or feet. See Plate XII. Fig. 30.—N. B. They are to be distinguished from Martlets and Allerions thus:—Allerions are always displayed and full-faced; but Cannets have their heads in profile, as the Martlets, yet differing from them in having longer and more curvating necks than those of the Martlets.

CANNON,

CANNON, a piece of ordnance, mounted on a bed or carriage, as in Plate IX. Fig. 31. In blazoning it is sufficient to say Cannon, without the addition of mounted.

CANTON is a French word, signifying a square corner. In English blazonry, it is an ordinary, as has been before mentioned, consisting of two lines meeting in a right angle, and proceeding from the chief and the dexter side of the escutcheon. See Plate II. Fig. 37.

CANTON SINISTER, or SINISTER CANTON. See Plate II. Fig. 33.

CANTONNE'E is a French term to express any bearing borne with a cross. For example, the arms of Jerusalem: the French blazon is, Ar. a cross potent, cantonnée with four crosses. See those arms in Plate I. of Collars, Fig. 8.—We should call it a Cross Potent, between four crosses, &c.

CAP, as borne in the arms of Maunfield. See Plate III. Fig. 27.

CAP, turned up of the same colour, as borne in the arms of Drakenford. See Plate III. Fig. 29.

CAP, as borne in the arms of De la Rous. See Plate III. Fig. 16.

CAP of MAINTENANCE, an ancient bearing belonging to the dignity of Duke, but of late borne at the choice of every purchaser of armorial ensigns: it is of crimson velvet turned up with ermine. See Plate XVI. Fig. 47. It is also frequently to be met with above the helmet, instead of a wreath, under Gentlemen's crests, as in Plate XVIII. Fig. 5.

CAP of STATE, as borne by the Lord Mayor of London. See Plate XVI. Fig. 48.

CAPARISONED, so said of a horse when completely armed for the field. See Plate IX. Fig. 53. The upper horse caparisoned modern; the under horse, Fig. 54, ancient.

CARBUNCLE, or, more properly, ESCARBUNCLE. It is said to be a gem, or precious stone. It is borne in very ancient coat-armour, and, as drawn by the Heralds, is composed of an annulet in the centre, from which issue eight sceptres pointé and floretté. See Plate V. Fig. 54.

CARDINAL'S HAT is always painted red, and as drawn in Plate XVI. Fig. 22.—N. B. The Archbishops and Bishops in France bear hats over their arms like those of the Cardinals, with this difference, that they are green, and have only four rows of tassels: the Abbés' were the same, only black, and with three rows of tassels. Prothonotaries bear the same as the Abbés.

CARTOUCHE is an oval shield, in which the Popes, and Churchmen of noble descent in Italy, place their arms.

CART-WHEEL. See Plate VIII. Fig. 42.

CASQUE, the French term for helmet. See HELMET.—N. B. The word Casque was formerly used by the English Heralds.

CASTLES are borne in different forms; but when, in blazonry, they are termed Castles, they must be drawn as in Plate VIII. Fig. 3.—N. B. This bearing is by some called a Port, between two towers; and by others, a Wall, with battlements and gate, between two towers; but I think Castle is the proper blazon. Castles have one peculiar attribute in blazon; which is, that whatever tincture they are of, if the cement of the building is of another colour from the stones, represented by lines or tracts, then the building being ar. is said to be masoned of such a tincture, as sa. &c. When the windows and ports of Castles are of a different tincture from the field and building, the windows and ports are supposed to be shut, and must be so expressed in the blazon: if the windows and ports are of the tincture of the field, so that the field is seen through them, they are then supposed to be open, or voided of the field, which is to be expressed, and for which the French say ajoure, as of other figures that are voided of the field: when the port is after the form of a portcullis, it is to be so named in the blazon.

CASTLES with four towers, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 4.—N. B. This is by some Heralds called a Square Tower.

CASTLES with the four towers domed, and placed two in pale and two in fesse, being thus borne by the name of Rawson. See Plate VIII. Fig. 5.—N. B. This is called a Square Castle towered.

CASTLE, viz. on a mount a Castle breached, the French colours struck. See Plate VIII. Fig. 13.—N. B. This is the crest granted to Gilbert Stibbert.

CAT, a domestic animal. It is used both as a crest and as a supporter, but is very rarely a bearing in arms; when borne as a charge, it is called a Cat-a-mountain.

CAT-A-MOUNTAIN, or WILD CAT.—N. B. These Cats being always painted full-faced or gardant, the word gardant need not be used in the blazon. See Plate XI. Fig. 26.

CATERFOIL: See QUATREFOIL.

CATHARINE WHEEL. See Plate VII. Fig. 34.

CENTAUR, a fabulous beast, half a man and half a horse; the same as the Sagittarius. See SAGITTARIUS. See also Plate XI. Fig. 16.

CERCELE'E. See CROSS CERCELE'E.

CHAINS in SALTIRE. See SALTIRE OF CHAINS.

CHAIN-SHOT, by Gawillim called murdering Chain-Shot. See Plate V. Fig. 71.

CHALICE, a communion-cup. See Plate VIII. Fig. 22.

CHAMBER-PIECE, a term in Heraldry for a short piece of ordnance, without a carriage, as in Plate IX. Fig. 32.

CHAPEAU, a cap, bonnet, or hat; but in Heraldry it means a cap of maintenance. See CAP of MAINTENANCE.

CHAPERONNE, an old French word for a hood; whence, by metonymy, it hath given name to the little shields containing death-heads, crests, or other devices, placed on the forehead of the horses that draw herse at pompous funerals. See the Chaperon here mentioned in the four corners of Plate XVI. Fig. 20, 21, 22, and 23. They are called Chaperons, or Shafferoons, because these devices used to be fastened to the Chaperonnes, or hoods, which those horses that draw the herse used to wear, with their other coverings of estates. This sort of hood and covering may be seen on the bottom horse in Plate IX. Fig. 54.

CHAPOURNET, a chief divided by a curved line, as in Plate I. Fig. 29, viz. Ar. on a chief vert, a Chapournet. This word, used erroneously by some English Heralds, is a corruption of the French word Chaperonnet, which signifies a little hood.

CHAPLET, a garland, or wreath, of laurel, olive, oak, &c. See Plate XVI. Fig. 40, 43, 46, 49, and 52.

CHAPLET of roses, in armory, is always composed of four roses only, all the other part being leaves, as in Plate V. Fig. 24.

CHAPPE, a term used when the field is divided by two lines, issuing from the middle point in chief to the two base angles of the shield, as in Plate XV. Fig. 43.—N. B. The French have this bearing, and call it Tierce en Mantle; the sections on the sides being of a different colour or metal from the other.

CHARGE signifies the figures represented in a coat.

CHARGED. A shield carrying some figure, is said to be CHARGED therewith: for example, The field is ar. charged with a lion rampant fa. This was the ancient method of blazon, but it is now laid aside.

CHATER, or CHATERER, the Bohemian lark. It is, in shape and crest, like unto the English crested lark.

CHAUSSE. In the common acceptation of the word, it signifies shod, and in blazon denotes a section in base. The line is formed by proceeding from the extremity of the base, and ascending to the sides of the escutcheon, which it meets above the fesse point. See Plate V. Fig. 23.

CHEESE-SLIP, or WOODLOUSE. See Plate VII. Fig. 57.

CHEF, or CHIEF. The French use the first. See CHIEF.
CHEQUE

CHEQUE, or CHECKY, is said of the field, or any charge, when divided into equal parts or squares, alternately, of different tinctures, as in Plate II. Fig. 57, and Fig. 72. Plate III. Fig. 8.

CHERUB, a child's head between two wings, as in Plate V. Fig. 37, or between three pair of wings, as in Plate V. Fig. 36.

CHESS-ROOK, a figure used in the game of chess. See Plate XIV. Fig. 68, viz. two dice in chief, and a Chess-Rook in base.

CHEVAL-TRAP, the same as Caltrap and Galltrap. See CALTRAP.

CHEVALIER is generally taken for a Knight; in Heraldry it signifies a horseman armed at all points, and mounted on a horse completely caparisoned for the field. See Plate IX. Fig. 53.

CHEVALIER, in antique armour cap-à-pié; on his helmet his crest, and the same on the horse's head, that being the usual place whereon it was fixed; his horse's face armed with a plate; his mantle or lambrequin flying; in his right hand a sword fastened by a chain to his armour; on his sinister arm a shield, and on the caparisons of the horse an escutcheon of his arms, as in Plate IX. Fig. 54.

CHEVELLE is the French term to express what we call Streaming; that is, the streams of light darting from a comet. See Plate V. Fig. 47.

CHEVRON, so called by the English and French, is an ordinary composed of a twofold line pyramidal; the foundation being on the dexter and sinister sides of the escutcheon, and the acute point of the spire near to the top of the escutcheon. It resembles a pair of rafters to support the roof of a house. See Plate II. Fig. 33.

Per Chevron. When the field, or any charge, is divided by two pyramidal lines, meeting in a point above, as the Chevron doth, it is said to be Per Chevron, or Party per Chevron, as in Plate II. Fig. 37.—N. B. Lions may be divided per Chevron, as may all other charges.

CHEVRON reversed, is said when its point is turned down towards the base of the shield. See Plate II. Fig. 38.

CHEVRON coupé; so called, when the ends of the Chevron do not touch the sides of the shield. See Plate II. Fig. 41.

CHEVRON fimbriated, is when it is bordered, as the bend in Plate III. Fig. 3.

CHEVRON burst, or split on the top. In French, called a Chevron éclaté. See Plate II. Fig. 35.

CHEVRON pierced with a bend. See Plate VII. Fig. 63.

CHEVRON, two in fret. See Plate III. Fig. 23.

CHEVRON disjointed. See Plate III. Fig. 28.

CHEVRON arched. See Plate III. Fig. 25.

CHEVRON inarched, as borne in the arms of Holbeame. See Plate II. Fig. 45.

CHEVRON inarched, as in the coat of Archever in Scotland. See Plate III. Fig. 26.

CHEVRON removed. See Plate III. Fig. 27.

CHEVRON patée at the point (i. e.) the point ending with the three upper parts of a cross patée, as in the Arms of Holbrooke. See Plate III. Fig. 48.

CHEVRON potent, and ringed at the point. See Plate III. Fig. 29.—N. B. This coat should be blazoned thus: Ar. a Chevron potent at the point sa. and ringed of the last.

CHEVRON grady on both sides. See Plate III. Fig. 30.

CHEVRON disjointed and crossed. See Plate III. Fig. 32.

CHEVRON couched sinister, viz. Or, on a Chevron couched sinister between three birds sa. five mullets ar. These are the arms of Gwyn. See Plate II. Fig. 49.

CHEVRON, two Chevrons couched, dexter and sinister. See Plate III. Fig. 31.

CHEVRON rompus, so termed by French authors; by some of our Heralds called double-dunnet, or double-onset. Holmes says, it may be called compé. See Plate II. Fig. 36.

CHEVRON braised; i. e. when two or three Chevrons are interlaced together. See Plate II. Fig. 39.

CHEVRON and pyle, counter-changed. See Plate II. Fig. 51.

CHEVRON between two flanches. See Plate II. Fig. 58.

CHEVRONELS. When there are more than one chevron on a coat, they should be called Chevronels. See Plate II. Fig. 34. Ar. three Chevronels; as also three Chevronels braced in base, see Fig. 39. Some blazon this, three Chevronels interlaced; which I think the best method, as they pass over and under each other, like a fret. I have known some persons blazon them, three Chevrons in fret.

CHEVRONNE', or CHEVRONY. When the field is divided into several equal parts, by lines, in form of Chevrons, we say, Chevrony of so many pieces.

CHEVRON-WAYS. When any natural or artificial figures are situate in a field after the position of a Chevron, they are said to be in Chevron, or Chevron-ways.

CHIEF, in French Chief, is that ordinary which occupies the upper part of the escutcheon horizontally. See Plate I. Fig. 1. among the Chiefs, viz. Ar. masonry, a chief az.—N. B. When a Chief is in a Coat of Arms, it is the last figure to be mentioned, unless it be charged with any bearing.

CHIEF angled. See Plate I. Fig. 2.

CHIEF bevelled. See Plate I. Fig. 3.

CHIEF coupé. See Plate I. Fig. 4.

CHIEF coupé beviluisé. See Plate I. Fig. 5.

CHIEF écartillé. See Plate I. Fig. 6.

CHIEF with one embattlement. See Plate I. Fig. 7.

CHIEF inclave. See Plate I. Fig. 8.

CHIEF arched. There are several names given to this figure; as, a Chief Fleeted, a Chief Champion, or Campaine, and a Chief Convex; all which signify the same bearing. See Plate I. of Chiefs, Fig. 9.—N. B. In the base of this figure is a point in point impaled az. and gu.

CHIEF of one indent. See Plate I. Fig. 10.

CHIEF with one lambreau, or label. I should rather call this a Chief with one dove-tail. See Plate I. Fig. 11.

CHIEF inverted. See Plate I. Fig. 12.

CHIEF engrailed. See Plate I. Fig. 13.—N. B. On the field are the arms of Ujster, being the distinction of the Baronet.

CHIEF wavy. See Plate I. Fig. 14.

CHIEF double-arched. See Plate I. Fig. 15.

CHIEF erennellé, or embattled. See Plate I. Fig. 16.

CHIEF potent counter-potent. See Plate I. Fig. 17.

CHIEF urdée. See Plate I. Fig. 18.—N. B. On the field are six muscheters, viz. spots without dots over them.

CHIEF indented. See Plate I. Fig. 19.

CHIEF nebulée. See Plate I. Fig. 20.

CHIEF rayonnée. See Plate I. Fig. 21.

CHIEF dovetailed. See Plate I. Fig. 22.

CHIEF charged with a fillet. See Plate I. Fig. 23, viz. Sa. a chief or, thereon a fillet ar.

CHIEF nowed. See Plate I. Fig. 25.

CHIEF, thereon a bar humettée; called also a Chief Rempli. See Plate I. Fig. 26.

CHIEF rempli. See Plate I. Fig. 26.—N. B. This would be better understood if blazoned, A chief bordered.

CHIEF, thereon a bar dancettée. See Plate I. Fig. 27.

CHIEF per fesse indented. See Plate I. Fig. 28.

CHIEF charged with a chapournet. See Plate I. Fig. 29.

CHIEF point in point. See Plate I. Fig. 30.—N. B. This differs much from indenting, as the indents go from top to bottom. The field of this escutcheon is called diapered, which is always of the same colour as the ground.

CHIEF quarterly, purple and ar. fiery counter-firy, at bottom sa. See Plate I. Fig. 31.

CHIEF embattled. See Fig. 32.—This term has the same signification as Crenellée.

- ♣ In CHIEF. When the charges are placed in the upper part of the field, they are termed in Chief. See Plate I. Fig. 24, in chief a fillet, in base a point in point. See also Plate II. Fig. 30. viz. Per fesse or and fa. in chief a Jew's harp or; Plate II. Fig. 23. Per bend or and fa. in chief two annulets conjoined.
- CHILD'S HEAD couped below the shoulders, tied round the neck with a snake, being part of the arms of Vaughan, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 12.—N. B. This is called en-wrapped about the neck with a snake.
- CHISSEL, or CHIZZEL, a tool used by Carpenters, &c. See Plate VI. Fig. 51. a Chiffel, half spade, and rule or yard.
- CHURCH. See Plate VIII. Fig. 19.—N. B. Churches, and parts of Churches, as steeples, belfreys, &c. are borne in arms and crests.
- CHURCH-BELLS, are always drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 41, and are blazoned Church-bells, to distinguish them from hawks' bells.
- CIMIER, Fr. A Crest.
- CINQUEFOIL, or CINQFOIL, is the five-leaved grass. The five leaves should be represented as issuing from a ball or point in the centre. See Plate XIII. Fig. 49.
- CINQUEFOIL pierced. See Plate XIII. Fig. 50.
- CIRCULAR WREATHS. All wreaths are circular, as they are made to go round the head; but in the coat of Jocelyn, it is blazoned a circular wreath, and must be drawn as in Plate V. Fig. 23.
- CITADEL, a fortress raised within a town or city for its defence. See Plate VIII. Fig. 11, a Citadel with two towers, ports open.
- CIVIC CROWN, among the Romans, was a garland made of oak-leaves and acorns, or of ground oak; and given as a reward to such as had saved a citizen's life in battle, or rescued him after being taken prisoner by his enemy. See Plate XVI. Fig. 43.
- CLARENCEUX, King of Arms. See the PREFATORY DISCOURSE.
- CLARION, a kind of shrill trumpet. In heraldic language, it is also called a Roff. See Plate XIV. Fig. 58.
- CLARINET, a French term to express a collar with a bell in front, passing round the neck of any beast.
- CLECHE is a French term, signifying any ordinary or bearing that is pierced throughout; i. e. when the whole figure is so much perforated that the chief substance is taken from it, and consequently nothing remains visible but the edges. See Plate III. Fig. 34, 55, 62. and Plate IV. Fig. 30, and 35.
- CLINCHED, a term used to express the hand being shut, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 24.
- CLOSE is a term borrowed from the French word Clos, which signifies any thing closed or inclosed. In Heraldry the word is used to express the wings of the eagle, falcon, kite, swallow, &c. being kept close to their body; but must not be used to the peacock, dung-hill cock, or any others that are not addicted to flight. See Plate XII. Fig. 1. and 10. It is also used for horse-barnacles when they are not extended. See Plate VI. Fig. 12. As also to denote a helmet, with the vizor down. See Plate IX. Fig. 4.
- CLOSE-GIRT, is said of figures habited, whose clothes are tied about the middle.
- CLOCK, when used in arms, is drawn as a table Clock; it is so depicted in the arms of the Clock-makers Company.—N. B. The feet are four lions couchant, and on the top is a regal crown.
- CLOSET is the diminutive, or half, of the bar. See Plate III. Fig. 20.
- CLOSING-TONGS, a tool used by the Founders, and made part of their crest. See Plate VI. Fig. 10. in chief, a pair of Closing-Tongs, in base a hinge.
- CLOTH. See PIECE OF CLOTH.
- CLOVES, a well-known spice, introduced as a bearing in the Arms of the Grocers Company. See Plate XIII. Fig. 15, three Cloves.
- CLUB, such as is borne in the hands of a savage, when either a Supporter or Crest, is drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 63. In the same escutcheon you have a Wedge, a Club, and a Spiked Club.
- CLUB SPIKED, or Spiked Club. See Plate VI. Fig. 63.
- CLYMANT, a term used by some Heralds to express a goat standing on his hind legs.
- COACHES, are borne in coat-armour, and are the principal bearing in the Coach-makers arms.
- COAT of ARMS reversed, or turned upside down, contrary to the usual manner of bearing, is the last of the abatements of honour, and, according to the law of arms, is to be borne by persons guilty of treason. See Plate V. Fig. 27.
- COBWEB and Spider. See Plate VII. Fig. 13.
- COCK, termed in blazon, Dung-hill Cock. See Plate XII. Fig. 47.—N. B. The word Dung-hill is seldom used.
- COCKATRICE, with wings indorsed. See Plate XI. Fig. 12.—N. B. The imaginary heraldic Cockatrice differs from the wivern by being combed, wattled, and spurred, like the dung-hill cock.
- COCKATRICE displayed. See Plate XI. Fig. 13.
- COCKATRICE'S head between two wings. See Plate XII. Fig. 66.
- COCQUEL, or ESCALLOP. See ESCALLOP.
- COEUR, party en Cœur, denotes a short line of partition in pale in the centre of the escutcheon, which extends but a little way, much short of the top and bottom, and is there met by other lines, which form an irregular partition of the escutcheon.
- COGNISANCE, or COGNIZANCE, signifies the Crest. See CREST.
- COLLARED. The wearing a collar round the neck of any beast is termed, in Heraldry, collared, as also gorged. See Plate X. Fig. 15, a lion rampant collared and chained.
- COLLEGE, as in the arms granted to Williamsburg College, founded in Virginia. See Plate XV. Fig. 14.
- COLOUR. This the ancients used to express by the word tincture. Colours used in coat-armour are ten; but the yellow and white, called or and argent, or gold and silver, are said to be metals; all which will be mentioned under the several heads, of OR, ARGENT, AZURE, GULES, &c.—N. B. It is a fixed rule in English armory, not to put colour on colour, nor metal on metal; yet two exceptions are allowed in common, viz. in abatements, and differences of distinction; so that the label, prefont, baton, &c. may be colour on colour, or metal on metal; both of which are frequently to be seen in foreign armory.
- COLUMBINE, a flower, which in Heraldry is always drawn as in Plate XIII. Fig. 69. It is borne in that form in the arms of the Company of Cooks.
- COLUMN, between two wings, by some vulgarly called a Flying Column. See Plate VII. Fig. 51.
- COLUMN ducally crowned, and enveloped with a snake, or environed with a snake. See Plate VIII. Fig. 17.
- COLUMN broken. See Plate VIII. Fig. 18.
- COMB, in a head of hair. See Plate VII. Fig. 40.
- COMBATANT. See CONFRONTE.
- COMBEL. The same as Fillet, the diminutive of a Chief.
- COMET, or BLAZING STAR, is represented by Heralds as an étoile, or star of six points, with a tail or illumination streaming from it in bend. See Plate V. Fig. 47.
- COMPARTMENT is the same as a Partition, in a coat.
- COMPASSES, as used in the Joiners arms, and other coats. See Plate VI. Fig. 13.
- COMPLEMENT, a term used in Heraldry, to signify the full moon: for example, Az. the moon in her complement. See Plate V. Fig. 41.

- COMPONE', or GOBONY, is composed of two colours in equal divisions in a border, on any other ordinary: if it consists of two ranges, it is called Counter-Compony; and if of three ranges, then it takes the name of Cheque. See Plate V. Fig. 7, 8, and 9.
- CONEY, or RABBET. For the general position of this animal when used as an armorial bearing, see Plate X. Fig. 52.
- CONFRONTE', is facing or fronting each other.—N. B. This term is used in the French blazonry; but what they call; Two lions confronté, we blazon, Two lions embatant. See Plate X. Fig. 23.
- CONGER-EEL's head coupé, as in the coat of Gafoigne. See Plate XI. Fig. 62.
- CONJOINED, a term used for charges in arms when linked together. See two annulets conjoined, Plate II. Fig. 23. Also three annulets conjoined, Plate XV. Fig. 50.
- CONJUNCT, is used by some Heralds for conjoined.
- CONTOURNE', a French term, applied to any animal that is standing, or passant, with its face turned towards the sinister side of the escutcheon. We blazon this, Counter-passant.
- CONTRE-COMPONE'; or COUNTER-COMPONY. See COMPONE'.
- COOTE, a water-fowl, smaller in size than a duck; all black, except the top of the head; and having a sharp-pointed beak. See Plate XII. Fig. 33.
- COPPER, the name of an instrument used by the Gold and Silver Wire-drawers to wind wire upon. It is borne by them as part of their armorial ensign. See Plate XV. Fig. 38. in the dexter chief point a Copper.
- CORBIE, an heraldic name for a Raven.
- CORDED. See CROSS CORDED.—N. B. The word is also used in armory, to express the cording or bandage of a bale; as for example, A bale ar. corded gu. See Plate VII. Fig. 5.
- CORMORANT, a sharp-billed bird, in shape much like a goose. See Plate XII. Fig. 32.
- CORNISH CHOUGH. This bird is well known in Cornwall: its body is black, its legs and beak are red. See Plate XII. Fig. 34.
- CORNU-COPIA, or HORN OF PLENTY, filled with fruits, corn, &c. See Plate XV. Fig. 23.—It is generally placed in the hand of the figures of Plenty and Liberty.
- CORONET of the Prince of Wales, is composed of a circle of gold; on the edge, four crosses pattée between as many fleurs-de-lis; from the two centre crosses pattée, an arch surmounted with a mound and cross: the whole richly chased and adorned with pearls: within the Coronet, a crimson cap, lined with white farsenet, and turned up with ermine. See Plate XVI. Fig. 11.—N. B. His Royal Highness bears also a distinguished mark of honour, viz. a plume of three ostrich-feathers within a coronet; under it, in an escroll, the following motto, Ich Dien, which, in the German language, signifies I serve. This device was assumed by Edward Prince of Wales, commonly called the Black Prince, after the famous battle of Cressly, anno Domini 1346; when, having with his own hand killed John, King of Bohemia, who served the King of France in his wars, he took from his head such a plume and motto, and put it on his own, to perpetuate the victory. See Plate XIV. Fig. 72.
- CORONET of the Princes of the Blood Royal, is composed of a circle of gold, richly chased; on the rim or edge, two crosses pattée, two strawberry-leaves, and four fleurs-de-lis: within the Coronet is a crimson velvet cap, lined with farsenet, and turned up with ermine; on the top of the cap, a rich tassel of gold and spangles. See Plate XVI. Fig. 12.
- CORONET of a Duke of England, Scotland, and Ireland, is composed of a rim or circle of gold, richly chased; on the edge, eight strawberry-leaves; the cap, tassel, lining, and turning-up, ermine, as the other. See Plate XVI. Fig. 13.
- CORONET of a Marquis of England, is composed of a rim or circle of gold, richly chased; on the edge, four strawberry-leaves, and four balls set on points; the cap, tassel, &c. as before. See Plate XVI. Fig. 14.
- CORONET of an Earl of England, is composed of a rim or circle of gold, richly chased; on the edge, eight spires; between each spire, a strawberry-leaf; and on each spire, a ball; the cap, tassel, and lining, as before. See Plate XVI. Fig. 15.—N. B. Coronets were first assigned to Earls in the reign of Henry III.
- CORONET of a Viscount of England, is composed of a circle of gold, chased; on the edge, twelve balls; the cap, tassel, &c. as before. See Plate XVI. Fig. 16.—Coronets were first assigned to Viscounts in the reign of King James I.
- CORONET of a Baron of England, is composed of a circle of gold, not chased; on the edge, six balls; the cap, tassel, &c. as before. See Plate XVI. Fig. 19.—Coronets were assigned to Barons by King Charles II. after his restoration.—N. B. The balls on the English Coronets are commonly called Pearls; but they are always made of silver.
- CORONET of the Kings of Arms, is a plain circle of gold; thereon sixteen leaves, eight of which are higher than the other: on the bands are engraved the following words, Miserere mei Deus. See Plate XVI. Fig. 50.
- CORONETS, as in the Skinner's arms, viz. Princes Coronets, caps ermine, and tassels gold. See Plate VII. Fig. 45.
- CORONET of the Dauphin of France, is of gold composed of a circle; thereon eight fleurs-de-lis, with two arches formed by four dolphins; their tails meeting in chief, and surmounted by a fleur-de-lis. See Plate XVI. No. 27.
- CORONETS of Princes and Dukes of the Blood Royal of France, are composed of a circle of gold, richly chased; on the edge of the rim, eight fleurs-de-lis. See Plate XVI. Fig. 29.—N. B. The Crowns and Coronets of France and Spain have no cap, ermine, or tassel.
- CORONETS of the Dukes of France, have the same circle, and are ornamented with the same leaves, as those of the Dukes of England; but they have not any cap, &c. See Plate XVI. Fig. 30.—N. B. Some of the ancient Dukes of France wear the Coronet with small pearls between each leaf, as in Plate XVI. Fig. 35.
- CORONET of a Marquis of France, is also the same as those of an English Marquis; except that, instead of one ball between the leaves, they have three balls on each spire; viz. two, and the third placed on the other two. See Plate XVI. Fig. 31.
- CORONET of a Count of France, is a circle of gold, chased; on the edge, twelve balls, elevated a little above the edge. See Plate XVI. Fig. 32.
- CORONET of a Viscount of France, is the same as that of a Viscount in England, except being without cap, &c. See Plate XVI. Fig. 37.
- CORONET of a Baron of France, differs much from all the other, being a plain rim or circle of gold, with rows of pearls round the circle. See Plate XVI. Fig. 34.—N. B. They were formerly made as in Fig. 33, in the same Plate.
- CORONET of the Judge of a Bishop's temporal Jurisdiction, in France, called the Coronet Vidame. See Plate XVI. Fig. 38.
- CORONET of the six ancient Counts of France, viz. Flanders, Champagne, Thoulouse, &c. is a circle of gold chased; on the edge, four strawberry-leaves between twelve balls. See Plate XVI. Fig. 36.
- CORONET, used by the Republic of Lucca, is a circle of gold, richly chased; on the edge sixteen points, or small spears; on each a ball. See Plate XVI. Fig. 21.
- CORONET, used by the Republic of Ragusa, as also by the Republic of Geneva, is made in the shape of an English Marquis's. See Plate XVI. Fig. 28.
- CORONET, Eastern, or Antique. See Plate XVI. Fig. 39.

- CORONET, Mural, composed of battlements. These Coronets are sometimes called Mural Crowns. See Plate XVI. Fig. 41.
- CORONET, Vallarie, or Vallor, is composed of a circle of gold; thereon small escutcheons reversed. See Plate XVI. Fig. 42.—N. B. This Coronet is used by the French.
- CORONET, Pallifado, is a circle of gold, with pointed pales fastened thereto. See Plate XVI. Fig. 45.
- CORONET, Naval, is composed of a circle of gold, richly chased; on the edge, four masts of ships with sails, and as many heads of ships, placed alternately. See Plate XVI. Fig. 44.—N. B. These last five Coronets, when borne with crests, may be of any colour or metal.
- COST, a subdivision of the bend, containing in breadth the half of a bendlet. When it is borne alone, it is always called by the English a Cost.
- COTOYE', is the French term to express what we call Cottised.
- COTICE'. At first this seems to be the same as the last, but it is not: on the contrary, it is a term used by the French to express any escutcheon that is divided bendways into many equal parts, as in the coat of Anois, which they blazon as follows: Cotice d'argent et azure de dix pièces: yer, if it is divided into but six equal parts, they blazon it bend of six, as we do.
- COTTISE, or COST, Fr. is the fourth part of the bend, and in English armory is seldom if ever borne but in couples, with a bend between them. See Plate II. Fig. 25, in which is a Cottise, a bend, and a bendlet. When there are two, they are termed Cottises, as in Plate II. Fig. 27, which exhibits a bend removed between two Cottises.—N. B. In blazon you need not say, two Cottises, but a bend cottised, or a fesse cottised, &c.
- COTTON HANKS, or BUNDLES of COTTON, in armory, should always be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 25.
- COUCHANT, lying or squatting close on the ground. A beast couchant, when represented heraldically, must have his head upright, in order to distinguish him from a beast dormant. See Plate X. Fig. 13.
- COUCHED, or, according to the French, Couché, a term used for chevrons placed either to the dexter or sinister side of the escutcheon. See Plate III. Fig. 31.
- COUE'E, Fr. The same as Coward.
- COULTER of a Plough. See Plate XIV. Fig. 28, a Coulter run through the calf of a man's leg; also Plate VI. Fig. 16, in chief, a Coulter; and in Fig. 39, a Coulter in the plough.
- COUNTER-Changed, is when the field is divided by any line of partition, whether it be a fesse, bend, chevron, pale, &c. and the arms are of two colours, or, more properly speaking, of a colour and a metal: although they consist of many different charges, they are termed Counterchanged. See Plate V. Fig. 10. Per pale gu. and ar. on a border, seven roundels, all counterchanged.
- COUNTER Fleury, or Flory. When the edges of any ordinary or tressure are charged with fleurs-de-lis, the top of the fleur-de-lis must be on one edge, and the bottom of the same be directly opposite on the other edge, and so reversed alternately. See Plate I. Fig. 31, a chief fleury counter-fleury. Plate II. Fig. 68. Plate III. Fig. 1 and 14.
- COUNTER Bandé, or Contrebandé. By this the French Herald's express what we call bendy of six, per bend sinister counterchanged. See Plate II. Fig. 40.
- COUNTER Barré, by Baron, the French author, called Contravitalis, means the same as our bendy sinister, per bend counterchanged.
- COUNTER Cartelé, or Contrecartelé, in Latin Contraquadripartitus, is, in English armory, called Counter-quartered, or Quarterly quartered; that is, when the grand quarterings are quartered.
- COUNTER Chevronné, in Latin, Contraacanthatus, signifies a shield divided chevronly.
- COUNTER Ermined, i. e. contrary to ermine, being a black field with white spots.—N. B. In English armory it is called Ermines.
- COUNTER Efcartelé, the same as Cartelé.
- COUNTER Faced, or Contrefacé, according to Monf. Menestrier, the French Herald, Contrafaciatus, which signifies what we call Barré per pale counterchanged, always expressing the number of bars the field is divided into.
- COUNTER Pale, by Monf. Baron called Contrapalatus, the same as paly of six per fesse counterchanged. The number of divisions must be expressed. See Plate XV. Fig. 20.
- COUNTER Passant. When two lions, or any other beasts, are passing or walking different ways, the one to the dexter, the other to the sinister, they are then termed Passant Counterpassant.
- COUNTER Embattled. When an ordinary is embattled counterembattled, the indentations on the upper edge must answer the projections on the under edge. See Plate III. Fig. 13.
- COUNTER Potent, as generally expressed in English, is classed with the furs, but is composed of such pieces as represent the tops of crutches, called by the French Potences, in English, Potents, Leigh, and others, call this vair cuppa, and vair facy. See Plate I. of Colours and Furs, Fig. 16.
- COUNTER Quartered. See COUNTER Efcartelé.
- COUNTER Salient, when two beasts are leaping different ways from each other; as in Plate X. Fig. 41, two foxes counter-salient in saltier, being the coat of Williams.
- COUNTER Trippant, the same as Counterpassant, and applied only to the different species of deer.
- COUNTERLY, was antiently said when the field was divided into two equal parts; for which we now say, parted per pale.
- COUPED, or COUPE'E, a term used by Herald's for trees cut from the trunk, or for a head, limb, or any other thing in an escutcheon, that is borne cut evenly off, in opposition to its being torn off, which is called erased. See Plate XIII. Fig. 4, a starved branch couped; Fig. 5, a trunk of a tree couped and erased; Fig. 8, a staff raguly couped, &c. &c.
- COUPLE. This word may be used instead of a pair; but former Herald's never introduced it in armory.
- COUPLE-CLOSE should contain the fourth part of a chevron. Couple-Closes are always borne by pairs, one on each side of a chevron.—N. B. The Couple-close is to the chevron the same as the cottise is to the bend, &c. and is blazoned both ways; viz. A chevron between two Couple-closes, and a chevron cottised.
- COURONNE', crowned. A bend is said to be couronné, when the upper part of its edge hath the leaves of a coronet on it, as in Plate XV. Fig. 19.
- COURANT, CURRENT, or CURSANT, an heraldic term, to express a horse in full speed: a buck, or greyhound, or any other beast, running, is also termed current. See Plate X. Fig. 50, 51, and 58.
- COUSU, a word in French armory, signifying the same as Rempli.
- COWARD, an English heraldic term, only used to the lion when his tail is represented hanging down, and passing between his hind legs, as in Plate X. Fig. 10.
- CRAB, a shell-fish. When borne in either arms or crest, it is always placed as in Plate XI. Fig. 69.
- CRAMPETTE, or CRAMPIT, the chape at the bottom of the scabbard of a sword. It is a badge belonging to the Right Hon. Earl De la Warr, and is always drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 6.—The French call this bearing a Butterroll, and affirm it to be the tag at the bottom of the scabbard of a broad-sword. It is always drawn, both by them and the Germans, as in Plate VIII. on the dexter side of Fig. 52.
- CRAMPONE' & TOURNE', a cross so called. See CROSS CRAMPONE', &c.
- CRAMPOONS, or CRAMPS. They are pieces of iron hooked at each end, and used in buildings, to fasten two - stones together. See Plate VI. Fig. 40.—N. B. These have erroneously been called Flams, a name given to instruments formerly used by furgions, and now by farriers, to bleed with.

- CRANE. See STORK.
- CRENELLE', the French term for what we call embattled, or kernelled. See Plate III. Fig. 13. Az. a fesse embattled argent.
- CRESCENT, a half-moon with the horns turned upwards, as in Plate V. Fig. 51. A very small Crescent is placed on coats, as the proper mark of cadency, and the distinction of a second son, &c. See Plate XV. the Distinction of Houses.
- CRESCENT Reversed. See Plate V. Fig. 52, in which there are three Crescents interlaced, viz. an Increscent, a Decrescent, and a Crescent reversed.
- CRESCENTS Interlaced. See Plate V. Fig. 52.
- CREST, or COGNIZANCE, in French Cimier, is a figure worn on wreaths, coronets, or caps of maintenance, as in Plate X. Fig. 18, and 25.—N. B. As all Crests must be placed on wreaths, except there is, in the original grant, some particular expression to the contrary; I have, throughout the whole Alphabet of Arms, forbore to use the word wreath; as for example, CREST—A goat's head erased ar. consequently a wreath is to be supposed, unless a coronet or chapeau is expressed in the grant. In some modern grants of arms, you will find both coronet and wreath are expressed, which is as ridiculous as to say, A hat on a hat.
- CRESTED, a term used in speaking of the comb of a cock.
- CREVICE, or CREFISH, a small shell-fish, found in fresh-water rivers. Heralds draw it in shape of a thrimp, which the French call Ecrevice de Mer, or a Sea-Crefish. See Plate XI. Fig. 72.
- CRINED, a term used in armory, to denote that the hair of the head of a man or woman, the mane of a horse, unicorn, &c. is represented. When the hair is of a metal or colour different from that of the body, it is said to be crined of such a colour or metal.
- CROCHET, a note in music. See Plate VII. Fig. 19.
- CROCODILE, an amphibious animal, seen frequently in the river Nile.
- COISSANT CONTOURNE'. The decreescent, or half-moon, looking to the left side of the shield. See Plate V. Fig. 43.
- COISSANTE'E. See CROSS COISSANTE'E.
- CROIX RECROISE'E, Fr. See CROSS CROSLET.
- CROSE, or DRAWING-BOARD, an instrument used by the Coopers, and borne as part of their armorial ensign.
- CROSS. The Cross is an ordinary, composed of four lines, two perpendicular, and two transverse. See Plate IV. Fig. 1. Ar. a Cross gu. which is often blazoned, a Cross of St. George.—N. B. When a Cross of this form is borne in a coat, as a charge, it is usually called a Plain Cross. See Plate III. Fig. 49, viz. three Crosses, or three Plain Crosses.
- CROSS AIGUISE'E, or, as it is sometimes called, CROSS URDE'E, may be with greater propriety called a Cross coupé and pointed. See Plate IV. Fig. 42.
- CROSS ANCHORIE, or ANCHORED. A Cross is so called, when its extremities turn back like the flukes of an anchor. See Plate III. Fig. 59.—N. B. This Cross differs but very little from the Cross Moline in Plate IV. Fig. 28.
- CROSS AVELLANE (so called from the Latin Nux Avellana, a philbert or hazel-nut). See Plate IV. Fig. 12.
- CROSS BARRED. See Plate IV. Fig. 43.—N. B. This Cross is by some called a Cross Cramponée, and Tournée.
- CROSS PLATE'E, a Cross composed of Plates, in the same form as the Cross of Golpes. See Plate IV. Fig. 50.—N. B. This form may also serve for a Cross Bezantée, a Cross of Torteauxes, &c. the colour only makes the difference.
- CROSS BOURDONNE'E. See CROSS POMETTE'E.
- CROSS BUTTONE'E, or BOTTONY. Gerard Leigh calls it a Cross budded, supposing its extremities to end in buds of flowers. The French call it Croix Tressée, because its extremities end in trefails; and I think they are right. See Plate IV. Fig. 18.
- CROSS CALVARY is the same as the Cross of the Passion. It is mounted on three steps, grieces, or degrees, which are said to represent Faith, Hope, and Charity. See Plate IV. Fig. 25.
- CROSS OF THE UNION. See Plate IV. Fig. 64.—This form was settled as the badge of the Union, and is thus blazoned: Az. a saltire ar. surmounted of a Cross gu. edged of the second.
- CROSS DOUBLE CLAVED, a Cross composed of three double-warded keys, with one ring. See Plate III. Fig. 72.
- CROSS CLECHE'E, so called by the French Authors. The English Armorsists call it a Cross Mascu'y Pomettée. See Plate IV. Fig. 30.
- CROSS-CERCELE'E. This Cross is like the Cross Moline, but with this difference, that the points are turned round, as in Plate IV. Fig. 44.
- CROSS CORDED, banded with cords, as in Plate IV. Fig. 46.—N. B. The banding of the Cross should be made like a cord, not a ribbon, as in the Figure.
- CROSS COUPED, and VOIDED. See Plate III. Fig. 55.—N. B. The Cross couped doth not join the sides of the escutcheon, but appears as if its ends were cut off.
- CROSS COUPED, and PIERCED. See Plate IV. Fig. 40.
- CROSS COUPED, at each end an ANULET. See Plate IV. Fig. 68.
- CROSS CRESCENTED, a Cross terminating at each end in a Crescent. See Plate IV. Fig. 70.
- CROSS CROSLET hath its extremities ending in little Crosses, called by the French Croix Recroisite. See Plate IV. Fig. 15.
- CROSS CROSLET, mounted on three grieces, or degrees. See Plate IV. Fig. 26.
- CROSS CROSLET FITCHE'E, is when the under part of the Cross is sharp, or hath the lower end of the pale brought to a point, as in Plate IV. Fig. 17.
- CROSS CROSLET FITCHED IN THE FOOT, is when the end is brought to a point, under the transversed piece in base. See Plate IV. Fig. 16.
- CROSS CROSLET PATE'E, so called, when each end of the Cross terminates like a Cross Patée, as in Plate III. Fig. 54.
- CROSS DEGRADED and CONJOINED (i. e. a Cross having three degrees, or grieces, affixed to each end, and brought close to the top, base, and sides of the shield) as in Plate IV. Fig. 57.—N. B. Some Authors blazon this, a Cross issuing from twelve degrees.
- CROSS DOUBLE-ANCHORED. See Plate IV. Fig. 54.
- CROSS DOUBLE FITCHE'E and REBATED of all four. See Plate III. Fig. 60.
- CROSS DOUBLE FITCHE'E AT THE FOUR POINTS. See Plate IV. Fig. 32.
- CROSS DOUBLE-PARTED. See Plate IV. Fig. 53.
- CROSS DOUBLE-PARTED, and FRETTE'E, i. e. having the bars placed over and under each other. See Plate IV. Fig. 49.
- CROSS ENGRAILED. See Plate IV. Fig. 4.
- CROSS ENHENDE'E. The same as Cross Potence.
- CROSS ERMINE. See Plate IV. Fig. 48.—N. B. This blazon, though used by several authors, is absurd; and will lead the Reader into a mistake, if not cautiously attended unto. The blazon should be thus, Ar. four ermine spots in cross, their tops meeting in the centre point.
- CROSS FER DE FOURCHETTE. This Cross has irons fixed to each end, in form of the refts formerly used for fire-locks. See Plate IV. Fig. 34.
- CROSS FER DE MOLINE, pierced lozengy of the field. See Plate III. Fig. 63.

CROSS FIMBRIATED; i. e. edged or bordered with another colour.

CROSS FITCHE'E AT ALL POINTS, and QUARTERLY PIERCED.
See Plate IV. Fig. 69.

CROSS FLEUR-DE-LISE'E, or FLEURETTE'E, the same as Crofs Flory, &c.

CROSS FLORY, FLEURY, FLURTE'E, or FLEURETTE'E, is a Crofs, the ends of which terminate like a fleur-de-lis. See Plate IV. Fig. 31.

CROSS FORME'E, the same as CROSS PATE'E.

CROSS FURSHE, or FOURCHE'E, hath its extremities forked. See Plate IV. Fig. 14.

CROSS FURSHE, or FOURCHE'E, of THREE POINTS. See Plate IV. Fig. 41.—N. B. This is a French bearing.

CROSS FUSIL AT EACH END. See Plate III. Fig. 67.

CROSS FUSIL REBATED (i. e. the points cut off.) See Plate III. Fig. 68.

CROSS FUSILLY, a Crofs composed of Fusils. See Plate IV. Fig. 52.

CROSS GRINGOLLE'E, or GUIVRE'E, a Crofs whose extremities terminate in the heads of snakes.—N. B. This bearing is often used in the French armory. See Plate IV. Fig. 29.

CROSS (LONG) or LONG CROSS, so called from the middle stem being much longer than the crofs piece. It is also commonly called a Passant Crofs. See Plate IV. Fig. 59.

LONG CROSS RAGULY and TRUNKED, so called by Leigh and Beswell; but by Holmes it is called a Crofs Portant, or Portate. See Plate III. Fig. 70.

CROSS of LORRAIN. See Plate IV. Fig. 71. a Crofs of Lorraine voided.

CROSS LOZENGE'E, a Crofs composed of a number of Lozenges.

CROSS of MALTA, or CROSS of EIGHT POINTS. See Plate IV. Fig. 51.—N. B. Monf. Baron says, a Crofs may have its extremities ending in eight, twelve, or sixteen points.

CROSS MILRINE, by some called a Crofs Miller. This Crofs takes its name from the resemblance it bears to a Milrine. See Plate III. Fig. 63.

CROSS MOLINE. See Plate IV. Fig. 28.

CROSS MOLINE IN PALE, and PATE'E IN FESSE. See Plate III. Fig. 66.

CROSS MOLINE PIERCED LOZENGY. See Plate IV. Fig. 38.

CROSS MOLINE QUARTERLY PIERCED. See Plate IV. Fig. 39.—N. B. The pierced square should be the breadth of the Crofs, as in Fig. 66.

CROSS MOUSUE, a term used in French armory for a Crofs round at the ends, as in Plate IV. Fig. 58.

CROSS NOWED GRADY, CONJOINED, and FITCHE'E IN THE FOOT. See Plate IV. Fig. 22.

CROSS NOWED LOZENGY. See Plate IV. Fig. 72.

CROSS NOWY. See Plate III. Fig. 71.

CROSS of FOUR LOZENGES.—N. B. This would be better understood if blazoned four Lozenges in Crofs. See Plate IV. Fig. 61.

CROSS of THREE ENDORSES, surmounted of as many BARRULETS. See Plate III. Fig. 64.

CROSS PALL. See Plate IV. Fig. 36.

CROSS PATE'E, or FORME'E. See Plate IV. Fig. 5.

CROSS PATE'E THROUGHOUT. This is also called by some a Crofs Patée entire, as the ends of the crofs are joined to the sides of the shield. See Plate III. Fig. 52.

CROSS PATE'E INVECKED. See Plate III. Fig. 53.

CROSS PATE'E FITCHE'E on a label of three points in base. See Plate IV. Fig. 13.

CROSS PATE'E THROUGHOUT, DOUBLE-REBATED. See Plate IV. Fig. 56.

CROSS PATE'E CONCAVE. See Plate III. Fig. 51.

CROSS PATE'E CONVEXED. See Plate IV. Fig. 55.

CROSS PATE'E FLEURY.—N. B. This Crofs hath the tops of fleurs-de-lis issuing from its extremities, as in Plate III. Fig. 57.

CROSS PATE'E FITCHED AT ALL POINTS. See Plate III. Fig. 58.

CROSS PATE'E PIERCED OF THE FIELD. See Plate IV.

Fig. 6.—N. B. If the inside of the Crofs Patée is of metal, or colour different from the field, then it should be blazoned, a Crofs Patée fimbriated, or a Crofs Patée surmounted of another.

CROSS PATE'E CRENELLE'E. See Plate XV. Fig. 36, viz. Pet pale ar. and gu. a Crofs Patée Crenellée, counterchanged.

CROSS PATE'E FITCHED AT THE FOOT. See Plate IV. Fig. 7.

CROSS PATE'E FITCHE'E. This is expressed by the fourth part of the Crofs in base being brought to a point, as in Plate IV. Fig. 8.

CROSS PATE'E, with an ENGRAIL IN EACH POINT. See Plate VII. Fig. 36.

CROSS PATONCE. The ends of this Crofs terminate like the bottom part of the fleur-de-lis, which I presume has occasioned some heraldic Writers to call it a Crofs Fleury, or Farty. See Plate IV. Fig. 9.

CROSS PATONCE VOIDED. The inside being taken out, the field appears through the space. See Plate IV. Fig. 10.

CROSS PATONCE ACORNED AT EACH ANGLE. See Plate III. Fig. 69.

CROSS PATRIARCHAL, is composed of one piece in pale and two pieces across, or horizontal, one in chief, and one in base; that in base being longer than that in chief, as in Plate IV. Fig. 27.—N. B. The French Heralds make their Crofs Patriarchal different from ours, and sometimes call it a Crofs of Lorraine.

CROSS PLAIN, or PLAIN CROSS. See CROSS.

CROSS POINTED and VOIDED. See Plate IV. Fig. 35.

CROSS POMELLE. See Plate IV. Fig. 19.—N. B. This bearing terminates at each end with a knob, or ball, and takes its name from the pomel of a sword.

CROSS POMETTE'E. See Plate IV. Fig. 20.

CROSS PORTRATE. See Plate IV. Fig. 62.—N. B. This is a French bearing.

CROSS POTENCE. See Plate IV. Fig. 60.—N. B. This figure is erroneously so termed by Columbiere, and some others; but Holmes calls it a Saxon F, and affirms it to be the arms of the bishoprick of Chemin, a province in Saxony.

CROSS POTENT REBATED, or CROSS COMPONE'E. See Plate IV. Fig. 47.

CROSS POTENT. This figure terminates like the head of a crutch, which was anciently called a Potent. See Plate IV. Fig. 23.

CROSS POTENT FITCHE'E. See Plate VI. Fig. 24.

CROSS POTENT OF ALL FOUR POINTS, DOUBLE FITCHED AND REBATED. See Plate III. Fig. 61.

CROSS POTENT CROSSED. See Plate IV. Fig. 21.

CROSS POTENT QUADRAT. See Plate IV. Fig. 11.—N. B. This Crofs is part of the Arms of the See of Litchfield.

CROSS POTENT FLEURY, or FLEURTE'E. See Plate III. Fig. 55.

CROSS QUARTERLY PIERCED. See Plate IV. Fig. 66.

CROSS QUARTERLY QUARTERED. See Plate IV. Fig. 45.

CROSS RAGULED, or RAGULY. See Plate IV. Fig. 65.

CROSS RECERELLE'E. See Plate III. Fig. 62.

CROSS RECURSIE is a Crofs with the inside taken out, leaving only an edge, as in Plate III. Fig. 50.—N. B. This may be blazoned, a Crofs voided of the field.

CROSS RAYONNATED, RAYONNED, or RAYONNANT, is a Crofs, from the angles of which issue rays. See Plate IV. Fig. 63.

CROSS STAFF, a rule used by the Plumbers, and borne by them as a part of their armorial ensign. See Plate VIII. Fig. 61.

CROSS TAU, or CROSS of ST. ANTHONY, takes its name from the resemblance it has to the Greek letter T. See Plate IV. Fig. 37.

CROSS TRIPARTED FLEURY, is composed of four fleurs-de-lis, conjoined and united in the centre fesse point. See Plate III. Fig. 65.

CROSS TRON-ONNE'E (a French bearing) is a Crofs cut into pieces, and placed so as to form the Crofs. See Plate XV. Fig. 42.

CROSS URDE'E. See Plate IV. Fig. 42.

CROSS URDE'E, RECURSIE'E, by some called a Crofs pointed and voided. See Plate IV. Fig. 35.

CROSS VOIDED OF THE FIELD. See Plate IV. Fig. 2.
CROSS VOIDED and COUPED. See Plate IV. Fig. 3.—
 N. B. This is by some termed Reerallée, or disjointed.
CROSSWAYS, the position of figures whose location seems to form the figure of a cross.
CRY OF WAR, any sentence or word become a general cry throughout the army upon its approach to battle. The Scots call it a Slughorn.
CUIRASSES (i. e.) breast-plates. See Plate IX. Fig. 24.
CUP, or CHALICE. See Plate VIII. Fig. 22.
CUP (covered) called in armory a Covered Cup. See Plate VIII.
 Fig. 28.
CUPS, as in the Arms of St. Alban. See Plate II. Fig. 41.
 —N. B. These are by some called Lamps.
CUP, out of which proceeds a boar's head erect. See

Plate VII. Fig. 38.—N. B. This is a bearing in the Arms of Bowles.

CURRIERS SHAVES, or PARING-KNIVES, tools made use of by the Curriers to thin the leather. See, Plate VI.
 Fig. 13. in chief a Currier's Shave.—N. B. They are borne in the Arms and Crest of the Curriers Company.
CUSHION Lozenge and Tasselled. See Plate XIV.
 Fig. 64.—N. B. Cushions are thus borne in the Coat of Redman: they may be also borne square.
CUTTING-IRON, a tool used for the Patten-makers, and borne by them in their armorial ensign. See Plate XV.
 Fig. 28. in chief a cutting-iron, in base a patten.
CUTTLE-FISH, by some called Ink Fish. See Plate VII, Fig. 8.

D

DACRE, knot and badge. See Plate XV. Fig. 46.
DAISEY, a perennial flower. See Plate XIII. Fig. 71.
DANCETTE', by the French called Danché and Dentellé.
 When the teeth of a line, drawn zig-zag, are large and wide, such line is said to be dancetté; but when the teeth are small, the line is called indented. See Plate I. in the Partition of Lines, Number 16.
DANISH AX. See Plate VIII. Fig. 57.
DATE slipped, i. e. a branch of the Date tree torn off.
 See Plate XIII. Fig. 39.
DEATH'S HEAD, or HUMAN SKULL, is often borne in arms, and generally blazoned Death's Head. See Plate
 XIV. Fig. 33.
DEATH'S HEAD, an order of knighthood. See the different Orders; as also Plate III. of Collars, Fig. 18.
DEATH'S HEAD IN A CUP, being part of the arms of Bethlehem-Hospital. See Plate VII. Fig. 47.
DEBRUISED, a term peculiar to the English armory, denoting any living creature who is represented as being debarred of his natural freedom by either of the ordinaries being laid over him, as in Plate XV. Fig. 7, viz. a lion rampant gardant debruised of a fesse.
DECHAUSSE', a French term for a lion dismembered at all his joints. See Plate XV. Fig. 1.—N. B. The limbs are only cut off from the body, not removed from their places.
DECKED, or MARGUETTE, is said of an eagle, and other birds, when their feathers are trimmed at the edges, with a small line, or pizzle, of another colour.
DECOUPLE', the same as uncoupled; i. e. parted or severed.
DECOURS, in the French armory, signifies the same as De-crescent in the English.
DECREMENT, according to the French Authors, is the wane of the moon from the full to the new. To shew this, the moon is to be represented as facing to the left of the escutcheon, as she does to the right when she is in the increase.—N. B. This bearing is called, in English armory;
 a Moon Decrescent.
DECRESCENT, the half-moon looking to the left of the shield, as in Plate V. Fig. 43. also Fig. 52.—N. B. Neither the Decrescent, Increscent, nor the Crescent, must have a face within the horns, or illumination round; except it is expressed in the blazon, viz. a decrescent circled.
DEFENCES are the weapons of beasts; as the horns of a stag, the tusks of a boar, &c. &c.
DEFENDU, Fr. so said of a boar: when his tusks are of a different tincture from his body, we say, armed of such a tincture.
DEGRADATION OF HONOUR. See ABATEMENT OF HONOUR.
DELF, is a square sod of earth, coal, or turf, cut up by a spade. The name is taken from Delving, or Digging. See Plate V. Fig. 19.—N. B. If there are more than one of these pieces in a coat, they are to be called Delves.

DEMEMBRE', or DISMEMBERED, that is, the limbs of a lion, or any other beast, cut off from the body. See DE-CHAUSSE'.

DEMI, or ONE HALF, a word much used in heraldry;
 as a demi-lion, demi-boar, &c.

DESCENDING, a term used for a lion, whose head is turned towards the base of the shield.

DESCENT, i. e. a coming down, a word peculiarly used by the French Heralds. Thus they say, un lion en descent; that is, with his heels up towards one of the corners of the chief, and his head to one of the base points, as if he was leaping down from some high place.

DESPOUILLE, Fr. is the whole case or skin of a beast, with the head, feet, tail, and appurtenances, which being filled up, or stuffed, looks like the whole creature.

DETRANÇHE, Fr. signifies a line bendways, which doth not come from the very angle, but either from some part of the upper edge, and thence falls athwart or diagonally, or from part of the side in the same manner, but always from the dexter side, as the word Tranche imports.

DEVICE is a representation, emblem, or hieroglyphic, drawn or painted, to express something that ought to be kept in mind.

DEVOURING. All such fish as are borne in armory feeding, are termed in blazon devouring, because they swallow their food all whole, without chewing.

DEXTER signifies the right-hand side of the arms; the supporter, and every charge placed on the right hand, is called the Dexter.

DEXTER BASE, is the right hand of the base, or bottom of the coat. See the letter G, in the escutcheon, Plate I. Fig. 1.

DEXTER CHIEF is the angle on the right hand of the chief. See the Letter A, Plate I. Fig. 1.—N. B. All of them are fully treated of in the Discourse on Blazoning, p. 162.

DIADEMATE', or DIADEMED, a term applied to, or expressive of, a peculiar mark of dignity of the Imperial Eagle, the two heads whereof are surrounded with an annulet or circle, which is a more sovereign sign, than to be crowned as the eagles of other princes are; and therefore they are said to be Diademate', or diademed, and not Couronné.

DIAMOND, a precious stone. The name is used, in bla-zon, to express sable or black, by those who blazon by precious stones.

DIAPRE, or DIAPERING, was formerly much used, particularly in arms painted on glass. It was covering the field with little squares, and filling them with variety of figures, as in Plate V. Fig. 6. or with a running ornament, as in Plate I. Fig. 30.—N. B. There cannot remain a

- 2020 but that such figures arose from the fancy of the Painter, and never were paternal bearings.
- DICE are often borne in arms. See Plate XIV. Fig. 68. in the chief of which are two Dice.
- DIFFERENCES, or BRISURES, are certain additions to coat-armour, whereby something is added, or altered, in order to distinguish the younger families from the elder. See the centre of Plate XV. for the Distinction of Houses.
- DIMIDIATED, a word used by some of our Writers, to express any thing that has lost a part; as a forest, or wood-bill, without a handle: the French use the word dimidiating, for cutting off half of the man's coat and half of the woman's, when they impale them. See the Treatise on Blazoning.
- DIMINUTION OF ARMS, is an expression sometimes used in Heraldry, instead of Differences, or, as the French call them, Brisures; and is taken from the Latin, Diminutiones, lessnings, as showing a family to be less than the chief.
- DISHES: See Plate VIII. Fig. 25. Three Dishes, being the coat of Standish.
- DISPLAYED, an heraldic term, used to express the position of the wings of eagles, and all other birds, when they are expanded. See Plate XII. Fig. 3, 5, 6, 8, 13, &c. &c.—N. B. The word displayed is sometimes used for the same purpose.
- DISTILLATORY, double-armed with two worms, and bolt-receivers, on a fire, being part of the arms of the Distillers Company. See Plate VII. Fig. 3.
- DISTINCTIONS of Families, called also Marks of Cadency. The elder brother, during the life-time of his father, is to bear the label. See LABEL.—The second brother, a crescent. See CRESCENT.—The third, a mullet. See MULLET.—The fourth, a martlet. See MARTLET.—The fifth, an annulet. See ANNULET.—The sixth, a fleur-de-lis. See FLEUR-DE-LIS.—The seventh, a rose. See ROSE.—The eighth, a cross moline. See CROSS MOLINE.—The ninth, a double quatrefoil. See DOUBLE QUATREFOIL.—By these distinctions, every brother, or house, ought to observe his or its due deference.—The first son of the second house beareth a label on the crescent; the second son, a crescent on the crescent; the third, a mullet on the crescent; and so on as above.—The first son of the third son, a label on the mullet; and so continue as to the second son's issue. The same rule must be observed with the issue of the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth sons.—Notes, The daughters of each house should always bear the family distinction or mark of cadency borne by their father; but not any, to shew them to be the first, second, or third daughter.—N. B. The different distinctions of families are engraved on the centre of Plate XV.
- DISVELLOPED, a term used to signify displayed; thus an ensign, or colours, in the army, being open and flying, is often said to be disvelloped. See Plate VIII. Fig. 54.
- DOG-COLLAR, as borne in armory, must be drawn as in Plate VIII. Fig. 71.
- DOLPHIN, a sea-fish, remarkably frait; notwithstanding which, the Heralds have always thought fit to draw it crooked, or, as they term it, embowed. See Plate XI. Fig. 46. When the Dolphin is represented in the position as in that Figure, it is needless to use the expressions of either embowed or naiant; but, if it is in the position as in Fig. 47. you must blazon it either a Dolphin haurient, or a Dolphin torqued.
- DONJONNE'. When a castle, or tower, hath an inner tower rising above its embattlements, the French call it donjonné, or dungoned.
- DORMANT, a term used for a lion, or any other animal, lying down and sleeping, with its head resting on its fore-paws. For a lion in that position, see Plate X. Fig. 14.
- DOSSERS, or WATER-BOUGETS. See WATER-BOUGETS.
- DOUBLE FITCHEE. See CROSS DOUBLE FITCHEE.
- DOUBLE CRLE, SALTIER AND CROSS, is composed of chains passing from an annulet in the centre. See Plate VII. Fig. 61. A field gu. bearing such a charge or, is the Arms of the kingdom of Navarre.
- DOUBLE PLUME OF OSTRICHES FEATHERS is generally composed of five at bottom, and four at top. See Plate XII. Fig. 46.
- DOUBLE QUEUED. A lion, or any other beast, with two tails, is said to be double queued. See Plate X. Fig. 11.
- DOUBLINGS are the linings of the mantles over the arms on an achievement. In blazoning, you say, A mantle gu. doubled ar. Plate XVII. Fig. 4. and Plate XVIII. Fig. 1 and 3.
- DOVE. The Dove is too well known to need a description. For the position of it, as borne in arms, see Plate XII. Fig. 24, a Dove, holding in its beak a sprig of laurel.
- DOVE displayed in the glory of the sun. See Plate XII. Fig. 25.—N. B. This bearing is part of the Stationers Arms.
- DOVE-COT, or DOVE-HOUSE. See Plate VIII. Fig. 46.
- DOVE-TAIL, a term of art used by Joiners, and first introduced into Heraldry anno 1720. See Plate I. in the Division of Lines, No. 17; as also in the same Plate of Chiefs, Fig. 22; also in the Borders, Plate V. Fig. 4.
- DRAGONNE', a term which the French use in their bigenerous serpents, to express such whose hinder parts partake of the dragon, especially when those parts differ in tincture from the other part of the body.
- DRAGON, a fabulous beast. See Plate XI. Fig. 10. N. B. The word indorsed, as applicable to their wings, need not be used in blazoning, Dragons being always drawn as in the Figure above referred to.
- DRAGON'S head and wings indorsed. See Plate XI. Fig. 32.
- DRAGON'S head erased. See Plate VII. Fig. 12.
- DRAGON, DEMI, is when the Dragon is couped at the bottom of the body, and the tail placed as in Plate XI. Fig. 33.
- DRAGON'S wings displayed. See Plate XII. Fig. 67. a spear between two Dragons wings displayed.
- DRAGON. Two demi Dragons, fans wings, interlaced, being the Crest of Langton, as in Plate VII. Fig. 7.
- DRAGON'S HEAD, is one of the celestial constellations, and that by which those who blazon by planets express the colour tawney.
- DRAGON'S TAIL, another planet, used also, in blazoning; for the colour murray.
- DRAPEAU, Fr. an ensign, or standard.
- DRAWING-IRON, an instrument used by Wire-Drawers, and borne as part of their armorial ensign: the form of this instrument is drawn in Plate XV. at the base of Fig. 2.
- DUCAL CORONET. See CORONET.
- DUCAL CORONETS. See Plate XIV. Fig. 52, three ducal coronets, two and one.
- DUCIPER, a name given to a Cap of Maintenance.
- DUCKS. See CANNETS.
- DUKE, the highest title next to that of Princes of the Blood: N. B. It was anciently a title given to military commanders; afterwards it was conferred by creation and letters patent, as an hereditary title of honour. The first person who received that honour was Edward the Black Prince, he being created Duke of Cornwall in the eleventh year of Edward III. 1337, from which time that particular dukedom and title have been annexed to the Prince of Wales for the time being.
- DUNG-FORKS, when borne in coat-armour, are drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 60, viz. in the dexter chief a dung-fork, in the sinister chief a pike-leave, at the top of the handle a ring; three such staves, with the rings in chief, being the Arms of Pike. In base is another dung-fork.

EAGLE, is called the King of Birds, and is variously borne in coat-armour, viz.

EAGLE REGARDANT. See Plate XII. Fig. 1.

EAGLE RISING, or Rowsant. In this position it is supposed to be rising from the ground to take flight. See Plate XII. Fig. 2.

EAGLE with wings expanded and inverted. See Plate XII. Fig. 5b.

EAGLE DISPLAYED, is when the wings and legs are extended on each side the body, as in Plate XII. Fig. 3.

EAGLE DISPLAYED with the wings inverted. See Plate XII. Fig. 4.—N. B. This form seldom occurs in the blazon of armorial bearings, but by mistake of Painters and Engravers.

EAGLE DISPLAYED with two heads, commonly called a Spread Eagle. See Plate XII. Fig. 5.

EAGLE DISPLAYED, with two heads, sans wings. See Plate XII. Fig. 7.

EAGLE, DEMI, displayed, with two heads ducally gorged. See Plate XII. Fig. 6.

EAGLE, DEMI, displayed and erased. See Plate XII. Fig. 8.

EAGLE PREYING. See Plate XII. Fig. 9. The Eagle, or Hawk, when in the position there represented, is always said to be preying.

EAGLE's Head erased. See Plate XII. Fig. 12.

EAGLE's Wings conjoined in base. See Plate XII. Fig. 13.

EAGLE's Wings conjoined in lure, so called from their resemblance to a hawk's lure. See Plate XII. Fig. 14.

EAGLE's Leg conjoined at the thigh to a sinister wing. See Plate XII. Fig. 15.—N. B. When the legs of men, beasts, or birds, are used in armorial bearing, the toes, hoofs, claws, and talons, must always be turned towards the dexter side of the escutcheon.

EAGLE's Sinister Wing. See Plate XII. Fig. 16.

EAGLE's Dexter Wing. See Plate XII. Fig. 18.

EAGLE's Dexter Wing, according to the French and German method of drawing the Imperial Eagle. See Plate XII. Fig. 17.

EAGLE's Leg, conjoined at the thigh to a plume of three ostrich-feathers. See Plate XII. Fig. 19.

EAGLE perch'd, crowned with an antique crown, holding in his dexter claw a sceptre erect. See Plate XII. Fig. 60.

EAGLE preying on an Infant, being a crest of Stanley. See Plate XII. Fig. 40.—N. B. The Eagle, as represented at Fig. 9. is much the best position for the bird to be represented in when in the act of preying.

EAGLE's Talons or Claws, and Beak, are called Arms; wherefore we say, An Eagle proper, armed or.

EAGLET, a small eagle. This term hath been used by many heraldic Writers; but I have avoided it through this Work, as thinking it more proper, in the blazoning of a coat, to say, Three or more Eagles, than three or more Eaglets.—Nisbet says, that when there are more Eagles than three in the field, they are termed Eaglets, except there be an interposition of one or other of the ordinaries between them.

EARED. When the ears of any beast are of a different tincture from the body, he is said to be eared of such a tincture: the like expression is applied to griffins, and other fictitious animals, under the like circumstances.

EARL, the third degree of the peerage, being between the Marquis and the Viscount.

EARL's Coronet. See CORONETS.

ECARTELE', a French term for quartering.

ECHIQUIER, the French term for cheque. See CHEQUE.

ECUSSON, a term used by the French, to signify what we call an Inescutcheon.

EELS, a species of Fish. See Plate XI. Fig. 64. three Eels in pale.

EFFEARE', French, signifying a beast rearing on his hind-legs, as if frightened or provoked; and in the attitude which we call fallout, or springing. See Plate X. Fig. 8. a lion salient.

EFFRAYE', Fr. signifies Rampant.

EIGHTFOOL, an eight-leaved grass, so called by Morgan. Others call it a double Quatrefoil. See Plate XIII. Fig. 44.

ELECTORAL CROWN. See CROWNS.

ELEPHANT. An Elephant with a castle on his back is borne in arms and crests, as in Plate XI. Fig. 7.

ELEPHANT's Head Erased. See Plate XI. Fig. 37.

ELEPHANT's TRUNK Couped. See Plate XI. Fig. 38.

ELEVATED, raised up; a word particularly used to express wings turned upwards. See Plate XII. Fig. 2. &c. &c.

EMANCHE'. See MANCHE.

EMBATTELLED.

EMBORDERED, is when a border is of the same metal, colour, or fur, as that of the arms.

EMBROIDERY is a term in heraldry, given to a hill, or mount, that has several copings, or rises and falls. This term is seldom or ever used in English blazon: The French say, a mount EMBROIDERED, or ENAMELLED, with flowers.

EMBRUED, is a term applied to any weapon, &c. that is bloody: as for example, A spear-head embrued gu. See Plate IX. Fig. 34. It is also used to describe the mouths of lions, bears, wolves, &c. that have been feeding. In such case, we say, their mouths embrued: and, in painting, we represent their mouths bloody, with drops falling therefrom.

EMERALD, a precious stone, of a beautiful green colour. The word is used to signify green, in blazoning arms by precious stones.

EMMET'S, ANTS, or PISMIRE'S. They are generally borne in numbers, as eight or more on the field, as in Plate VII. Fig. 58.

ENALURON. When a border is charged with eagles, or, as some Heralds name them, alerions, it is called Enaluron. The like term is also used to express the border being charged with birds of any other kinds: for example, Ar. a border az. charged with an Enaluron of martlets or.—N. B. I should say, Ar. on a border az. eight martlets or.

ENDORSE, the eighth part of the pale. See Plate II. Fig. 4. viz. an Endorse between two square flanches.

ENDORSED, a term used to signify any things that are placed back to back, from the French word Adossés, which word is often used in the place of Endorsed. See LIONS ENDORSED, Plate X. Fig. 24. Also in Plate VI. Fig. 53, two keys in bend endorset. See ADOSSED.

ENFILED. When the head of a man or beast, or any other charge, is placed on the blade of a sword, the sword is said to be enfiled with a head, &c.

ENHANCED, any ordinary, as a fesse, bend, &c. when removed from its usual situation, and placed higher in the field, is said to be enhanced.

ENGLANTE', Fr. is said of an oak-tree when fruited, or bearing acorns.

ENGOULED, from the French Engoulant, swallowing, a term used to express the act of devouring any thing: as for example, a serpent erect, devouring an infant. See Plate VII. Fig. 60.

ENGOULED. A bend Engouled is when the bend issues from the mouths of two lions heads, as in Plate VII. Fig. 70.

ENGRAILED. When the edge of a border, bend, fesse, &c. is composed of little semicircular indentis, it is said to be engrailed. See Plate II. Fig. 14, 16, 22, and 71; Plate III. Fig. 22; Plate IV. Fig. 4. &c.

- ENGRASSING-BLOCK, a tool or instrument made use of by the Wire-drawers. See Plate XV. Fig. 38.—N. B. The Figure in the finifer chief point.
- ENGUICHE', a word used by Columbiere to describe the great mouth of a hunting-horn, when it hath a rim to it of a colour different from that of the horn itself.
- ENTE' EN ROND differs from indented in this particular, that the gaps or cuts are made of rounds in and out; whereas Indents consist of strait lines in and out.
- EN PIED. The posture of a bear when borne in arms is usually ereet on his hinder feet; in which case the French say, that he is en pied, i. e. ereet.
- ENTE', Fr. signifies any thing ingrafted. It is used by foreign Heralds to express a method of marshalling frequently to be found abroad.
- ENTOIRE', or ENTOYER, a term used when a border is charged with any sort of things that have no life; as bezants, plates, ogressis, &c. See Plate V. Fig. 10.—N. B. Instead of using the word Entoire, it is, in my opinion, more proper to say, A border charged with bezants, plates, &c. and to mention their number.
- ENTWINED by a snake, signifies, tied together with a snake, or tied round the neck with a snake, as in the Arms of Vaugban. See Plate XIV. Fig. 12. a boy's head entwined round the neck with a snake.
- ENURNY, a term in blazoning, applied by the French to all borders that are charged with beasts; wherefore you say, A border gu. enurny of lions.—N. B. I am of the same opinion in regard to the word Enurny, as I am to the word Entvire. I would say in the blazon, A border gu. charged with eight lions, &c.
- ENVELOPED. When a snake entangles himself round a beast, bird, or any other thing, it is said to be enveloped with a snake. See Plate VIII. Fig. 17.
- ENVIRONNE', or ENVIRONED. A beast, encompassed or furrounded with a number of bezants, plates, &c. is said to be environed.
- ENWRAPED, signifies the same as Enveloped.
- ENWRAPPED, tied round. See CHILD'S HEAD.
- EPIMACUS, or OPINICUS. See OPINICUS.
- EPISCOPAL STAFF. See Plate XVI. Fig. 56.
- EPLOYE', the same as Displayed.
- EQUIPE'. A Chevalier armed at all points is said to be Equippe. See the upper KNIGHT on horseback in Plate IX.
- EQUISE'. See AIGUISSE'.
- ERASED, or ERAZED, signifies any thing torn or plucked off from the part to which Nature had fixed it:—the part torn off must be expressed jagged, to contradicting it from couped. See, Plate XII. Fig. 12, an eagle's head erazed; Fig. 23, a pelican's head erazed.
- ERECT, any bearing placed perpendicularly; as for example, a boar's head erazed and ereet. See Plate XI. Fig. 30.
- ERMINE, or ERMIN, is the skin of a beast so called. When painted in armory, the ground is white and the spots black, as in Plate I. (in the division of Metals, Colours, and Furs) Fig. 11.
- ERMINES, the ground black, and the spots white, as in Plate I. Fig. 12.
- ERMINETES, or ERMINITES, the bearing the same as ermine, viz. white ground, with black spots; only in each black spot there is one red hair, which cannot be expressed in the engravings.
- ERMINOIS, the ground gold, and the spots black, as in Plate I. Fig. 13.
- ESCALLOP-SHELL. See Plate XI. Fig. 70.
- ESCARBUNCLE. See CARBUNCLE.
- ESCARTELE', quartered, or quarterly.
- ESCLATTE' is used to express a thing forcibly broken away; and therefore a bend or other partition Esflatié, is represented as torn, or broken like a piece of ruined wall, irregular, and not made level; or rather like a shield that hath been broken and shattered with the stroke of a battle-ax, or some such weapon, and not cut off smooth with a sword.
- ESCLOPPE, a sort of indenture, mentioned by Columbiere; or a gap or cut made in and out, upon a bend, so that the colours counterchange, running the one into the other in only one point of each.
- ESCROL, a long slip of parchment, paper, pasteboard, &c. whereon Crests were anciently placed.—It was not 'till long after the reign of Henry V. that any person, under the degree of Knight, might place his crest on a wreath. It is now used to write the mottos on. See the Atchievements in Plate XVII. and XVIII.
- ESCUTCHEON, or SHIELD, in Arms, means the original shield used in war, and on which arms were originally borne. The surface of the Escutcheon is termed the field, because it contains such honourable marks as anciently were assumed or worn in the field. See Plate I. the top row of eight different shields.
- ESCUTCHEON of Pretence, is that on which the husband carries the coat of his wife, being an heiress. It is with us placed sur le tout, i. e. over all; and thereby sheweth his pretensions to her lands. See Plate XVII. Fig. 15.
- ESCUTCHEON reversed, is the second abatement of honour. See Plate V. Fig. 20.—N. B. For the account of the Abatements of Honour, see page 169, in the beginning of the Work.
- ESCUTCHEON, or INESCUTCHEON, is the same bearing: If there is but one in the field, as in Plate II. Fig. 60, it is called an Inescutcheon; if more than one Escutcheon in a coat, as in Plate III. Fig. 19, they are called Escutcheons.
- ESQUIRE, or EQUIRE, the same bearing as the Gyron.
- ESQUIRE, in Latin Armiger, was formerly a title given to him that carried the arms of some great person.
- ESSONIER, a diminutive of an Orle: with the French, it is of a smaller tract than an Orle, but after the same form. Monestrier, in his Origine des Armes, says, that the Essonier represents a girdle, or an inclosure of ground fenced, which imports the same as is before said of the Bordure.
- ESSORANT, a French term to express an eagle, when the wings are somewhat lifted up, as rising, or, as some say, when the wings are expanded in such manner as if they had been wetted, and were drying.
- ESTOILE, or ETOILE, is a star with six long waved rays, or points. See Plate V. Fig. 48.
- ETETE', used by the French to signify an headless beast, or beast whose head had been torn off by force, and consequently the neck remains rough or ragged.
- ETOILE issing out of a crescent. See Plate V. Fig. 51.
- ETOILE of eight points. See Plate V. Fig. 49.—N. B. An Etoile of eight points should have four points strait and four waved; those of sixteen points, eight strait and eight waved; as in Plate V. Fig. 50.
- EVIRE'. The lion is said by the French to be Eviré, when the marks of the masculine sex are not seen.
- EWER, a pot, or cream-ewer. See Plate VIII. Fig. 27.
- EXPANDED WINGS, the same as wings displayed.
- EYES are borne in arms, as are also all other parts of the human body. For the Eye, see Plate V. Fig. 44, viz. on an etoile of sixteen points an Eye.

FAGGOT, a bundle of small wood, so called. For its figure, as borne in the Woodmongers Arms, see Plate VII. Fig. 23.

FAILLIS, a failure or fracture in an ordinary, as if a splinter had been taken from it.

FALCHION, or FAULCHION, a kind of broad-sword. See Plate IX. Fig. 26; also Fig. 29, which last, as there represented, is part of the Crest of Richardson.

FALCON, the large, or sporting hawk. Falcons, when borne as charges in armorial ensigns, are usually represented with bells tied on their legs. See Plate XII. Fig. 10.—N. B. The bells, although generally placed on the Falcon's legs, must be particularly mentioned in blazoning; as thus, A Falcon proper, belled or. Some, when speaking of a Falcon as a Crest, call it, A Falcon close; which last word, in my opinion, ought to be omitted, because, when the Falcon is represented in any other attitude than close, the attitude is particularly expressed.

FALCON'S LEG, erazed at the thighs, jessed and belled. See Plate XII. Fig. 20.—N. B. When the legs of a Falcon are termed belled, without any other mark of distinction, they are then drawn as in Plate XII. Fig. 10 and 11; but when they are jessed and belled, the jesses must fly loose, as in the above Fig. 20.

FALCON with wings endorsed. See Plate XII. Fig. 11.—N. B. Falcons are borne in the same various positions as Eagles.

FASCE, or FACE, in the French blazon, is the same as Barry in the English.

FASCIOLÆ GEMELLÆ, } See BAR GEMEL.
FASCIOLÆ DUPLICES, }

FEATHERS of Birds, especially those of the ostrich, are sometimes borne as armorial figures.

FENDUE EN PAL. A cross Fendue en Pal is a cross cloven from top to bottom, and having the two parts set at some distance from each other. It is a French term for what the English Heralds call a Cross voided.

FER DE FOURCHETTE. See CROSS DE FOURCHETTE.

FER DE MOULINE, is the original name for the iron which is fixed in the centre of a mill-stone. Of late years it hath been commonly called a Millrinc, and by some Heralds, Ink Moline, and Inke de Maline, which mean the same. These pieces are now usually drawn as in Plate VIII. Fig. 33; but formerly they were drawn of various shapes, as may be seen in Fig. 34 and 35. of the same Plate. Fig. 32 represents the Millrinc in the stone.

FERMAILE, or FERMEUX, a term often used in armory for a buckle. See BUCKLE.

FESSE is one of the ordinaries, consisting of two horizontal lines drawn across the field, and, according to the opinion of some writers, should contain one third part of the escutcheon; but I differ from them in this matter, because the Fesse, when drawn of that thickness, makes the coat look clumsy and heavy. For the Fesse, see Plate II. Fig. 29.

FESSE and CANTON conjoined. See Plate II. Fig. 56.

FESSE EN DEVISE, a French term for a bar.

FESSE HUMETTE, is a Fesse coupé at each end. See Plate III. Fig. 11.

FESSE breasted, hath the same indents as the fesse embattled, or erenellé; but it must have both its sides equal to each other, as in Plate III. Fig. 12.

FESSE embattled counter-embattled. See Plate III. Fig. 13.

FESSE dancetté, feury counter-feury on the points. See Plate III. Fig. 14.

FESSE dancetté gobony. See Plate III. Fig. 15.

FESSE embattled on the top. See Plate III. Fig. 16.—N. B. I am of opinion that the words on the top are superfluous, and should always be left out of the blazon, although they are used by many writers; for if the Fesse is embattled on both sides, it is then termed embattled counter-embattled.

FESSE between two cottés feury. See Plate III. Fig. 17.—N. B. When you say feury, it means only the top part of the feur-de-lis, as is explained in the above-mentioned Figure.

FESSE double-dorsé. See Plate III. Fig. 18.

FESSE per fesse erenellé, &c. and gu. between three escutcheons. See Plate III. Fig. 19.

FESSE charged with five music-bars.—N. B. This remarkable charge made its first heraldic appearance in a very modern grant of arms, from whence I have caused it to be engraven in Plate XIV. Fig. 63, as otherwise it would be impossible to understand the meaning of the words of the blazon therein given.

FESSE POINT, is the very centre of the escutcheon. See Plate I. Fig. 1. of the points of the escutcheon, letter E.

FESSEWAYS, or EN FESSE, denotes any charge that is placed in Fesse, or in an horizontal line across the middle of the field; thus, a wear Fesseways, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 31.

FESSE. See PER FESSE, in the letter P.

FETLOCK, or FETTERLOCK, a horse fetlock. See Plate VI. Fig. 5.

FETLOCKS enjined, or interlaced. See Plate VI. Fig. 6.

FEUILLE DE SCIE, is the French term to express that the Fesse pale, or any other ordinary, is indented on one side, like the saw. See Plate XV. Fig. 50.

FIDDLES. See VIOLINS.

FIELD of a Coat of Arms is the whole surface of the escutcheon, or shield, on which the bearings are placed, and must be the first thing mentioned in blazoning.

FIEND, or FURY's head, coupé at the neck, in profile. See Plate XIV. Fig. 15.

FIERY FURNACE, a Furnace with a melting-pot placed thereon. See Plate VII. Fig. 28.—N. B. This is part of the Crest of the Founders Company. See the ARMS of the different Companies.

FIG-LEAF. See Plate XIII. Fig. 31.

FILE, or LABEL, of one, two, three, or more points. See LABEL.

FILE, an instrument used by Smiths. See Plate VI. Fig. 56.

FILLET, an ordinary, containing a fourth part of the chief. See Plate I. Fig. 24.

FIMBRIATED, a term taken from the Latin fimbria, the skirt or hem of a garment. It is used to express that an ordinary or charge is bordered all round. See Plate III. Fig. 3.

FIRE. See BONFIRE.

FIRE-BALL, fired in four places. See Plate IX. Fig. 36.—N. B. When in blazoning you say, A ball fired proper, the fire is always issuing from the top.

FIRE-BEACON, a machine formerly used to give notice of the approach of the enemy, and to alarm the country. The family of Compton use it as their Crest. See Plate IX. Fig. 46.

FIRE-BEACON, a large iron box to make fire in; one of which is the Crest of Pryce. See Plate VII. Fig. 55.

FIREBRAND inflamed proper.—N. B. Firebrands, in armorial bearings, are generally represented raguly, as in Plate V. Fig. 60.

FIRME, a term used for a Cross Patée that is fixed to each side of the escutcheon. Some blazon on it, a Cross Patée entire; others, from Morgan, a Cross Patée throughout. I think that the last is the best way. See Plate III. Fig. 52.

FISH of all sorts, from the whale to the sprat, are borne in arms: when they are represented as being of small size in a coat, they are blazoned by the general appellation of Fish, as Gules, a chevron between three Fish or.

FISH-HOOKS,

FISH-HOOKS, when used in armorial bearings, are to be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 71, viz. a trident between two Fish-hooks.

FISSURE, is the fourth part of a bend sinister, and is by some called a Staff. See Plate III. Fig. 9, in chief a Scarpe, in base a Fissure.

FITCHE', or FITCHED, is taken from the French word Fiches, to fix; in allusion whereunto the bottom of the several crosses, cross crofts, &c. to which the term is added, are always made with a sharp point, to fix in the ground. See Plate IV. Fig. 7, 8, 16, 17, 22, and 24.

FITCHED at all points. See CROSS FITCHED at all points. See Plate III. Fig. 58.

FIVE-LEAVED GRASS. See CINQUEFOIL.

FLAGONS, when borne in armory, are made in shape like a vase, with a cover.

FLANCH, FLANQUE, or FLASQUE. Leigh would make these two distinct and subordinate ordinaries; but Mr. Gibbon very judiciously accounts them both as one, and properly writes it Flanque; and asserts, that the last is no word in Heraldry, and the first is but a corruption of Un flanc, being a side in French, which this ordinary is, as it were, to the shield; therefore it is termed in Latin, Latus, or Latusculum, to which, on account of its form, is added the epithet gibbosum. Gibbon thinks that we might call it Segmentum gibbosum, or Orbiculari Segmentum; it being the segment of a circular superficies. Flanches are ever borne double, as in Plate II. Fig. 57.

FLANKED, or FLANQUED. By this term the French mean our Party per saltire.

FLASQUE, according to Leigh, is not so circular as the Flanch. They are also borne in pairs, as in Plate II. Fig. 58.—N. B. The Dutch bear the Flasque square, as in Plate II. Fig. 4, viz. an indorsé between two square Flasques.

FLAX-BRAKER. See HEMP-HACKLE, which is the same bearing.

FLEECE, the woolly skin of a sheep, hung by its middle at a ring in a collar. See Plate XI. Fig. 36.—N. B. This is commonly called the Golden Fleece, and is the badge pendent to the collar of that order of knighthood.

FLEGME, or FLEAM, an instrument used by Farriers in bleeding horses. Some of the ancient Heralds represent them as in Plate VI. Fig. 40. Others call them Crampoon, supposing them to be cramps of iron, used by builders for fixing blocks or pieces of stone together.

FLEOME, FLEAM, or FLEM, a lancet, or chirurgical instrument, borne as a part of the armorial ensign of the Company of Surgeons. See Plate VI. Fig. 38.—N. B. They are there represented very dissimilar from the modern lancets or instruments used by the Surgeons to bleed with.

FLESH-HOOK, an instrument used for taking meat out of the seething-pot, or caldron. In Heraldry it is to be drawn with three hooks on one stem, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 52, which exhibits a flesh-hook on the sinister side, and on the dexter a botterole.

FLESH-POT, a name given by former Heralds to the three-legged iron pot, when borne in coat-armour. See Plate VI. Fig. 46.

FLEUR-DE-LIS, commonly (although erroneously) called Flower-de-luce. Some say that it represents a lily; others, the iris or flag. It hath from its first bearing been the charge of the royal escutcheon of the French Kings. For the proper shape in which it ought to be drawn, the Reader is referred to Plate XIII. Fig. 51.

FLEUR-DE-LIS seeded. See Plate XIII. Fig. 52.

FLEUR-DE-LIS divided per pale. See Plate XIII. Fig. 53.

FLEUR-DE-LIS semée. See SEME' DE LIS.

FLEURY, FLORÝ, FLURY, FLURTY, FLORETTY, and FLEURETTE'; several appellations given by different authors, but all meaning the same thing, viz. any bearing ending with a fleur-de-lis, as in Plate II. Fig. 54, the piles fleury at the points.

FLEURY CONTRE-FLEURY. See a bend fleury contre-fleury, Plate III. Fig. 1.

FLINT-STONE. See Plate V. Fig. 68.

FLINT-STONE chained. See Plate V. Fig. 71.—N. B. These chained Flint-stones were granted as a coat of augmentation to the Bacon Clifford; in which grant they were spiked, as in the above Figure. They are by some writers called murdering Chain-shot.

FLOAT, an instrument used by the Bowyers, and borne as part of their armorial ensign. See Plate VIII. Fig. 67.

FLOOK, a fish, a flounder.

FLOTANT, a term used in blazon to express any thing flying in the air, as a banner flotant, or displayed. See Plate VIII. Fig. 54.

FLOUKE, or FLUKE, of an anchor, is the semi-circular barbed part by which it takes hold of the ground. See Plate XI. Fig. 57.

FLOURETTE', the same as Flour-de-lisée.

FLY. See Plate XII. Fig. 68.—N. B. Flies, Bees, and Bats, are often borne as charges in arms, and are always drawn in the same position as that wherein they are represented in the Plate here referred to.

FLY. See GAD FLY.

FLY. See HARVEST FLY.

FLY. See BUTTERFLY.

FLYING COLUMN, or a COLUMN with WINGS. See COLUMN; also Plate VII. Fig. 51.

FLYING FISH. See Plate XI. Fig. 66, which shews the only position in which they can be placed.

FONDANT, a French term for what we call slooping for a prey, as when an eagle, falcon, or other carnivorous bird, flies down to seize its prey.

FORCENE'. This is said of a horse when he is rearing, or standing on his hind legs.

FORE-STAFF, a mariner's instrument. See Plate VIII. Fig. 61.

FOREST-BILL, or WOOD-BILL, an instrument used for lopping trees, &c. See Plate VI. Fig. 44.

FORME', or FORMY, is the same as Patée. A croix formée is a cross narrow in the centre, and broad at the extremities.

FORMED, or SEATED. See SEATED.

FOUNTAIN. A Fountain was by former Heralds always drawn as a round barry wavy of six ar. and az. as in Plate V. Fig. 62. And therefore you need not say more in blazon than merely a Fountain; but, a Fountain, according to a modern grant made to the family of Eravco, is to be represented and blazoned quite differently, and as engraved in Plate VII. Fig. 67. See the grant in the Alphabet.—I do not know any precedent, except the above, for altering the ancient and established rule of blazon.

FOURCHI. See CROSS FOURCHI.

FOX, an animal too well known to need any description.

FOXES, two, salient contre-salient in saltire. See Plate X. Fig. 41.

FOX'S HEAD coupé. See Plate X. Fig. 42.

FRAMED SAW, is a saw fixed in an oblong square frame, with a handle at each end.

FRASIER, in French, signifies a strawberry-plant.—N. B. This word is only used by the Heralds of Scotland in blazoning the coat of Fraser, in allusion to the family name. See Plate XIII. Fig. 49.—N. B. It is by other Heralds called a Cinquefoil.

FRET. A Fret consists of six pieces, viz. two long ones in saltire, extended to the extremity of the field, and four pieces in the centre, forming a macle, interlaced by those in saltire.

It is supposed to be so termed, because the pieces of which it is composed seem to fret each other by their alternate superposition. See Plate II. Fig. 61.

FRET engrailed. See Plate II. Fig. 71.

FRET coupé. See Plate II. Fig. 69.—N. B. If there is more than one fret on a coat, you need not use the word coupé, as they cannot touch the extremities of the escutcheon.

FRET, interlaced with an annulet in the centre. See Plate II. Fig. 70.

FRET charged on each joint with a pellet. See Plate III. Fig. 44.

FRET fleury at each point. See Plate III. Fig. 44.

N. B. All ordinaries, charges, crests, and supporters, may be borne covered all over with a Fret; in which case they are to be blazoned fretté.

FRETTY. When the fret consists of eight, ten, or more pieces, each passing to the extremity of the escutcheon, it is called Fretty. See Plate II. Fig. 62. Some writers affirm, that in blazoning, the particular number of pieces should be mentioned; but this would be absurd.

FRUCTED, a term used in blazon, to signify a tree bearing its fruit. See, Plate XIII. Fig. 2, on a mount vert, an oak-tree proper, fructed or, i. e. the acorns gold. At Fig. 3, in the same Plate, is a pear-tree erased, fructed proper, that is, with its fruit in the real natural colour.

FUR. The Furs are six in number, and are understood to be the linings or doublings of mantlings in achievements. See ERMINE, VAIRE, &c.

FURCHE', or FOURCHE'. See FOURCH.

FURNISHED. When a horse is bridled, saddled, and completely caparisoned, he is said in blazon to be furnished. See a horse completely furnished in Plate IX. Fig. 53.

FUSIL, a kind of spindle used in spinning. See Plate VI. Fig. 24. on the dexter.—N. B. The ancient Fusil was of a rhomboidal form, as being supposed to have the yarn upon it, and by many called a Wharrow Spindle. It is thus borne in the coat of Trefusis. See Plate III. Fig. 23.

FUSIL, as now generally borne, see in Plate II. Fig. 64, viz. barry of six ar. and az. over all a fusil sa.—N. B. This charge should be particularly attended to, as few Painters or Engravers make the proper distinction between the Fusil and the Lozenge.

FUSILLY. When the field, or bearing, is covered with fusils, it is termed fusilly.

G

GAD-FLY, or GAD-BEE. This Fly is remarkable for the violence wherewith it stings all sorts of cattle, but most particularly oxen, in the months of June and July. It stings at such time only as the sun shines out hot; for no sooner is the sun obscured by a cloud, than this Fly falls to the ground, where it continues offenseless until the sun shines out again, and then it is immediately invigorated, and risks again to attack the cattle. See Plate XII. Fig. 72.

GADS, plates of steel or iron, and borne as a part of the arms of the Ironmongers Company. For the shape of a Gad, see Plate VI. Fig. 1.

GALLIES, i. e. ships with oars, called by Nesbit, and others, Lymphads. They are drawn in Plate XI. Fig. 54, as borne in the coat of Hamilton.

GALTHRAPS, or CALTRAPS. See CALTRAPS.

GAMBE, from the French Jambe. This word is used in Heraldry to express the whole leg of a lion, or any other beast; but more particularly that of the former when borne as a charge in coat-armour. See Plate X. Fig. 25, 27, and 28.

GANTLET, or GAUNTLET, an iron glove or armour for the hand. See Plate IX. Fig. 12.—N. B. In blazon, you must always add the word dexter or sinister, as the case happens to be.

GANTLET dexter. See Plate IX. Fig. 14.

GANTLET sinister. See Plate IX. Fig. 15.

GARB, from the French Gerbe, a sheaf of any kind of grain. See Plate XIII. Fig. 59. When the charge is a sheaf of wheat, it is sufficient in blazon to say only a Garb; but when it is a sheaf of any other grain, the species of grain must also be expressed, as a garb of oats, &c. and so also, when the straw is of one colour, and the ears of another, those different tinctures must be expressed, as thus, A Garb vert, eared or, i. e. the ears are gold, and stalked green.

GARDANT, or GUARDANT, is said of any beast looking full-faced. For a lion gardant, see Plate X. Fig. 1.—N. B. All other positions are added to this, as passant gardant, rampant gardant, &c. &c.

GARDE-VISURE, that front part of the helm or helmet which is otherwise called the Visor.

GARLAND, or CHAPLET, whether of laurel or other vegetables. See CHAPLET.

GARTER (Order of the). For a particular account of it, see the different Orders of Knighthood in the work. See also Plate I. Fig. 1. of the different Collars.

GARTER, the designation of the King of Arms or principal officer to the above order: he is also principal officer in the College of Arms.

The GARTER.—N. B. This Garter is borne in coat armour. See Plate XIV. Fig. 49. Sometimes it is divided, and called a Demi-Garter; in such case it must be drawn as in Plate XIV. Fig. 50.

GARTIER, or GARTER, a narrow bend, or bendlet. This bearing, according to Guillim, should contain half the breadth of the bend. See, in Plate II. Fig. 25, a bend, and under it a Gartier.

GATE, in blazon, the gate of a field. See Plate VIII. Fig. 43.

GAZE. The hart, stag, buck, or hind, looking affronté, or full-faced, is said to be at gaze. See Plate X. Fig. 57. but all other beasts, when in this attitude, are called gardant.

GEMEL. See BAR GEMEL.

GEM-RING, a term used in blazon to express a diamond ring. See Plate XIV. Fig. 48.

GENET, a small beast of the fox species, but not bigger than a weasel. It is extraordinary light and swift, and the skin as fine and soft as down. There are two sorts of them, one of which is very valuable, as being extremely rare. The common sort is grey, mottled, or full of black spots: the other is as black as jet, and as glossy as the finest velvet, but speckled with red, which sets off the creature extremely. The skin, when rubbed and chafed, exhales a most fragrant odour, like musk; which was the reason that anciently great men had their garments lined with these furs. The fur of this animal is said to be of great value.

GENET (Order of the). A particular account of this order is given in the description of the several Orders of Knighthood. The collar and badge are engraved in the Plate of Collars, No. I. Fig. 5.

GENTRY, are the lesser Nobility; as Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen, who are called in Latin Nobiles Minores.

GILLY-FLOWER, properly July Flower, a species of aromatic carnation, of a blood-red colour. See Plate XIII. Fig. 67.

GIRONETTE', so said by the French of towers when topped with spears.

GLAZIERS Nippers, or Grater, a tool used by the Glaziers, and borne by them as a part of their armorial ensign. See Plate VI. Fig. 22, two Glaziers Nippers in saltire.

GLIDING. When snakes or serpents are represented in blazon as moving forward, they are said to be gliding. In Latin, undans; in French, ondy-ante.

GLOBE TERRESTRIAL, environed with a meridian. See Plate V. Fig. 57.

GLOBE TERRESTRIAL in a frame, environed with a meridian. See Plate V. Fig. 64.

GLOBE, DEMI, or the Northern Hemisphere: Thereon an eagle rising, is the crest granted to Paulk. See Plate V. Fig. 69.

GLOVE. A Falconer's glove pendent proper, tasselled or, see Plate XIV. Fig. 66.

GOAT, a beast well known. See Plate XI. Fig. 25.

GOBONY, or GOBONE'. See COMPONE'.

GOBONATED, as a border, charge, ordinary, or collar, divided into equal parts. See COMPONE'.

GOLPES, are roundles of a purple colour, but by some writers improperly styled Wounds.

GONFALONIER, the Pope's Standard-bearer, or the person whose duty it is to carry the gonfalon. The office is claimed as hereditary by the Duke of Parma.

GONFANNON, or GONFALON, is the banner of the Roman-Catholic church. This banner is always carried in the Pope's army. It is drawn upon a long pole, with three lines affixed to the rings, in the manner of a sail to a mast; so that it is always pendent, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 46.—N. B. The Gonfalon is generally made so rich with embroidery and fringe, that, when carried in procession, the wind hath not power to display it.

GORE, or GUSSET. It consists of two curved lines, one from the sinister chief point, the other from the base middle point, both meeting in an acute angle, in the middle of the fesse point, as in Plate V. Fig. 25. It is called one of the abatements of honour.

GORGED, a term used to signify any beast's having a collar, coronet, &c. round its neck. See, in Plate X. Fig. 21, a lion's head erased, gorged with a ducal coronet.

GORGET, the armour for the breast. See Plate IX. Fig. 8.

GOSHAWK, a species of the hawk, and sometimes so blazoned in allusion to the bearer's name.

GRADIENT, an heraldic term applied to a tortoise supposed walking. See Plate VII. Fig. 9.

GRAIN-TREE. The berries of it are used by the dyers to dye colours in grain. Three sprigs of this tree vert, fructed gu. is the crest of the Dyers' Company; for one sprig of which, see Plate XV. Fig. 22.

GRAPPLING-IRON, a warlike instrument used on board a fire-ship. When represented in armorial ensigns, it should be drawn as in Plate XI. Fig. 60.

GRASSHOPPER, is always drawn in armory in the position as engraved in Plate XII. Fig. 61.

GRATER, an instrument used by Glaziers. See GLAZIERS NIPPERS.

GREYHOUND courant. See Plate X. Fig. 50.

GREYHOUND collared, standing on a mount against a tree. See Plate X. Fig. 49.

GREYHOUND'S COLLAR. See DOG'S COLLAR.

GRICES, young wild boars.—N. B. Boars are sometimes in armory blazoned Grices, in allusion to the bearer's name.

GRIDIRON, engraved in Plate VII. Fig. 42, as they are placed in armorial ensigns.

GRIECES, steps or degrees; such are those on which the Cross Calvary is placed.

GRIFFON, is an imaginary animal, feigned by the ancients to be one half an eagle, and the other half a lion; and devised in orders to express strength and swiftness joined together. See Plate XI. Fig. 8.

GRIFFON (male). In blazon it is drawn without wings, and as having rays of gold issuing from various parts of the body. See Plate XV. Fig. 5.

GRINGOLE'. See GUIVRE'.

GRITTIE, a term used by English writers to express the field when composed equally of metal and colour.

GROSE, by some called a drawing-board, is a tool used by the Coopers, and borne by them as part of their arms.

GUIVRE', or GRINGOLE', from Guivris, a viper or serpent. Crosses, saltires, and other figures, are said to be gringolé, or guivé, when their extremities finish with heads of serpents. See, Plate IV. Fig. 29, a cross Gringolé.

GULES, Fr. signifies red. Mackenzey supposes it to have been so called from the Hebrew Gulude, a piece of red cloth. In Latin it is called Ruber, and in Spanish, Roxo. It is expressed, in engraving coat-armour, by perpendicular lines. See Plate I. Fig. 4. Its contraction is expressed throughout this work by the letters Gu.

GULL. See SEA-GULL.

GUNSTONE is a very ancient heraldic term for a Pellet or Ogreff. See PELLET or OGRESS.

GURGES, or a WHIRLPOOL. This is borne as a charge in the arms of the family named Gorges, and is always drawn as in Plate V. Fig. 70.

GUSSETS, two abatements of honour. See Plate V. Fig. 26.—N. B. The ancient laws of armory enjoin, that, if a man is an adulterer, he shall bear a Gusset on the dexter side of his coat-armour; and if a drunkard, he shall bear a Gusset on the sinister side: therefore whoever was guilty of both, ought to bear two Gussets, the one dexter, and the other sinister.

GUTTE', signifies sprinkled with Guttés (i. e. drops) of any thing liquid.—As these Guttés differ in colour, so the term by which they are described should be varied, viz.

GUTTE' DE SANG, sprinkled with blood.

GUTTE' DE POIX, sprinkled with pitch.

GUTTE' DE L'EAU, sprinkled with water.

GUTTE' DE LARMES, sprinkled with tears.

The French Heralds use none of the above variations, but say Gutté of such a colour.

GUTTÉS REVERSED. See Plate V. Fig. 14.

GUZES, are roundles of a sanguine or murrey colour, so called in English blazon. All foreign Heralds call them Torteauxes of such a colour.

GYRON, from the French Giron, a cap, is an ordinary composed of two strait lines, drawn from any given part of the field, and meeting in an acute angle in the fesse point, as in Plate II. Fig. 46.—N. B. If there is only one Gyron in a coat, and that issues from the dexter chief point, you need only to say, in blazon, a Gyron; but if it issues from any other part of the escutcheon, such part must be particularly expressed.

GYRONNE', or GIRONNY, so said to express the field when divided into several parts or gyrons; as Gyronné of six, in Plate II. Fig. 47. Gyronné of eight ar. and gu. in the same Plate, Fig. 48.—N. B. The field may be charged with Gyrons from two to twelve.

HABERGEON, a small coat of mail, consisting of a jacket without sleeves. See Plate IX. Fig. 35.

HABICK, an instrument, or tool, used by the clothiers in dressing cloth. Two of them, differing from each other in make and fashion, are engraved in Plate VI. Fig. 27. That on the dexter is copied from the tool, which is invariably made in that form; the other on the sinister shews the form and manner in which they have been painted in armory, even in the arms of the Clothiers' Company.

HAIR (Head of Hair) in armory, is always to be drawn as in Plate XIV. Fig. 25.

HAKE FISH, nearly resembles the cod, but is something longer in the body.

HALF-SPEARS, a term used for a spear with a short handle, as in the arms of Pennyman. See Plate IX. Fig. 20. on the dexter side, a Half-Spear.

HAMMER, used by the Plaistfers, and borne by them as part of their armorial ensign. See Plate VIII. Fig. 63.

HAMMER, as used in other armorial ensigns. See Plate VI. Fig. 67.

HAMMER ducally crowned, as borne in the arms belonging to the Company of Blacksmiths. See Plate VI. Fig. 16.

HAND, issuing from a human heart, holding a book, &c. See Plate VII. Fig. 66. being part of the crest of Higginson.

HANDS are variously borne in armory. See Plate XIV. viz. A dexter hand couped at the wrist, Fig. 19; a sinister hand couped at the wrist, Fig. 20; a dexter hand couped at the wrist, and reversed, Fig. 26; a hand issuing from a manche, Fig. 34.

HARE (an animal) courant. See Plate X. Fig. 51.

HARP, a musical instrument, commonly called a Welfh-harp. See Plate XIV. Fig. 54.

HARPOON, an instrument used for spearing of whales. See Plate VI. Fig. 72.

HARPY, an imaginary figure, composed of the head and breasts of a woman, fixed to the body of a vulture. See Plate XI. Fig. 19.

HARPY with wings expanded. See Plate XI. Fig. 20.

HARPY displayed fans legs. See Plate XI. Fig. 21.

HARROW, an instrument used in husbandry. See Plate VIII. Fig. 36.

HARROWS. Three triangular harrows conjoined in the fesse point. See Plate VIII. Fig. 37.

HARVEST-FLY. See Plate XII. Fig. 71.

HASEL-SPRIG fruited proper. See Plate XIII. Fig. 35.

HAT. See Plate VII. Fig. 49.—N. B. The hat is borne in this form in the armorial ensign of the Felt-makers' Company. A hat is also placed over the arms of the States General, as in the Plate of CORONETS, Fig. 20.

HAT-BAND, as in the Felt-makers' arms. See Plate VII. Fig. 48.

HAT-BAND, as borne in the arms belonging to the family of Bury. See Plate VII. Fig. 70, in the sinister chief.

HAURIENT, an heraldic term applied peculiarly to fish of any kind when placed palewise or upright, as if putting their head above water to refresh themselves by drawing or sucking in air. The term is taken ab hauriendis, Lat. See Plate XI. Fig. 47. a dolphin haurient; also Fig. 63, a luy haurient.

HAUSSE is said of the chevron and fesse when they are placed higher than their ordinary situations.

HAWK, or FALCON, a bird of prey, often used in blazon. See Plate XII. Fig. 11.

HAWK'S LEG erased, belled, jessed, and varvelled. See Plate XII. Fig. 20.

HAWK'S LURE, a decoy used by Falconers. See Plate VII. Fig. 14.

HAWK'S BELL and JESSES.—N. B. The jesses are leather thongs, with which the bells are tied to the hawk's leg. See Plate VII. Fig. 15.

HAY-HOOK. See Plate VIII. Fig. 49.—N. B. This seems to be a foreign bearing, although three such hooks are borne by the name of Mेत्रinglam.

HEAMES, the collar of a harness, by which the horse draws. See Plate VII. Fig. 17.

HEART'S-EASE. See PANSY-FLOWER.

HEART.—N. B. The heart in blazon is sometimes expressed a human heart, and sometimes is called a body heart. See Plate XIV. Fig. 38. a heart between two wings elevated.

HEATH-COCK. See Plate XII. Fig. 59.

HEDGE-HOG. See Plate X. Fig. 53.

HELMET, the armour for the head, of which in blazon there are four degrees, as in Plate IX. viz. for a Sovereign, as Fig. 1; for Peers, as Fig. 2; for Knights, as Fig. 3; and for Esquires, as Fig. 4.

HELMET, in profile, with the vizor up. See Plate IX. Fig. 5.

HEMP-HACKLE, or HEMP-BRAKE, as called in armory, an instrument formerly used to break or bruise hemp. See Plate VI. Fig. 20.

HERALDS, Officers of Arms. See an account of them in the Prefatory Discourse.

HERISSE', in the French Heraldry, signifies set with long sharp points. It is derived from Herisson, a hedge-hog.

HERON, CRANE, or STORK. See CRANE.

HERON, or HERNshaw, a bird. They both signify the same.

HIND, the female to the stag. From its lightness in walking, it is in blazon generally said to be trippant. See Plate X. Fig. 65.

HIND'S-HEAD couped at the neck, pierced through with an arrow, and vulned gu. See Plate X. Fig. 66.

HOLLY-SPRIG fruited. See Plate XIII. Fig. 17.

HOLLY-LEAF. See Plate XIII. Fig. 18.

HONOUR POINT, is that part which is next above the exact centre of the escutcheon, dividing that upper part into two equal portions, so that the first upward from the centre is the honour point, and the next above that, the middle chief point.—N. B. For an account of the different points of the escutcheon, see the Complete Body of Heraldry, page 162.

HONOURABLE ORDINARIES. See ORDINARY.

HOP, a well-known scandent plant. See Plate XIII. Fig. 39.

HOP-POLE and BINE, viz. on a mount a hop-pole and bine; i. e. a hop-pole with the plant entwining or growing up round it. This see in Plate XIII. Fig. 30.

HORSE, a beast well known in armory. They are termed passant if in a walking attitude, and current, or in full speed, when represented as running.

HORSE'S HEAD, LEGS, &c. are often used in armory.

HORSE-SHOES, when borne in arms, are universally turned up at the ends, as in Plate VI. Fig. 2.

HORSE-SHOES interlaced. See three Horse-Shoes interlaced in fret, in Plate VI. Fig. 3.

HORSE spangled, or fettered with a stick from the fore leg to the hind leg. A horse so spangled is the coat of Percival. See Plate XV. Fig. 13.

HOUSES, as also other buildings, are borne in armory.

HOUND, a Blood-bound on scent. See Plate XV. Fig. 8.

HUMETTE', or HUMET. This word is seldom used to any charge, but the fesse, although applicable to every ordinary that is couped, or doth not any where reach to the extremities of the escutcheon. See a Fesse HUMETTE' in Plate III. Fig. 11.

HUNTING-HORN, or CORNET. There are two sorts used in blazonry, viz. one of a semi-circular form, which is called the Bugle Horn, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 57; and the other like that represented in Fig. 59, in the same Plate.

HURE, is the French term for the head of a wild boar, bear, wolf, and other fuch-like wild animals; but not for those of lions, or other creatures that are said to be noble.

HURTS, HEURTS, or HUERTS, a name given by English Heralds to azure or blue roundles. Some Writers assert, they take their name from the Hurtleberry.

HYDRA, a fabulous creature, supposed to be a dragon with seven heads, as in Plate XI. Fig. 5.—N. B. This is the crest to the name of Barret, and is borne at present by the Right Hon. Baron Dacre.

J

JAMBE, Fr. the whole leg or flank. This word is seldom used to express the leg of any other animal than that of a lion.

JAMES, ST. an Order of Knighthood in Spain; for a particular account of which, see the different Orders of Knighthood. For the badge of this Order, see Plate I. of the Collars, Fig. 15.

JAMES, ST. OF THE SWORD, an Order of Knighthood in Portugal; for a particular account of which, see the different Orders of Knighthood. See also Plate I. of the Collars, Fig. 24, for the badge.

JAMES, ST. OF THE SWORD, a religious Order for Ladies. See the different Orders of Knighthood.

JAMES, ST. an Order of Knighthood in Holland. See the different Orders of Knighthood; and for the badge of the Order, see Plate IV. of the Collars, Fig. 23.

JANUS'S HEAD erased at the neck. See Plate XIV. Fig. 16.

JAVELIN, or SHORT SPEAR with a barbed point. See Plate IX. Fig. 20. viz. a pheon between a half-spear on the dexter, and a javelin on the sinister.

IBEX, in Heraldry, is an imaginary beast, in some respects resembling the heraldic antelope, but with this difference, that it hath two trait horns projecting from the forehead, ferrated, or edged like a saw. See Plate XI. Fig. 6.

ICICLES, are made in the same form and shape as Guttes. See Plate XV. Fig. 18. a pastoral staff between two Icicles. Various are the opinions of Heralds as to this bearing; some call them Clubs, others Guttes reversed, and others Icicles.

JELLOP. The comb of a cock, cockatrice, &c. is so called in Heraldry.

JERSEY-COMB, a tool so called, used by the Wool-combers. See Plate VII. Fig. 25. in the base of the escutcheon.

JESSANT, a term used to express a lion, or any other beast, rising or issuing from the middle of a fesse, as in Plate XV. Fig. 3.—N. B. The common method of blazoning this bearing, as set forth by all heraldic Writers, is this; A lion jessant of a fesse: but I am clearly of opinion, that this mode of expression may lead many people into error, as never more than half the lion appears; therefore it is more proper to say; A demi-lion jessant of a fesse.

JESSANT-DE-LIS, a term made use of in armory to express a flour-de-lis shooting, or put through any charge; as for example, A leopard's head jessant-de-lis, as in the arms of Cantelupe, Morley, and others. See Plate X. Fig. 34.—N. B. An erroneous practice hath long been established among the Heralds, when shewing the leopard's head jessant-de-lis, of always turning the head bottom upwards; whereas the contrary position should be constantly observed, unless otherwise directed by the words of the blazon, viz. A leopard's head reversed, jessant-de-lis.

JESSES, leather thongs used to tie the bells on to the legs of the hawk. In some arms and crests they are floatant, with rings at the ends, as in Plate XII. Fig. 20. in which case you say, jessed, belled, and varvelled.

IMBATTLED. See EMBATTLED, and CRENELLE.

IMBORDERING, a term used to express a field bordered with the same colour, metal, or fur. See Plate V. Fig. 20.—N. B. These sorts of borders are frequently used in foreign armory.

IMPALING, properly speaking, is the halving or dimidiating any thing by a perpendicular line. In Heraldry it is used to express the manner of marshalling the arms of man and wife; the two coats being placed together, the man's on the dexter, the woman's on the sinister. This is called Baron and Femme. See the Plate of Achievements for Funerals, No. XVIII. Fig. 1, 2, 4, &c.—N. B. All Archbishops and Bishops impale their paternal coat with that of the Episcopal See, placing their own coat on the sinister side; so also do all officers who bear armorial ensigns by virtue of the office they hold, as the Kings of Arms, &c. See Plate XVII. Fig. 2. the Achievement of a Bishop.

IMPERIAL CROWN, properly speaking, is that worn by the Emperor of Germany; but the crowns of Kings also have now the title of Imperial. See Plate XV. Fig. 4.

IMPERIALLY CROWNED, is a term used to express any charge, in Arms, Crest, or Supporters, that is crowned with a regal crown.

IN BEND. See BENDWAYS.

INCREMENT, is a term used by some Heralds to express the increase of the moon.

INCRESCENT, the moon in her increase. See Plate V. Fig. 42.

INDENTED, the same as Dancetté, or Dentelé, only the teeth or indents must be smaller, like the teeth of a saw. See Plate I. in the Lines of Partition, Fig. 15; also, in the same Plate, among the Chiefs, Fig. 19 and 28; and in Plate II. Fig. 12.—N. B. The French Armorsists used the word Danché for Indented.

INDORSED. See ENDORSED.

INDIAN GOAT, or ASSYRIAN GOAT, resembles the English goat in most respects, except that its horns are more bent, and the ears like those of a talbot.—N. B. Two of these beasts are the supporters of the arms of Vise. Southwell. For the head of this beast, see Plate XV. Fig. 11.

INESCUTCHEON, is a small escutcheon borne within the shield, and in the middle of a coat, or in chief, to hold the arms of Ulysses, for the distinction of a Baronet, and much smaller than the Escutcheon of Pretence. See Plate V. Fig. 3.—N. B. If there are more than one in a coat, they are usually called Escutcheons. Guillim makes it one of the ordinaries.

INFAMED (according to the French, Infamé) a term used to express a lion, or other beast, that hath lost his tail; but the English Heralds generally say, A lion sans tail.

INGRAILED, a term used for any ordinary, or charge, which is scalloped on the edges. It is derived from the Latin Ingradior, to enter, or go in; and therefore we find that the ingrailed line always carries its points into the field: (See Plate II. Fig. 14, 16, 22, and 71.) Whereas the involved line carries it into the figure or border that it forms with its gibbose or convex parts into the field.

INK-HORN, originally called Penner and Inkhorn, is, in coat-armour, always drawn as in Plate VII. Fig. 26.

INTERLACED, is said of any bearing intermixed with another, as keys interlaced in the bows, or one linked into the other, as in Plate VI. Fig. 53; or two sickles interlaced, as in Fig. 54, in the same Plate. Chevrons are also termed interlaced, when they are placed as in Plate II. Fig. 39.—N. B. Although chevrons are generally, in this position, called interlaced, the proper term for them is, Chevrons braced.

INTERSECANTS, in Heraldry, are pertranfient lines which cross each other.

INVECTED (by the French, Canelé) is the reverse of Ingailed, all the points turning inward. See Plate I. Fig. 9. and Fig. 12. Plate II. Fig. 15. Plate III. Fig. 53. Plate V. Fig. 3 and 18.

INVERTED, turned upside-down, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 26. a dexter hand coupé and inverted; and, in the same Plate, Fig. 66. a Falconer's sinister glove inverted.

JOINANT, a term in Heraldry, signifying the same as Conjoined.

IRON RING, a tool used by the Wire-drawers, and borne as a part of their armorial ensign, as in Plate XV. the base of Fig. 38.

ISLANDS, or Tracts of land encompassed by the sea. They are sometimes borne as charges in coat-armour; and, in such case, when the arms are to be blazoned, the number of islands borne therein must be mentioned, drawn, and placed promiscuously, as in Plate VII. Fig. 41.

ISSUANT, that is, issuing or coming up, which the French call Naissant. This term is used to express a lion, or any other beast, rising from the bottom line of a chief. See Plate XV. Fig. 3.—N. B. This word Issuant is also used to express a charge, or bearing, rising or coming out of another charge or bearing. See NAISSANT.

JEW'S-HARP, as borne in the arms of Scopham. See Plate III. Fig. 30.

JUGARIÆ FASCIOLÆ. See BAR-GEMEL.

JUMEL, Fr. See GEMELS.

K

K. This Letter is borne as a charge in arms; as for example, Az. three Roman K's ar. by the name of Koeks.

KEYS, two Keys interlaced in the bows and indorfed, in bend. See Plate VI. Fig. 53; a Key in pale, and wards in chief, Fig. 4; a Key in pale, double wards, Fig. 5; a Key in bend surmounted with a baton, see Plate VII. Fig. 24.

KING, in his robes of state, sitting in a chair. See Plate XIV. Fig. 2.

KINGS OF ARMS. See the PREFATORY DISCOURSE.

KNIGHTS. See the account of the several Orders of Knighthood, given in the preceding part of this Work.

KNIGHTS. For the collars worn by the several Orders of Knighthood, see Plate I. II. III. and IV. in the preceding part of this Work.

KNIGHTS OF THE BATH. See the account of the several Orders of Knighthood, as also Plate I. of the Collars and Badges, Fig. 2.

KNIGHTS OF THE GARTER. See a particular account of this Order in the several Orders of Knighthood; as also the Collar and Badge, in the Plate of Collars, No. I. Fig. 1.

KNOTS of silk cord, tied in various modes, are borne as badges by sundry families, and distinguished by their names; as BOUCHIER KNOT, a badge of the family of that name. See Plate XIV. Fig. 65. STAFFORD KNOT, which is exhibited in the base of the shield with the Bauchier Knot. WAKES KNOT, is borne by that family on a wreath, as their crest. See Plate XV. Fig. 49. in the base of which shield is the HARRINGTON KNOT. The family of Dacre hath also a peculiar Knot as a Badge. See Plate XV. Fig. 46.

L

LABEL, LAMBEAUX, or FILE, is that brisure or particular figure of three points, which is usually added to coat-armour, to distinguish or be the difference of the first son. Anciently it was borne throughout, or from side to side, as in Plate V. Fig. 28. in chief; but at present it is borne small, as that on the centre of the same Figure.

LABELS of three points, each charged with a fleur-de-lis, or other figures, are borne as distinctions of the Royal Family. See Plate V. Fig. 31.

LABELS of one, two, three, four, or five points, each of them charged, are proper bearings. The Label of three points, first before mentioned, is the only one now used for the distinction of families, except those of the Blood Royal; the differences, or marks of distinction, for the latter of which, are always granted by patent from the College of Arms.

LABEL of one point. See Plate V. Fig. 32.

LABEL of three points in bend. See Plate V. Fig. 30.

LABEL of four points. See Plate V. Fig. 29.

LABEL is also a name given to the ribbons that hang down from a mitre or coronet.

LAMBREQUIN, or LAMEQUIN, is the mantle, or hood, which is placed on the head between the helmet and crest, and is flotan behind the person who carries it, as in Plate IX, Fig. 54.

LAMBREQUIN, is also a name given by the old Heralds to the points which hang from the file or frait line of the label.

LAMB, with a banner of St. George, and circle over the head, usually called the Paschal Lamb, but sometimes the Holy Lamb. See Plate XI. Fig. 22.

LAMP, as borne in the Tin-plate-workers' arms, see Plate VIII. Fig. 53.

LAMPS, as charges in coat-armour, are borne in different forms: that which is engraved in Plate VII. Fig. 62, is the form used by Segar, Guillim, &c.

LAMP, GLOBULAR, made for ships. See Plate VIII. Fig. 65. in chief, an empty quill, as borne in the Embroiderers' armorial ensign; and in base, a Globular Lamp, as the Crest borne by the Tin-workers' Company in London.

LAMPASSE, Fr. is what we term Langued; that is, when the tongue of a beast, appearing out of the mouth, is of a different colour from that of the body.

LANDSKIP, or LANDSCHAPE, so called in Heraldry, when the base of the escutcheon is painted as a field, with a tree, &c. therein, as in Plate V. Fig. 66. A modern grant of arms gives the following blazon: In a Landskip, a palm-tree issuant from the midst of a fountain playing, proper.—As it would be impossible for any Painter or Engraver to draw this coat from the words of the grant, I have engraven it in Plate VII. Fig. 67, in the same manner it is usually borne. For this grant, see the name of France, in the Appendix to the Alphabet of Arms.

LANGUED (from the French word Langue) is a term to express the tongues of beasts and birds, when borne of a different tincture from that of the charge: Thus, Ar. a lion rampant az. langued gu.—N. B. All beasts and birds (except they are tinctured gu.) are langued gu. but when the beast is gu. he must be langued and armed az. This rule is never to be deviated from, except in such cases only where the blazon directs that the beasts shall be langued of any other colour or metal; and then such colour or metal must be expressed. If a beast, or bird, is to be represented in coat-armour without either tongue or claws, you must say, when blazoning, Sons langue and arms.

LAVERPO'Y, or EWER, as borne in the arms of the Founders' Company. See Plate VIII. Fig. 27.

LAUREL-SPRIG. See Plate XIII. Fig. 20.

LAUREL BRANCHES in saltaire. See Plate VII. Fig. 68. —N. B. By a new mode of blazoning of our modern Heralds, introduced in a grant to Thomas Daniels, Esq; 1761, branches in this form are termed in saltaire.

LAUREL-LEAF. See Plate XIII. Fig. 19.

LEAD-LINE, an instrument used by Mariners to found the depth of the sea.

LEASHED, or LEISHED, is a term used by Mr. Nisbet, and others, to express the line which passes from the collar of a greyhound, or any other dog.

LEATHER BOTTLE, as borne in the arms of the Bottle-makers and Horners Company. See Plate VII. Fig. 30.

LEG IN ARMOUR, couped at the thigh, the knee bent, garnished and spurred w. See Plate IX. Fig. 16.

LEG, couped in the middle of the thigh, and erased at the ankle, proper, pierced through the calf with the coulter of a plough. See Plate XIV. Fig. 28.

THREE LEGS IN ARMOUR, conjoined in the fesse point, spurred and garnished or; being the coat-armour of the Isle of Man. See Plate IX. Fig. 17.

LEOPARDS are borne in arms in the same positions as lions; and such positions are expressed in the like terms as those of lions; as thus, A Leopard passant gardant, &c. See Plate X. Fig. 31.

LEOPARD'S HEAD GARDANT, erased at the neck. See Plate X. Fig. 32.—N. B. When the heads of Leopards are erased or couped at the neck, they are to be blazoned by the word head; but if no part of the neck appears, and the position of the head is gardant, then it is to be called, in blazon, a Leopard's face, without mentioning the word gardant. See Fig. 33. as also Fig. 34, which represents a Leopard's face jeffant-de-lis. Some Heralds, in former times, when drawing a Leopard's head jeffant-de-lis, reversed the head; which is wrong.

LEVEL, an instrument too well known to need any explanation. See Plate VI. Fig. 66.

LEVER, a name sometimes given to the Cormorant. See CORMORANT.

LIGHTER. See BOAT.

LILY-POT. See COVERED CUP.

LILY OF THE GARDEN, or WHITE LILY, a well-known plant. Its flower-stem is borne in armory as an emblem of the Holy Virgin.

LILIES OF THE FLAG, are such as those borne in the arms of the kingdom of France.

LIMBECK, ALEMbic, or STILL, used by Chymists, Distillers, &c. makes a part of the Pewterers' arms.—N. B. Heralds call it an antique Limbeck, and draw it as in Plate VIII. Fig. 60.

LINES of Partition. See Plate I. of LINES.

LINE, Horizontal or Strait Line, No. 1.

LINE Angled, No. 2.

LINE Bevelled, No. 3.

LINE Efcartelé, No. 4.

LINE Nowy, or, as the French call it, Tranché, No. 5.

LINE Arched, or Enarched, No. 6.—N. B. If such a line be on both sides of the escutcheon, it is then termed fleeced; but if it is only on one side of an ordinary, and bowed inward, it is then termed inverted concave, champaine, and, by some Authors, champion. If bent outward, it is termed chapourned, or convected. * See Plate I. Fig. 29. a chief vert, chapourned ermine.

LINE Double arched, No. 7.

LINE Wavy, or Undée, No. 8.

LINE Inverted, No. 9.

LINE Ingrailed, No. 10.

LINE Battled, Imbattled, or Crenellé, No. 11.

LINE Battled Imbattled, because it has one degree above another; and, by some, called Battled Grady, from the ascents, steps, or degrees, of which it is composed, No. 12.

LINE Nebulæ, or Nebulous, a form somewhat resembling clouds, No. 13.

LINE Potent, No. 14.

LINE Indented, No. 15.

LINE Dancetté, No. 16.—N. B. This differs from Indented, only in the indents being somewhat larger than those of the indented line.

LINE Dove-tailed, No. 17.

LINE Urdée, No. 18.

LINE Rayonnated, Rayonned, Radiant, No. 19.

LION of England, a term often used in blazoning, particularly when speaking of a canton, or augmentation of arms. In such case, instead of saying, he bears on a canton gu. a lion passant gardant or, as an augmentation, you say, he bears on a canton gu. a lion of England; which hath the same signification.

LION Statant, is a lion in a standing posture, as in Plate X. Fig. 1.

LION Passant, as in Plate X. Fig. 2.

LION Passant gardant, as in Plate X. Fig. 3.

LION Passant regardant, as in Plate X. Fig. 4.

LION Rampant. See Plate X. Fig. 5.

LION Romant gardant. See Plate X. Fig. 6.

LION Rampant regardant. See Plate X. Fig. 7.

LION Salient, or springing, almost the same as rampant. See Plate X. Fig. 8.

LION Sjant, a term for a lion sitting. See Plate X. Fig. 9.

LION Rampant coward. See Plate X. Fig. 10.—N. B. When the lion, or any other beast, hath his tail hanging down between his legs, he is termed coward, or coué.

LION Rampant double-queued; i. e. a Lion Rampant, with two tails. See Plate X. Fig. 11.

LION Rampant, tail nowed. See Plate X. Fig. 12.

LION Couchant, or lying down. See Plate X. Fig. 13.

LION Dormant, or sleeping. See Plate X. Fig. 14.

LION Rampant, collared, and chained. See Plate X. Fig. 15.

LION Naissant from a fesse. See Plate XV. Fig. 3.

LION Tricorporate, a lion with three bodies issuing from the three angles of the escutcheon, conjoined to one head gardant. See Plate X. Fig. 16.

LION Sejant gardant affronté. See Plate XI. Fig. 3.

LION Sejant gardant affronté, with the fore legs extended. See Plate XI. Fig. 1.

LION Rampant dismembered, or disjointed. See Plate XV. Fig. 1.

LION Rampant gardant, with two bodies. See Plate XI. Fig. 2.

LION Rampant, with two heads. See Plate X. Fig. 19.

LION Issuant from a chief. See Plate XV. Fig. 2.

LIONS Combatant, with the fore legs extended. The like expression is used for all beasts which are placed rampant, and face to face, as in Plate X. Fig. 23.

LIONS Endorsed, i. e. back to back. See Plate X. Fig. 24.
LION'S HEAD erased, and ducally gorged. See Plate X. Fig. 21.
LION'S HEAD couped, and ducally crowned. See Plate X. Fig. 22.
LION, Demi, rampant and erased. See Plate X. Fig. 17.—
 N. B. Here you are to observe, that the tail must be represented, although not joined to the body.
LION, Demi, rampant, on a wreath. See Plate X. Fig. 18.
LION, Demi, passant. See Plate X. Fig. 19.
LIONS Tails erased, must be as in Plate X. Fig. 26.
LION Dragon, must be drawn in the same manner as the sea-lion, but with this difference, that the fore part of the lion is to be conjoined to the hind part of a wivern.
LION Poisson, a French term in blazon for the sea-lion. See Plate XI. Fig. 48.
LION. He is said to be orné when represented without teeth, tongue, or claws.
LION. He is said to be eviré, when the marks of the masculine gender are not seen.
LION'S GAMBE. See JAMBE.
LION'S PAWS. See PAWS.
LION'S JAMBE erased, grasping a laurel-branch. See Plate X. Fig. 28.
LION'S JAMBE out of a ducal coronet. See Plate X. Fig. 25.
LIONCEL, a name given to a young lion by several heraldic Writers, who affirm, that when two, three, or more lions are on one field, they must be called Lioncels. This mode of expression, however, I have carefully avoided, esteeming it improper and absurd; so that, if two, or even ten lions occur in one coat, I call them Lions.
LISTON, a French term, signifying the scroll or ribbon on which any motto, or device, is written.
LITVIT'S SKIN, is a pure white fur.
LIZARD, or LEZARD, a beast somewhat like a mountain or wild-cat, with a short tail, and long dark-brown hair, spotted. They are very common in Denmark and Sweden. It is the crest and dexter supporter to the arms of the Skinners' Company of London; and is also the dexter supporter of the arms of the Muscovy Merchants. See Plate XV. Fig. 4.—
 N. B. The collar of the Order of the Lamb of God, instituted in 1564 by John, King of Sweden, is composed of lions and lizards.
LIZARD, a small animal of the crocodile species. These Lizards are generally painted green: two such form the crest of the Ironmongers' Company; the arms of which Company are supported by two similar Lizards.

M

MACE, formerly an offensive weapon, something like a club, and used in war: at present Maces are carried before Sovereigns and great Magistrates, as tokens of their dignity, power, and authority.
MADDER Bags. See BAGS OF MADDER.
MAGNETIC Needle, i. e. the Needle of the Mariner's compass. See Plate V. Fig. 68.
MAIDEN'S HEAD, a term used in Heraldry for the head and neck of a woman, couped below the breast; the head wreathed with a garland of roses, and crowned with an antique coronet.
MAIL, a dress, or piece of defensive armour for the body and arms, wrought in small close rings, called Mails linked together, as if wove in a loom. Mail, when represented in painting, or engraving, is generally made like the scales of fish; that form coming nearer than any other to, or being the best resemblance of, the Mail. See Plate IX. Fig. 11.

LOBSTER, when borne in arms, is always placed as in Plate XI. Fig. 67.
LOBSTER'S CLAWS in saltire. See Fig. 68.
LOCHABAR Ax, an ax with a long handle, and broad long blade. See Plate XV. Fig. 29. a Lochubar Ax between a wolf-trap and a point.
LODGED, a term used for the buck, hart, hind, &c. when at rest and lying on the ground, as in Plate X. Fig. 59.—
 N. B. Beasts of chase are said to be lodged; beasts of prey are said to be couchant.
LORRAIN Cross. See Plate IV. Fig. 71.
LOZENGE, in Heraldry, is a square figure, different from the Fusil. See Plate II. Fig. 63.—
 N. B. In this form, the arms of Maidens and Widows should be borne.
LOZENGE Fleury, so borne by the name de Calbill. See Plate VII. Fig. 37.
LOZENGE, or LOZENGY, is used to express the whole field when covered with Lozenges, as in Plate II. Fig. 65; also the Bend, Pale, Cross, Chevron, Saltire, or any other ordinary, charge, crest, or supporters, when covered with Lozenges, is generally said to be Lozengé.
LUCY, an heraldic name given to the fish called a pike. For the Lucy, see Plate XI. Fig. 63.
LUNA, the Latin name for the moon. When arms are blazoned by the planets, this word is used to signify argent, or silver.
L'UN EN L'AUTRE, Fr. is what we call Counterchanged; that is, when the escutcheon is parted of two colours, and hath a charge extending over both, that charge hath the upper half of the colour or metal of the lower part of the escutcheon, and the lower part of it is of the colour or metal of the upper part; or if party per pale, then one side is of one colour, and the other of another, answerable to the two sides of the field.
L'UN SUR L'AUTRE, Fr. i. e. in pale; thus, Three fish naant in pale, or one above another.
LURE, a decoy used by Falconers to deceive their hawks, by casting it up into the air. For the shape of the Lure, see Plate VII. Fig. 14.—
 N. B. Wings conjoined, with their tips turned downwards, as in Plate XII. Fig. 14. are said to be in lure.
LYMPHAD, is an old-fashioned ship with one mast, and rowed with oars. See Plate XI. Fig. 54.
LYRE, or HARP, a musical instrument. See Plate VII. Fig. 20.

MALE GRIFFIN. See GRIFFIN.
MALLET, a tool used by Masons, Carpenters, &c. When it is borne in arms, it must be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 62.
MANACLES, or HAND-CUFFS, single and double. See Plate VIII. Fig. 47.
MANACLES, ancient, as in the badges of the house of Percy. See Plate VIII. Fig. 48.—
 N. B. The swivels borne in the arms of the Ironmongers' Company are made in this form.
MANCHE, a sleeve. In English blazon, this word is used to signify an odd-fashioned sleeve with long hangers to it. Some of our English Writers call it, though improperly, Maunche. The Manche should be drawn as in Plate XIV. Fig. 35. Fig. 34, shews the Manche with a hand and arm in it, as borne by the family of Mobun; and Fig. 36 and 37, represent two very ancient Manches, as drawn in a manuscript of high antiquity.

MANCHET, a cake of bread, not unlike a muffin.

MANDRAKE, a vegetable root. The heraldic Mandrake is always drawn as in Plate XIII. Fig. 65.

MANED, is said of a horse, unicorn, or other beast, whose mane is of a different tincture from its body.

MAN'S HEAD in profile, coupé at the neck, as in Plate XIV.

Fig. 11.—N. B. When a Man's Head is mentioned in armory, it means the head of an old man with a beard.

MAN'S HEAD affronté, coupé at the shoulder, on the head two short horns. This is in blazon called a Whittal's (i. e. a Cuckold's) head. See Plate XIV. Fig. 13.

MAN'S HEAD in profil, coupé below the shoulders; on the head a ducal coronet, therein a cap turned forwards, and tasselled as the crest of Walpole. See Plate XIV. Fig. 17.

MAN'S HEAD affronté, erased at the neck. See Plate XIV. Fig. 8.

MAN'S HEAD in profile, with ass's ears, coupé at the neck. This is termed in Heraldry a Satyr's head. See Plate XIV. Fig. 14.

MAN'S HEAD in profile, with small dragon's wings at the side of it, and coupé at the neck. This is called in blazon a Satan's or Fiend's head. See Plate XIV. Fig. 15.

MANTLE, or ROYAL CLOAK. See Plate XIV. Fig. 39. Mantle is also the name given to that foldage or great Cloak whereon achievements are painted. It is also another name for the lambrequin or covering to the helmet, and was anciently carried by Warriors, jagged, and fluttering in the wind, to shew the variety of cuts it had received in battle. See Plate IX. Fig. 54. See also the Mantlings over the arms, in the Plates of Achievements, XVII. and XVIII.

MAN-TYGER, or MANTICORA, an imaginary beast or monster, supposed to have the body like that of a lion, the head and face of an old man, and horns on the head like those of an ox; some make it footed like a dragon. See Plate VII. Fig. 1.—N. B. Holmes asserts, that the first Baron Paget wore two such beasts for his supporters.

MAPLE-LEAF. See Plate XIII. Fig. 32.

MARCASSIN, a young wild boar, differing from the old, not only in size, which cannot be distinguished in arms, but in having its tail hanging down; whereas that of the old boar is always turned round in a ring, with only the end pointing downwards.

MARQUIS, the second degree of nobility, next to the Princes of the Blood Royal.

MARS, the planet used to signify red, when the tinctures and metals in the arms of Sovereigns are blazoned by the planets.

MARSHAL of England. See the Introductory Discourse.

MARSHALLING, in Heraldry, is understood to be a regular arrangement or disposal of various coats in one shield, thereby to denote the matches and alliances.

MARTLET, a fictitious heraldic bird, shaped like a martin or swallow, but always drawn without legs, as in Plate XII. Fig. 29.—N. B. This fictitious bird is also borne as a mark of distinction for the fourth son. See the Distinction of Families, Plate XV.

MARYGOLD, a flower. See Plate XIII. Fig. 72.

MASCLE, is of a lozenge form, and is always perforated, or voided, so that the field appears through the opening. It differs from the Fustil in this, that it is shorter, and hath its angles more obtuse. Some Writers suppose that Mascles originally represented the meshes of a net. See Plate II. Fig. 66.

MASCLES Conjoined, are Mascles whose points touch each other, as in Plate II. Fig. 67.

MASCULY Counterchanged, argent and gules. See Plate XIV. Fig. 71.

MASCULY is said of the whole of a field, ordinary, or charge, when it is covered with mascles.

MASONED, or MAÇONNE', in Heraldry, is when the field or charge is divided with lines, in the nature of a stone building. See Plate I. in the chiefs, Fig. 1.

MATCH, in artillery, fired proper. See Plate IX. Fig. 47.

MAUNCHE. See MANCHE.

MEMBERED, from the French Membré, a term used by Heralds to express the limbs or legs of a bird. When the beak or legs of a bird are of a colour different from that of the body, the proper expression is, Beaked and membered of such a colour or metal.

MERCURY, the name of a planet; used in blazon for purple, or purple.

MERILLION, an instrument used by the Hatband-makers, and borne as part of their arms. See Plate VII. Fig. 34. in chief a Merillion.

MERLETTE, or MERLION, an heraldic word used by the French for the Martlet, which they draw without legs, thighs, or beak. See Plate XII. Fig. 30.

MERLETTE Displayed, as in the arms of Montmorency. See Plate XII. Fig. 31.

MERLION. See MERLETTE.

MERMAID (drawn as half a woman and half a fish) is generally depicted with a comb in one hand, and a mirror in the other. See Plate XI. Fig. 45.

MERMAN, a sea-man. See NEPTUNE.

METALS, used in Heraldry, are two, viz. gold and silver; called, from the French, Or, and Argent; the former of which represents a yellow tincture, and the other represents white. In engraving, gold is expressed by dots over the field, as in Plate I. Fig. 2. of Metals, &c. and silver is always left plain, as in Fig. 3.

MILL-CLACK. See Plate VIII. Fig. 35. in chief a Mill-Clack, in base an antique millrinc.

MILLPIC, a tool used by Millwrights, in dressing of millstones. See Plate VI. Fig. 70.

MILRINDE, or MILRINE. See FER DE MOLINE.

MILL-STONE, charged with a Milrine. See Plate VIII. Fig. 32.

MINIVER, a white fur, said to be the belly part of the skin of the Siberian squirrel. It is used in ornamenting the parliament robes of the Peers.

MINSTER, or CAT HEDRAL. See CHURCH.

MIRROR, a looking-glass. When borne in armory, it is always represented framed, and with a handle. See Plate VI. Fig. 42. For a Mirror in the hand of a Mermaid; see Plate XI. Fig. 45.

MOLE, an animal so well known, that a description of it is unnecessary. When borne as a charge in Heraldry, it is always drawn as in Plate X. Fig. 70.

MOLE-HILLS. See Plate XIII. Fig. 26.

MOLINE. See CROSS MOLINE.

MONTANT, a French term, expressing the position of crawfish, scorpions, swords, and other things when placed in pale, with their heads in chief; and signifying the same as erect in pale.

MOON Illuminated. See Plate V. Fig. 41.

MOON In crescent illuminated. See Plate V. Fig. 42.

MOON Decrescent illuminated. See Plate V. Fig. 43.

MOOR COCK, the male of the black game, or large black grouse. See Plate XII. Fig. 55.

MOOR'S-HEAD, is the heraldic term for the head of a black, or negro-man, placed in profile, coupé at the neck, wreathed about the temples, ar. and az. and having a pearl pendent at his ear, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 10.

MORION, the name of a steel cap, anciently worn by foot-soldiers.—N. B. Of this sort is the cap over the Earl of Salisbury's crest. See Plate IX. Fig. 6.

MORION, or STEEL-CAP, as borne in the arms of Brudenel. See Plate IX. Fig. 7.

MORNE', or MORTNE', Fr. i. e. born dead, or still born; a term applied by Heralds to express a lion rampant, when depicted in armory, without either tongue, teeth, or claws. The reason of calling it Mortné, or still born, is because it is in a dead state, having no weapon to get or tear its prey, nor a tongue to turn the meat in his mouth.

MORSE, the sea-lion. See SEA-LION.

MORTCOURS, are lamps used at funerals: they are borne as part of the Wax-chandlers' arms, as in Plate VII. Fig. 29.

MOUND, a name given to a ball, or globe, which makes a part of the regalia of an Emperor, or a King, and is the sign of his sovereign authority and majesty. This ball, or globe, is encircled with a horizontal band, enriched with diamonds and precious stones; from the upper edge whereof springs up a semi-circular band, enriched with diamonds, &c. equally with the other; and having on its top a cross, which, according to some Writers, should be a Cross Avellane; (see Plate XIV. Fig. 40.) but, according to others, and that more properly, a Cross Patée.

MOUNT. When the bottom or base of the coat is painted green, as a field, and curved as in Plate XIII. Fig. 2, it is then called a Mount.

MOUNTAIN CAT: See CAT-A-MOUNTAIN.

MOUNTAIN in panted. See Plate V. Fig. 61.

MOUNTING, a term said to be applied to beasts of chase, in the same sense as Rampant: is to those of prey: but I do not remember that I ever saw it used in blazon.

MOURN, a term given to the blunted head of a tilting-spear.

MOUSSUE, a term used by some Heralds to express the particular circumstance of any figure being rounded off at its extremities, as a Cross Moussue, &c.

MULF Passant. See Plate XI. Fig. 24.

MULLET, is the ravel of a spur, called in French, Malete. With us, a Mullet has five points, as in Plate V. Fig. 53. See that in the dexter chief point.

In the French Heraldry, the Mullet has always six points; as that in the base of Fig. 53.—N. B. If a Mullet is composed of six, eight, or more points, their number must be expressed in the blazon. For a Mullet of eight points, see Plate V. Fig. 7.

MULLET Pierced. See the Mullet in the sinister chief point, Plate V. Fig. 53.

A MULLET is also used as a distinction of the fourth son.

MURAL CROWN was made of gold, and had on the edge of the circle, battlements, like those of a fortification. See Plate XVI. Fig. 41. This, among the ancients, was given to him who first scaled the walls of an enemy's city, or entered by the breach.

MURREY Colour, a dark-brown, or dun colour, the same as sanguine. When this colour is blazoned by precious stones, it is called Sardnix; and in by planets, it is then called Dragon's Tail.

MUSCHETORS, are those black spots, resembling the end of an ermine's tail, which are painted without in three spots over them that are used in ermine. See Plate I. Fig. 18. ar. six Muschetors, three, two, and one, a chief urdée vert.

MUSIC Lines, or Bars, being part of the arms of Tetlow. See Plate XIV. Fig. 63. gu. on a fesse ar. five Music Bars.—N. B. I will presume to assert, that Music Bars were never placed in any armorial bearing before those granted to the name of Tetlow. Vide Alphabet.

MUSSELED, or MUZZLED; so said of a bear, dog, or other animal, whose mouth is banded, or tied up, so as to prevent him from biting. See Plate X. Fig. 45. a bear's head muzzled and crated.

N

NAIANT, or NATANT, i. e. swimming; an heraldic term applied in the blazoning of all sorts of fish, except flying-fish and shell-fish, borne as charges in armory, when they are placed horizontally, or cross the field. See Plate XI. Fig. 64. three eels naiant.

NAIL. See Plate VI. Fig. 15.

NAISSANT, Fr. a term of blazon, which signifies arising, or coming forth. This term is peculiarly applicable to all living things represented as issuing out of the middle of a fesse, or other ordinary. See Plate XV. Fig. 3.—This term differs in its meaning from that of Issuant, which denotes any living creature arising out of the bottom line of the chief. See ISSUANT.

NARCISSUS, a bulbous-rooted plant, of which there are a great variety of sorts, each bearing a beautiful flower, much esteemed by florists. The flower consists of six petals, and; in shape, resembles the leaf of the cinquefoil. See Plate XV. Fig. 21.—N. B. Three of these flowers form the armorial bearing of Lambert, Earl of Cavan.

NAVAL CROWN. This was a rim, or circle of gold, the edge whereof was embellished with the heads or beaks of ships, and sails, placed thereon alternately. See Plate XVI. Fig. 44.—N. B. The Romans are said to have bestowed a Naval Crown on the person who first boarded an enemy's ship.

NEBULE, according to the French, or, as the English

Heralds express it, Nebuly, from the Latin Nubes, a cloud, is said when the outside lines of any ordinary are drawn waved, so as to represent clouds. See Plate V. Fig. 15. a border nebulé; also, Plate I. Fig. 13, in the division of lines.

NETTLE-LEAVES. See Plate XIII. Fig. 36.

NEWT, a small water animal of the lizard kind, called by some an Effet, or Eft.

NISLE'E, or NYLLE'E, slender, narrow, or reduced almost to nothing. La Croix Nyllee, according to some heraldic Writers, is like unto the Croix Cercelée, but somewhat narrower, and never pierced; but, according to others, is always to be pierced, as being derived from Anile, a milrine, and being no more than a slender cross moline.

NOMBRIL, or NAVAL POINT, is the next below the fesse point, or the very centre of the escutcheon, supposing the same to be equally divided into two equal parts below the fesse; for then the first of those is the Nombril, and the lower the base. See POINTS OF THE ESCUTCHEON.

NOWED, from the Latin Nodatus, knotted, or tied in a knot, is a term in armory applicable to the tails of lions and other animals, which are very long, when represented as if tied up in a knot. See Plate X. Fig. 12. For snakes, represented in the like manner, see Plate XI. Fig. 39.

NUANCE, Fr. the same as we call Nibuly,

OAK. This tree being considered as the emblem of Virtue and Strength, the Romans made their civic crowns of its branches, and gave it to such as had saved the life of a citizen. The Oak, and its parts, are variously borne in coat-armour: as for example, A wood of Oak-trees, see Plate XIII. Fig. 1; on a mount, an Oak-tree, Plate XIII. Fig. 2; an Oak-leaf, Plate XIII. Fig. 10; an Oak-branch, acorned proper, Plate XIII. Fig. 11.

OBSIDIONAL CROWN, or GARLAND, was made of grafs, and twigs of trees, interwoven in the form as represented in Plate XVI. Fig. 49.—N. B. Among the Romans, it was given to him that held out a siege, or caused one to be raised.

OGRESSES, or PELLETS, i. e. round black balls. See PELLETS.

OLIVE CROWNS, or GARLANDS. They were given; among the Greeks, to those who came off victorious at the Olympic games. See Plate XVI. Fig. 46.

OMBRE', Fr. shadowed. This mode of bearing, although frequent in the French, is never used in the English armory. Ombre de Croix, s'ays Columbiere, is to be represented of the colour of smoke, so as to see through it; being, as the name expresses it, only the shadow of a cross. Ombre de soleil is, when the sun is borne in armory, so that the eyes, nose, and mouth, which are represented at other times, do not distinctly appear; but there is a sufficiently thin colouring for the face to be seen. See ADUMBRATUS.

ONDE', or UNDE', the same as Wavy. See WAVY.

ONGLE', in French armory, signifies talons or claws of birds, or beaks, when of a different colour from the body; but this term is never used with us.

OPINICUS, a fictitious beast, of heraldic invention. Its body and fore legs are said to be like those of a lion, the head and neck like those of the eagle; to the body are affixed wings, like those attributed to the griffin; and it hath a short tail, resembling that of a camel. See Plate XII. Fig. 65.—N. B. The Opinicus is the crest to the arms belonging to the Company of the Barber Surgeons of the City of London. It is sometimes borne without wings, and then is blazoned, An Opinicus sans wings.

OR, is a French word signifying gold, and by which the English also express that metal in Heraldry, representing it by the yellow colour. In engraving, it is known by small points, or dots, spread all over the field, or bearing. See Plate I. Fig. 2.

ORANGES, a fruit well known. In blazon, this name is given to all roundles that are coloured tuné, or sawney. The French call them, as well as all other roundles, Tor-teaux, but at the same time express the particular colour they are of.

ORDINARIES, are the principal bearings in coat-armour; as the Bend, Fesse, Pale, &c. See each Ordinary under its proper name.

ORGAN-PIPES in saltire. See Plate XIV. Fig. 53.

ORIFLAM, or ORIFLAMBE, the name given to the standard of France. It is a blue banner, charged with golden fleurs-de-lis.

ORLE. The Orle is an ordinary composed of one or two lines passing round the shield, as in Plate II. Fig. 59.

In ORLE, is when the charges are placed round the escutcheon, leaving the middle of the field vacant: thus,

Az. an escutcheon within an Orle of mullets, as in Plate II. Fig. 60. This term is also used to express two branches encompassing any bearing: as for example, On a wreath, a crescent between two branches of laurel in orle. In this the laurel rifles from the wreath, and nearly meets at the top over the crescent.

OSTRICH, a large bird, principally found in Africa. From the idle story of its being able to digest iron, this bird is, in Heraldry, generally painted with a horse-shoe in its mouth. See Plate XII. Fig. 42.

OSTRICH-HEAD between two wings, in his mouth a horse-shoe. See Plate XII. Fig. 43.—N. B. You need not mention in the blazon what wings they are, because they are supposed to be the proper wings of that bird, unless the contrary is expressed.

OSTRICH FEATHERS, are frequently borne in arms, either single or in plumes. They are always to be drawn with their tops turned down, as in Plate XII. Fig. 44. and therefore, in blazoning, that circumstance, as to their tops, need not to be mentioned. If, in coat-armory, an Ostrich feather is white, and the quill part and stem gold, or any colour different from the feather, it is usually blazoned, Penned of such a colour, and sometimes, Shafted of such a colour; but it would be much more proper to say, Quilled of such a colour.—N. B. No feathers, except those of the Ostrich, are turned down in armory.

OSTRICH Feathers in a plume. If three feathers are placed together, as in Plate XII. Fig. 45. they are termed a plume, and their number need not be mentioned in the blazoning; but if there are more than three, the number should be expressed: for example, A plume of five feathers. Further, if there are more than one row of feathers, those rows are termed, in blazon, heights; as for example, A plume of Ostrich feathers in two heights. See Plate XII. Fig. 46. where the plume is composed of nine feathers, in two heights, they should be placed five in the bottom row, and four in the top row: if there are three heights, then the plume should consist of twelve feathers, viz. five, four, and three.—By some they are termed a single plume, a double plume, and a triple plume.—N. B. Three Ostrich feathers ar. quilled or, enfiled with a Prince's coronet of the left, with an escroll az. thereon, and the words Ich Dien in gold, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 72, is the badge, or cognizance, of his Royal Highness George, Prince of Wales.

OTTER, an amphibious animal, somewhat like a dog. It frequents fresh-water rivers, lakes, and large pools; where it destroys abundance of fish, they being its principal food. See Plate X. Fig. 68. This animal is sometimes borne as a charge, with a fish in his mouth.

OUNCE, another name for the Lynx, which is a fierce animal, of a light-brown colour, spotted with small black spots. It is of the tyger kind, and hath short ears, and a short tail.

OWLS. These birds, when borne in coat-armour, are always drawn full-faced, and therefore that circumstance need not to be mentioned in their blazon. See Plate XII. Fig. 39.

OWL (Horned) See Plate XII. Fig. 41.

OX. The Ox is sometimes borne in armory, as in the arms of the City of Oxford, viz. An Ox gu. passing a ford proper.

P A C

- PACK-SADDLE. See Plate VIII. Fig. 51.
- PADLOCK. See two Padlocks in Plate VI. Fig. 9.—N. B. That which is represented in base is the most ancient of any form borne in armory.
- PAIRLE. The Pairle is said to be composed of half a saltire, and half a pale, issuing from the base point of the shield and rising up to the centre thereof, and there dividing into two equal parts, extending to the dexter and sinister chief angles. It is also by some taken for an Episcopal Pall, as that carried in the arms of the Archbishop of Canterbury: and again, by others, for the letter Y.
- PALATA. Lat. IN PALE, which see.
- PALE, in French Pal, is an ordinary which stands perpendicularly upright in the centre of the escutcheon. Many heraldic Writers tell us, that it takes its name from the resemblance it bears to the pales of a park or camp. The Pale should, as hath been before observed, occupy one third part of the breadth of the field. See Plate II. Fig. 1.
- PALE, between two indorises, or a Pale indorised. See Plate II. Fig. 5.
- PALE Fitché in the foot. See Plate II. Fig. 6.—N. B. It would be better to blazon this, A Pale pointed in base.
- PALE Radiant, or Rayonnée. See Plate II. Fig. 7.—N. B. Sometimes a Pale may be of one colour, or metal, and the rays of another; as for example, Gu. a Pale or, rayonnated ar.
- PALE Champaine, on the dexter side. See Plate II. Fig. 8.—N. B. It is the dexter Pale.
- PALE Angled. See the middle Pale, at Fig. 8. in Plate II.
- PALE Beveled. See the sinister Pale, at Fig. 8. in Plate II.
- PALE Double arched, or Nuagé. See Plate II. Fig. 9.
- PALE Wavy. See Plate II. Fig. 10.
- PALE Dancetté. See Plate II. Fig. 11.
- PALE Indented. See Plate II. Fig. 12.
- PALE Breteffed, is like the Pale Crenellé, only the indents are placed parallel to each other, as in Plate II. Fig. 13.—N. B. This is a French bearing.
- PALE Ingraïled within a border. See Plate II. Fig. 14.—N. B. The border is added to this Figure to shew that it generally takes place of all ordinaries except the chief, and passes over them.
- PALE Inveiled, or Invecked. See Plate II. Fig. 15.
- PALE Frâstet, or Removed. See Plate II. Fig. 17.
- PALE gules, ingraïled or: See Plate II. Fig. 16.—N. B. I find this bearing thus blazoned by different Writers; but I am convinced, that it would be better understood if it was blazoned thus, A Pale ingraïled or, surmounted on a Pale gu.
- PALE Raguly. See Plate II. Fig. 19.
- PALE Ingraïled between two pallets. See Plate II. Fig. 22.—N. B. Without strict attention be had to the exact wording and meaning of the blazon of this bearing, it may be productive of great errors; for if you should by mistake say, A Pale between two pallets, ingraïled, they must all three be ingraïled, which would alter the coat.
- PER PALE, is the field divided from top to bottom by a centre line, drawn as in Plate II. Fig. 18.—N. B. This has commonly been blazoned, Party per Pale; but I think per Pale the better expression.
- IN PALE, signifies any charge borne upright in the centre of the field; as for example, A battle-ax in Pale. See Plate IX. Fig. 27.—N. B. When a Pale is placed over a lion, or any other charge, such charge is said to be debruïed by a Pale; but if it is placed over the Pale, it is then said to be supported by a Pale.
- PALISADO CORONET, is composed of upright pieces, like

P A S

- pales, pointed and fixed on a circle or rim. See Plate XVI. Fig. 45.
- PALL, an archiepiscopal vestment of white woollen cloth. See Plate XV. Fig. 19.—N. B. This Pall is part of the arms of the see of Canterbury, as also of the see of Armagh, in Ireland.
- PALLET, is a diminution of the Pale, containing one half only of the breadth of the latter. See Plate II. Fig. 2.—N. B. There may be 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, or 10 Pallets, in a field, and their number must always be mentioned in the blazon. The French call the Pallet, or small Pale, Vergette; and when there are more than one in a coat, they say, Vergette of so many pieces. See PALY.
- PALISSE' is like a range of pallisadoes before a fortification, and so represented on a fesse rising up a considerable length, and pointed at the top, with the field appearing between them.
- PALM-TREE. See Plate XIII. Fig. 6.
- PALM-BRANCH. See Plate XIII. Fig. 27.
- PALMER'S Staff. See Plate XIV. Fig. 47. a Crozier between two Palmer's Staves.
- PALMER'S Scrip, or Wallet. See Plate XIV. Fig. 44.
- PALMER'S Staff and Scrip. See Plate XIV. Fig. 45.
- PALMER, or PALM WORM. See Plate VII. Fig. 56.
- PALY. When the field is divided into any equal number of pieces, by perpendicular lines, it is termed Paly of so many parts; as Paly of six ar. and gu. See Plate II. Fig. 20. The French call it Vergette of so many pieces.
- PALY BENDY, is when the field is divided, as above, into equal parts by perpendicular lines, and again crossed by diagonal lines from the dexter to the sinister side. Paly of six, ar. and purple, per fesse, counterchanged. See Plate XV. Fig. 20.
- PANSEY, PANSY, or HEART'S EASE, a species of single, three-coloured violet, well known to gardeners. See Plate XIII. Fig. 70.
- PANTHER, a wild beast, whose violent fierceness former Heralds were wont to express by drawing the animal with fire issuing from its mouth and ears. See Plate XV. Fig. 10. a Panther's head erased.—N. B. The position of the Panther in Heraldry is always gardant.
- PAPAL CROWN, TIARA, or TRIPLE CROWN, is a long red cap, surmounted with a mound and cross pattée. Round this cap are three marquis's coronets of gold, placed at equal distances one over the other: from the inside issue two ribbons floatant and fringed, as in Plate XVI. Fig. 6.
- PAPELONNE', a French term in blazon, to denote a field, or charge, that is covered with figures like the scales of a fish. See Plate XIV. Fig. 70. This figure is frequent in the French armory.
- PARLIAMENT ROBES. See Plate XIV. Fig. 39.
- PARROT, a well-known bird, anciently called a Popinjay. The Parrot's proper heraldic colour is green, and it ordinarily hath a red collar round its neck, and red feet. It is frequent in arms, but most especially in the old families of Switzerland, occasioned by two great factions there in the year 1262, which were distinguished by their ensigns; the one having a red standard with a white star, and the other a white standard with a green Parrot; and the families that were concerned in those factions carried in their arms either stars or Parrots.
- PARTIE, or PARTY, PER PALE, PER CHEVRON, PER FESSE, &c. are terms used to denote the field when divided by those partition lines.
- PARTITIONS, COMPARTIMENTS, or QUARTERINGS, are the several divisions made in a coat when the - arms of several families are borne altogether by one, either on account of inter-mariages, or otherwise.

- PASCHAL LAMB (by some blazoned, the Holy Lamb) A Lamb passant ar. carrying a banner, generally charged with a cross gu, and called the banner of St. George. See Plate XI. Fig. 22.
- PASSANT, a term used for any beast when in a walking position. See a LION PASSANT in Plate X. Fig. 2.
- PASSANT GARDANT, is said of a beast when walking, with his head affronté, or looking full-faced.
- PASSANT REGARDANT, is said of a beast when represented as walking, and looking behind him, as in Plate X. Fig. 4.
- PASSION CROSS, is the same as the Cross Calvary.
- PASSION NAIL, a name given to one of the charges in the arms of Holstein, and other coats. The Passion Nail is always represented as in Plate VI. Fig. 2.
- PATE'E, or PAT'TE'E. See CROSS PATE'E.
- PATER-NOSTRE'E. A Cross Pater-Nostre'e is composed of beads, which are to be shaded in the drawing, to shew the solid round (See Plate IV. Fig. 50.) so as plainly to distinguish them from those that are flat. A cross composed of flat ones must be called a Cross Bezanité, if gold; but if white, a Cross Platée.
- PATONCE. See CROSS PATONCE.
- PATRIARCHAL. See CROSS PATRIARCHAL.
- PAVILLION, or TABERNACLE, properly speaking, is an oblong tent, with a projecting entrance, as in Plate VII. Fig. 2. but the Pavillions, as generally represented by modern Heralds, are round at their top.
- PAVIOUR'S PICK, a tool somewhat different in shape from the pick-ax. See Plate VII. Fig. 43.
- PAW. The foot of a lion, bear, seal, &c. cut off or erased at the first joint, is called a Paw. See Plate XI. Fig. 51. a sal-paw erased. But when it is cut off above the first joint, it is then called a Jambe.
- PEACOCK, a bird borne variously in armory. When it is borne affronté, and with its tail spread circularly, or fanned, as in Plate XII. Fig. 53, it is then termed in Pride. When it is blazoned, simply, a Peacock, it must be drawn as Fig. 54, in the same Plate.
- PEAL, a tool used by Bakers, for taking bread out of ovens. See a Peal in pale, thereon three cakes, in Plate VI. Fig. 37.
- PEAN, the name of a fur borne in armory, the ground of which is black, ornamented or powdered with spots of gold. See the Furs in Plate I. Fig. 14.
- PEAR, a well known fruit. When a Pear is borne in armory, it is usually placed as on the dexter side of the shield. See Plate XIII. Fig. 24.
- PEAR Reversed. It is so called when placed as on the sinister side of the field, Fig. 24. in Plate XIII.
- PEAR Slipped and Leaved. See Plate XIII. Fig. 25.
- PEAR-TREE Erased and fruited. See Plate XIII. Fig. 3.
- PEA-RISE, a name given by Heralds to a Pea-stalk leaved and blossomed. It is part of the crest of St. Quintin.
- PEARL, the name given to white, by those who blazon the arms of great men by precious stones, instead of colours and metals. Although it is not a precious stone, as being found in oysters, yet, being of great value, it is ranged among them.
- PEGASUS, a fabulous horse, with wings. See Plate XI. Fig. 9.
- PELICAN, a bird. In armorial bearings, the Pelican is always drawn in the position represented in Plate XII. Fig. 22. viz. with her wings indorsed, her neck embowed, and picking her breast; from whence issue drops of blood.—N. B. As this is the only position in which the Pelican is represented in coat-armour, it is needless, when blazoning, to say, wings indorsed, &c.
- PELICAN in her nest, feeding her young, is termed, in blazon, A Pelican in her piety. See Plate XII. Fig. 21.
- PELICAN'S HEAD erased.—N. B. Although only the head and neck are represented, yet the neck must always be embowed: the head also must be drawn inclined, as if the bird was picking her breast, in order to denote that it is a Pelican's head. See Plate XII. Fig. 23.
- PELLETS, called also Ogreffes, and by some of the old Heralds, Gunflones, are the peculiar names given by the English to the Roundles, which are black; and called by the French Torteaux-de-Sable.
- PENDANT, or PENDENT, a term used in Heraldry for any thing pending, or hanging down, as the badge of any order pendent to the chain, or ribband.
- PENNER and INKHORN, a case for holding pens and ink. It must be drawn agreeable to its original form. See Plate VII. Fig. 26.
- PENNON, is a flag of an oblong figure, ending sometimes in one sharp point, and sometimes in two sharp points, carried on the points of spears; and on them is painted a part only of the owner's armorial ensigns, such as his device, crest, and motto.
- PENNONCLES, certain small pieces of taffety or sarfenet, cut after the form of a pennon, wherewith martial men formerly used to adorn their spears or lances.
- PENNY-YARD PENCE, a small piece of coin called by that name. See Plate XIV. Fig. 61.—N. B. This coin is stamped with a cross moline between twelve balls, and is called Penny-Yard Pence, from the place where they were coined, which is supposed to have been at Penny-Yard Castle, near Ross, in Herefordshire.
- PENS, such as are used to write with, when borne in arms, should be represented as in Plate VII. Fig. 27.
- PER BEND, is when the field is divided by one diagonal line, bendwise, or from the dexter to the sinister side of the escutcheon. See Plate II. Fig. 23.
- PER BEND, sa. and ar. a bar counterchanged. See Plate II. Fig. 32.
- PER CLOSE, or DEMI-GARTER, is that part of the garter that is buckled and nowed. See Plate XIV. Fig. 50.
- PERFORATED, i. e. voided or pierced. See PIERCED.
- PERI, a French word, signifying perished. It is used in blazon, to denote that the thing to which it is applied, is deficient in some of its parts.
- PERPENDICULUM, an angle and plumb-line, as in Plate VII. Fig. 53.
- PEWIT, a bird. See Plate XII. Fig. 27.
- PHEON, the barbed head of a dart, or arrow. See Plate IX. Fig. 48.
- PHEON ingrailed on the outside edges, as in Plate IX.——N. B. Pheons are generally ingrailed on the inward edge.
- PHEON reversed, is when the point is turned upwards.
- PHEON mounted on a staff, and feathered. The Pheons were originally thrown from a staff, or shot from a bow. See Plate IX. Fig. 20.
- PHOENIX, an imaginary bird, always drawn by Heralds in flames; so that seldom more of the bird is seen than that part shewn in Plate XII. Fig. 35.
- PICK-AX. See Plate VI. Fig. 69.
- PIGNON, a term used by the French for the pinnacle or top of a building. The figure is like the gavel end of a house, with gorbels steps. We should call it per Chevron embattled.
- PIGNONE, a term of blazon used by the French when a figure is like a pair of stairs, placed pyramidically.
- PIKE, a fish. See LUCE.
- PIKE-STAVES, as in Plate VI. Fig. 60.
- PILE, or PLYE, is an ordinary, in shape like the foot of a Pile that is driven into the ground to make good and strengthen the foundations of buildings. See, Plate II. Fig. 53. A Pile between two Piles reversed sa.

PILE wavy. See Plate II. Fig. 52.—N. B. If there is only one pile in a coat, it should be made as large in proportion as it is in the Figure above referred unto.

PILE, surmounted of a chevron counterchanged. See Plate II. Fig. 51.

PILES, three meeting in the base centre point. See Plate II. Fig. 55.—N. B. Grwillim blazons them in the words here mentioned; but Upton and others contend, that the words meeting in point should be omitted. Such omission, however, would be absurd, because all Piles should be placed perpendicular, unless the contrary is mentioned in the blazon.

PILES, three in bend, issuing from the dexter chief point, on each point a fleur-de-lis. See Plate II. Fig. 54.—N. B. Some heraldic Writers blazon them thus, A triple Pile in bend, fleury at the points.

PINCERS, a tool used by Smiths, Farriers, &c. They are often borne in arms; as in Plate VI. Fig. 14.

PINE-APPLE, is the cone or fruit of the pine-tree. See it, as it ought to be, and formerly was, borne in armory, in Plate XIII. on the dexter side of Fig. 22.

PINE-APPLE leaved. This blazon is given in a modern grant of arms; but the figure therein depicted, instead of being that of a Pine-Apple, or Cone of the Pine-tree, as consistently with the words of the blazon it ought to be, is that of a ripe Ananas. I have therefore caused it to be engraven in Plate XIII. Fig. 41. as no one, from the mere blazon or words of the grant, could rightly understand that they meant any other fruit than the Cone, or Apple of the Pine-tree. Why the person who made out the grant did not call the fruit by its true name, is not to be guessed, if he really meant the Ananas.

PINK, the flower of a well-known herbaceous plant, slipped and leaved. See Plate XIII. Fig. 67.

PLAIN. It is an axiom in Heraldry, that the plainer a coat is, the higher is its antiquity. Those are plain coats which are least incumbered with charges, or figures, and which have nothing in them but what is natural.

PLAIN POINT is gules. See Plate V. Fig. 24.—N. B. When it is sanguine, it is called an Abatement of Honour. See ABATEMENT OF HONOUR.

PLASTERER'S HAMMER, as borne in the Plasterers' arms. See Plate VIII. Fig. 63.

PLATE, a round flat piece of silver, without any impression on it, but made as it were fit to receive it. The English are the only Heralds who use this term; for, in other nations, what we call Plates, are known by the name of Bezants argent.

PLAYING-TABLES. When borne in armory, they are drawn as Back-Gammon Tables. See Plate XIV. Fig. 69.

PLOUGH, an utensil in husbandry; and, in armory, always drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 39.

PLOYE', a French term, signifying a thing to be bowed, or bent. Columbiere gives us a Chevron Ployé; the lines that compose it being sections of circles, instead of the straight lines by which it is usually formed.

PLUMETTY. When the field is divided into fustils, filled with the ends of feathers, depicted in metal and colour alternately, such field is said to be Plumetty.—N. B. This method of blazon, although met with in the works of some Authors of reputation, is certainly absurd. Instead thereof, should we say, Enfilly or and gu. diapered with feathers counter-changed, the blazon would be better and more clearly understood.

PLUMMET, an instrument used by Masons, and others, to prove perpendiculars; and, in armory, always drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 68.

POINT. The Point is an ordinary something like a pile, issuing from the base, as in Plate I. Fig. 24. This ordinary seldom occurs in English armory, but very often in foreign coats, and more particularly in those of the French, where it is called a Graft, and sometimes a Point in Point. On this the French Heralds sometimes place a coat, and often two, impaled. See a Point impaled, in Plate I. Fig. 9. amongst the chiefs.

POINT IN POINT. This, when tinctured sanguine, is said to be the proper abatement of honour, or mark of distinction for a coward. See Plate V. Fig. 22.—N. B. Nothing but the colour makes this bearing dishonourable, according to English armory: other nations use the Point in Point for a mark of the greatest honour.

POINT CHAMPAINE TENNE', another abatement of honour. See Plate V. Fig. 23.

POINT, a tool used by Wire-drawers, and borne by them as a part of their arms. See Plate XV. Fig. 29. a Lochabar Ax between a point on the dexter, and a Wolf-trap on the sinister.

POINTED. See CROSS POINTED.

POINTS of the Escutcheon, are the several parts denoting the local positions of any figures: there are nine principal points in every escutcheon. See Plate I. Fig. 1 of Colours, &c. in which they are distinguished by letters. They are also fully explained in the beginning of this Work.

POME'E, a Cross Pomée, or Pomettée. See CROSS POMETTE'E.

POMELS, is the term given to roundles, when painted green. They resemble apples, and therefore take their name from the French word Pome, an apple.

POMETTE'E, the same as POME'E.

POMGRANATE, fruit, as in Plate XIII. Fig. 23.—N. B. To this bearing you need not use the word slipped, leaved, or seeded, because that fruit is always to be drawn in armories exactly in the same form and manner, as it appears in the figure above referred unto.

POMGRANATE grafted, or conjoined to a rose in pale. See Plate XIII. Fig. 55.

POPINJAYS, small green parrots, with red beaks and red legs. See Plate XII. Fig. 37.—N. B. They are often drawn with collars of red round their necks. See PARROTS.

PORTATE. A Crest Portate is so called because it doth not stand upright, as generally all crests do, but lies sloping or athwart the escutcheon in bend, as if it were carried on a man's shoulder.

PORTCULLIS, an engine used in fortifying, and for the defence of the gateways of a city, town, castle, or other fortrefs. See Plate IX. Fig. 42.

POSE, a French term signifying a lion, horse, or other beast, standing still, with all his four feet on the ground, to denote thereby that he is not in a moving posture.

POSE EN SAUTOIR, Fr. saltire-ways.

POTENT. An heraldic Potent resembles the head of a crutch. See Plate I. Fig. 17. a CHIEF POTENT.

POTENT Counter-potent, is one of the furs. See Plate I. in the division of Escutcheons, Metals, Colours, and Furs, Fig. 16.

POTS, when so termed in armory, are iron pots with three legs, as in Plate VI. Fig. 46.

POULDRON, the name of that part of the suit of armour, which covereth the shoulder.

POWDER-HORN, or POWDER-FLASK, an utensil for holding gunpowder; when made a charge in armory, it must always be drawn as engraved in Plate VIII. Fig. 72.

POWDERED, a term used in armory, when a field, crest, or supporter, is strewn all over promiscuously with any charges, as mullets, crescents, fleurs-de-lis, &c. The French call it Semé; and in this they have of late years been followed in the English blazon.

PRASIN, a word used by some Heralds for green. It is derived from a Greek word, signifying a leek.

PRAWN. See SHRIMP.

PRECEDENCE, the taking place according to the degrees of certain stations or ranks of persons.

PREENE, an instrument use by Clothiers in dressing cloth. See Plate VI. Fig. 26. a shuttle in chief, and a Preene in base.

PRESTOR JOHN, or, according to some, PRESBYTER JOHN.—He is always drawn habited as a Bishop, sitting on a tomb-stone, having on his head a mitre, his dexter hand extended, a moun in his sinister, and in his mouth a sword fesswise, with the point to the dexter side of the field. See Plate XIV. Fig. 4.—N. B. This bearing is part of the arms of the episcopal see of Chichester.

PRETENCE. See ESCUTCHEON OF PRETENCE.

PREYING, is a term used in armory for any ravenous beast, or bird, standing on, and in a proper position for devouring its prey. See Plate XII. Fig. 9. an eagle preying on a bird.

PRINCE'S CORONET. See Plate XVI. Fig. 11.

PROPER, a term applied in armory to every animal, bird, vegetable, &c. borne of their real, true, and proper colour. Thus, a lion proper is always painted brown.

PURFLED, TRIMMED, or GARNISHED, signifies the studs and rims of armour being gold: thus we say, A leg in armour proper, purfled or.

PURFLEW, signifies a Border, and takes its name from Purfle, a sort of trimming for gowns. It is used by heraldic Writers to express a border of fur placed round a coat.

PURPURE, is the heraldic term used to express the purple colour. It is said to take its name from a shell-fish, called Purpura, which gave materials for that colour. It is expressed in engravings by thwart or diagonal lines, drawn from the sinister chief to the dexter base point.

PURSE OF STATE, is always to be drawn in armory as engraved in Plate XIV. Fig. 41.

PURSE, stringed and tasselled. See Plate XIII. Fig. 42.

PURSUIVANT, is the lowest degree of Officers in the College of Arms.

PYRAMID. See Plate VIII. Fig. 26.

PYTHON, a winged serpent, or dragon.

Q

QUADRANS, Lat. a canton.

QUADRAT. See Crests, Quadrat at the ends.

QUARTER, is an ordinary of a quadrangular form, laid as a charge on the field, of which it contains one fourth part. It is formed by two lines, the one drawn from the side of the shield in traverse to the centre, and the other perpendicularly from the chief, to meet it in the same place. See Plate II. Fig. 50. Estaine, on a Quarter gu. a bend or.

QUARTERING, is the act of marshalling many different coats in one escutcheon.

QUARTERINGS, are the several different coats marshalled and placed together in one escutcheon. In speaking of such coats, the number of their quarterings must be mentioned; as for example, He bears quarterly, of ten, twelve, or any other number.

QUARTERLY, the term used for the field when divided into four equal parts, as in Plate II. Fig. 42. on which is placed a baton, or batoon, which will be referred to under that name.

QUARTERLY AZ. and OR. a saltire counterchanged, fimbriated ar. Plate III. Fig. 33.

QUARTERLY Pierced, is used to express a square hole in a saltire, a cross millrine, &c. through which aperture the field is seen, as in Plate IV. Fig. 39, 66, and 69.

QUARTERFOIL, QUATREFOIL, or CATERFOIL, the four-leaved grass, which should always be drawn as in Plate XIII. Fig. 46. It is not so frequently carried in arms as the Cinqufoil.

QUATREFOIL slipped. See Plate XIII. Fig. 47. I have sometimes seen them represented as slipped in the manner exhibited at Fig. 48. in the same Plate.

QUATREFOIL double, is borne as the mark of cadency for the ninth son. See Plate XV. Fig. 9. in the Distinctions of Families.

QUEUE, Fr. a tail. In Heraldry this word is used to express the tails of beasts: for example, if a lion is to be depicted with two tails, you say, in blazon, A lion double-queued. See Plate XII. Fig. 11.

QUILL, or WHEEL-QUILL OF YARN. See Plate VI. on the dexter side of Fig. 24.

QUILL empty of the thread. See Plate VIII. Fig. 65. in chief an empty quill, in base a lantern.

QUILL of gold or silver thread. Plate VIII. Fig. 64. See TRUNDLE.

QUINTAIN, an ancient tilting-block, used in a game, or sport, still practised at marriages in Shropshire, and some other counties. The sport consists in running a tilt (on horseback) against a Quintain, or thick plank, fixed in the ground. He that, by striking this plank, breaks the greatest number of tilting-poles, and shews the greatest activity, gains the prize; which was formerly a peacock, but of late years hath been a garland.

QUIVER of Arrows, a case filled with arrows.

R

RACOURCY, or RECOURCIE, is the same as Coupée, that is, cut off, or shortened; and denotes a cross, or other ordinary, that doth not extend to the edges of the escutcheon, as all ordinaries should do when absolutely named without any distinction. See Plate III. Fig. 55.

RADIANT, RAYONNED, RAYONNANT, or RAYONNEE; terms used to express any ordinary edged with glittering rays, or shining beams, like those of the sun. See Plate I. Fig. 21, a Chief radiant; Plate II. Fig. 7, a Pale radiant; Plate IV. Fig. 63, a Cross radiant.

RAGULY, or RAGULED, is used to express any ordinary that is jagged, or notched, in an irregular manner, as in Plate II. Fig. 19, and 28; Plate III. Fig. 70; Plate IV. Fig. 65; Plate V. Fig. 60; Plate XIII. Fig. 8 and 9.

RAIN-BOW, is represented in armory as a semi-circle, of various colours, arising from clouds, as in Plate V. Fig. 56.

RAKE, an utensil in horticulture. See Plate VI. Fig. 63.

RAKE-HEAD, as borne in armory. See Plate VIII. Fig. 58.

RAMPANT, a term used for lions, bears, tigers, &c. when standing erect on their hind legs, as in Plate X. Fig. 5, and 44.

RANGE, is a French term signifying many mullets, or other charges, placed in bend, saltire, fesse, cross, &c.

RAVEN,

RAVEN, a carnivorous bird, so well known as to render any description of it in this place unnecessary. See PLATE XII. Fig. 52.

RAVISSANT, a term used by French Heralds to express the posture of a wolf, half raised, and just springing forward upon his prey.

RAYONNANT. See RADIANT.

RAYS, when depicted round the sun, should be sixteen in number, but, when round an étoile, six only. In painting or drawing these Rays, you must be careful to draw one Ray straight, and the next waved, and so on alternately, as in PLATE V. Fig. 38 and 44. In the blazon it is unnecessary to mention their number.

RAYS issuing from the dexter chief point. See PLATE V. Fig. 39.

RAYS issuing from a cloud in chief. See PLATE V. Fig. 40.

RAYS of the sun inflamed. See PLATE V. Fig. 45. See SUN.

REBATEMENT, the same as abatement. See ABATEMENT.

RECOURCIE. See RACCOURCY.

RECROISE', a French term in armory, which signifies crossed; as a cross croiset, or croiset croisé.

REGALIA, ensigns of royal dignity, as crowns, sceptres, mounds, &c. The word Regalia is sometimes (although improperly) used to express the ensigns of any particular honour and dignity conferred on a subject, or office; as also those ensigns which are commonly used at the funerals of great personages; as banners, guidons, pennons, standard, helmet, shield, furcoat, mantle, sword, spurs, &c.

REGARDANT, is the position in which all beasts and birds are said to be when they are looking behind them, as in PLATE X. Fig. 7. and in PLATE XII. Fig. 1.

REIN-DEER, as drawn in armory, is a stag with double attires, two of them turning down, as on the head of the Rein-Deer cabossed, in PLATE X. Fig. 62.

REMORA, is a kind of small fish, usually adhering to the bottom of ships, and thereby retarding their sailing; but in Heraldry the word Remora is used to denote a serpent: thus in blazoning of the figure of Prudence, which is represented as holding in her hand a javelin entwined with a serpent proper, such serpent is expressed by the word REMORA.

REMPLI. When a chief is filled with any other metal, or colour, leaving only a border round the chief of the first, it is then called a Chief Rempli, as in PLATE I. Fig. 26.

RENCONTRE, or AU RENCONTRE, a French phrase, signifying that the face of a beast stands right forward, as if it came to meet the person before it.

REVERSE', is when any thing is set with the head downwards, or, contrary to its natural way, with the point downwards, or when a beast is laid on its back. See REVERSED.

RERE-MOUSE, or BAT. See BAT.

RESARCELE'E. A Cross Resarcelée, from the French verb Resarceller, to edge, or hem, is a cross voided and open at each end, as in PLATE III. Fig. 62.

RESPECTING. When beasts, birds, or fish, are placed in armory to face each other, they are, by some modern Heralds, termed respecting each other, as in PLATE X. Fig. 23.

RESTS, or CLARIONS. Writers differ much concerning the use of this figure: some assert it to be the Rest, in which tilting-spears were fixed when carried on horseback; others as strongly affirm it to be an ancient wind-instrument, and call it the Clarion. See PLATE XIV. Fig. 58.

RETAILLE', in French Heraldry, signifies cut again, and is said of an escutcheon when divided into three parts by two lines in bend sinister.

RETRANCHE', a term used by French Heralds, signifying that the escutcheon is twice cut athwart bendwise, or doubly cut in bend dexter; in which case they say, Tranché, and Retranché.

REVERSED, is said of any charge being borne with its wrong end upwards. See RENVERSE'.

REVESTU. See VESTU.

RHINOCEROS, is sometimes borne in armory as a crest. See PLATE XV. Fig. 6.

RIBBAND, or RIBBON, is an ordinary containing the eighth part of the bend. See PLATE II. Fig. 25. viz. a bend between a Ribbon in chief, and a bendlet in base.

RISING, a term used in armory for bends when in a position as if preparing to fly. See PLATE XII. Fig. 2. See ROUSANT.

ROCK, in armory must be painted as in PLATE V. Fig. 67.

ROMPU, from Rompre, to break, is a French word in armory, used to denote any particular ordinary that is broken. See PLATE II. Fig. 36.

ROOT OF A TREE, couped and crafed. See PLATE XIII. Fig. 16.

ROSE, a well-known flower. In Heraldry it must always be drawn thus: full-blown, with its petals, or flower-leaves, expanded, seeded in the middle, and backed by five green barbes, or involucra. See PLATE XIII. Fig. 56.

ROSE, Double. See PLATE XIII. Fig. 57.

ROSE, stalked and leaved vert. See PLATE XIII. Fig. 58.

ROSE-Leaf. See PLATE XIII. Fig. 37.

ROUGE CROIX, or ROUGE CROSS, the title of one of the Pursuivants of Arms.

ROUND TOPS OF MASTS, are always painted in armory so as to show the particular part of the mast to which they belong, as in PLATE XI. Fig. 58. and therefore some blazon them, Pieces of masts, with their round tops.

ROUNDLES, round figures; if of metal, flat; if of colour, globular. They all change their names according to the different colour or metal of which they are composed; as may be seen under the different names of Bezant, Plate, Pomeis, Hurt, Ogrefs or Pellet, Torteaux, Golpes, Oranges, and Guzes.—N. B. If there are two, three, or more, in a coat, and they are counterchanged, be they of any colour, or metal, they retain the name of Roundles:—Thus, Per pale gu. and ar. three Roundles counterchanged. See PLATE III. Fig. 47.

ROUSANT, a term given by some Heralds to a bird rising, as if preparing to take wing. When this epithet is applied to a swan, we are to understand that her wings are indorsed, as in PLATE XII. Fig. 49. See RISING.

RUBY, the name of a precious stone. Those who blazon a coat by jewels apply this name to denote gules, or red.

RUDDER OF A SHIP. See PLATE XI. Fig. 56.—N. B. It must be drawn hooked to the sinister, as here engraved.

RULES OF BLAZON. See the INTRODUCTORY DISCOURSE.

RUSTRE, is a lozenge pierced round in the middle, so that the field appears through it. Some will have it, that the Rustre represents the button at the end of lances used in tilting and tournaments, and so became an armorial figure, from its being used in those noble and manly exercises. Others contend that Rustre represents a piece of iron of that form, which sometimes is interposed between the heads of nails fixed on ports of cities and castles. The English and Scottish Heralds call them Masles. Sir George Mackenzie, to distinguish them more particularly, calls them Masles pierced round. See MASCLES.

RYE, an Ear of. See PLATE XIII. Fig. 62.—N. B. This is always to be drawn bent down; and generally is called a Rye-Stalk.

SABLE, is the heraldic term for black; and, in engravings of armory, is expressed by cross lines, as in Plate I. Fig. 6.

SACRE, or SAKER, a kind of falcon; the head whereof is grey, the feet and legs bluish, and the back of a dark brown.

SADDLE. See, Plate IX. Fig. 8, a Saddle, as borne in the arms of the Saddlers' Company.

SAGITTARIUS, or SAGITTARY, i. e. the archer or bowman, is the ninth celestial sign in the order of the Zodiac. See Plate XI. Fig. 16. This sign is commonly marked thus (♐)

SAIL OF A SHIP. See Plate XI. Fig. 59.—N. B. A small portion of the mast and yard-arm should always in armory be drawn together with a sail, in such a manner as is engraved in the figure here referred unto.

SALAMANDER, an imaginary beast, feigned to be bred in fire: in armory, it is to be painted green, surrounded with flames of fire proper, and drawn as in Plate XI. Fig. 42.

SALIENT, signifies the motion of a beast when leaping or springing from its hind legs. Gwillim says, that when the right foot of any beast answers to the dexter corner of the escutcheon, and the hindmost foot to the sinister base thereof, such beast is then properly said to be salient; but in this he is greatly mistaken.—N. B. This term is, in Heraldry, applicable to all beasts of prey. See, in Plate X. Fig. 8, a lion salient.

SALMON SPEARS, a name sometimes given to harping-irons.

SALTIER, or SALTIRE, from the French, Sautoir, is one of the ordinaries, and drawn in the form of what is commonly called a St. Andrew's Cross. See Plate III. Fig. 41.

SALTIER Bottony, or a Cross Bottony in Saltier. See Plate III. Fig. 42.

SALTIER composed of Chains; or thus, four Chains in Saltier, fixed to an annulet in the centre point. See Plate IX. Fig. 52.

SALTIER Couped and Engrailed. See Plate III. Fig. 37.

SALTIER Couped and Crofset, or a Cross Crofset in Saltier. See Plate III. Fig. 38.

SALTIER Moline, or a Cross Moline in Saltier. See Plate III. Fig. 40.

SALTIER Saltered and Flory, or a Cross Crofset flory in Saltier. See Plate III. Fig. 43.

SALTIER Saltered patie. See Plate III. Fig. 39.

SALTIER Triparted. See Plate III. Fig. 36.

SALTIER Voided of the field. See Plate III. Fig. 34.

SALTIER Fimbriated: Quarterly, or and gu. a Saltier counter-changed and fimbriated ar. See Plate III. Fig. 33.

SALTIER conjoined in base, being part of the arms of the borough of Southwark. See Plate XV. Fig. 27.

PER SALTIER. When the field of a coat, or any charge on a coat, supporter, or crest, is divided by two diagonal lines crossing each other, as in Plate II. Fig. 44. it is called Per Saltier.

PER SALTIER, Quarterly counter-changed; or, as Nisbet calls it, a Saltier quarterly quartered. See Plate III. Fig. 35.—N. B. This Saltier is borne in the arms of the Episcopal See of Bath and Wells.

SALTIERWAYS. When oblong figures are situate after the position of the Saltier, they are said to be Saltierways; or, according to the French, Posé en Sautoir: but small round figures, as Bezants, Torçaux, &c. are said to be in Saltier.

SALTIRE. See SALTIER.

SALTORELS, the same as Saltiers.

SALTS, or SALT-CELLARS; i. e. vessels, with salt falling from the sides, as borne in the arms of the Salters' Company. See Plate VII. Fig. 4. Some Heralds have blazoned them, Sprinkling-Salts. They were anciently drawn as represented by the Figure here referred unto. At coronation dinners, and all great meals given by the Nobility and Gentry, it was usual to set one of these Salts in the centre of the board, or dining-table; not only for holding salt for the use of the guests, but as a mark whereby to separate and distinguish the seats of the superior sort of the company from those of an inferior degree; it being the custom of former times, to set the Nobility and Gentry above the Salt, and the Yeomanry, and persons of lower rank, below the Salt. Hence the common expressions of above the Salt, and below the Salt.

SANDAL, a covering for the foot; formerly used in churches, and sometimes called Brogues. See Plate XIV. Fig. 51.

SANGLANT, bloody; torn off, or erased.

SANGLIER, Fr. a wild boar.

SANGUINE, from the Latin, Sanguineus, is the term made use of by Heralds to denote the colour murrey; and, in engravings, is expressed by diagonal lines crossing each other. See Plate I. in the Colours, Fig. 10.

SAPPHIRE. Such persons as blazon coat-armour by precious stones, use this word to express azure, or blue.

SAVAGE, WOOD-MAN, or WILD-MAN, is commonly painted with a wreath round his temples, and another round his waist, and holding a maffy club in his left hand. See Plate XIV. Fig. 5. Some heraldic Writers style him a Saracen.

SAVAGE, DEMI, holding in both hands a club, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 6.

SAVAGE'S Head couped below the shoulders. See Plate XIV. Fig. 7.

SAVAGE'S Head erased at the neck, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 8.

SARACEN. See SAVAGE.

SARCELLY, the same as Cercelly; which see.

SARDONIX, the name by which those who blazon coat-armour by precious stones call the murrey colour, or dark-red.

SATYRAL, a scititious beast, said to have the body of a lion, the tail and horns of an antelope, and the face of an old man. See Plate XI. Fig. 4.

SATURN, one of the planets. In blazoning by the planets, the word Saturn is used for saule, or black.

SATYR'S Head in profile, couped at the neck. See Plate XIV. Fig. 14.

SCALING-LADDER, in bend, between two caltraps. See Plate IX. Fig. 40.

SCARF, a small ecclesiastical banner, hanging down from the top of a crozier. See Plate XIV. Fig. 46.

SCARPE, is the first diminutive of the bend sinister, and is in breadth the half thereof. It is derived from the French word escarpe, a scarf, which was an ornament made use of by Commanders and Field-Officers, and worn over their left shoulder thwart the body, and so under the right side. In blazon, it should be named Scarp, without mentioning the word sinister. The French call it a Bar; and, if there be six of them in the field, they say, Barée; and if more, Celisee.

Califfe. The half of the Scarpe is called by us a Baston Sinifler, and by the French, Baston Sinifler. It is never carried in arms but as a mark of illegitimation. See Plate III. Fig. 9.

SCEPTER, a royal staff, used at coronations. Anciently, the length of the Scepter was equal to the stature of the Prince. It is figuratively taken for royal authority. See, in Plate XIV. Fig. 43, a Scepter between two tassels.

SCORPION, a venomous reptile, in shape somewhat resembling a cray-fish, and frequently found in Italy. It is sometimes borne as a charge in coat-armour, and is then usually borne erect, or with its head strait upwards, as in Plate XI. Fig. 43, in which case it is, in blazon, called a Scorpion, without any addition or description; but when it is borne with the head downwards, it is to be called, in blazon, a Scorpion reversed.

SCRIP. See WALLET.

SCROGS, the term used by the Scots in blazoning a small branch of a tree.

SCULL (human) in a cup, or chalice. See Plate VII. Fig. 47.—N. B. This is part of the arms of Bethlem hospital, London.

SCULL (human) as otherways borne in coat-armour. See Plate XIV. Fig. 33.

SCYTHE, an instrument in husbandry. When it is borne as a charge in coat-armour, it should be placed as in Plate VIII. Fig. 40.

SCYTHE-BLADE. See Plate VI. Fig. 39, in chief.

SEA-DOGS, are drawn in shape like the talbot, but with a tail like that of the beaver; a scalloped fin continued down the back, from the head to the tail; the whole body, legs, and tail, scaled, and the feet webbed.—N. B. Two such dogs are the supporters of the arms of Baron Stourton.

SEA-GULL; a well-known water-fowl. See Plate XII. Fig. 58.

SEA-HORSE: The upper part is formed like a horse, with webbed feet, and the hinder part ends in a fish's tail. See Plate XI. Fig. 49.

SEA-LION. The upper part is formed like that of a lion, and the lower part like the tail of a fish. The common position in which sea-lions are drawn is exhibited in Plate XI. Fig. 48. But sometimes they are drawn erect, and on their tails; and then they are blazoned as follows: Sea-lions erect on their tails.

SEA-MEW, a sort of sea-gull.

SEA-PIE, a water-fowl, of a dark-brown colour, with a red head, and the neck and wings white. See Plate XII. Fig. 33.

SEAL, an amphibious animal. See Plate XI. Fig. 50.—N. B. This is the only position in which the Seal is ever placed in coat-armour.

SEAL'S Paw erased, as it is generally termed. See Plate XI. Fig. 51.

SEAX, a scymitar, with a semi-circular notch hollowed out of the back of the blade. It is said to be formed exactly like the Saxon sword. See Plate VII. Fig. 52.—N. B. It is so drawn in the crest of Gomm.

SEGREANT, is the term used to express a griffin when on its hind legs, with the wings indorsed.

SEIANT, Fr. This word is used to express any thing fitting, and is therefore applied to all beasts that are to be represented in that position. See Plate X. Fig. 9 and 54.

SEME', or SEMME'. When either the field of a coat, a crest, or supporter, is strewn over, or powdered with figures, as stars, billets, &c. it is said to be Semé of stars, Semé of billets, &c. But when the field is strewn with fleurs-de-lis, as in Plate XIII. Fig. 54, in blazoning it, you must say, Semé de lis only.

SENGREEN, or HOUSE-LEEK, a well-known succulent plant, borne as a charge in the arms of Caius College, Cambridge. See Plate XV. Fig. 31, in chief a silk-thrower's mill, in base a fengreen.

SERAPH'S HEAD, i. e. a child's head, with three pair of wings, viz. two in chief, two in fesse, and two in base, as in Plate V. Fig. 36.

SERPENT erect in pale az. crowned gu. devouring an infant proper, being the arms of the dukedom of Milan. See Plate VII. Fig. 63.

SHACKLE, or LINK OF A FETTER, as borne in the arms of Shakerley. See Plate VII. Fig. 35.

SHAKE-FORK, is in form like the Pall, but doth not touch the top of the shield, and is pointed at each end in the same manner as at the bottom of the pile in Plate II. Fig. 6.

SHAMBROUGHS, a kind of shoe. See Plate XI. Fig. 52. SHAMROCKS is the name given in Ireland to the trefoil, or three-leaved grass. See TREFOIL.

SHAPOURNET, signifies a hood. In Heraldry, it is a curved line on a chief, as in Plate I. Fig. 29.

SHAVES. See CURRIERS' SHAVES.

SHEERS, a large tool, or instrument, used by Clothiers, when borne as a charge in coat-armour, must be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 28.

SHELDRAKE, a kind of duck.

SHIELDS, BUCKLERS, and TARGETS, are all applicable to the same use. They gave the original to that which in armory is now called the Escutcheon, and which hath been fully spoken of in the Introductory part of this Work. The form and shape of Shields differ in all countries, according to the fancy or pleasure of the bearer. In Plate I. where in the top line are engraved eight different Shields, No. 1, is the Antique Shield, which is generally used for the shape of the escutcheon of pretence: No. 2, the Lozenges, to be used by maidens and widows: No. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, are inserted only to shew the different shapes that have been formed.—N. B. No. 6, is indubitably the best shape for a coat with several quarterings.

SHIN-BONES, are borne in armory, viz. sa. two Shin-Bones in saltire ar. by the name of Newton. See Plate XIV. Fig. 32.

SHIPS, borne as charges in armory, were originally drawn as in Plate XI. Fig. 52. and blazoned, Ships of three masts, sails furled, and streamers flying. In the same Plate, Fig. 53, is a Ship of three masts sans sails and topmast.—N. B. This shape for a Ship should not be deviated from, unless it is otherwise particularly expressed in the blazon.

SHOVELLER, a species of water-fowl, somewhat like the duck. The Heralds, in former ages, drew this bird with a tuft on his breast, and another on the back of his head, as in Plate XII. Fig. 62.

SHRIMPS, or PRAWNS. In blazoning, their position need not be mentioned, as they are never represented naient, or swimming. See Plate XI. Fig. 72.

SHUTTLE, an instrument used by the Weavers, and borne by them in the arms of their Company, viz. in chief a Shuttle, with the quill and thread, which is called a Shuttle tipped and quilled. See Plate VI. Fig. 26.

SICKLE, with teeth. See Plate VI. Fig. 55. Two Sickles interlaced. See Fig. 54, in the same Plate.

SILK-HANKS, are parcels of raw silk, wined in the form in which they are when imported into England. Such are borne as a part of the armorial ensign of the Silk-Throwers' Company. See Plate VII. Fig. 50.

SILK-THROWERS' MILL, as borne in their armorial ensign. See Plate XV. Fig. 31.

SINISTER, signifies the left-hand side of every thing that is used in armory. In the points of the escutcheon, it is shewn by the letters C and I.

SINOPE, a word used by the French Heralds for grézin, which we call vert. See VERT.

SKELETON (human) holding in the sinister hand an arrow. See Plate XIV. Fig. 18.

SLAY, SLEA, or REED, an instrument used by Weavers, and borne as part of the armorial ensign of the Company of Weavers of the city of Exeter. See Plate XV. Fig. 35. in chief a flay, in base a burling-iron.

SLEDGE, a sort of carriage, without wheels, used in hufbandry. See Plate VIII. Fig. 38.

SLING, as borne in the arms of Cawarden. See Plate VII. Fig. 31, a sling between two broad arrows.

SLIPPED, is a term in Heraldry applied to trefoils, cinquefoils, flowers, sprigs of laurel, oak-branches, &c. in order to express that part of the stalk which adheres to them, as if they were slipped or torn off from the stem, or original plant.

SNAIL, or HOUSE-SNAIL, as it is frequently called by Writers, is a well-known reptile. The only position in which a Snail ought to be placed in armory is shewn at Fig. 11. in Plate VII.

SNAKE, or SERPENT, nowed. See Plate XI. Fig. 39.

SNAKE coiled. See Plate VII. Fig. 10.

SOLDERING-IRON, a tool used by the Plumbers, and borne in the arms of their Company, as in Plate VI. Fig. 15. viz. a Soldering-Iron between a nail on the dexter, and a tenter-hook on the sinister.

SOMME, a term used by French Heralds to signify horned, or the stag's carrying his horns. They say that the number of branches in those horns must be mentioned when there are fewer than thirteen; and when there are more, it must be blazoned, Somme sans nombre.

SOUSTENU, is when a chief is as if were supported by a small part of the escutcheon beneath it, of a different colour or metal from the chief, and reaching, as the chief doth, from side to side, being as it were a small part of the chief, of another colour, and supporting the real chief.

SPADE-IRON, or the SHOING of a SPADE. See Plate VI. Fig. 38.

SPADE, as used by Gardeners. See Plate VI. Fig. 59.

SPADE. See Plate VI. Fig. 59, a Spade between a chissel on the dexter, and a yard, or rule, on the sinister.——N. B. These sort of Spades are borne in the arms of Sweetenham; but they appear as half-spades.

SPANCELLED, or FETTERED, a term used for a horse that has his fore and hind leg fettered, by means of fetterlocks fastened to the ends of a stick, as in Plate XV. Fig. 13.——N. B. A horse thus spancelled is the coat of Percival.

SPEAR, an instrument of war. See Plate IX. Fig. 33.——N. B. In the same Figure, on the sinister side, is an arrow.

SPEAR-HEAD imbrued, i. e. bloody. See Plate IX. Fig. 34.

SPERVERS, i. e. tents; so called in the original grant of arms to the Upholders' Company. See the Upholders' Arms in the Armorial Ensigns of the several Trades.

SPHERE, Celestial. See Plate V. Fig. 58.

SPHINX, a chimerical beast, the body whereof is represented like that of the lion, with the wings of an eagle, and the face and breast of a woman. See a Sphinx passant, with wings indorsed, in Plate XI. Fig. 18.

SPHINX couchant, sans wings. See Plate XI. Fig. 17.

SPIDER and WEB. See Plate VII. Fig. 13.

SPRINGING, a term applied to beasts of chase, in the same sense as salient is to beasts of prey.——N. B. This term is also applicable to fish, when placed in bend.

SPUR, and SPUR-LEATHERS, the rowel in base. See Plate IX. Fig. 25.

SPUR-ROWEL. See Plate VIII. Fig. 68.

SQUIRREL, a small well-known animal, whose common position in armory being as in Plate X. Fig. 54. Such position need not in the blazon be termed seiant.

SRUTTLE, a name given to a sort of basket, in most counties called a Winnowing-fan. It is used for winnowing of corn. See Plate VI. Fig. 48.

STAFF, Raguly, couped at each end. See Plate XIII. Fig. 8.

STAFF, Raguly, in bend sinister, couped in chief, and erased in base. See Plate XIII. Fig. 9.

STAFFORD KNOT, a badge used by the family of Stafford. See Plate XIV. Fig. 65, in base the Stafford knot, in chief the Bourchier knot.

STAG, a general name given in armory to all kinds of deer.

STAG Trippant. See Plate X. Fig. 55.

STAG Current, as in Plate X. Fig. 58.

STAG at Gaze, i. e. looking full-faced, as in Plate X. Fig. 57.

STAG Lodged, a term used for a Stag lying down; as in Plate X. Fig. 59.

STAG Springing. See Plate X. Fig. 56.

STAG's Head cabossed, as in Plate X. Fig. 61.

STAG's Head erased, as in Plate X. Fig. 60.——N. B. In armory, when you say, A Stag's head erased, it means that the head and neck are placed in profile, as in the above Figure.

STANDARD, is a martial ensign, of a square form, painted or embroidered with the whole achievements of him who hath a right to display them in the field, or in solemnities. Anciently they were allowed to none under the degree of a Knight Banneret. The word Standard is now peculiarly used for the ensign that is carried by the cavalry, those of the infantry or foot being called Colours.

STANDARD, carried at the funerals of great personages; is usually fifteen feet long, and split at the point: at the top is the arms of the union, then the crests and motto of the defunct, as in Plate XVII. Fig. 7.

STAPLE, made of iron, for fastening a door: when borne in armory, should be drawn as in the sinister chief point of Fig. 9. in Plate VI.

STAR. See E TOILE.

STAR-FISH, commonly called Five Fingers. See Plate VII. Fig. 16.——N. B. This fish is part of the arms and crest of La Yard.

STARVED, a term used by Heralds to denote a branch of a tree when stripped of all its leaves, as in Plate XIII. Fig. 40.

STATANT, a term used for a beast standing with all four legs on the ground, as in Plate X. Fig. 1. a lion statant.——N. B. This position is not sufficiently attended to by Engravers and Painters, so that we frequently see, in their works, beasts made passant, when they should be represented as statant.

STAVES, i. e. walking-staves, used by palmers, or pilgrims. Such Staves are part of the arms of a family named Palmer. See Plate XIV. Fig. 47. on each side of a crozier, a pilgrim's staff.

STAVES of a Carbuncle, are the eight rays that issue from its centre. See CARBUNCLE.

STEEL CAPS, or MORIONS, pieces of armour used as a defence for the head. See Plate IX. Fig. 6 and 7. The last are those borne in the arms of Brudenell.

STEEPLE of a Church, when borne in arms, must be drawn with the addition of part of the tower, or belfrey, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 20.

STILL, or ALEMbic, an utensil of the distillery, which, when borne as a charge in coat-armour, must be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 47. Such is the crest of Winnington.

STILT, an instrument made to walk with: when a charge in armory, it must be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 64.

STIRRUP and LEATHER, being parts belonging to a saddle: when they are borne in armory, they are to be drawn as in Plate IX. Fig. 21.——N. B. Stirrups sometimes, although but very rarely, are borne in arms without the leather.

When

When that is the case, the blazon must be Stirrups sans leathers; because the above, although both Stirrups and Leathers, are generally blazoned Stirrups only, without mentioning the Leathers.

STOCK-CARD, an instrument used for carding wool. See Plate VI. Fig. 21.

STOLE, part of the vestment of a Priest. See Plate XV. Fig. 34.

STONE-BILL. See WEDGE.

STORK. See CRANE.

STRINGED, a term applied to the bugle-horn, which is always borne with fringes affixed thereunto, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 57.

STRINGED, is also a term heraldically expressive of the strings of a purse of state, which must be drawn as in Plate XIV. Fig. 41. It is also used when speaking of a harp; as a harp or, stringed ar. See Plate XIV. Fig. 54.

SUBORDINARIES are certain figures borne as charges in coat-armour, which are not deemed to be so honourable as those called Ordinaries, and to which the Subordinaries give place, and cede the principal parts of the shield.

SUFFLŪE, a French term for rests, or clarions.

SUGAR-CANE, as drawn in some modern grants of arms. See Plate XII. Fig. 21.

SUN, in Splendor, or in full Glory, as is the most usual expression for blazoning that planet. See Plate V. Fig. 38.

SUN in Splendor, charged on the centre with an eye. See Plate V. Fig. 44.

SUN in Splendor, each ray illuminated, or inflamed. See Plate V. Fig. 45.

SUN incircled with clouds, distilling drops of rain. See Plate VII. Fig. 22.—N. B. This is part of the armorial ensign belonging to the Company of Distillers of London.

SUN's resplendent rays issuing from a cloud in chief. See Plate V. Fig. 40.

SUN's resplendent rays issuing from the dexter chief point. See Plate V. Fig. 39.

SUPER-CHARGE, is a term that hath been applied by some to express one figure borne on another, as in Plate III. Fig. 44. a fret charged with pellets.—N. B. This word, Supercharge, is now seldom or ever used, surmounted being a better term.

SUPPORTERS, are those figures that are placed on each side the shields of arms of Sovereigns, Noblemen, Knights of the Garter, Bath, Bannerets, &c. and appear to hold up and support the same. For a further and more explanatory account of Supporters, see the Treatise on Blazoning, at the beginning of this Work.

SUR-ANCREE. A Cross Sur-Ancrée, or Sur-anchored, or Double-anchored, is a cross with double anchor-flukes at each of its ends. e. v. 10

SURCOAT, a loose, light, thin taffety coat, formerly worn by military men over their armour, and upon which their arms were painted or embroidered, in order that they might be distinguished in time of battle. Sovereigns, and the greater Nobility, are represented on the equestrian side of their seals on horseback, and wearing such Surcoats.

SURMONTE', or SURMOUNTED, is a term used when a chief hath another very small chief placed over it, and of a different colour, or metal. See Plate I. Fig. 26. The like term is also used when any figure is placed over another, as a head, fesse, pale, &c. over a lion; sometimes the word debruised is used to express the same meaning.

SURTOUT, Fr. An escutcheon of pretence, placed on the centre of a shield of arms, is said to be in surtout.

SWALLOW, a common and well-known bird. When a Swallow is represented in coat-armour as flying, it is termed volant. See Plate XII. Fig. 28.

SWAN, with wings indorsed. See Plate XII. Fig. 49.

SWAN, close. This term is generally made use of to denote that the wings of the Swan, borne as a charge, are to be represented as down, and lying close to her body, as in Plate XII. Fig. 48.—N. B. The word close is not in heraldry applied to any other birds that are to be represented with their wings down and unextended.

SWAN, Demi, with wings expanded. See Plate XII. Fig. 50.

SWAN'S Neck erased, and ducally gorged. See Plate XII. Fig. 51.—N. B. This should always be blazoned, A Swan's neck erased, although some blazoners, on account of its being ducally gorged, affect to call it, A Royal Cygnet's neck erased.

SWEEP, the balista, or instrument anciently used in war, for throwing stones into fortresses. See Plate IX. Fig. 41.

SWIVEL, two iron links which turn on a bolt. See Plate VIII. Fig. 48.—N. B. Three such are borne on a chevron in the arms of the Ironmongers' Company of London.

SWORD in Pale. See Plate IX. Fig. 26. a falchion on the dexter, and a sword on the sinister. In blazoning, it is to be called a Sword crest.

SWORD broken. See Plate IX. Fig. 37.—N. B. The broken point is never shewn, unless particularly expressed in the blazon to be so.

T

TABERNACLE, should be drawn in armory as in Plate VII. Fig. 2. See TENTS.

TAIL. The tails of lions are borne as charges in some coats-armour, and should be drawn as in Plate X. Fig. 26.

TAIL forked. See QUEVE FOURCHE'.

TAILLE', in the French Heraldry, hath the same signification as Party per Bend Sinister hath with us.

TALBOT, a species of hound. The Talbot is often borne in coat-armour, as in Plate X. Fig. 47. It is also borne in a variety of other attitudes.

TALBOT'S Head erased proper, billettée ar. See Plate X. Fig. 48.

TAPER-CANDLESTICK. Such is made part of the charge in the arms of the Founders' Company. See Plate VIII. Fig. 23.

TARGET. See SHIELD.

TASSEL, an ornament pendent at the corners of cushions, and at the end of stirrups, &c. When they are borne in armory, they are to be depicted as in Plate XIV. Fig. 43. a scepter between two tassels.

TAU. The Cross Tau, or Cross of St. Anthony, is always represented Patulus, and is almost the same with the Cross Potent, and is so blazoned by Ervoine. See CROSS TAU.

TAWNEY, a colour. See TENNE'.

TEAL, a water-fowl.

TEAZEL, the head or seed-vessel of a species of thistle. It is used by clothiers in dressing cloth, and borne in the arms of their Company, as in Plate XIII. Fig. 33.

TEMPLARS (Knights). See the several Orders of Knighthood.

TENNE', is the same colour as Tawney. It is composed of red, yellow, and brown, which, mixed together, make a chestnut colour. It is by some Heralds called bruft; and, in engraving it, it is expressed by diagonal lines, drawn from

- the sinister chief point, and traversed by horizontal ones, as in Plate I. Fig. 9.—N. B. This colour is seldom used in armory, and never as a field. The French say they never use it; but the English do; whereas, on the other hand, the English Heralds say, that they never used it, but that it is used in the French blazon. I have examined most of the French Writers on armory, but have never been able to find the word in any one of them. I apprehend, that it takes its name from the Spanish Tanetto, a chestnut.
- TENT, as used in the army. See Plate VIII. Fig. 9.
- TENT, ROYAL, as in the arms of the Merchant Taylors' Company. See Plate VIII. Fig. 10.
- TENTER-HOOKS, as borne in arms. See one in Plate VI. Fig. 15. and another in Plate VIII. Fig. 58.
- TERRESTRIAL GLOBE. See GLOBE.
- TEXT R. This letter is borne in several arms; and also is part of the crest of the family of Exmew, viz. a dove, holding a Text R by a sprig of laurel, as in Plate XV. Fig. 17.
- TEXT S. is borne in armory; as also TEXT C.
- THATCH-RAKE, a tool used for thatching. See Plate VIII. Fig. 44. three Thatch-rakes barwise.
- THISTLE. For a particular account of the Order of the Thistle, see the different Orders of Knighthood, in the Introductory part of this Work, and Plate I. Fig. 3. of the different Collars annexed to the same.
- THISTLE; a well-known herbaceous plant, slipped and leaved. See Plate XIII. Fig. 64.
- THUNDERBOLT, in armory, is always drawn as in Plate V. Fig. 55. viz. a twisted bar in pale, inflamed at each end, surmounting two jagged darts in saltire, between two wings expanded, with streams of fire issuing from the centre.
- TIARA, or TRIPLE CROWN, or the Papal Crown belonging to the see of Rome. See Plate XVI. Fig. 6.
- TIARA, or TRIPLE CROWN, with clouds in base issuing rays; being part of the arms of the Drapers' Company. See Plate VII. Fig. 23.
- TIERCE', a French term importing, that the shield is divided into three equal parts, when those coats are of as many different colours, or metals; for, if the chief and base be of the same colour, when divided by a fesse, then it is proper only to express the colour of the field, and to mention the fesse; otherwise they say, Tierce en fesse, and so mention the first, second, and third colours, or metals; and Tierce en Pale, if it be so divided in Pale.
- TIERCE in Girons Arondi. See Plate XV. Fig. 44.
- TIERCE in Mamle. See Plate XV. Fig. 43.
- TIGES and FEUILLES, so said by the French, when fruits are represented with stalks and leaves.
- TILLAGE RAKE-HEADS. See Plate VIII. Fig. 58. viz. in chief a Tillage Rake-Head, in base a tenter-hook.
- TILTING-SPEAR, a weapon used in tilts and tournaments. See Plate IX. Fig. 55.
- TILTING-SPEAR broke, or part of a Tilting-Spear. See Plate IX. Fig. 38.—N. B. When in blazoning, it is said that he beareth a broken Tilting-Spear, the bottom part only of the Spear is to be drawn.
- TIMBRE, in English Heraldry, signifies the helmet, when placed over the arms in a complete achievement.
- TINCTURE, the colour of any thing in coat-armour.
- TOAD. See Plate X. Fig. 71. In blazon, it is unnecessary to say a Toad erect; because a Toad, as a charge in coat-armour, is never represented in any other position than as sitting in water, holding up its head without motion, which some call the Lording of Frogs, their heads appearing above water like helmets. According to some Writers, Ar. three Toads sa. two and one, were the original arms of France before that kingdom assumed the three fleurs-de-lis: But Mensfrier, in his chapter on the rise and antiquity of the fleurs-de-lis of France, takes great pains to refute that story. Upton says, that the Lord Beteraux, in the year 1428, bore the same arms.
- TOBACCO-PLANT. See Plate XV. Fig. 25.
- TOMAHAWK, an Indian war-ax. See Plate VIII. Fig. 70.
- TOMB-STONE, when used in armory, must be drawn as in Plate XV. Fig. 16.—N. B. Three such are the arms of a family of the name of Tomb.
- TOPAZ, a precious stone, of a yellow colour: it is the name by which those who blazon by precious stones express gold.
- TORCE, the French term for a wreath. See WREATH.
- TORCHES, as in Plate VII. Fig. 54.
- TORN, a name given formerly, in Heraldry, to the spinning-wheel.
- TORQUED, wreathed, from the Latin torqueo, to wreath.
- TORQUED, is said of a dolphin haurient, which forms a figure similar to the letter S. See Plate XI. Fig. 47.
- TORTEAUXES, are roundles, or balls, painted red. In blazon, it is sufficient to say Torteauxes, and no more; that name, heraldically considered, sufficiently expressing them to be red.
- TORTOISE, a crustaceous animal. It must always be placed in the situation exhibited in Plate VII. Fig. 9. unless it be otherwise mentioned in the blazon.
- TOWER. See Plate VIII. Fig. 1.—N. B. When a Tower is borne as a charge in coat-armour, or used as a crest, it must be drawn as in the figure here referred unto.
- TOWER, triple-towered, or, as the French call it, Donjonnee de trois pices, is a tower similar to the last, but with the addition of three turrets, or small towers, issuing from the battlements, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 2.
- TOWER, with a scaling-ladder, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 8.
- TOWER domed. See Plate VIII. Fig. 7.
- TRANCHE', is used by the French Heralds to express what we term party per bend dexter.
- TRANGLE, a term used by the French to express that diminution of a fesse, which several of our Writers call a Bar, and others a Gloisset.
- TRANSPARENCY. See ADUMBRATION.
- TRECHEUR, in French blazon, the same as Tressure.
- TREE. See YEW-TREE.
- TREE, on a Mount. See Plate XIII. Fig. 2.
- TREE (Pear) erased. See Plate XIII. Fig. 3.
- TREE (Stump of) couped and erased. See Plate XIII. Fig. 16.
- TREE (Stump of) couped, erased, and sprouting on each side. See Plate XIII. Fig. 5.
- TREFLE'E, is said of a cross whose arms end in three semi-circles, each representing the trefoil, or three-leaved grass.
- TREFOIL, or THREE-LEAVED GRASS. This bearing often occurs in armory, and must be drawn as in Plate XVIII. Fig. 43.—N. B. The Trefoil in the dexter chief point is mostly used: that in the sinister chief point is termed a Trefoil stiched; and that in base is blazoned, a Trefoil, the stalk slipped, raguled, and couped. The two last are seldom seen in English armory.
- TREFOIL, double-slipped, triple-slipped, and double-slipped, raguled and couped. See Plate XIII. Fig. 45.
- TRILLISE, or TREILLE, a lattice. It differs from a fret in this respect, that the pieces which compose it are not inlaced with one another, or pass over and under alternately, as those in the fret do, but lie flat upon the undermost pieces, fixed with nails, which, if of different tinctures, must be mentioned in the blazon.
- TRESSURE, or TRESCHUR, is the diminutive of the Orle, and commonly supposed to be only half the breadth thereof. It passes round the field in the same shape and form as the escutcheon, and is generally borne double, and stony counter-flopy, as in Plate II. Fig. 68.
- TREVET, a tripod, or three-legged frame of iron, used to set over a fire for the support of saucepans, or small pots. When carried as a charge in armory, it must be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 38.

TRIANGLE COUNTER-TRIANGLE, the same as baſty indented one into the other, or barry bendy lozengy counterchanged. See Plate XV. Fig. 26.

TRIANGULAR CASTLE, i. e. a Caſtle with three towers, as in Plate VII. Fig. 65.

TRICORPORATE, is ſaid when the bodies of three beaſts are repreſented iſſuing from the dexter, ſiniſter, and baſe points of the eſcutcheon, and meeting and conjoined unto one head, at the centre point, as in Plate X. Fig. 16.

TRIDENT, a three-pronged barbed fork (by the Poets always placed in the hand of Neptune) as in Plate XI. Fig. 44. See alſo Plate VI. Fig. 71. a trident between two fiſh-hooks.

TRINITY. The heraldic device for repreſenting thereof is compoſed of roundels and lines, viz. four plates, two in chief, one in the middle point, and one in baſe, conjoined to each other by an orle and a pall ar. on the centre plate the word Deus, on the dexter chief plate the word Pater, and on the ſiniſter chief plate the word Filius; on the plate in baſe, the words Sanctus Spiritus; on the three parts of the pall the word Eſt; and, on each part of the orle, the words Non Eſt. See Plate V. Fig. 46.

TRIPPANT, or TRIPPING, a term uſed to expreſs a buck, antelope, hart, hind, &c. when they have their right fore foot lifted up, and the other three ſet as it were on the ground, as if walking. See Plate X. Fig. 55 and 56.

TRIUMPHAL CROWN, or GARLAND. It was made of laurel, and given by the Romans to thoſe Generals who had vanquiſhed their enemy. See Plate XVI. Fig. 62.

TRON-ONNE' ET DEMEMBRE'E, denotes a croſs, or other thing, cut in pieces and diſmembre'd, yet ſo as that all the pieces preſerve and retain the form of a croſs, although ſet at a ſmall diſtance from each other. See Plate XV. Fig. 42.

TROUT, a fiſh. Thre'e Trout's interlaced, as in Plate XI. Fig. 65. is the coat of Trouback.

TROWEL, a tool uſed by Maſons and Bricklayers, and borne by the latter in the armorial enſign of their company. See Plate VI. Fig. 56. in chief a file, in baſe a trowel.

TRUMPETS, well-known wind inſtruments. See Plate XIV. Fig. 55. The one in baſe is a very ancient bearing. In Fig. 59 of the ſame Plate, is a trumpet of another form, made of horn, by ſome called a Cornet.

TRUNCHEON, or MARSHAL-STAFF, a ſhort ſtaff, which, for the office of Earl Marſhal, is enamelled black at each end, and tipped with gold. Such ſtaves are often part of creſts; as for example, an arm erect, coup'd at the elbow, graſping a Truncheon. See Plate IX. Fig. 12.

TRUNDLES, quills of gold thread uſed by the Embroiderers, and borne by them in the arms of their Company. See Plate VI. Fig. 24, viz. the dexter, a ſpindle; the ſiniſter, a trundle.

TRUNK of a Tree. When a root of a tree is torn up, and the top cut off, it is called a Trunk; ſee Plate XIII. Fig. 16: and when the tree is borne coup'd of all its branches, and ſeparated from its roots, it is called Trunked.

TRUNKED, is alſo ſaid of a tree whoſe trunk is of a different tincture from the branches.

TRUSSEL. See Plate VIII. Fig. 50.

TUN, a large veſſel, of capacity for holding liquor. When borne as a charge in arms, it muſt be placed in the poſition as in Plate VII. Fig. 6. unleſs by the words of the blazon it be particularly directed to be placed otherwiſe.

TUN erect, and inflamed at the top. See Plate VII. Fig. 69.

TURNEP, when borne as a charge, muſt be drawn as in Plate XIII. Fig. 66.

TURNPIKE, when uſed in armory, ſhould be drawn as in Plate XV. Fig. 9.

TURRET. See Plate VII. Fig. 25. in chief a turret.— N. B. It is ſo blazoned and drawn in the coat of Jobnſon, and others.

TURRET, a ſmall tower on the top of another.

TURRETED, is ſaid of a tower, or wall, that has ſmall towers on it, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 2, a tower turreted with three towers; but this is now generally blazoned a tower triple-towered. Fig. 11, in the ſame Plate, is a wall turreted with two towers.

TUSKED, or TUSHED, is ſaid of the boar, tyger, or elephant, whoſe tuſks are of a different tincture from the body.

TYGER and MIRROR, when borne in armory, ſhould be drawn as in Plate XV. Fig. 9.

TYNES, a name given by the Heralds to the branches of the horns of all ſtags, bucks, rein-deer, and beaſts of venery, when the horns of thoſe creatures are of a different tincture from their bodies.

V U

VAIR, one of the furs, as in Plate I. Fig. 15. It was formerly uſed for the doubling and lining of the robes of Kings and Queens, and is generally white and blue; therefore, in blazon, no mention need be made of thoſe colours; but if the Vair be of any other colours, or metal, then the ſame muſt be mentioned, as, Or and gu. &c.

VAIR CUPPA, or VAIR TASSY. See POTENT COUNTER-POTENT, Plate I. Fig. 16.

VAIR EN PAL. See VAIR.

VALLAR CROWN, or GARLAND, as of pure gold, with palliſadoes fixed againſt the rim or circle; by ſome called Crown Vallery. According to Hiſtorians, it was given to the General of an army, who firſt broke into a fortified camp, or forced any palliſadoed place. See Plate XVI. Fig. 45.

VAMBRACE, armour for the arm. See Plate IX. Fig. 28.

VAMBRACED. When the arm is wholly covered with armour, it is ſaid to be Vambraced.

VAMPLATE, a gauntlet, or iron glove. See GAUNTLET.

VAMPLET of a Tilting-Spear, is the broad piece of ſteel which is placed at the lower part of the ſtaff of the ſpear, for covering the hand, and may be taken off and put on at pleaſure.

VAMPS, or WAMPAYS, an odd kind of ſhort hoſe, which came down no lower than to the ancle.

VANNET, a name given by heraldic Writers to the eſcallop, or cockle-ſhell, when it wants its ears.

VELLOPED. A cock is ſaid to be armed, creſted, and velloped, when his ſpurs, comb, and gills, are of a different tincture from the body.

VENUS, one of the ſeven planets. This name, thoſe who blazon the arms of Sovereigns by planets, apply to expreſs green, or vert.

VERDOY. A border, charged with vegetables, is ſaid to be a Border Verdoy, of trefoils, cinquefoils, &c. N. B. If the number of the things charged were mentioned, the blazon would be much better underſtood: as for example, Ermine, on a border ſa. eight trefoils or.

VERGETTE'. See PALLET.

VERGETTE, Fr. is what we call Paly, being several small pales, or pallets, dividing the shield into so many parts.

VERREY, or VARRY, are names given to fur, called Vair, if it is composed of any other tincture than argent and azure.

VERT, the common French term for green, and used by the English to express the same colour. In engraving, this colour is expressed by diagonal lines, drawn from the dexter chief to the sinister base. See Plate I. Fig. 7.

VERVELS, or WERVELS, small rings used by Falconers, and to which the jesses of the hawk are fastened. See Plate XII. Fig. 20. viz. a hawk's leg erased at the thigh, belled, jessed, and vervelled. See WERVELS.

VERNE BRANCH, fructed proper. See Plate XIII. Fig. 29.—N. B. This is the usual way of representing a Vine-Branch in coat-armour.

VIPER, a venomous sort of snake.—N. B. Snakes of all kinds, when placed in fesse, are called creeping, and if upright, erect.

VIRES, a name given by the French to annulets, or great rings, when carried in arms one within another.

VIRGIN and CHILD, a term used for the Virgin Mary and the infant Jesus. She is generally painted with a flowing robe, and holding a sceptre in her left hand, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 1.

VIROLE, is the hoop, ring, or mouth-piece of the bugle or hunting horn. See Plate XIV. Fig. 57.

VISCOUNT, a title of the English Peerage, being that next below the Earl. The first person created to this honour was John Beaumont, in the eighteenth year of Henry VI. anno Domini 1440.—N. B. For a Viscount's coronet, see Plate XVI. Fig. 16.

VIZOR, that part of a helmet which defends the face. See Plate IX. Fig. 5, in the same Plate, is a helmet with the vizor up.

VOIDED, is a term applied to any ordinary, as a fesse, chevron, pale, &c. when it is pierced through, so that the field appears, and nothing remains of the charge but its edge. See Plate III. Fig. 3. a saltier voided.

VOIDER, is an ordinary much resembling the flanch, but is not quite so circular towards the centre of the field. See Plate II. Fig. 66.

VOL, in the French blazon, is two wings conjoined and expanded, as in Plate XII. Fig. 13.—N. B. A single wing, as in Fig. 16. is called a Demi-Vol.

VOLANT, a term for a bird flying, as in Plate XII. Fig. 28. a swallow volant.

VORANT, or SWALLOWING, or DEVOURING, a term used by some writers in blazoning of the arms of Milan, viz. a serpent erect, in pale, vorant an infant. See Plate VII. Fig. 60.

VULNED, is the term for any thing that is wounded and bleeding: Thus, in Plate X. Fig. 66. a hind's head couped, pierced through the neck with an arrow, vulned proper.

VULNING, i. e. wounding, a term applied in Heraldry to the pelican, which is always drawn picking or wounding her breast, as in Plate XII. Fig. 22. For a pelican's head vulning her breast, from whence issue drops of blood, see Fig. 23, in the same Plate. She is also called a Pelican in her Piety, when she is in her nest feeding her young with the drops of blood that issue from the wounds made by her in her breast. See Plate X. Fig. 21. See PELICAN.

UMBRACED, the same as Vambraced; which see.

UMBRATED (from the Latin Umbra, shade) shadowed.

UNDE'E, or UNDY, as written by some, is the same as Wavy. It is the term for any charge whose edges are curling like waves of water. See Plate I. in the lines, No. 8. and in the chiefs, Fig. 14. in Plate II. Fig. 10 and 52.

UNGULED, a term applied to the hoofs of any horse, stag, hind, bull, goat, &c. &c. to express that they are of a different colour or metal from that of the body: as for example, a horse fa. maned and unguled or.

UNICORN, an imaginary animal, said to have the head, neck, and body of a horse, the legs of a buck, a lion's tail, and a long horn growing out of his forehead, as in Plate X. Fig. 29. an Unicorn passant, ducally collared, and lined or. Fig. 30. is an Unicorn salient, collared and chained.

URCHIN, or HEDGE-HOG.

URDE'E. A Crofs Urdé, the same which the French Heralds call Clebsé.

W

WACE'S KNOT. See Plate XIV. Fig. 65. the Knot in chief. The Knot in base is the Stafford Knot.

WALLET, a scrip, or pilgrim's pouch. See Plate XIV. Fig. 44.

WALLET open. See Plate VII. Fig. 59.

WALLET, and STAFF. See Plate XIV. Fig. 45.

WARDEN, the name of a pear, classed among those called baking Pears, and sometimes called in armory by the name of Warden only, in allusion to the name, three pears being the arms of the family named Warden.

WASTEL-CAKES, round cakes of bread.

WATER, when mentioned in coat-armour, must be painted as natural.

WATER-BOUGET, or WATER-BUDGET; is a vessel, anciently used by soldiers for carrying of water in long marches. They were also used by water-carriers, to carry water in from conduits to the houses of the citizens. How they carried them I will not pretend to ascertain; but, in the most ancient manuscripts now extant, I find them variously drawn, as in Plate VI. Fig. 29, 30, 31, 33, and 34. From the last two it may be concluded, that they were always carried in pairs; and certain it is, that they are so borne in the arms of Banister. Fig. 22. exhibits a Water-Budget as it is generally drawn at present. The Water-Budget is a bearing frequent in English coat-armour, and sometimes occurs in Scottish arms; but it is not to be met with in the bearings of other countries, at least under that name and form.

WATTLED and COMBED, a term used in the English blazon to express the combs and gills of a cock, particularly if they are of a different tincture from the body. See BARBED and CRESTED.

WAVED SWORD, by some erroneously called a flaming sword. See Plate XV. Fig. 52. the sword on the dexter. A flaming sword should be drawn as the sword on the sinister side of the same Figure.

WAVY. See UNDE'E.

WEARE, WEIR, or DAM, in Fesse. It is made with stakes and other twigs, wattled or interwoven as a fence against water. See Plate VIII. Fig. 31.—N. B. This is called by some Authors a Haie.

WEDGE, or STONE-BILL, a tool used to split or rend timber with. This is in figure the same as that of the Pile; but the Pile is generally fixed to the edge of the shield; whereas the Wedge is clear from it, as in Plate VI. Fig. 63. a Wedge and two clubs.

WELL, for catching of fish, is always drawn in armory, as in Plate VIII. Fig. 39.

WELKE, the name of a shell-fish. See Plate XI. Fig. 71. —N. B. In blazon, it is sufficient to say Welke, without the addition of Shell.

WELL, should always be drawn in armory as in Plate V. Fig. 63.

WERVELS, small silver rings fixed to the end of the jesses, through which Falconers put a string, in order to fasten the bells to the hawk's legs. See Plate XII. Fig. 20. See VERVELS.

WHALE'S HEAD erased. See Plate XI. Fig. 61.

WHARROW-SPINDLE, is drawn in Heraldry with a hook at the end, to spin with a distaff, as in Plate VI. Fig. 23. This implement is sometimes used by women to spin with whilst they are taking a walk for their recreation; at which time they stick the distaff in their girdles, whirling round the spindle, which is pendent at the thread. In Plate VI. Fig. 24. is a plain spindle, or fulfil.

WHEAT, an Ear of. See Plate XIII. Fig. 60.—N. B. In armory, this is termed a Wheat-stalk bladed and eared.

WHEAT, an ear of Guinea wheat, when borne in armory, should be drawn as in Plate XIII. Fig. 63.

WHEAT, called BIG WHEAT, an Ear of, as part of the coat of Bigland. See Plate XIII. Fig. 61. From the expression BIG WHEAT, in the grant of the arms made to the family of Bigland, it may perhaps be inferred, by some persons, that there is a particular species of WHEAT, known and distinguished from all other sorts of that grain, by the additional appellation of BIG; however, upon a due investigation of that matter, it will appear that there is not the least foundation for such a suggestion.—BIG is a grain well known to every farmer in the northern counties of this kingdom, to which parts its cultivation is principally, if not totally confined. From the great similarity which, in point of natural properties and qualities, as well as in all other respects, there is between BIG and BARLEY, it is fully evident, that their affinity is very near, and that even a suggestion of their being in reality one and the same grain is not ill founded. The proper time of sowing each of them is about Lent; and they come to maturity and ripen together in the autumn.—Their manner of growth, as well as the form and appearance of their blades, stem, and straw, are exactly the same; and the ripe ears of the one do not differ from those of the other in any respect whatsoever, except that the ears of the BIG contain four perpendicular rows or tiers of bearded corn, set regularly and equidistant from each other; whereas those of BARLEY have but two. Further, BIG and BARLEY malt equally well, and the beers brewed from each of them have the same flavour. On the other hand, the difference between BIG and WHEAT is extremely wide.—BIG is a Lent corn, and comes to maturity within the space of about five months from the time of its being sowed; whereas WHEAT is usually sowed in the autumn of one year, and doth not, properly speaking, come to maturity until the latter end of the summer of the following year; so that nine or ten months are required for its growth. BIG comes up in about three days after it is sowed; WHEAT seldom lies in the ground less than eight days before it shews itself. The grains or corns of BIG are bearded, and grow on the ear in regular and equidistant rows; those of WHEAT are smooth at their points, and set closely and irregularly all round the ear.—The beer brewed from MALTED BIG is equal in all respects with that brewed from MALTED BARLEY; but MALTED WHEAT, when brewed into beer, produces no other than a thick, heavy, glutinous, and mummy liquor, of a disagreeable flavour, and unfit for common beverage.—Lastly, bread made of BIG is black, coarse, harsh, and rough to the taste; hungry, and affording but little nourishment; whereas, that made from WHEAT is universally acknowledged to be wholesome, nutritive, and excellent in all its stages. From what hath been here offered, the judicious reader will be satisfied of the absurdity of the expression, BIG WHEAT, and coupling those words together, as supposing BIG to be a species of WHEAT. Lastly, that which puts the matter out of all doubt, is the certainty that BIG and BARLEY are in reality one and the same grain; and that the seeming difference between them is merely accidental, and solely owing to the nature of the soil on which the grain is sowed. It is well known that BARLEY, when sown in some grounds, will turn to BIG; that is, will produce plants bearing four rows of corn, growing perpendicularly and equidistant on each ear; and that BIG, when sown on some particular lands, will change to BARLEY; that is, the ears of each plant will be furnished with two rows of grain, and no more: nay, it is further certain, that each of them, when again sowed on other lands, will return back to their pristine state, and renew and carry on these variations according to the nature of the different soils wherein they are cultivated. This actually being the case, the Kings of Arms, who passed the grant of arms to the family of Bigland, are the proper persons to be called on to explain the meaning of their expression BIG-WHEAT, and their reasons for using or coining it.

WHEEL. See CART-WHEEL and CATHARINE-WHEEL.

WHINTAIN. See QUINTAIN.

WHIRLPOOL, a gulph where the water is constantly running round in a rapid motion. It is always to be borne as in Plate V. Fig. 70. and therefore there is no occasion for naming the field, because the whole is azure and argent, and takes up all the field. It is commonly called in Latin Gurges. A like whirlpool is the arms to a family of the name of Gorges.

WINDMILL, when a charge in coat-armour, is always to be drawn as in Plate VIII. Fig. 29.

WINDMILL-SAILS. See Plate VIII. Fig. 30.

WINE-PIERCER, an instrument to tap or bore holes in wine-casks: when used in armory, it is drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 57.

WING sinister. See Plate XII. Fig. 16.

WING of an Imperial Eagle.—N. B. The Germans and French always draw the wings of the eagle with a small feather between the pinion feathers, as in Plate XII. Fig. 17.

WING, Dexter. See Plate XII. Fig. 18.

WINGED COLUMN, or PILLAR. See COLUMN.

WINGS Conjoined, by the French called a Vol. See Plate XII. Fig. 13.—N. B. If they are conjoined and expanded, as in this Figure, it is sufficient to say, Wings conjoined; but if with the points downwards, as in Fig. 14, they are then called Wings conjoined in ture.

WITTAL'S HEAD, or CUCKOLD'S HEAD, couped below the shoulders, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 13.

WOLF. The Wolf is often borne as a charge in arms, &c. and if painted brown, is called proper. See Plate X. Fig. 38.

WOLF'S HEAD erased, collared wavy. See Plate X. Fig. 39. Some heraldic Writers assert, that it ought to be drawn with the neck hanging down, in order to distinguish it from the heads of other beasts.

WOLF-TRAP, is a German bearing. This trap is made of a stick, bent like the head of a pick-ax, and having in the centre a ring, whereto the collar is fixed. See Plate XV. Fig. 29, a Lochabar-ax between a point on the dexter, and a wolf-trap on the sinister.

WOOD, a term used in Heraldry to express a small group of trees growing on a mount, as in Plate XIII. Fig. 1. Ar. on a mount vert, a Wood proper.

WOOD-BILL, or FOREST-BILL. See Plate VI. Fig. 44.

WOODMAN, a name given by several Writers to the wild man, or savage. See Plate XIV. Fig. 5. a Demi-Woodman, with his club; and Fig. 6. Gu. three Demi-Woodmen, with clubs ar: being the coat-armour of Wood.

WOOL-CARDS, are instruments used for carding wool. See Plate VI. Fig. 19. In Fig. 21 of the same Plate, is another Wool-Card, which in armory is called a Stock-Card.

WOOL-COMB, or JERSEY COMB. See Plate VII. Fig. 25, in base a wool-comb, in chief a turret.

WOOL-PACK. See Plate VI. Fig. 17.

WOOL-PACK corded. See BALE.

WOMAN'S BREAST, distilling drops of milk, drawn as in Plate XIV. Fig. 31. on a pale a woman's breast distilling drops of milk.

WOUND. This word is used by Boswell to express the roundle that is tinged purpure.

WREATH, an attire for the head. The Wreath is composed of two bands of silk interwoven; the one tinged of the principal metal, and the other of the principal colour, in the arms; but, if there be not any metal in the coat-armour, then the two bands must be of the two principal colours in the arms. These, when formed into a Wreath, as in Plate V. Fig. 23, are placed between the crest and helmet.—N. B. The crest must always be on a Wreath, as in Fig. 18, when it is not placed on a cap, or within a coronet. This being a general rule, the crests, through this Work, are not said to be on a Wreath, because they must have a Wreath under them, unless the blazon expressly directs that they shall be placed on a cap, or within a coronet.—N. B. All wreaths on which crests are placed, should be composed of six folds in front; three of metal and three of colour, beginning with the metal first; as in Plate X. Fig. 18. A wreath placed on the temples of a man's head, as in Plate XIV. Fig. 10, should have two bows and strings at the finifter end, as is particularly expressed in Plate XVI. Fig. 51.

WREATH, the term given to the tail of a boar.

WREATHS Circular. All Wreaths are circular, being made to go round the head. In the coat of Jocelyn, it is blazoned a Circular Wreath, and must be as in Plate V. Fig. 23.

WYVERN, an imaginary animal of heraldic invention. It is said to be a kind of flying serpent, the upper part resembling what is called a dragon with two legs, and the lower, an adder, or snake, as in Plate XI. Fig. 11.

WYVERN, sans legs, Plate XI. Fig. 14.

WYVERN, sans wings, Plate XI. Fig. 15.—N. B. In blazon, you must not say, without legs, or without wings, but sans legs, or sans wings, as the case happens to be.

WYVERN, with his tail nowed, Plate XII. Fig. 63.

WYVERN'S head and wings indorfed. See Plate XI. Fig. 32.

Y

YARD, a certain measure, of three feet in length. When it is borne in arms, it is to be drawn as in Plate VI. Fig. 61.

YEW-TREE, on a mount. See Plate XIII. Fig. 64.

YOKE. Ox-yoke. See Plate VIII. Fig. 41.

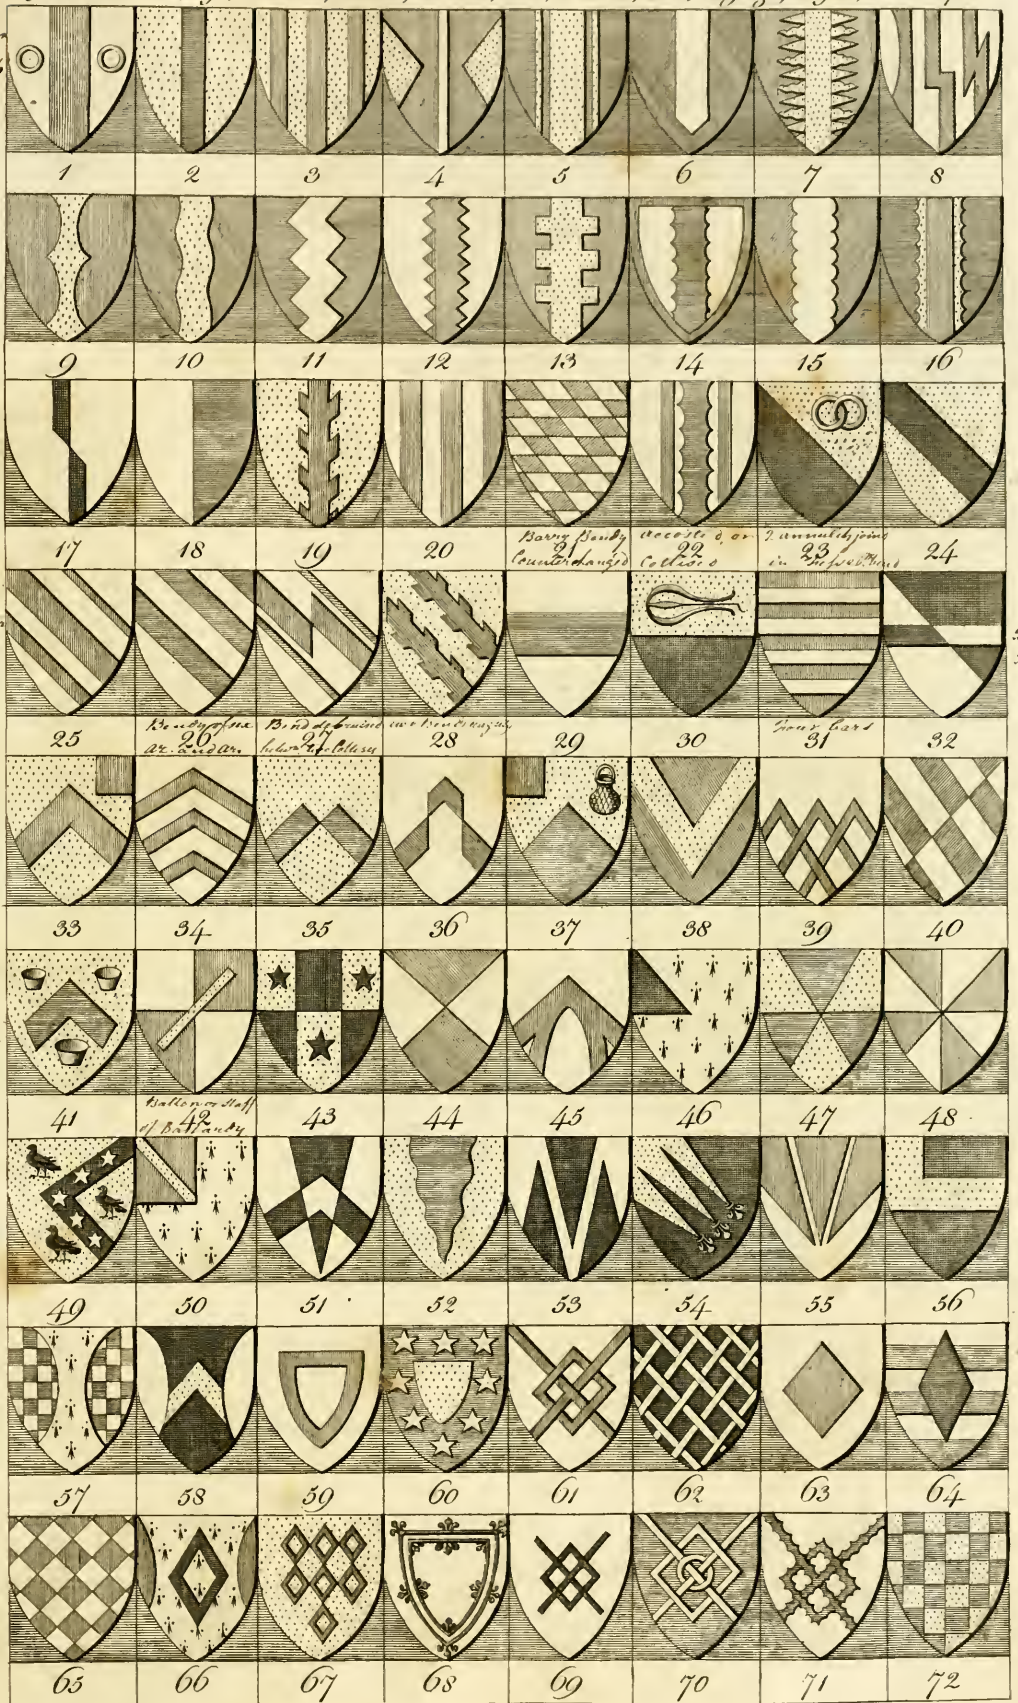

Z

ZODIAC, in bend sinister, with three of the Signs on it, viz. Libra, Leo, and Scorpio, see in Plate V. Fig. 72.

ZULIS, a German bearing; nearly resembling a chefs-rook; teaux, two and one.

MONTGOMERY, instead of the arms, &c. as there printed,

r. On the impression of the corporation seal, sent from thence to the Editor, there are two keys in saltier, and in- dorsed; but no colours marked. Some writers pretend that the arms of this town are, Az. a lion rampant or, within a border of the last.
POOL, l. 5, for with r. without—l. 6. after ball, add all proper.
ROMNEY, l. 2, after pale add or.
WELLS, add—N. B. I am doubtful whether the arms of this city are such as are here blazoned; as, on a strict enquiry made in that city, and consulting the records thereof, I could not find the blazon, or description, of any arms that belonged thereto. The corporation seal, which is very ancient, represents a tree, from the root whereof runs a spring of water: on the sinister side thereof stands a stork, picking up a fish; on the dexter side of the tree is another bird, resembling a Cornish chough.

ARCH, on three degrees, with folding-door open. See Plate XV. Fig. 33.

ARM ARMED. For Plate VIII. r. Plate IX.

ARM, dexter, embowed, holding a truncheon. See Plate XIV. Fig. 21.

ARMOUR for the head of a horse. For Fig. 5. r. 19. See CHAMFRAIN.

ATCIEVEMENTS, commonly called HATCHMEMTS, are the arms, crest, &c. of a person deceased, painted on canvas, and fixed against the wall of his late dwelling-house, in order to denote the death. For example, ATCIEVEMENT for an Earl unmarried, and Knight of the Garter. See Plate XVII. Fig. 1.—N. B. An Atchievement for any degree of the Peerage, is the same in all respects, except the variation of the coronet peculiar to the degree of the deceased Peer.—The Atchievement for a Peeres is to be painted without helmet, crest, mantle, or motto.

ATCIEVEMENT, Durham being a county palatine, the Atchievement for a deceased Bishop of that see should have a sword and crozier placed behind the arms in saltier, and the sinister side of the ground coloured black, as in Plate XVII. Fig. 2.—N. B. In the Atchievements of Bishops whose dioceses are not palatine, or principalities, the sword is to be omitted; but two croziers may be placed in saltier, behind the arms. The paternal coats of all Bishops are to be impaled on the sinister side of the shield.

ATCIEVEMENT for a Single Woman. According to ancient usage, the arms should be painted in the form of a lozenge, with a gold ornament on the edges, and inclosed within a gold cord tied in four knots; the whole on a black ground, as in Plate XVII. Fig. 3.—N. B. This very old mark of distinction is at present grown almost into disuse in England, but is still held in high estimation in all other nations where the law of arms is duly attended unto.

ATCIEVEMENT for a Private Person who dies, leaving a Widow. In this case the arms of the defunct should be painted impaled with those of his wife, with helmet, crest, mantle, motto, &c. and the dexter side of the ground must be black, in order to denote his death. See Plate XVIII. Fig. 1.

ATCIEVEMENT for a Person who dies, leaving a Second Wife. In this case the paternal coat of the deceased, with mantle, helmet, crest, and motto, should be painted on a black ground. On the dexter side of the shield should be painted an escutcheon, charged with his paternal coat, impaling those of his first wife; and the dexter side of this escutcheon must be coloured white, and the sinister black, to denote the decease of the first wife: on the sinister side of the shield must be placed another escutcheon of his paternal coat, impaling the arms of his second wife; the dexter side of which escutcheon is to be black, to denote his decease; and the sinister must be white, to shew that the second wife is living. See Plate XVII. Fig. 4.

ATCIEVEMENT for a Woman dying in her Husband's life-time. The arms of the husband are to be painted impaling those of the deceased, and the shield ornamented. The sinister side of the ground is to be coloured black, as in Plate XVIII. Fig. 2.—N. B. All atchievements for women of any degree are to be painted without any mantle, helmet, crest, or motto, as hath been before observed in regard to Peeresesses.

ATCIEVEMENT for a Bachelor deceased. His arms, in mantle, helmet, crest, motto, &c. should be painted on a black ground, as in Plate XVIII. Fig. 3. N. B. Mottos used in Atchievements may either be family mottos, or funeral mottos.

ATCIEVEMENT for a Widow. Her arms should be painted, impaled with those of her late husband, in a lozenge within a gold ornament, the ground all black, as in Plate XVIII. Fig. 4.

ADDITIONS and EMENDATIONS.
