AN
ALPHABETICAL DICTIONARY
OF
Coats of Arms
BELONGING TO
FAMILIES IN GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND;
FORMING AN EXTENSIVE
ORDINARY

UPON AN ENTIRELY NEW PLAN,

IN WHICH THE ARMS ARE SYSTEMATICALLY SUBDIVIDED THROUGHOUT,
AND SO ARRANGED IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER THAT THE NAMES OF FAMILIES WHOSE SHIELDS ARE FOUND ON BUILDINGS, MONUMENTS, SEALS, PAINTINGS, PLATE, ETC.,
WHETHER MEDIEVAL OR MODERN,
CAN BE READILY ASCERTAINED.

P R E F A C E.

IN consequence of the decease of Mr. Papworth in July 1870, after a painful illness of several years' duration, it was found that this Work could not be completed according to the original scheme of publication, and the Subscription list was therefore finally closed.

As, however, there was a general desire among the Subscribers that the Work should be completed, the continuation of it was entrusted to Mr. Papworth's relative and friend, Mr. Alfred W. Morant, whose qualifications for this undertaking were not unknown to some of them. It may therefore be sufficient to mention here that his taste for such subjects had led him to take a friendly interest in this Work almost from its commencement, and to watch and further its progress; and he had, in the course of his own heraldic pursuits, arranged a large collection of foreign coats of arms on a similar plan, and compiled several other manuscripts on this and kindred subjects.

It was at that time ascertained that at least three-fifths of the manuscript had been published in the 696 printed pages; and the remaining two-fifths of it were left by Mr. Papworth sufficiently arranged for reference. Mr. Morant, besides the necessary and laborious technical revision of the press from p. 696, has had to insert in their proper places the remainder of the coats contained in the several Rolls referred to under the letters A to Z, copies of which Mr. Papworth had prepared for the purpose: and also to arrange and enter numerous additional coats collected in the course of many years by Mr. Papworth. Mr. Morant has likewise added the coats of some new creations, together with a number of others from his own collections. The manuscript also required the necessary preparation for the press, and in parts some rewriting to adapt them to the author's final plan as carried out in type. This plan has been adhered to throughout the remainder of the Work, mainly through the kind assistance of Mr. Weston Styleman Walford, whose appreciation of it in the first instance is noticed in the Introduction. He has kindly supplied many special details connected with the arrangement of the coats, and his willingness in affording advice has been extended to the Editor and to Mr. Wyatt Papworth, thus ensuring, it is hoped, the same degree of accuracy in their revision as was attained by the author. Only the revision of the type, and the matters connected with the publication were undertaken by Mr. Wyatt Papworth.

The unpublished portion contained very few references to the authority W (Withie's additions to Glover's Ordinary, contained in a copy in the British Museum); an omission considered not important.

It has been thought advisable to reprint Mr. Papworth's original Introduction, with such alterations only as were deemed necessary, rather than to insert an elaborate essay by another hand.

Many inquiries having been made whether an Index of Names was to be supplied, it may be well to record that Mr. Papworth had no such intention. This Dictionary of Coats of Arms having been originally founded on the Encyclopædia of Heraldry published by Sir Bernard Burke, which comprises a Dictionary of Armorial wherein the Names are given alphabetically followed by the several coats of arms, the two works will doubtless be much used together, especially as the latter is to a great extent an Index to the former. The additional entries from the Rolls and other sources into this Dictionary, although numerous, hardly appeared to need an Index to themselves, many of the names being merely variations in the spelling of those to be found in the Encyclopædia.

The two Tables which will be found at pp. xvii and xix have been inserted in order to facilitate the use of the Work.

A List of the Subscribers to the Work, under the final arrangement that was made for completing it, is appended, together with the number of copies which their payments entitled them to receive. As anticipated in the scheme for continuing the publication, the balance then in hand, though somewhat increased under that arrangement, has been found insufficient to defray the expenses. The sale of the remaining copies will probably repay Mr. Wyatt Papworth the amount advanced by him for the purpose of completing the publication, and may, it is hoped, eventually yield some remuneration for the great labor and time expended by his late brother in the preparation of the manuscript, and in the collection of the material. The assistance, however, of the Subscribers in extending a knowledge of the Work is earnestly requested.

Additional Title-Pages have been furnished for the convenience of those who may be desirous of binding the Work in two volumes.

Mr. Wyatt Papworth has only to add his thanks to the Subscribers for their patience during the long, and at last fatal, illness of his brother, which tended so much to retard the progress of this publication; and for their support of the scheme proposed by him for the completion of the Work now happily achieved.

INTRODUCTION.

THE object of this Work is to enable the generality of persons, though but slightly acquainted with heraldry, to ascertain with facility the names of the families by whom any given coats of arms are, or have been, borne. For this purpose a very large number of coats have been for the first time arranged in alphabetical order, so that any of them may be readily found; and the names of the respective families are attached:

The Plan of the Work is simply this: the arms are blasoned (i.e., technically described), and are arranged in alphabetical order by the names of such of the respective charges as are first mentioned in the blason; so that the inquirer has but to blason the coat, and the first charge that he names shows under what title in this Dictionary the coat is to be sought. When there is no charge, the tincture of the field is to be considered as the charge, and such a coat will be found under the head of that metal, color, or fur. Again; when there is no charge, if the field be party, the ordinary employed to designate the direction of the partition gives the place of a coat of this kind in the alphabet; thus, for example, per bend will be found under BEND. In like manner, when there is no charge, coats that are barry, bendy, gyronny, paly, etc., will be found respectively under BAR, BEND, GYRON, PALE, etc. Coats which are billey, crusily, or otherwise semy, follow a similar rule; for if there be no other charge, those of which the field is semy are regarded as charges; but they are considered as parts of the field when there is another charge.*

In a few cases, the different modes of blasoning of which arms are capable may make it necessary to refer to more than one title.

Some of the charges, such as the ordinaries and others much in use, form heads so comprehensive, that several divisions and subdivisions became indispensable: there it will be seen that further alphabetical arrangements have been observed; sometimes by the tinctures only, and sometimes by the charges

* This, it will be observed, is confined to the field; on the contrary, charges which are billey, crusily, etc., are regarded as surcharged.

also. This part of the Plan will be best learned by inspection ; for it is hardly possible to express it precisely in a few words. It may, however, be stated, that when the coat has only one charge, or charges of one kind, the second alphabet is by the tinctures ; but in more complicated cases there is an alphabet of those charges or surcharges which fall under that part of any division or subdivision, which makes it to differ from a preceding one ; and as often as such a charge is a chief, quarter, canton, or base which is surcharged, there is a further alphabet of these surcharges ; and in every case there is finally an alphabetical arrangement of the coats by the tinctures. It will be observed that under some subdivisions the coats appear to be not in alphabetical order by their tinctures. It will, however, be found that they are arranged in groups according to some of the charges named in the blason ; and that each group has the coats in it alphabetically arranged by their tinctures. A new group begins as often as a variation either in kind or in number occurs in the charges. The apparent irregularity is due to the absence of headings to the several groups. All beasts, birds, fishes, flowers, fruits, etc., though specially named, come together in their respective places, just as if the proper headings, according to this Dictionary, had been inserted. As it is not easy without practice to supply those headings mentally, a coat may often be more readily found by looking at once for the tincture of the field ; for these subdivisions rarely contain many coats, and it does not in general take much time to run the eye over all the first named tinctures.

It will be seen that of several objects constituting a charge or surcharge the first in the order of blason, and of a complicated charge or surcharge the most important portion, have respectively been taken for the alphabetical words.

The usual marks of cadency, when employed merely as modern differences, are not to be regarded as charges or surcharges for any of the above purposes ; and the occasional difference, the bordure, is not to be relied on as a distinctive charge, except in the simpler coats : arms within one may often be found in this Work where they would have been if there had been no bordure. Charges over all form no element of subdivision.

For those who are moderately conversant with Heraldry the preceding explanation might suffice ; but to render the Plan more intelligible to persons who are less skilled in the technical description of arms, and to assist the memory of others, such of the RULES OF BLASON as are applicable to the subject are subjoined, with some remarks in further elucidation of the method observed in this Work.

1. The tincture, if but one, of the field is first to be noticed.
2. If the field be of more than one tincture, the partition is to be named with any peculiarity, such as indented or the like, and then the tinctures ; as for example, party per pale indented arg. and gu.

The word party is generally omitted in this Work, and only per fess, per pale, etc., used in such cases. Instead of per cross the term quarterly, as being more commonly understood, has been employed ; and such coats without charges are to be found under that head. When the arms in question consist of two or more coats marshalled quarterly, they are to be sought separately. The arrangement as to such arms as are barry, bendy, paly, etc., and also as to such as are semy as regards the field, has been explained above.

3. Next comes the principal ordinary (not being a chief) or, if none, the central charge (if any) on the field, with any peculiarity and its tincture ; as arg. a chevron engrailed gu., or arg. a lion rampant gu.

4. Then should follow any other charges on the field, between or within which such ordinary or other central charge is placed, as arg. a chevron betw. three mullets az.

These two rules have been carefully observed ; although it is not unusual to say, for example, arg. between two cotices an anchor gu., in this Work the blason is arg. an anchor between two cotices gu. In like manner a “bend coticed”, is a “bend between two cotices”. The other diminutives have been treated in the same way ; and a “bar-gemel” is reckoned as “two bars”. The word between is sometimes omitted, for brevity, in the blason of such coats as are referred to in rule 4, when the accompanying charges are of different kinds ; as for example, arg. a fess gu. in chief two mullets az. in base a fleur-de-lis vert.

5. If the principal ordinary or other central charge be itself charged, then on is to precede it ; but the surcharge on it is not to be named till after the other charges (if any) on the field, between or within which such ordinary or other central charge is placed ; as arg. on a chevron between three mullets gu. an estoile or.

There are, however, some ill-devised complicated coats of modern date, which, to avoid obscurity, are generally blasoned by naming the surcharge immediately after the charge on which it is placed. There are also coats of earlier date, in which an ordinary is surmounted by another of the same kind ; these are sometimes blasoned, for example, thus : gu. a fess or surmounted of another az. between three crescents arg. ; but they will here be found in accordance with the rule, as gu. on a fess or betw. three crescents arg. another fess az. Marks of cadency or the like used as differences will be presently mentioned.

6. If there be no central charge, the charges on the field should be mentioned mediately after it, as they may be placed, regard being had to the rules which follow ; as arg. three mullets gu. two and one (or in pale, in bend, in fess, the like).

In describing the places that charges occupy, such terms as in chief, in base, between, and within, frequently occur, and are used in the subdivisions of the larger heads in this Dictionary. There are other terms hardly less common, such as in bend, in fess, in pale, etc., indicating the relative positions of charges when there is no such ordinary in the coat; but the arrangement of this Work does not in any way depend on them.

7. Charges in chief and in base are to be named after those in the middle of the field; and those in chief before those in base, but subject to the next rule.

In general, a chief is not understood to be a charge in chief; that ordinary being in the nature of an addition to the field. But for the purpose of the methodical distribution of the arms under the more important heads, it has been found convenient to use the term in chief in an extended sense, and to comprise under it, not only charges properly so designated from their position, but also a chief itself, whether surcharged or not. It is essential to bear this in mind, and also that in base is used in its utmost latitude.

8. A chief, quarter, or canton with its surcharges (if any) is to be named after the charges (if any) on other parts of the escucheon.

9. All charges and surcharges inclosed within a bordure are to be named before it.

When a bordure is the sole or primary charge, the coat will be found under that head in the Dictionary.

10. A chief, quarter, or canton overlying a bordure must be named after it.

11. In like manner, any charge over the others, or as it is termed over all, must be mentioned after them.

When one ordinary or other charge is on the field, and another over all, such arms are often to be found represented and blasoned differently; so that it becomes uncertain which is the primary charge. This occurs occasionally even where a lion or other beast is debruised by a bar, a bend, or the like. It is therefore expedient, when there is a charge over all, and the coat cannot be found under what appears to be the primary charge, to turn to that which overlies it, as if that were on the field. In blasoning such coats the word surmounted should be avoided, as it may lead to a coat of this kind being mistaken for a surcharge on a charge only.

12. The marks of cadency, when used as modern differences to distinguish younger sons and junior branches of families, and also the mark of Baronetcy, are to be named last.

From what has been said it will be evident, that to find any given coat the course is to observe the charge which is first named in blasoning it, a to turn to that title in the Dictionary.* If the charge be of a kind but rarely used as a primary one, it will form a head which is divided only according to the number of them borne in the various coats in which it so occurs; and under these divisions such coats follow in alphabetical order by their tinctures: so that if the coat be a simple one, consisting of any number of charges of that sort only, it is readily found.

Should the first charge be one of more frequent occurrence, as for example mullets, then instead of the division only according to the number in different coats, there will be found divisions according to the manner in which they are borne as primary charges with others accompanying them, following a method of distributing the various coats under the larger heads, which is observed throughout this Work; and suppose the coat in question to be, for example, gu. five annulets arg. a canton erm., then under the division "five annulets and in chief" (for a canton is always borne in chief), follow the class of coats to which this belongs, in alphabetical order by the names of the respective charges in chief. A reference to the Work itself will furnish numerous examples of such cases, and of others analogous to them.

The principal ordinaries and other charges of most common occurrence form such comprehensive heads, that the divisions and subdivisions under each of them are numerous; and it will facilitate the use of this Dictionary, if the Plan of it, in this respect, be noticed with more particularity, as it extends more or less to all the important charges. It is obvious that if a charge occupy the centre, or indeed any other part of the field, whatever charge or charges accompany it must, speaking generally, be either upon, above, or below, or on one or more sides of it, that is, in heraldic language on it, in chief, in base, or on the dexter or the sinister side; or it will be between or within them; or it may be within a bordure, orle, or tressure. The cases of the dexter and the sinister side, as well as some other possible ones, may be for the present purpose disregarded: the rest enter largely into the method of distributing the various coats. The head PALE, for example, may be made to show, as fully as any other, the scheme or method which has been devised; and this may be most effectually done by bringing all the divisions and subdivisions under the eye at once in a tabular form, premising only that, though they are chiefly derived from the various conditions in which a Pale, charged or not, or palets may stand in relation to other charges, the partition of the field in the direction of a pale or palewise has supplied the divisions PER PALE and PALY.†

* Or to the more general title under which that charge is comprised.

† The PALE was selected by the author for the purpose of exemplifying the scheme, and it has been thought best to retain it, though the coats arranged under this head in the Work have not required all the subdivisions here mentioned.

PALETS { These are divided according to the number, with in each case subdivisions as above.

PALY

Under each of the above divisions and subdivisions follow the arms answering to it in alphabetical order by the charges and the tinctures, or if no charge, according to the tinctures only. The mode in which this has been accomplished will be best understood from an inspection of some of the examples given under the head PALE, or under the more comprehensive heads, BEND, CHEVRON, and FESS. More, indeed, will be learned by running the eye over the several subordinate headings under those heads than could be communicated by any description. It must be remembered that in chief comprehends every charge there, even a chief itself. PER PALE and PALY are not subdivided; for, as has been explained, when there are charges on such fields, these coats do not come under the head PALE, but under those respectively of the several primary charges. A bordure does not form a distinctive charge in the above arrangement, except where the word within occurs: some coats consisting of a primary charge and one in chief (or in base) within a bordure are placed under between or within and in chief (or in base, if such is the case). It will be observed that over all forms no subdivision; the consequence of which is, that though a coat with a pale (for example) only on the field may become comparatively complex by reason of a charge over all being itself charged; still it is to be sought under A PALE, and so in analogous cases. Paly and also barry, bendy, etc., are not confined to even numbers of the pieces, because in early heraldry coats occur, intended for the same, which have the number sometimes even and sometimes odd. As one of the consequences of the diminutives of the principal ordinaries not being distinguishable inter se in early coats, under BEND cotices will be found as bendlets.

In general, the terms of the blason point out very clearly under what division or subdivision a coat is to be sought; but occasionally this is more readily suggested by the coat itself or a sketch of it. Thus a pale billety falls under ON A PALE, since "billety" is "charged with billets exceeding ten." Again, a pale and three charges, say for example mullets, whether two and one (the arrangement when nothing more is said), or in chief, in bend, in fess, or in base, come under ON A PALE BETWEEN; for one of the mullets is on the pale, and that is between the two others. The same remark is applicable to such a coat as per fess gu. and or a pale counterchanged and three eagles displayed of the last. The PILE would have furnished examples similar to those furnished by the PALE. Should the unskilled inquirer hesitate by reason of the omission of the word between in such coats as arg. a fess gu. in chief two mullets az. in base a fleur-de-lis vert, a glance at the coat as tricked (i.e., sketched) will remove all difficulty.

Those that have had but little experience in early heraldic examples, to say nothing of the more recent, know how difficult it often is to determine what species of beast, bird, fish, flower, fruit, monster, reptile, or tree, a charge was intended to represent. This has led to all kinds being brought together under the respective titles of BEAST, BIRD, FISH, FLOWER, FRUIT, MONSTER, REPTILE, and TREE, and there distinguished by their several special names: so that different species may be sought for at most within a few pages, instead of having to turn to several remote parts of the volume. Demi-animals come under the same head as the entire animals of the same kind, and have precedence of them; so that, for example, demi-lions come before lions. With the exception of demi-animals, all parts of animals, including those of the HUMAN FIGURE, will be found under their heraldic designations; and a similar rule has been applied to all parts of vegetables. HEADS comprise not only those of animals, but also those of inanimate objects, as, for example, spear-heads. Fleurs-de-lis (not being lilies proper or lis of the garden) are not ranked as flowers, but as FLEURS-DE-LIS; nor are cinquefoils, which, as also roils of all numbers, are to be sought under FOILS; and in lieu of tre, quatre, cinque, etc., the figures, 3, 4, 5, etc., are used to distinguish the several kinds. Bezants, etc., are to be found under the general term ROUNDLE; and several other charges which it seemed expedient to class under general heads are arranged under such heads.

The inconveniences which would otherwise have arisen from such classifications are, it is hoped, obviated to a great extent by the Table which is given at p. xix, showing under what general titles in the several alphabets the various species of classified charges are to be sought, when this does not appear above, or by cross references in the Work itself.

In early heraldry there are some charges of different kinds which have been often confounded and variously blasoned. Thus the distinction between the diminutives inter se, and sometimes between them and the principal ordinary itself, was not recognised; as, for example, a bendlet and a cotice, and also a bendlet and a bend (as we now regard them), were often identical, there being no rule for the proportion of such charges. So roses and cinquefoils or quatrefoils, lozenges and fusils, a fess indented and lozenges or fusils in fess, a fess indented and a fess engrailed, masculy and lozengy, vair and nebuly, and some others, have been mistaken for each other. Such causes of uncertainty in the charges give occasion to search being made for very early coats under different heads; which is an inconvenience no classification could avoid.

The author's idea of this Work was not altogether new: almost simultaneously with his completion of his arrangement, but without any knowledge of the undertaking, W. S. Walford, Esq., F.S.A., advocated in the *Archæological Journal the necessity for some publication of the kind. That gentleman's patient investigation of the Plan of the proposed Work led to so favorable an estimate of it, as to induce him to promote its appearance, not only in the usual manner, but also by giving valuable advice whenever the author had occasion to ask his assistance.

The author always deprecated a hasty opinion of the Work: for though, in an attempt so novel and so laborious, he could not expect to produce one that was faultless, he was convinced that by a careful examination of it, many, if not all, objections that may occur on a superficial view will be satisfactorily removed.
