HISTORY OF POWYS FADOG.

CHAPTER I.

DESCRIPTION OF THE DOMINION OF WALES.

(Harl. MS., 141.)

WALES being ye refuge and place of safeguard of ye remnat of ye Auncient Brytains (ye first inhabitants of ye ile of Great Brytannye) being driuen thither, and dispossessed by ye Saxon kings, and hauing taken from them ye fertile cuntryes of England, held ye same, and therein preserued their auncient blood royall of ye kings and auncient families, ye posteritie of the nation, their lawes, and ancient language, from ye furie and cruel murther of ye Saxons, between which twoe nations there continued implacable hatred and warrs; insomuch as notwithstanding that the Hepterchia, or seuen kingdomes of ye Saxons, wear reduced into one monarchie by Englered, king of ye west Saxons, and by him vnited and first called by ye name of England, yet had these Saxon kings of England neuer any obedience or subjection of ye Prince that ruled Wales, but they held Wales as absolute monarks, not acknowledginge any supream vnder God; where the lawfull of Kydwallader, ye last Kinge of Brittany of the Brittish line, did rule and govern the countrey and people as their lawfull Kings and Princes all ye time of ye Saxon government. And in the end, when yt pleased God to send ye Normans, under ye conduct of William, their Duke, to make a conquest of England, and dispossessed ye Saxon issue of the Crowne, and vnrooted most of their nobilitye, and brought in their owne nation, and soe many alterations as is found to haue happed to this land by that conquest; and after that William ye Conqueror had quietlie possessed ye kingdome of England, and had pacified all troubles and tumults, yet did not (neither would ye Welesmen nor their prince) seeme to take any notice of that Conquest obteyned ouer ye Saxons (their professed enemies), or that yt concerned them any way, but accompted of yt as a warr between twoe strainge nations.

Longe before ye time of William ye Conqueror, ye gou'mt of all ye parts of Wales was vnited, and fell to Rodery ye great, called in hystories Rodericus magnus, whoe diuided Wales between his three sonnes—Cadel, to whom he gaue South Wales, conteyning 25 Cantreds; Anarawde, to whom he gaue North Wales, conteyning 15 Cantreds; and to Merwyn he gaue Powys, conteyning 14 Cantreds.

At ye time of ye Conquest, or shortlie after, in ye Conqueror's days, ye issues of these 3 sonnes possessed Wales, according to ye said diuision, viz., Rees, ye soune of Theodor, ruled South Wales; Griffith, ye sonne of Conan, gou'ned North Wales; and Bletlin, ye sonne of Kynuain, possessed Powys.

These 3 Princes and their people would neuer acknowledge ye Norman Conqueror nor his issue to haue any superiority ou'r Wales, as is aforesaid; and for this, and for the continuance of the inueterate hatred that remayned unquenched between them and the remnant of the Saxons that inhabited and were still ye corps of ye common people of England, there arose cruell warrs between ye King of England and ye Princes of Wales, and daily incursions and invasions were made one each part uppon and by other, and ye King of England oftentimes leuied great armies, and invaded ye borders of Wales, and forced the inhabitants to flee to ye mountains and hills out of ye low and plaine, and possessed diu's of their countreys. Againe, ye Welshmen, when Fortune fauored them, would eftsoones repell them, and spoyle their countreys and people, and take them captives, and make diu's roads ouer Seuerne, and take and lead great spoyles out of England. And when their estate was fully settled, they resolved to make conquest of Wales, and to subdue ye peopl and countrey to their obedience, as they before had donne by England; but the Countrey of Wales, being, by reason of ye roughnes of ye ground, the high and steepe hills, and ye straight passags, woods, and boggs, was naturalie of yt selfe soe stronge, that hardlie any great armie could be brought to enter and annoy ye Welshmen; and ye Kings of England, hauing brought their sundrie armies, wear forced diu's times to returne home with losse of men and charge, as may appear by ye cronicles and histories of this Realme, as that how William Rufus and Henry ye Second, whoe entered Wales 3 times with Royal armies; King John's warrs made there vppon Lluellin, ye son of Yerwerth, prince of North Wales; Henry ye 3 vppon Lluellin, ye sonne of Griffith, and many other voyags, wherein, by reason of ye roughnes of ye Countrey, there hapned as much harme to themselues as hindrance to ye Welshmen; neu'thesse, they wanne att seu'all tymes diu's Countreys from ye Welshmen.

And ye Kings of England, seeing ye warrs very troublesom and hard to effect a conquest by any great army (ye rather to bring under ye Welshmen, and to ease their owne charge of ye warrs), did use and would giue vnto ye Lords and other great subjects of England such countreys in Wales as they could winne from their enemies ye Welshmen, ffor soe are ye wordes of diu's of ye graunts.

By which means, and other great allurements graunted to those that attempt to conquer ye Welshmen (which shallbe more particularlie shewed hereafter), many great noblemen and others of England were drawn to bring great armyes of Englishmen and Normaus into Wales, and conquered many great Lordships and countreys there, which they held to them and theyr heyr's of ye kings of England as lands purchased by conquest from ye Welshmen.

And about ye Conquests time, ye kings of England hauing placed diu's great Earls, and built diu's great townes of garrisons in ranks on ye frontiers of Wales, as Bristow, Gloster, Worster, Sallop, and Chester, as places to be ready to chasten ye Welshmen uppon all attemps. The said Earls and gouernors with these great garrisons townes first begonne by ye kings leaue and permission, and by their setting forwards to invade and dispossesse the Welshmen next adjoyning to thease parts, and to invade their countries, and to possesse ye same by force, as namelie Peter Corbett, for Caufe; Theobald de Verdon, for Welbye; Mortimer, for Wigmore; Fitzallen, for Clune and Oswestrye; Walter Lacy, for Ewyas Lacie; Drue de Baladon, for Abergaueney; Monhault, for Hawarden; Gylbert, Lord of Monmouth, for Monmouth; Foulk Fitz-warren, for Whittington; Roger le Strainge, for Elsmere; ye Lord Reygnald Gray, for Ruythin; and others for other countreys in Wales. And shortlie after came Robert Fitz-Hamon with his 12 knights into Glamorgan; Barnard Newmarch, to the lordshipp of Brecknock; Strangbowe, to ye countrey of Dinet, or Pembrokeshire; Martyn, to ye countrey of Kemis; Moris de Londres to Kydwelly; and Cornwllon Lacy, Earl of Lyncoln, to ye countrey of Ros and Riuoniog, now to ye lordshipp of Denbigh; Bruis to ye lordshipp of Gower, Buelt, Radnor, Melenith, and Elurl Moylanant k Nantheduy, and other lands in Wales.

And to ye end that ye said lords should be aswell ye more willing to those attemps, as alsoe ye better able to rule and gouverne, and keepe in due obedience ye people of ye countrey, being once subdued, ye King of England suffred and nessitie of governm't forced those lords to assume and take vnto themselves such p'rogative and authoritye within ye said lordshippes as to themselues seemed best, and were fitt for ye quiett governm't of any countrey.

The like pollicie (saith ye auncient historiographer Lampridius) was used by ye kings of England with lands uppon ye borders of Scotland shortly after ye Conquest. His words, cyted by Mr. Cambden, are as followeth: "Sola qua' de hostibus captæ erant Limitanis Ducibus & molitibus donasset; ita ut eor' essent, si hæredes eoru' militarent, nec vnga' ad priuatos pertinerent existimamus attentius eos militaturos, so etiam sua cura defenderent."

And, therefore, there is noe record to be found in ye Tower, or elsewhere in England, of any graunt made to any to be a Lorde Marcher in Wales, or any libertie graunted to any of them, as they themselues then and long time after vsed. And the kings writts out of his Courts of Westminster did not runne into Wales, Pembrokes'e excepted, which was counted part of England, and, therefore, called Little England beyond Wales. Neither was there any shiriff or other officers of ye king to execute any of ye kings writts or p'cepts in Wales, and yet of necessitie law and justice was to be administred for the quiet governm't of ye people, without which noe commonwealth nor society might be p'serued or governed. Therefore, these lords themselues were forced of necessitye to execute lawes of soueraigne gou'nors ouer their tenants and people in those strainge countreys, and lordships subdued by them, which ye kings of England did for pollicie permitt for a tyme.

And to gr't charter of such lybertyes in these cases could not convenientlie be for 3 causes. 1. For ye kings of England knew not before hand when they graunted to any noble-man such lands in Wales as he could winne from ye Welchmen what lands or countreys he should soe winne, or whether he should winne any land att all, and, therefore, could not gr't them any lybertyes within any certain p'cinct or territorye.

A second cause was for that ye lords, after they had wonne or conquered any countrey in Wales, were not desirous nor hastye to purchase or seeke any such liberties of the king, for that it was not certain whether or how longe they should keepe or injoye those countreys or ll'ps that were soe wonne from ye Welshmen; for oftentimes those countreys soe wonne were again recou'ed, some by composition with the King of England, as may appear by diuers compositions taken with ye Prince of Wales; and oftentimes some of ye l'ps were againe recon'd by force, and ye English lords expelled, which made ye lords slowe to seeke or sue for any charters of libertyes to be used in any of these l'ps vntill he had continued in quiet possession for diuers ages.

Another reason which I have heard of ye learned whie ye Lordshipp Marchers had noe charters of such liberties as they used within their seignories was for that ye liberties and royal jurisdiction used by those lords were such and soe high of nature, soe royall and soe united to ye Crowne, yt by the lawes of this land yt lay not in ye power of ye king, or to seuer ye same from his imperiall crowne. And, therefore, yt was thought fitter and better course to suffer ye lords to assume and take those libertyes of their owne authoritye then to sue and obteyne a uoyd graunt of ye same, which, if at any time called in question, must be adjudged of noe force. Which kind of government by Lords Marchers continued in Wales for many years, till att length, in ye tyme of H. 8, the countrey was brought into such quietness of subjection, and ye people they became so obedient, that ye kings of England well perceaued yt ye countrey might be gou'ned by ciuill and politiqe lawes, as ye rest of ye realme: and, therefor, in ye 27th yeare of H. 8, he resumed all or most of those royall jurisdictions into his hands, and deprived ye Lords Marchers of ye same, and left them in effect but as lords of manors in England, and then ordayned justics himself, and justics of ye peace, shiriffs, and other officers, and diuided ye countrey into shyres, and erected great sessions, quarter sessions, and other courts, for ye gouernm't of ye countrey by officers of his owne, and by ye lawes of England, and left little or noe authoritye to ye Lo' Marchers, which pollicye and guifts of ye kings of England to their noblemen continued a long while, and for many yeares, viz., from ye Conquerors time vntill E. 1, insoemuch that about ye tyme of Ed. 1, almost all Wales was come into ye hands and possession of diuers English lords, who held ye same of ye kings of England, and not of ye Princes of Wales.

And ye said Lo', at their first coming to those l'ps by conquest, spiiing out ye best and most fertilyt parts in each countrey, builded their castles for themselues, and townes for their owne soldiers and countreyemen which came with them to remayn near about them as their guard, and to be ready always to keep vnder such of the countrey inhabitants as would offer to rebell, or arise either against ye kings of England, being then become lords paramount of all those Lords Marchers, or against their owne lords, or seek to returne subject to their auncient princes; and by this means all the townes and castles in most part of Wales, which now are to be seene, were first built, which may appear by ye auncient charters of these townes, made by these lords and first conquerors and founders of ye same townes, wherein most of these townes is yet to be seene very auncient charters and large libertyes graunted to ye burgesses and free men of these townes by ye auncient lords thereof, and fewe or none p'r-chased libertyes of ye kings of England vntil many years after, and that when either these l'ps came into ye kings hands or otherwise, by some meanes obteyned charters from ye kings of England, and that but in fewe townes, which most comonly were but confirmations of their former libertyes by their owne lords.

By this means, many townes and castles built in Wales, as Pembroke, Tenby, and Hauerford West, by Strongbow, William de Valemer, and ye Hastings, being his posteritye, and Newport, built by Martyn, Lord of Kemes, Kydwellir towne and castle, by Londres, and after augmented by ye Duke of Lancaster, to whom it came by match, and ye townes and castles of Swansey, Oystermouth, Loghor, Radnor, Buelt, Rayad'r, and diuers other built by ye Bruisses and ye Mortymers and Beauchamps, to whom afterwards yt came by issue female of ye said Bruise. Brecknock was soe built by Bernard Newmarch, Blaenlifng by Herbert filius Herberti, Cardiff and Cowbredy by Fitz hamon and ye Earls of Gloucester, Neas by Greenfield, Abergaueney by Drue de Baladon, Miles Earle of Hereford and others his posteritie, Ruythin in Denbighsheir by ye Lords Gray, lords therof, Denbigh by Lacye, Earl of Lyncolne, soe was Monmoth, Vske, Newport, Treleg, Chepstow, and diu's other townes too many here to recyte, builded by ye auncient conquerors of those l'ps. And although yt diu's of these townes were auncientlie townes long before ye Conquest, yet were these auncient townes for ye most part vtterlie destroyed and defaced in ye winning thereof by these Normans and English lords, and new castles and townes builded in their place builded by them; by which meanes soe many castles were builded in Wales as are now to be seene ruinows in euery part almost of ye countrey.

And ye said Lo' Marchers were bound by lawes of England always to keepe their castles with sufficient men and munition for ye keeping of ye kings enemyes in that l'p or county in subjection if they offered any attempts or riotts, as oftentimes they did.

The said Lo' Marchers, being English lords, executed ye English lawes for ye most part within their l'pp, and brought ye most part of ye lands of ye said l'pp to be English tenure, and passed ye same according to ye lawes of England, viz., by fine, recou'ry, ffeoffm't, and liu'y of seisin, as in England; and such parts as they left to ye auncient inhabitants of ye countrey to possesse, being for ye most part the barrenest soiles, was permitted by some lords to be holden by ye old Welsh custome as to passe ye same by surrend'r in court, which they called in their countrey language k of llis e ystyn yalen, wherof this word y stonnoll was deriued, and where such custome was permitted, there is noe deed to be found of any lands of that nature before.

Before 27 H. 8, that Wales was made sheir ground, but for soe much lands in those l'pps as was turned to English tenure you shall find deeds some 400, some 300 yeares past, uery fair written in Latyn or French as was used in Engl' in those days.

And the lawes of England was induced and brought in by ye Lo' Marchers, cheiffie because ye lawes of Wales were altogether vnknown to ye English lords and their English people that came with them into Wales, whoe onlie vnderstood and delighted in ye lawes of England, and would be gon'ned by none other laws, therefore they brought in ye execution of ye English lawes in eu'y l'pp M'cher in Wales, sauing that they permitted vnto ye auncient ff's certeyn poynts of ye old Welch lawes, which were nothing noysome to ye lords nor repugn't to ye lawes of England, which though ye same were indeed ye comon lawes of Wales before, yet they were reteyned and suffred in those l'pps by and vnd'r ye name of ye customes, among which was graunted the use of Gauelkind for partining ye lands between ye brothers, and ye passing ye land by surrend'r in Court, and not by fine, ffeffm't, and liu'y of seisin and att'hment, which were ceremonies which were neu' known nor required by ye auncient lawes of Wales. And these were now latlie taken as perticuler customes of the manors wherein they were permitted, whereas indeed it was part of the auncient comon lawes of Wales, and was generallie practiscd throughout all Wales before ye coming of the Lo' Marchers, which customes the lords were contented to admitt, to satisfie ye minds of such Welsh men that submitted themselues to their lords, being a contentm't to ye tenants and noe pr'judice to the lords; and this was used onlie amongst ye Welshmen that were permitted to enjoye their auncient lands in some l'pps Marchers, for ye lords were not able to bring with them sufficient nomb'r of people to inhabit the whole countreys they subdued ; but where parted ye Englishmen yt came with them, and gaue them lands, the said Welsh customes were not used, but they held all their lands according to ye lawes of England, and ye eldest sonne had ye whole inheritance, and for this cause, in many l'pp there is a Welsh court for ye Welshmen by themselues, where their Welsh customes were obserued, and ye Englishmen had another court a part for themselues ; and in comm'n speach among them, the one part is yet to this day called ye English shier and ye other part ye Welshsheir. Exemples hereof you shall find in Gower, where is the Englishheir and Welshsheir, in Coity Anglicana, and Coity Walliæ, in Glamorgan ; Auan Anglicana, and Auan Wallicana ; English Talgarth and Welsh Talgarth ; and in Narberth, in Pembrooksh' is ye like ; alsoe in Furnica, Kidwelly, Anglicana, and Comata Kidwelly, Wallicana, and Llanstephan, Dominiu' Wallicanu', and Llanstephan Dominn' Anglicanu', and in many other l'ps in Wales ; wherevpon you shall commonlie find ye land in ye one to be of ye Welsh tenure and auntientlie was p'tible betweene ye brothers and surrendred in court, and ye other of English teuere, and always passed by ffeffm't and other couueyances att ye coon' law before was sheir ground.

And yet in some fewe L'ps Marchers in Wales, that were wholie turned into English tenures, yt is found that ye tenants were permitted to haue their old customes of diuiding their lands between ye heyr's males, and there, although ye lands were partible amonge the sonnes, yet did they passe all their lands by ffeffm't ; auncient deeds are to be found there notwithstanding the said partition and ye said lands is to be lands of English tenure and Welch dole, and termed among them in Wales, Kyfraith Iaysnig ap Rhan Kymragg, and in those l'ps where ye lands soe partible was holden by knights squirs, ye lords had ye wardshipp of all the bretheren as if they had been sisters, which was commodious for ye lords, and might be an occassion to mooue ye lords to suffer, or rather to wish, their tenants to continue their said custome of parting their lands among their sonnes, and many lords did vtterly extirpat both Welsh lawes and Welsh dole, and wrought all as in Engl' ; and these matt'rs and customes were p'mitted or denied in eu'y l'pp as pleased ye first conquerors thereof. Although some of ye Lo' Marchers of Wales, longe after they had enjoyed their l'ps, and after the principalities of Wales came to ye kings hands, did purchase of ye kings of England diu's priuiledgs as cognizans of pleas, free-warren, ffayrs, and marketts, &c., as they did in their owne mannors in England, yet had they all these libertyes before these said graunts and greater in themselves, taken and assumed in their owne authoritye, and ye kings suffrance, and alsoe they themselues gaue such libertyes to their t'ts that held of them, soe yt by that which was aboue w^ritten, and ye 3 reasons form'lie shewed, yt doth appear whie yt is not to be found that ye king gaue to any man a graunt to be a Lord Marcher, as such libertyes as they injoyed, but that ye same first grew by their owne assumption and contenned by pr'scription.

And in this sort Lo' March's in Wales still grew and increased in number vntill ye time that ye Lords or Prince Llewelin ap Griffith, ye last prince of ye Welsh blood, was slain, viz., ano. 11 E. 1, then King of England, whoe then tooke and seised ye principalitye of Wales into his hands and gaue the same to E. 2, his sonne, and made him Prince of Wales, sithence which time there neither was nor could be any L'ps Marchers in Wales erected, ffor that after ye subdueing of ye said Prince Lluellin, there was neu' any l'pp wone or recon'ed by force from any Welshman, but that all submitted themselves to ye kings of England ; and such libertyes or freedoms as any would procure to any towne, l'pp, or libertye in Wales, sithence the coming of ye principality of Wales into ye kings hands by ye ou'throwe of ye said Prince Llewelin, the same was and hath been obteyned by charter and graunt from ye king, neither durst any Lo' Marcher, or other man in Wales, sithence yt time claime or assume to himself any more priuiledge, libertye, pr'rogative ; but such as would obteyne the same by graunt from ye kings of England more then was in themselves before.

For immediately after ye joining of ye Principalitye by ye king he p'sentlie held a parliament at Ruthland Castle, and there ordeyned lawes and officers to gouerne Wales after ye English lawes.

Soe that afterward yf ye king gaue any l'pp in Wales to any man he would not assume to himself to administer lawe and justice to his people and tenants as ye Lords M'chers were forced to doe in form' times, for that ye kinge had then ordeyned lawes for ye gou'ment of ye countrey, by which lawes he must then gouerne ye cuntrey soe giuen him by ye kinge.

By this which is before written yt may be gathered, and yt is apparant, that there is noe Lo' Marcher which had any Lo' paramount immediate or meane between him and the crowne of England before ye conquest of the said Lluellin, as is before said, notw'thstanding such l'pp had iurisdiction' royall, which many lords in Wales obteyned by p't from ye king of England longe after ye coming of the Principalitye of Wales to ye crowne of England, and yet were auncientlie tenants to some of those L'pp Marchers.

The like libertyes did diu's buishopps and abbotts, ye cells of St. John of Jerusalem in England, purchase, who held diu's lordshipps in Wales as the auntient dowers of their seas and abbeys, and neu' came to ye same by conquest as ye Lords Marchers did (but not with any such libertye and jurisdiction as may be p'sumed). In which l'ps they did not in the Welsh princes time exerte such regale authoritye as the Lord Marchers did, as is thought, but afterwards purchased the same of ye kings of England as may appeare by diu's auncient charters by them thereof obteyned; and by some other of the same charters yt appeareth that after ye gou'ment of princes of Wales was expelled, that those bushops, abotts, and other religious men were forced to take vppon them the like Regall power of gouernment within their l'pps as their neighbours ye Lords Marchers did before the obteyning any such charters as appeareth by ye charter of R. 2 to Adam, Bushop of St. Dauyds, ye words whereof are as follows:—

Vt cum ipse Episcopatu' suum et quamlibet parcelam eiusdem de nobis ut de corona n'ra integer teneat ipseq' ac p'decessores seu episcopi loci illius jurisdictione regali in omnibus dominiis suis Epatus p' dicti vt in cognitionibus omni modorum placitor', personaliu', realium ac de corona ad p'secutionem suam propriam e alior' cu' oid'is proficuis inde prouenientibus iuxta co'suetudines partiu' illar' totis retroactis temporibus vsi fuerunt et gauisi absq' hoc quod nos seu progenitores n'rij, seu aliquis domin' Marchiæ aut eorum ministri ratione aliquor' dominor' in Wallia infra dicta dominia ipsius episcopi aliqualiter intrmittere consueuim', seu consueuerunt debuimus aut debeant.

By this charter 2 things are to be noted touching Lo' Marchers; first that yt appeareth that ye bushopp of St. Dauids before any charter obteyned had assumed to himself the execution of jura regalia, and other authorities of a Lo' Marcher, and did p'trib' therein, and to have cognizans of all pleas (which he could not doe by ye lawes of England, soe that in ye tyme of ye auntient princes of Wales the bushopps had not these jurisdictions, whereof as yet I cannot find any certayntye). Yet yt appeareth by ye words of this Charter, that after that the lawes and authoritye of these princes was expelled and putt downe in Pembrookshier (sauing the lands of spirituall men, which to invade was accounted sacriledge), that ye bushopps were likewise forced to assume vnto themselues those libertyes, for otherwise their tenants and peapl' must haue liued lawless and without gou'ment; soe that till the time of R. 2, ye B. of St. Davids vsed all their p'rogatiues by prescription, by the example of their neighbors ye Lo' M'chers, and for necessitye of gou'nment; and herein alsoe the tenure in capite of his Lo' in Wales is expressed and alleadged as a reason to haue induced those libertyes, where yt is said, vt cum ipse episcopatum suum de nobis vt de corona n'ra tenet, and therefore doth afterwards inferr those words, absq' hoc quod nos seu progenitores n'ri seu aliquis alius dominus Marchiæ aut eorum ministri ratione aliquorum dominorum in Wallia infra dicta dominia ipsius Epia' aliqualit'r intromittere consueuimus seu consueuerunt debemus aut debeant. Soe that to hold a L'pp in Wales of ye king in cheif in auncient time was sufficient to make a Lord Marcher, and of necessitye the lord hereof was forced to take upon him ye regall authoritye of a Lord Marcher. This matter is alsoe explained by an auncient pr'sident to be seene in ye newe booke of entries, litle assise foll. 74 b., by these words: fuit seisitus de Baronia de L. in Wallia onde, etc., qua quidem Baronia est eodem 12 Junij fuit quoddam dominium regale vbi breue domini regis non currit et im'ediate tenetur et eodem 12 Junii tenebat'r de d'no rege in capite, quodque pr'dictus comitat'. H. E. proximus Angliæ adiacens illi p'ti walliæ vbi illa baronia jacet, siue existet, where ye cheif reason is yt it was regale dominu', for that yt was in wallia vbi Breue regis non currit, and that it was holden in capite of ye king. But notwithstanding the former ground and position that all L'pps Marchers att ye first took their beginninge by conquest of ye English lords, which is true, and holdeth for well neer for all or the greater number, yet is here found some fewe Lo' Marchers in Wales that came to be Lo'pps Marchers vppon another ground, and had their original somethinge differing, namelie Powys and other ye auncient members hereof, as Arwistley, Kyueiliog, Mouthwy, Kedewin, and some other l'pps in Mountgomery sheir, whoe neu'r were woone by conquest of any English lord, but came to be L'pps Marchers by ye meanes following. The auncient lords hereof, Griffith ye sone of Meredith ap Blethin, seing ye kings of England and ye other English lords pr'pare themselves to make a conquest of Wales in discretion and pollicye, submitted himself to H. ye 1, and yel'ded to hold all his cuntreys of Powys of ye kings of England in chief, as ye English Lo' Marchers did, and to doe the king ye like seruice, and acknowledge ye like dutye and obedience to ye King and Crowne of England as ye English Lords Marchers did for their lo'pps which they had woone in Wales, which he dulye and dutifullie performed, and thereupon he was suffred by ye king to enjoye all his auncient inheritaunce in Wales to him and his heirs, and was by H. ye 1 created Lord of Powys, and made baron of ye Parliament of England, whose heir ffemale, afterward named Hawis Gadarne, fell to be ye kings in wards, by reason of ye alteration of ye tenure into capite, whoe bestowed her in mariage to a ualiant gentellman of the kings named John Charlton, and soe came ye auncient L'pp of Powys, being farr larger then now yt is, to ye poss'on of ye English lords by mariage. The like did Mowthwy, being another brother's portion, and the rest; soe that these l'pps, of all ye rest in Wales, differeth in ye original coming to be L'pps Marchers: but yet in ye point yt holdeth with ye rest and agreeth, that yt must be holden in capite of ye king of England, which is one of ye cheifest and surest badges (as ys afforesaid) to know a Marcher. For howsoeu' yt come to passe, it was not materiall, soe yt were and come to be held of ye king of England, and did acknowledge ye king for their soueraigne lord, and yelded obedience to him, and to renounce their obedience to ye princes of Wales; for ye kings of England sought noe more att ye first of any Lo' in Wales, but suffred them to rule their t'ts and people as pleased them in all other things, and therefore you shall find that E. 1, E. 2, and E. 3, being kings of England long after, and att such times as their sonnes were Princes of Wales, and had ye actuall power of ye Principality for vrgent affayrs, did write for men and other affairs of estate to the cheifest of ye Lo' Marchers in Wales, but did not write to any part of ye principalitye, which sheweth that ye kings of England accompted ye Lo' Marchers to remayne their tenants, as holding their L'pps of them in cheef, and did not suffer ye princes of Wales to shew any com'aund or rule ou' them; there are many records to this effect directed to ye particuler Lords Marchers of Wales to be found in ye tower, ye breif of some you may find in ye end of this book. And by this meanes of ye submitting of ye Lords of Powis to ye Kings of England, yt came to passe that their l'pps doe continue and remaine without any alteration, as ye same was in most things in ye auncient princes hands. For whereas most of ye other l'pps in Wales, that were wonne and conquered by ye sword, the lords and conquerors thereof, not regarding to obserue and pr'serue ye meares, bounds, or names of ye auntient Cantreds or Com'otts (being ye onlie diuisions that were knowne of l'pps or manors in Wales, amonge ye auncient princes there), did alter the same and created newe bounds by giuing diu's manors to their seruants and men that came with them, and soe would deuide one comote into 6 or 7 manors, more or lesse, erecting a court baron in each manor, making manors some of greater, some of lesser quantitye of land as pleased ye Lo' to giue, and as ye person deserued, and soe ye bounds and names of ye auncient comotts were in most l'ps that were conquered, new chainged, and in some places ye names vtterlie forgotten ; but in this l'pp of Powys, and ye rest of ye ancient members hereof, ye comotts remayne intyer and whole in bounds, and retayne the auntient names without alteration to this day.

And whereas by the auncient laws of Wales there was a court in eu'y commotte ; soe, is there in ye lordshipp nowe a Court Baron in eu'y of ye auntient commotts for ye said baronye of Powis, as much as now beareth ye name, and which came to ye part of Jane Charlton, wife of John Gray, consisted in olde tyme of six comotts, namelie, Carrinion Mechan, Ywohlord, Mechaniscoed, Mognant, llauerchidol, and y stradmerchell, in eu'y of which comotts there was of old time an ancient court, and now att this day ye barony of Powis doth consist of this six manors, and called by those names, and known by their ancient bounds, and in each of these is att this day a Court Baron and Leat kept after ye use of England.

And this barony or l'pp of Powis, although it be one of the most royallest, greatest, largest, and best seignioryes and Lordshipp Marcher of Wales, yet hath it not any manor or l'pp holden of yt, as most of the rest of the L'pps Marchers in Wales that were conquered haue. The reason is for yt it was neuer conquered, wherby ye lord had not any occasion to bestowe any manors or such guifts uppon any of his men that ayded them in their conquest. Alsoe, within ye said l'pps of Powys there is noe diuision of knights fees, carucats, or ploughlands, or oxlands, being a measure and quantitye of land brought first into Wales by ye English and Norman lords, and neu' known to ye auntient Welshmen or Brittons. The like obseruation as I have nowe said of ye barony of Powys shall ye find in ye rest of ye members that sometime were auncient Powys, as Mouthwy, kery kedewen, Arwistly, keuliog, Doythwr kyneth howen, etc. All which, for that they became subject to ye crowne of England by submission, and not by conquest, the auntient comotts remayne entyer in bounds, and reteyne ye auncient names, and in eu'y auncient comott now a Court Baron, and not one meane manor holden of any of them, nor any knights fees, oxelands, or ploughlands in any of them. The like shall you find in all ye principalitye lands in ye countreys of Anglesey, Carnaruan, Marioneth, Flint, Carmarthin, and Cardigan, that the auntient comotts remayn entier without alteration, retayning still their auntient names and bounds, and att this day a Court Baron or hundred court kept in each of them was before ye principalitye came to ye king. But in all or most of other l'pps in Wales you shall find it altered for ye reason before said. And, therefore, I have thought good to lay downe at large the state of the l'pp of Powys, being the one and onlie l'pp of all Wales that came to be a l'pp Marcher in this sort, whereas neer all the rest was wonne by force and crueltye; and to shew ye reason and cause whie this l'pp of Powys and ye other auncient members of ye same doe in these fewe poynts differ from ye rest of ye l'pps Marchers, and soe might breed a doubt for want of true knowledg of the originall hereof.

Another I find by auncient record and testimony that the lo'pps of Bromfield and Yale in Denbighsheir, aunciently called Dinas Bran, being ye cheif castle and auncient house of ye said l'pp, came to ye po'n of ye English lords as followeth: Emma, daughter to ye Lord Awdley, widdow to Griffith ap Madoc, Lord of Bromfield and Yale, Chirke, Nanthedwy, Maelor, and other lands, parcell of auncient Powys, hauing 4 sons by her husband, between whome their fathers inheritance was deuided, first grewe between her and her husbands kindred about the custody and education of her sons, ye fathers kindred fearing that yf ye sonnes should be brought vp by ye mother in England, ye children would become English, and soe rather incline to ye King of England then to ye Princes of Wales, betweene whom and both their nations att that time there was continuall warrs; but ye widdowe getting to her possession, her 2 eldest sonnes, Madoc and Lluellin, ye first hauing for his part Bromf' and Yale, the other hauing Chirk and Monthedwy for his portion, because she was not able to keepe them and their lands from ye Welshmen, nor to remayne amonge them vppon her joynture, went vnto K. E. 1, then King of England, and deliud him her 2 sonnes aforsaid, shewing that by right they were his majesty's wards by reason of ye submission which ye ancestors of ye said infants, Princes of Powys, had made formerlie to ye kings of England, and yelded to hold ye dominion of Powys of ye kings of England in capite, and therevppon ye king tooke them to his ward and protection, and comitted ye wardshipp of Madoc ye eldest to John, Earl Warren, and ye wardshipp of Lleullin to Roger Mortimer, 3 sonne to Rafe Lo' Mortymer of Wigmore,¹ with

2 gardeins, hauing ye 2 youths and their lands in their custodye, ye Earl Warren builded ye Castle of Holt in Bromfield, and Roger Mortymer likewise builded ye castle of Chirke, and placed garrisons of English soldiers there to defend ye countrey from ye Welshmen; but shortlie ye both wards died without issue, yet afterwards ye other guardians held them still in ye possession of ye lo'pps aforesaid, and would neuer after be driuen from them; and to procure themselues some culler to hold ye same, in ye 10th y. of E. 1, Roger Mortymer obtayned a graunt from ye king of ye said l'pps of Bromf' and Yale, and by force and color thereof, held ye same from ye right heirs for euer after; ye words of which charter, as I have seen ye same, are as followeth:—

“Rex, etc., concessimus et hac p'senti charta confirmauimus dil'to ac fideli n'ro Johannis de Warrena Comitis Surrey Castra de Dinas Bran quod fuit in manu n'ra in principio p'sentis guerra n'ræ Walliæ et totam terram de Brom: cum pertinentis quem Griffinus et Lluellinus filii Madoci Vychan, p' se uel per tutores seu custodes suos in principio guerræ illius tenuerunt, saluis nobis et hæredibus n'ris Castrum et terram de Hope cum omnibus p'tinentiis suis q'æ nobis et heredibus n'ris remanere uoluimus adeo plene et integer sicut Dauyd filius Griffini inimicus et rebellis n'r' ea tenuit et principio guerræ supra dictæ. Dedim' etiam et co'cessim' eidem Comiti de nobis et heredibus n'ris eidem comiti terram de Yale plene q'æ fuit Griffini vichan filius Griffinis de Brom' inimici n'ri habendu' et tene'dum de nobis et heredibus n'ris eide' comiti et hæredibus suis p' dictu' castru' de Dinas Bran et p' dictus terras de Brom' et de Yale plene et integre sicut p'dictus Griffinus et Lluellinus terram illam de Bromfield et Griff' vichan terram illam de Yale tenuerunt, sicut p'dict' e', vna cum forisfactoris hominu' de iisdem terris de Brom' et de Yale quæ ad nos pertinere poterant uel debeant, e cu' omnibus aliis ad ea pertinentiis saluis nobis et hæredibus n'ris pr'dictis de Castro de Hope cu' omnibus p'tinentiis suis sicut pr' dictu' e' faciendu' inde nobis et hæredibus n'ris seruitiu' quatuor feodor' militu' pro omni seruitio, consuetudine et demanda, qua uoluim' etc., datu' p' manu' n'ram apud Ruthland 7 die Octobris An'o regni n'ri 10.

The like charter had Roger Mortymer vpon Chirk; by means of which 2 charters these two great l'pps came to ye pou' of these English lords, whose issues and assignes held ye same till yt came to ye crowne, and by this chart'r there is noe words of Jura Regalia, or any other regall power or authoritye; and yet did these 2 lords use all ye regall jurisdiction as liberall as any other Lords Marchers in Wales, and ye said l'pp of Bromfield was ye 3 or 4 L'pp Marcher in Wales, and is 730℥ of antient rent of assise per ann'.

Alsoe, the Lady Emma, for that her husbands kindred in Wales did force, molest, and trouble her lands of Maelor, being her joyntures, and would not suffer her to enjoy ye same in quiet, for anger that she had deliu'd her 2 sonnes to ye king, and thereby had procured ye coming of ye 2 noblemen to build ye castles of Bromfield and Chirk, and to bring English garrisons into ye cuntrey. She therefore desired ye king to giue her lands in England for yt, and she would deliuer to ye kings pou' Malore, which ye king did accept, and soe came ye king to ye pou' of Malor Sasneg, which, for yt her sonnes that were in ward died, ye king held yt euer after and would neu' suffer any of their heyres to haue yt, p'tending that they were rebels against him, and soe Malor remayned a L'pp Marcher always in ye kings hands, coming to the same in quiett by ye deliu'y thereof to him by ye widdowe without force or charge of war.

And by ye former ch'r made by E. 1 to John, Earl Warren and Surrey, he reserued to himself ye Lordship of Hope, being parcell of Bromfield, alsoe eu' sithence hath ye Lordship of Hope continued in ye Crowne, and by this yt seemeth that those l'pps which are holden of ye king as of ye principalitye of Wales cannot themselues to be L'pps Marchers, although diu's of such l'pps, before Wales was reduced into shier ground, did use such royall and regall jurisdictions as the Lo' Marchers did, and that either by a speciall graunt from ye King, or by use and custome; for it is to be found in some royall L'ps Marchers in Wales that the measne lords that were ye tenants had ye like royall jurisdiction in some things in their measne l'pps, as their lord paramount had, and this came by ye graunt or permission of their owne lord paramount; and therefore ye statuts of 34 H. 8 and 4 Mariae, which seemeth to respect and take speciall notice of the libertyes of those l'pps, doth call them l'pps royall in respect of their royall libertyes then used, and therefore doth couple them and the L'pps Marchers together, where it saith that all L'pps Marcher and l'pp royall in Wales shall haue and enioy diu's libertyes and priuiledgs there mentioned.

By this meanes ye noblemen woone many cuntreys in Wales, and the king himself alsoe woone diu's vppon his owne charge; and those cuntreys that were woone vppon ye charge of ye English lords remayned to them and their heyrs, but those yt were wonne at ye kings charge remayned to ye king, except such of ye same as was after bestowed vpon some of his nobles for their good seruice.

And yt is to be remembered that almost all Wales was and had been in ye hands of English lords before ye time that Prince Lluellin was slaine as before is said, soe that there was nothing left to Prince Lluellin but ye sheirs of Anglesey, Carnaruan, Merioneth, and part of Flint in North Wales, and most part of Carmarthensheir, viz., West Towy and all Cardigansheir in South Wales, which as yet was not wonne by ye kinge or any English lo', and was in gou'ment of ye said Prince Lluellin, and soe much is aunswared att this day to his ma'tie by ye name and title of Parcella Principality Walliæ and noe more; ye rest was conquered by ye Lords Marchers and is aunswared to his ma'tie by ye title of other mens lands that have been owners thereof, and came to ye crowne by attaynder or otherwise.

Edward ye Third (doubling as it seemed), or meaning the seuering of ye principalitye of Wales from ye crowne of England, and fearing thereby that ye kings of England might loose ye tenure and seruice of ye Lo' Marchers in Wales, by reason of ye vuiting of both together, and that ye principalitye departing from ye crowne of Engl', the said L'ps Marchers should be construed in lawe to passe with ye principalitye from ye crowne of England by reason of ye union of the pou' of them both in his highnes hands simul and semel the dismembring of which Lo' Marchers might be a great weakning of ye crowne of England, therefore very prouidentlie to preuent ye same, in the 28th yeare of his raigne, cap. 2, yt was enacted by Parliam't that all Lords of ye Marches of Wales shall be perpetuallie attendant and annexed to ye crowne of England, as their ancestors haue been always before. And not to the principalitye of Wales, into whose hands soeuer the same shall come hereafter.

Anno 2, H. 4, cap. 18, yt was ordeyned the Lo' of the M'ches of Wales should send sufficient stuffing and ward in their castles and su'ryes to the intent that noe losse, ryott, or dainger should come to ye king or to his realme by their tenants or other Welshmen in their default, as was donne for default of good gouerment in times past.

By which words yt seemeth that there was noe Lo' Marcher without a castl, and his charge was to keepe a sufficient garrison to repress those of ye countrey of Wales yt should to arise and annoy ye kings subjects, and therefore it seemeth that all those little townes, whereof we see many in Wales, were built close to those castles to keepe those garrisons. And ye auncient inhabitants of all those townes in Wales were Englishmen, kept of purpose by ye lords as a trustie garrison of his owne cuntrymen to subdue those peaple of ye cuntrey att such time as they should offer any reuolt as affore is said, which appears by that which was enacted by Parliament, anno 4, H. 4, cap. 32, that ye garrisons of castles and walled townes in Wales should be sufficientlie prouided and stored with valiant English persons, straingers to ye seignories where ye said castles be sett, and not of any mixt of ye said partyes or s'noryes in Wales vntill the lands were . . . and appeased.

And for proof that they were Englishmen that inhabited these townes in auntient time yt appeareth by ye names and surnames of ye men of that time that soe inhabited therein, and although most of the inhabitants of those townes are become now mere Welsh in language and manner of liuing yet doe many retaine ye English names, and most places about those townes doe giue great libertyes to Englishmen of those townes.

Neither might any Welshman be a burgesse or purchase any lands within any borough in Wales as appeareth by diu's auntient statuts, namelie, 2 H. 4, cap. 12 and 20. Alsoe it was enacted that noe Welshman should haue any castle, fortesse, or house of defence, sauing such as was in ye time of K. E., ye conqueror of Wales, except buishops and other spiritual lords (4 H. 4, cap. 31).

By which pollicye and meanes aforesaid the Kings of England, by setting of their noblemen and others to gett countreys and l'pps in Wales, and to cause them to build castles, fortresses, and townes, and to place English soldiers therein always ready to subdue the Welshmen if they offred to arise or rebell against ye kings of England in time subdued ye most part of ye cuntrey of Wales without any great charge of ye kings of England; and the more to encourage them ye kings of England suffrd ye lords to use all royall authoritie and jurisdiction ouer ye countreys soe subdued, regardinge more to have them subdued and kept in obedience from irrupting vppon ye kings subjects in England then any other thing.

And ye more to encourage ye valiant and haughtye-minded men of England to take in hand ye subduing of countreys in Wales, ye kings of England used another allurm't to drawe one those that were thirstie of honor and preheminance, which was to create such of his Engl' subjects as should subdue any creature in Wales (and to bring it subject to England) to be a lord baron and peere of ye realme, and to haue place and uoyce in the Parliament House of Englaud, by ye name and title of a lord or baron of such cuntrey of Wales as he subdued or conquered there, and to aduance them thereby from ye number of ye comons of ye realme to be of ye highest ranke of men to be peers of ye realme, which thing no doubt drewe on many valiant minds to take this enterprize in hand, and therefore by search of ye Parliament roules in ye Tower, amonge ye writts of ye sommons of ye barons, you shall find there in the times of H. 3, E. 1, and E. 2, and E. 3, and other kings, that there were 21 barons that had place in Parliament by baronyes and lordshippes in Wales which had been conquered by them and their ancestors from ye Welshmen.

And this ye kings of England did for 2 speciall causes; ye one, as before is said, to allure his subjects to subdue ye Welshmen and to bring them and their cuntrey vnd'r his obedience vppon ye charge of his subjects. The other was to explaine to ye world ye kings of Engl' right ouer Wales, which they claymed to be a member and of right auncientlie subject to ye crowne of Engl', which ye kings of Engl' still pretended, and ye princes of Wales alwayes denied, and to sett forth and demonstrate to ye world ye kings of Engl' right to their sup'r'macy ou' Wales, there could noe bett'r course be diuised, nor ye kings title made more euident and apparant to all nations, then that ye lords and barons of Wales were members of ye Parliament of England, which did openlie shewe and manifest that Wales must be subject to ye crowne of Eng'.

But of all those 21 lordshippes that in those days had their place in Parliament, there is onlie Abergaveny att this day that still continueth his place and name, and in ye line and blood of ye first conqueror thereof, and is the proto-baron, or first and primer lord of the barony of this realme, a matter very remarkable and worthye of many good notes, and all ye rest of ye said baronyes hauing lost their name and place either by coming to ye crowne or to other barons that formerlie had other placs and titles in ye Parliament, and soe drowned in obliuion and growne out of knowledge.

And by those meanes in a short time, viz., in and before ye time of E. 1, almost all ye countrey of Wales was ye po'n of English lords, and each of them in eu'y great sar'y builded newe castles and townes, soe that there is scarce a castle in Wales, being in number 143 castles, but is knowne att this day to haue been builded by some English lord or other.

And soe ye gou'ment of Wales was continued vnd'r ye Lords Marchers vntill ye time of H. 7, in whose time ye Welshmen willinglie submitted themselves in hart to his highnes being paternallie of their auncient princes of ye Brittish line, in such sort, that they whoe in former times were termede soe disobedient to ye crowne of Engl' (and against whome ye kings of England promulged such vnaturall and extreame lawes, as neuer any prince did ye like against his subjects) grewe soe quiett that K. H. 8 in his tyme did well perceauē yt ye peaple and cuntrey of Wales might be gou'ned by lawes as ye subjects of England and not by thraldome and crueltye used by ye Lo' Marchers.

Alsoe it appeareth that in those days ye more to allure men to ye conquest of Wales, whoesoeuer would undertake ye conquering or subdueing any cuntrey in Wales, ye kinge would allowe or grant him any prerogative whatsoeuer he would desire in ye cuntrey subdued; and, therefore, in the Statute of Prerogatiua Regis, made anno 17 E. 2, cap 1, yt appeareth yt ye Lo' Marchers had granted to them that ye king should not haue his prerogatiue in wards, lands, yt are of ye fees of ye earls and barons in ye marches, vbi breuia regis non currunt, and this seemeth to haue bene permitted them before, att ye first by ye kings, when they first vnd'tooke such conquest in Wales, and after, when this statut' was made, ye earles and barons then in parliament that had L'ps Marchers stood to haue that exception in for those things which ye kings had allowed and permitted them to enjoy in former tyme; for otherwise they could not nor would not haue stocd vppon this; being long after ye conquering of ye Prince of Wales, and diuers years after that ye Lords M'chers had giuen ouer winninge any cuntreys in Wales.

And whereas att ye first ye permitting of ye Lo' M'chers to haue such absolut' power ouer ye subdued Welshmen, was found a good pollicie to bring them lowe, and ye more ready to obey; yet when as ye said Welshmen had yelded themselves to be gou'ned by due course of lawe and lay in ciuill and quiett sort as ye rest of ye subjects of England, which they did not till ye times of H. 7 and H. 8, then was ye gounernmen' and royall jurisdiction of ye said Lords Marchers (which was in most placs executed most injuriouslie by bad, partiall, and coueteous ministers), found to be most noysome and rather a cause to urge ye subjects to rebell then to p'serue and keep in quiettness ye countrey people; whereuppon ye said K. H. 8, in anno 27 of his reigne, by deepe and graue aduise and profound counsell did resume into his hands ye whole, ye whole p'rogatiues which ye Lo' Marchers used, being jurisdictions more fett for a prince then a subject, and left no more regall authoritye then lo' of manors in Engl' haue, as is said before.

And perceiving that all or most Lo' Marchers had noe graunts from ye kings for any libertyes or franchises, or for any there L'ps Marchers, but ye same was used and taken by them att ye begining of their owne authoritye (ye kings of England consenting herevnto), and permitting ye same and maynteyned only by p'scription, he did provide by Act of Parliament that they might hold courts barons, courts leets, have waist, stray, engfang theist, outfang theist, treasure trove, deodands and felons goods, goods of outlawes, wreek of ye sea, moyty of recognizaues forfeited, and div's other things, and provided that they might hold those by p'scription w'in ye lordshippes, as they did before in tymes past, notwithstanding the abrogatinge of the rest of the authorities.

Sithence which time, for that ye said jurisdictions and authorities with ye most co'on signes and outward badges and tokens (whereby ye co'on peapl and others of ye ignorant sort took knowledge of L'pps Marchers) are taken away and growne out of use, and it is now growne a doubt and question which are and were L'pps Marchers in Wales and which were not, some clayminge ye same whoe neuer was, and some whoe are and ought to be allowed are denied soe to be.

For resolution of which doubt and question which I haue often heard mooved and debated by ye opinion of ye grauest and best learned, yt is thought fitt we should resort and learne out of the first originall beginning, and the cause, when, whie, and ye maner, how those L'ps Marchers had their first beginning, as a ground most suer to knowe ye same.

Where it will appeare that there can be noe Lo' Marcher but such as was subdued by ye kings of England or some of his subjects to his use or their owne before ye death of Prince Lluellin ap Griffith, and before ye coming of the principality of Wales to the hands of ye kings of England, which was in ye ii year of E. 1.

And to know what l'pps in Wales were soe subdued before ye com'ing of ye principality to ye kings hands, yow must knowe that as many lo'pps as were soe subdued of auncient time, were and are all holden of ye crowne of England, and in chief, and not of ye principalitye of Wales, nor of any other measme l'pp or manor, which is an euident and manifest token of a L'pp Marcher, and this tenure only may be a sufficient note and badge for triall of ye doubt, and, therefore, the auncient offics or inquisitions found after ye death of ye auncient lords of these l'pps will shew much light herein, and ye same is one of ye most certains tokens of all others, and carrieth most reason and prooffe with it.

Alsoe, there is noe L'pp Marcher that has not been in auntient tyme ye inheritaunce of some English lord or nobleman (for that l'pp if any be in Wales) that hath continuallie been in pou' of any Welsh lo', and not giuen him be ye king till ye conquest of Wales, or that was holden of ye Prince of Wales (which Prince of Wales neuer suffered any of his subjects to enjoy any of the said jurisdictions yt ye King of Engl' p'mitted to ye Lo' Marchers of Wales), cannot be said to be any of the L'pps M'chers of Wales.

Alsoe, those L'pps Marchers which were holden of ye kinge in cheef before ye said conquest of Wales, if any grew for ye title or inheritance thereof, the same was pleaded att the co'on lawe in Westminster, and there was fines leuied of those sur'yes and of none other in Wales, which is another euident signe of a L'pp Marcher (vide Fitzh' title jurisdiction 23, 13 E. 3, 21 H. 3, 34, and 18 E. 2. Br' title jurisdiction et inde q' viscount de Gloster serua execution sue recou'y in dower in marches de Gales de vn manor tent' in chief. Fitz' dower 71. 1 E. 3).

Another badge or token which diu's men take to knowe a L'pp Marcher by, is, that yf he did exercise iura regalia within ye l'pp, (yt is) triall of life and death, hold plea of land and such like; then some say it was a L'pp Marcher within ye opinion of those yt are both learned and skilfull in ye auntient estate and gou'ment of Wales doth not always hold for that yt is euident that some manors, holden of other L'ps Marchers in Wales, did use ye same by graunt of their lords paramount, and yet were neuer Lords Marchers of themselues, but held ouer of some other L'pp Marcher, and neu' held immediatelie of ye crowne of England, as ye L'pps of Coity and Auan holden of Glamorgan, and Walwins Castle holden of ye Earl of Gloster, did in old time, and some such liberties might also be purchased by ch'r from ye king by those to whom he gaue l'pps after ye subduing of ye Principality, and yet doth this differ much from ye beginning of a L'pp Marcher; neither did ye king write to such lords for men or any other vrgent affaires, when he wrote to all ye Lords Marchers of Wales, as appeareth by ye auntient records in ye tower, but always were wrote to the lo' paramount, which held im'ediatelie of ye king, leauing ye lo' paramount to commaund such lo' measme as held of him.

And diuers small measme l'pps in Wales in proces of time, as their chief lords went into England, and laue their tenants and seruants holding l'pps of them, to be their stuards and leiftenants vnd' them within their seign'oryes in Wales, did vsurpe and encroch diuers authorities and jurisdictions royall to themselues within their manors yt they had of ye Lo' Marchers. (For there are fewe or noe Lo' Marchers in South wales, but had diners and sundrie manors holden of them) whereuppon you shall find great quarrells and suits of later tymes between some of ye Lo' Marchers and their tenants, and quo warranto brought touching those things. Alsoe, some Lo' Marchers did giue their tenants such jurisdiction within their manors which they held of them, and yet were they for all this noe Lo' Marchers as before said. Alsoe, some of ye English Lords Marchers hauing in proces of time brought their countreys or l'pps in quiett or ciuill gouernment, returned home to their auntient habitations in Engl', and grewe carelesse of their lo' in Wales, and soe remayning in Engl', did sell away those jurisdictions, some part of the same to some other of ye Lo' Marchers adjoining; for that the reuenues of their l'pps would not beare, and ye charge of justics, chamberlaines, and chauncellors, constables of ye castles, and other officers to minister justice there, which of necessitye must have been Engl'men, and learned in ye lawes of England, whoe would not supplie the roomes without greater fees, then the proffitts of those casualities would yeld vnto ye lords, and yet did these l'pps remain L'pp Marchers, and were bound in all things to serue ye King of England as other L'pps Marchers did, as to keepe their castles in repayre, and their garrisons compleat, to be ready to serue the king in wars, with competent number of able men of those manors or countreys which they had subdued, and held of ye Kings of England to seurue as well against ye Welshmen as elsewhere ye king had need.

Another apparant signe to know a L'pp Marcher is said to be that passing and conveying of lands within ye manors or l'pps by course of ye co'on lawe of England, viz., by fine, recou'y, deed, and release, liu'y and seisin, and att'ment, before ye 27 H. 8, which was most certeinlie brought in by ye English lords that conquered those countreys and l'pps from ye Welshmen, for before ye subduing of Wales ye same was gou'ned by ye lawes of Howell Dha, sometimes Prince of Wales, by which lawe all ye lands in Wales did passe by surrend' in court and not by fine, etc.; and, therefore, in all L'pps wherein these English lawes did this Welsh custome, there are auntient deeds, releases, indentures, fines, etc., to be seen and found before Wales was diuided into shier-ground, which argueth ye same was conquered by an English lord, and so consequentlie should seem to be a L'pp Marcher; but in yt part of Wales which Prince Lluellin had in possession (and is now accompted ye principallie lands) he used in ye same ye auctient lawes of his fathers and countrey, and ye same lawes continued for passing and conueying of lands after K. E. 1 recouered the principality, and soe vntill 27 H. 8. Sithence which time throughout all Wales they use to convey and passe their lands by conveyances at ye co'on lawe, which was used before onlie in L'pps Marchers conquered by some English lo' in old time.

But this is no certeyn token for a general triall of a L'pp Marcher from another that is not; for that there were diu's L' Marchers in Wales that were auctient L'ps Marchers in which ye lords thereof did permitt their tenants to continue their auctient custome in that poynt, and to passe their lands by surrend' in court, according to ye lawes of Howel Dha, and to deuide ye same amongst heirs males vt supra, etc.; and yet were these l'pps conquered by English lords, and had all other trialls by ye lawes of England, as yt is more largelie touched before. Besides, here are diuers l'pps yt att ye first Engl' lo' did give lands to their tenants to hold by copy of Court Roll, which is a co'on tenure in England; and in all those l'pps there is noe deed or release to be seene yet att this day, and, therefore, although ye passing of lands in Wales before it came to be shier-ground by deed, releaz, or be an euident signe yt the same was conquered from ye Welshman, yet doth yt not hold e conuerso for ye reasons vt supra. Alsoe, ye Lo' Marchers in Wales did vse, and were soe permitted of their owne absolute power, to incorporate townes and boroughs, and gaue them diuers charters and libertyes, such as pleased them, without seeking leaue or licence of ye King of Engl', which is taken for a very probable signe that such were Lo' Marchers, for you cannot find any such graunts or charters throughout Wales but such as were made Lo' Marchers.

Another signe and token of a L'pp Marcher was an vnreasonable custome vsed within ye L'pps Marchers of Wales, which was to haue all ye goods of any their tenants that died intestate within their Lo' Marches, which custome, although yt seemeth against all law and reason, and fitt to be nombred amonge ye unlawfull customes, which by Act of Parliament are abolisht, yet was ye same used, and yet is in all or most of ye L' Marches, sauing where ye lord of a good mynd and conscience haue released to their tenants the same vnreasonable custome by speciall charter, many of which releases are yet to be seen in diu's L'pps Marchers in Wales; and yet appeareth among ye Records of ye Tower, 28 E. 3, in Bundello

Eschartor', that vppon a com'ission graunted to certain com'issioners to enquire whether there were any such customes used in Wales, yt is there found by office that ye Lords of ye Marches of Wales had used ye same customes within their L'pps Marchers, tyme out of mind.

It was alsoe in auntient tyme an especiall matter, and most vndoubted and infallible signe to knowe ye Lo' Marchers of Wales by, that ye K. and counsell in all weighty affairs, as for warrs, musters, guarding of ye sea coasts against forreine invasions, and other such like affayrs of importance touching matters of estate for Wales, used to write to ye lords of ye seu'all cuntreys and l'pps in Wales, as ye Queen and counsell used att this day to ye sheriffe, justice of peace, leiftenants of sheirs, charging them to haue speciall care vnto those l'pps and cuntreys which they then held of ye king, that ye peapl thereof were sufficientlie armed, and ye sea coasts and their castles sufficientlie guarded with wach and ward, whereof there are diu'rs p'sidents to be seene among ye Records in ye Tower, this alsoe is plainlie expressed, and the same still res'sued in ye statute of Wales, an'o 34 H. 8, cap. 26, where it is enacted, that all processe for vrgent affayrs were for ye causes aforesaid; ffor other processe out of ye kings courts did neu' runne into Wales, and these processes were always directed to ye lords of ye manors and other gou'nors and stuards of ye l'pps (vt supra) for other officers in Wales the king had not.

Alsoe, ye Lo' Marchers being permitted to take vppon themselves all maner of regall and royall gou'nm', some of them imitating ye king in certain of ye tenures of their freeholders, they created tenures to hold of them in capite, and enjoyed within their Lo' Marcher ouer and amonge their tenants the like p'rogatives as ye king did by his p'rogative royall within his realme, wheresoeu' this is found, yt is a great argum't and manifest signe of a L'pp Marcher; yet this not so co'on a matter as yt yt should be expected in ev'y Lo' Marcher, for in diu's l'pps ye same is not to be found; but wheresoeuer ye same is found yt is a great confirmac'on that the same was a L'pp Marcher att ye first. Soe that by this which is before written ye most truest and surest marke or note to knowe a L'pp Marcher, is to see whether ye same was conquered from ye Princes of Wales in auntient time and holden of ye Kings of England before ye coming of ye principaltie to ye Kings of England; and to knowe ye same ye most certeyn direction is to search ye auntientest inquisitions post mortem of those lords.

Another apparant and infalible signe to know a L'pp

Marcher by, is, that ye escheator of Wales did in auntient tyme enquier of ye tenure and find offices post mortem of ye lo' of those l'pps, and that by writts and commission to him directed out of ye kings Chancery of England; for as soone as ye marches of Wales was wholie subdued and woone by English lords and brought to hold of ye King of England, ffor that the same l'pps were not in any shier in England, and ye king had noe escheator to enquier of ye tenure of those l'pps, ye same, therefore, was laid vppon ye escheators of ye next English sheir adjoyning to those l'pps, by making him alsoe escheator of ye marches of Wales aswell as of ye English sheirs adjoyning; and soe that escheator had the charge, care, and suruey of all L'pp Marchers that were holden of ye king, whoe by ye office of escheator of ye marches, would come into any L'pp Marcher in Wales in what part soeuer; and swear an enquest, and find an office, after ye death of any Lord Marcher; and enquier of ye value and tenure of his L'pp Marcher, whereas all offices of other mannors yt were holden of the king as of ye principalitye, were found by vertue of writts or comission issuing out of ye kings exchequer att Carnaruan or Chester for North Wales, and of ye exchequer of Carmarthen or Cardigan for South Wales, or out of Pembroke for lands holden of ye king as ye earldome of Pembroke, ye like was for lands holden of ye king of any other L'pp Marcher, as Glamorgan, Brecknock, Denbigh, Bromfield, etc., but always offices of any auntient L'pp Marcher in Wales which was holden of ye king before ye principaltie of Wales came to ye crowne, ye same was always found by writt or comission out of ye kings Chancery in London, and vnd' ye great seale of Engl', and ye offices found vppon ye same returned into ye same court, whereof there are many to be found extant in ye Tower to this day of en'y L'pp Marcher in Wales.

And now to know ye difference att this day between a L'pp Marcher and another l'pp that is not; as ye case now standeth, ye one little differeth from ye other, only in these things that are reserued to L'pps Marchers and Lo' Royall by ye statute 24 H. 8, cap. 9, against killing of weanelings, ye penalty is giuen to Lords Marchers, and by ye statute of 26 H. 8, cap 4, that Lo' Marchers should haue ye defaults of those that appeare not att their courts, and by ye statut of 27 H. 8, cap. 26, they shall haue halfe of ye forfeiture of comon mainprise recognisancs of ye peace, or appearance forfeited by their tenants, aunswared them by ye sheriffs, mizes and proffitts of their t'ts, as they used to haue at their first entrie, and keepe and hold Court Baron, Court Leete, and Law dayes, and all things to ye same court belonging, and shall haue within ye pr'cinct of their l'pps and lawe dayes, waifs, strays, infangtheef, and outfangtheef, treasure troue, and deodands and felons cattell, and of persons condemned or outlawed of felony or murther, and also wreck de mere, wharfage, and custome of straingers as they haue had in tymes past, as though such priuiledges were graunted to them by ye king by poynt of Charter. And ye statut of 1 E. 6, cap. 10, for awarding of proclamac'ons into Wales vppon suits out of ye Kings Bench and com'on place, ye libertyes, interest, and pr'heminence of Lo' Marchers is saved by prouiso, and by ye statut of 1 and 2 P. and M., cap. 15, the self same things as is graunted them before by ye statuts of 27 H. 8, cap. 26, is to them here confirmed, which in effect is all the difference that is be found between a L'pp Marcher and another l'pp that was not of that pr'rogative, which are left as memorialls to ye posterity to know which were Lordshipp Marchers in former auncient tymes.

And now to know whie these l'pps were first called L'ps Marchers and Lords of ye Marches of Wales (for soe shall ye find them called in most auncient records), seeing diu's and many of them are farr from those parts, which we now call ye Marches of Wales; and placed in ye very hart and center of Wales, and some in ye most remote and furthest parts of Wales, ye cause whie was for that att ye first these L'pps Marchers, first of all other plac's, beganne in ye Marches of Wales next adjoy'ing to England. For ye lords of England first of all beganne after ye conquest to subdue those parts nearest vnto them, and to take from ye Welchmen those cuntreys next adjoy'ing to England which was and now is called ye M'ches of Wales, being alsoe ye best and cheefest soyl of all Wales, and there when diu's lords had wonne diuers cuntreys, and made l'pps thereof, they were called Lords of the Marches, and in time, by ye corruption of speech, they were called Lo' Marchers by omitting ye sillables (of the), and instead thereof adding ye letter r to ye word marches, and making yt Lords Marchers for ease of speech; and therein the Marchers are ye most auncient L'pps Marchers to be found, for ye Welshmen inhabeting near att hand were wont to make sodein invasions vppon ye Kings of England subjects next vnto them, and oftentimes would take them prisoners, sometimes burn townes and villags, take away their goods, and invade their cuntreys with open hostilitye. Which greate injuries first forced ye K's of Engl', vppon ye humble complaint of their subjects, to take in hand to subdue ye cuntrey, and then did sett diuers of the noblemen to subdue first those parts which did most annoy him; and, therefore, first there were uery strong townes and cittyes built in those quarters that then were ye limitts of both cuntreys, viz., vppon ye river of Seauerne, as namely Bristoll, Gloucest'r, Worster, Sallop, and Chester vppon ye riuer Dee, as formerlie is said all townes of great force; and there were great and mightye subjects placed as men fittest of fforce and abilitye to defend and annoy ye Welshmen, as may well appear by ye auntient earles of townes and cyttyes. Then did these noblemen and earles of those townes, hauing once formelie seated themselues in stronge fortifications, proceed further into Wales, and woune many l'pps, as Clifford ye Hay, Abergauenny, Chepstow, Monmouth, Vsk, Newporte, Skynfraith and Buelt, Brecknock and Radnorsheir, and came not further by land that wayes; and this was not done by one army, nor att once, but at many and sundrye times from year to yeare, and by seu'all and sundrie lords, ye like did ye Earls of Chester, Sallop, and other for Mountgomery hedewin, Clum, Osestrye, Whittington, Harwarden, and Elsmere, and ye rest towards Chester.

And to ye end ye Welshmen might not at any hand be free, but occupied one eu'y side, that their forcs should one eu'y side be disperced, and their cuntrey at one instant be iuuaded; diu's of ye English lords did attempt to inviron ye cuntrey of Wales, and by water brought great armyes, and invaded and subdued great cuntreys one ye sea coast of Wales as ye l'pp of Glamorgan, ye l'pp of Gower, ye l'pp of Kidwelly, Langharn, Lanstephon, ye earldom of Pembrook, ye l'pp of Kemise, which was ye furthest of Wales yt was subdued by any Lo' Marcher that way vppon ye north sea coast, whoe was forced always to confront ye Princes of Wales, for yt he was next unto the cuntrey of Cardigansheir, and daylie subject to their sodein invasion, and therefore stood in most danger of all ye Lord Marchers of Wales; from ye riuer Seicey in South Wales to ye riuer of Corwy in North Wales was there noe Lo' Marcher; but ye same cuntreys remayned wholie to ye Prince of Wales vntill ye principalitye came to ye crowne.

And this word Lo' Marcher, or Lords of ye Marches of Wales was not onlye proper to l'pps within those parts which now are counted to be in ye Marches of Wales only, but yt was alsoe applied, spoken, and meant of all such l'pps as was subdued by ye English lords and taken from ye Princes of Wales, and holden of ye King of Engl' in cheif, in what part soeu' the same l'pp lay, yen wear in ye furthest parts of Wales, or in ye hart or inland of Wales, as appeareth plainly, for yt ye escheator in auncient tyme in ye sheirs of Gloster, Hereford, Sallop, and Wigorn, whoe was alsoe escheator of ye

Marches of Wales, as appeareth by diuers inquisitions found before them, which by reason they were escheators of the Marches of Wales, did enquier of ye tenure of L'pps Marchers in all parts of Wales, as in Glamorgan shier, Carmarthen sheir, Pembroke shier, and of all other sheirs in Wales where any L'pps Marchers were; and by this means ye escheator of ye Marches of Wales in ye times of E. 1, E. 2, and E. 3, and other kings tymes, and did enquier after ye death of Londres and ye Duke of Lancaster for ye tenure of Kydwelly and Cornwllon; after ye death of ye Earls of Pembroke for ye Earldome of Pembroke after ye death of Sir Will'm Martyn and others for ye Lordship of Kemys, after ye death of ye Lord of Abergagny and Brecknock, and did come into those parts and lordshippes, and sate in execution of their office to enquier thereof, whereby yt appeareth that this word Marches of Wales (as touching ye matter we now treat of) was taken to extend to all Wales subdued by ye Lo' Marchers, and not stinted to these parts which we now call ye Marches, being next adjoy'ing vnto England, and was ye first part subdued and brought subject to Engl' by ye means aforesaid, and was ye means and cause that they were called Lo' of ye Marches, and afterwards Lo' Marchers.

And that this word Marches of Wales was taken for euery part of Wales soe subdued by any Engl' lord yt is euident by ye statut of 27 H. 8, cap. 26, which saith that the statute shall not be prejudiciall to S'r Walter Deuoreux, knight of ye office of ye stuardshipp of Buelts, in ye Marches of South Wales, which Lo' of Buelts is in ye hart of Wales, in ye countye of Brecknock, and not in those parts that we now call by ye name of Marches of Wales.

Alsoe in ye 10th y' of H. 4 yt is found by ye escheator of Herefordsheir, by an office found after ye death of John Tutchett Lo' Audley as followeth: Dicunt quod p'dict' Johannes Tutchett ch'l'r tenuit in Marchia Walliæ p'dict' comitat' adjacent, medietat' Castri et domini de Neuport in Kemes, et tenet' de domino Rege in capite p' seruitium militare, which lordsh' of Kemis and ye Castl' of Newport lieth in ye furthest part of Pembroke sh' vppon ye sea coast, and yet was yt said to be in ye Marches of Wales, Comit' Hereford adjacent, for none other cause but for that yt was a L'pp Marcher, and was first subdued by an Engl' lord, and soe came to be holden of ye king as ye lordshippes that lay in ye marches were att the first; and therefore, and for this cause did ye Lordshippes Marchers first take their name were they neuer soe far in ye hart of Wales, yf they came to be subdued as ye Lordships Marchers first were, and were Lo'ps Marchers indeed.

Alsoe this poynt is much manifested by ye inquisition taken before ye com'iss'oners appoynted for that purpose 28 E. 3, before mentioned, touching intestate goods, and yt appeareth by auntient charter of Tenbye, made by Amer de Valence, 16 E. 2, and ye charter of Hauerford West, made by E. 1, An'o Reg. 19, that they released ye same custome to their burgesses of those townes, and Sir Nicholas Martyn did ye like to his t'ts of Kemys and yet yt is manifest that Tenby, Hauerford West and Kemys are not neare the parts next England, but in ye remotest and farthest part of Wales.

The like is found by ye office vppon ye attaynd'r of James, Earl of Wiltshier, to be used and done in Laugharne, an'o 5 E. 4, which is alsoe in Carmarthenshire vppon ye sea coast; soe that yt appeareth that Domin' in Marchia Walliæ was then vnderstood of euery L'pp Marcher in Wales in what part soeuer.

And now I will end here with aunswearing a doubt which I haue heard mooved of diuers, which was that ye riuer of Seuerne was ye auntient bound and limitt between Cambria, now called Wales, and England, while all ye land that is ouer ye said riuer of Seauerne, viz., all Herefordsh', and soe much beyond Seauerne as was part of ye auntient cuntryes of Gloster, Sallop, and Worstershiers, had not been diuided into L'pp Marchers, as ye rest of Wales was; for yt is certein that a great part of Glostersh', some other part of Worstersh', and some part of Shropsh', longe before ye statute of 27 H. 8; alsoe ye auntient sheir of Hereford is wholie beyond Seauerne, and yet it was not deuided into L'pp Marchers as ye rest of the marches was that was soon sithence ye Conquest tyme. To know ye cause of this, you must und'stand that soe much of Wales beyond Seauerne as made ye auncient county of Hereford, and soe much alsoe beyond Seauerne as was auntientlie part of ye cuntryes of Gloster, Wigorne, and Sallop, was long before ye Conquest woone from ye Welchmen, viz., in, or shortlie after, ye time of Offa, K. of Mercia; and all ye Welchmen cleerlie expelled there hence, and ye county now planted with Englishmen, and this was long before ye deviding of England into sheirs, and ye same was then annexed and became part of ye kingdom of Mercia, and soe as parcell of that kingdome yt came to ye hands of K. Alfred, whoe first deuided Engl' into sheirs, and, therefore, he finding yt ready subdued, and ye Welchmen expelled, made noe difference between yt and that which was one this side Seauerne, but did deuide that with ye rest into sheirs, and soe added some part thereof to ye sheirs of Gloster, Worster, and Sallop, and made ye whole sheir of Hereford, all beyond ye Seauerne, a sheir of yt self, for heerin I find difference between conquering of Wales by ye Saxons and ye Norman kings, for soe much of Wales as ye Saxon kings did winne, they then did yt themselves, and att their owne charge and to their owne use, and did not suffer their subjects to deal therein. But when the Normans K's came and had poss'on of ye whole realme of Engl', ye Conqueror att his first coming contented himself with ye realme of Engl', and thought himself well spedd to haue soe good successe in ye conquest thereof; and all his tyme did not bend much of his forc's against Wales, more then he was forced to doe by their inuading of his peapl and countrey; and so his issues after, him being much buiseed with keeping their cuntreys in France in quiett, were not soe well able to attend warrs one euery side, and that those cuntreys of Wales yt were subdued were rough and hillie, and hard to uanquish, they thought it a better pollicie to giue to their nobilitye such part thereof as they could conquer and subdue whiles they did attend warrs in other plac's, which ye Saxon K's neuer did. Soe that there was neuer any l'pp in Wales woone by any subject but such as was sithence the coming of William ye Conqueror, and that Herefordsheir and such parts of the other three sheirs afforesaid, as lieth beyond the Seauerne, and was parcell of ye auntient shers, was not wonne from ye Welchmen sithence ye Conquest (as some doe suppose and would infer) may appear manifestlie by one manor or l'pp in Herefordsh' called Virchinfeild, being one of the furthest parts of that sheir towards Wales, is auntient demesne lands, of which kind there none to be found in all England, but such as was in ye pou' of King Edward ye Confessor, before the conquest of William ye Conqueror, which argueth plainlie that yt must be woone from ye Welchmen by ye Saxon kings before ye Conquest, and that yt was by all likelihood made a sheir when King Alfred first diuided all England into sheirs, and that yt is noe newe sheir as some doe imagine, because yt lieth ouer Seauerne, and was within ye bounds of auntient Cambria.

An abstract of diu's records found in ye Tower, where ye kings in auntient tyme wrote to diuers Lo' Marchers in Wales, and peapl of those l'pps, touching affayres required of them in respect of their l'pps, which they held of ye king, as followeth—

King E. 1, in ye 11 y'r of his raigne, att which tyme he brought his great and ye last army that was in Wales, and in which ye last Prince Lluellin was slaine, and when ye king first came to ye poss'on of ye principallitie of Wales, ye king and his army being att Aberconwey, fearinge ye scarcetye of victualls that might ensue, wrote to ye officers of all ye good townes and countreys in South Wales, that were formerlie subdued by ye Lords Marchers, and were att ye kings commaundem' that they should cause victualls to be brought out of all parts of Mountgomery in Quindena Pascae next following, to furnish ye army, where he writeth to ye chief townes in eu'ry L'pp M'cher, and to some L'pps Marchers themselues as followeth.

P' ipsum Regem et Co'silium.

Heer is to be noted that ye kinge write not heer to any p't of ye 6 sheirs that is part of ye principality of Wales, but only to such parts of Wales as was subdued by ye Lords Marchers, and which were his tenants, and held their l'pps im'ediatelie of ye king. Yet we must think that the K. had alsoe men out of ye principaltie lands to serue him in these warrs, but these co'missions are not to be found with these among ye kings records in ye tower, for that the prince of Wales, whoe held ye principalitye, wrote for men out of his principalitye to serue his father in his warrs, which records remayne among ye pryncs records, and are not to be found in ye Tower.

HISTORICAL ACCOUNT OF THE ANCIENT AND MODERN STATE OF THE PRINCIPALITY OF WALES.

BY SIR JOHN DODRIDGE. London, 1714. 8vo.

EDWARD THE THIRD, in a Parliament holden at Westminster, in the fifteenth year of his reign, created Edward his eldest son, surnamed the Black Prince, Prince of Wales, being then of tender years, and invested him in the said Principality with these ensigns of honour, and as in the charter is contained, per sertum in capite et annulum in digito aureum, ac virgam argentum juxta morem: By a chaplet of gold, made in the manner of a garland, for the word sertum importeth, by a gold ring set on his finger, and by verge, rod, or sceptre of silver, howbeit, in the investiture of the succeeding princes, this rod or sceptre (as appeareth by the charters of their several creations) was changed into a verge of gold.

The said ring, for the better maintenance of the said Prince, his son in honourable support, according to such his state and dignity, gave vnto him by his charter, dated the Twelfth of May, in the seventh year of his reign of England, and in the fourth year of his reign of France, and enrolled in the Exchequer in the term of S. Hillary, in the eighteenth year of the said King Edward the Third, the said principality, and the manors, lordships, castles, and lands ensuing to appertain to the said principality, viz. :—

All his lordships and lands in North Wales, West Wales, and South Wales.

1. The lordship, castle, town, and country of Carnarvon.
2. The lordship, castle, and town of Conway.
3. The lordship, castle, and town of Crucketh.
4. The lordship, castle, and town of Bewmarish.
5. The lordship, castle, and town of Hardlagh.
6. The lordship, castle, and towns and counties of Anglesey and Merioneth.
7. The lordship, castle, town, and county of Caermardin.
8. The lordship, castle, and town of Lampadervaur.
9. The lordship and stewardship of Cantermawer.

10. The lordship, castle, town, and county of Cardigan.
11. The lordship, castle, and town of Emelyn.
12. The lordship, castle, and town of Bueli.
13. The lordship, castle, and town of Haverford.
14. The lordship, castle, and town of Montgomery.

And all the lands that were of Rice ap Meridick,¹ which came to the lands of King Edward the First, together with all the lordships, cities, castles, boroughs, towns, manors, members, hamlets, lands, tenements, knights-fees, voydances of Bishopricks, advowsons of churches and of abbies, priories, and of hospitals, with customs and prisages of wines; the exercise and execution of justice, and a chancery, forests, chaces, parks, woods, warrens, hundreds, comots, etc., and all other hereditaments, as well vnto the said principality as unto the said king in those parts then belonging.

To have and to hold the same vnto the said prince and his heirs, kings of England.

(2 H. IV, ca. 16.)

And that the people of Wales do dailly arrest the people of those counties com'ing with their marchandizes or other their goodes and cattles, affirming p.....against them of detts, couenants, trespasses, and other acco'ns, wherof they be parties nor pledges, to thend to grieue them by outragious ameracements and.....etc.

The K., for remedy to those mischiefs, prouided that if any people of.....counties be arrested and griued as aforesaide. Maintenaunt tres testimonies should be made, reciting their griuances to the gouernors or stewardes, where such offenders be resiaunt with their goods or cattalls receaued in Wales, vnder the.....or of the mayors or bailliffs of the cities and burroughes, or stewardes of franchises where the people griued be dwellinge. That the gouernors or stewardes of Wales may cause their distresses, goodes, or cattalls so taken or arrested, to be deliuered vnto them.

And if they make not deliuey within seuen days after request to them so made; then to be lawfull to the English people griued to arrest all men that come with the goodes and cattall of them of the seigniories of Wales, where such offenders be inhabiting or resiaunt, and the same to detayne till full agreement be made to the parties griued with their mises, costes, and expenses, together with their distresses, goodes, and cattles.

Prouided that if any Walshmen enter into any of the counties adioyning to the borders or marches in England, and do burne, kill, rauish, or com'itte any other felony or trespas, whereof he is attainted within the realme of England by the lawes there by outlagary or abjuration, and repaireth into Wales, and abideth there. (H. IV, ca. 17.)

That vpon the certificate and recordes to be made by the justices of the K. in Engl., before whome they shall be so conuicte, vnder their seales, to the lords and mynisters where such felons shall be found in Wales; fynall execution be made vpon the same felons, by those ll's, or mynisters.

Prouided that the Lords of the Marches of Wales shall kepe sufficient warde in their castles and seigniories in Wales, that no losse, riott, nor damage come to the K. or his realme, nor any of his liege people, by their tenaunts, resiaunts, nor other Walshmen in their defaulte, etc.

Prouided that no whole Englishman, by the space of three yeers following, should be conuicte at the suite of any Walshman in Wales, but by the judgement of English justices, or by the judgement of whole Englishmen burgesses, or by enquests of burroughes, townes, and Englishmen of the seigniories, where such Englishmen be arrested.

Prouided that no Walshman be receaued to purchase lands or ten'ts in Engl., nor within the burroughes or English townes in Wales, vpon paine to forfeiete the same purchases to the lords of whome the same be holden, as the estatt which the purchaser had therein.

That no Walshman be accepted burges, nor have any other lib'ty within the realme, nor within the burroughes or townes aforesaide.

Provided that no Englishman liege to the.....within franchises or without, in any county, hundred, or courte..... Wales, of whatsoever estate, but by Englishmen, and of the most... ..of good fame, not procured. (4 H. IV, ca. 26.)

Nor that the English burgesses, which have marryed Walshwomen.....franchises with the English burgesses.

Provided, for theschewing of many mischiefes, happening in the land of Wales. By many wasters, rymers, mynstrells, and other vagabondes. That.....waster rymer, mynstrell, nor vagabond be in any wise susteyned in Wales to make Comerthies or gatherings vpon the people there.

Provided that no congregations be suffered to be made by the Walshmen.....place in Wales, to make or take any counsaile, vnles it be for an euident..... necessary cause, and by licence of the chief officers and mynisters of the sa..... seigniory, where such thing shall be donne, and in the presence of the sa..... officers and ministers. (4 Hen. IV, ca. 28.)

That no man be armed, nor beare defensible armor, to marchaunt townes ci..... nor congregations in the same, nor in the highe wayes, in affray of the peac..... the Rg. liege people.

That no Englishman, nor Welshman, of what estate or condition soeuer, send.....bring by colour of marchaundize or otherwise, any victuall or arms to any..... of Wales, without the speciall licence of the K. or his counceil, vnles..... for stuffing and enstoring of castles or English townes, vpon paine of forfeiture of the same, etc. (4 H. IV, ca. 30.)

That in euery part of the marches of Wales, and townes of the marches, there be English constables to enquire, serch, and arrest all such victualls and armor. Those constables to haue the sixth parte of the forfeittures by them found.

That no Walshman haue castle, fortres, or house defensieue of his owne, nor of..... to kepe, otherwise then was vsed in the time of K. Edward the conqueror of..... vpon payne of forfeitture of the same. Except bishops and other tem..... lords for their own bodies. (4 H. IV, ca. 31.)

. . . . be made justice, chamberlen, chauncellor, treasurer, sherif, stewarde, constable of castle, receaur, escheator,

coroner, nor chief forester, nor other officer, nor keeper of the recordes, nor lieutenaunt in any of the saide offices, in any parte of Wales, nor of counsaile of any English lord, notwithstanding any patent made to the contrary, with this clause (non obstante quod sit Wallicus natus). Exceptt bishops in Wales, and of those and others whome the K. hath found his good and lawful liege people, he will to be advised by his counsell.

That for the more sufficient custody of the land of Wales, and to thend that a man may haue the better knowledge of the condition of the people there, the garrisons of the castles and walled townes there, be purveyed and stored sufficiently of valiant Englishmen, straungiers to the seigniories, where such castles be sett. And not of any man mixte of the parties or seigniories in Wales, or the marches of the same, till the land of Wales be otherwise justified and appeased. (H. IV, ca. 33.)

That no Englishman married to any Welshwoman of the am'ity or alyauce of Owen ap Glendour, traitor to the K., or to any other Welshwoman after the rebellion of the said Owen, or in tyme to come marrieth himself to any Walshwoman, be put in any office in Wales, or in the marches therof.

That touching felonies and roberies done within any seigniory of Southwales, the people of the countrey where such felons be borne, receaued or dwellinge, shall take the same felons and bring them to the gaile of the same countrey where they shall be taken, or els they shall be charged, and make satisfaction of the felonies and roberies to the parties griued, and that by the award of the Lo' of the same seigniory.

That no thief nor felon in Wales openly knowen be suffered to disclayme oute of the seigniory where the felony was donne. And that such disclayming be vtterly eschewed and put oute.

And that as well the said theeues openly known as other theeues be put to answer as pryvy to the enditements or accusations in the same seigniory where the theeues be taken, withoute being deliuered by disclaiming, or by l'res of marq' in any manner.

That wheras in the tyme of this rebellion in Wales lawfull liege people, as well English as Walshmen, haue been in Wales vpon correction of rebells there, vpon commaundment of the and his counsaill; at which tyme some of the rebells, as well on horse foote, found armed and making warre, against their faith and allegeance, were slayne, and other some maymed, beaten, wounded, taken, and imprisoned, and their goodes and cattles carried away by the saide liege people, for the cause aforesaid as was lawfull, as by his Ma'ty and his councell hath been heretofore ordeyned in that behalfe. (H. V, ca. 6.)

Many of these rebells, notwithstanding being yet a lyue, and other nexte of bloude, unto those rebells so deade, with their friends, nowe make dailly quarrells and great pursuite against theis faithfull liege people dwelling or resiaunt in those partes, and in the shires next to Wales, surmising in them that such things as aforesaid to themselues or to their cousens or frendes, falsly haue donne; wherby they demaund of these faithfull liege people amends, threatning otherwise to be auenged therof, wherby these faithfull liege people be many times grieuously vexed in many parties and lordships in Wales, some by enditements, accusements, or impeachements, and some by menasses, distresses taken, and some by their body taken and imprisoned they haue made gree to them in that behaffe; or that they would then of the death of such rebells so slayne, by one assach, after the custome of Wales, viz.: by the oathe of three hundred men, and of all such other trespas before specified, them acquite, to the great damage and distruction of the said faithfull liege people and euill example, etc.

Yt is therefore ordeyned that such quarreill, action, and demaunde be made from henceforth by arte nor by engine, to any of theis faithfull liege people by any of them which haue beene rebells, nor by their adherents, be he con' alye, or frend, nor by any other; vpon payne to paye the partie gra his treble damages, and to be imprisoned by the space of two yeres after he conuicte; and further to pay fine and ransome before he be delyuered.

That forasmuch as since the rebellion of the Walshmen lately reform many of the rebells of Wales, with other their adherents, with force and armes in the manner of warre, sometimes by day and sometimes by nighte, haue come into the counties of Salop, Hereford, and Glouc'r, and other places there hid and lodged, haue traiterously and feloniously taken many of the K.'s liege people, some riding about their merchaundizes, and doing their buissynes, and some in their howses, where they were abiding in Gods peace and the kings.

And those liege people so taken haue carryed oute of their countrey to diuers partes of Wales, and them haue witholden and kepte in the mounteynes of those partes of Wales, halfe a yeere together, sometimes more, and sometimes lesse, till they haue ransomed themselues at c li., and some more after their rate, as in tyme of warre, to the greate damage and mischief of the people of those counties, etc.

The K., for remedy, established that the justices of peace, within the counties of England, assigned for the time, shall haue power to enquier heere, and determyne all manner of such treasons and felonies, as well at the K.'s suite as at the parties.

So that if such offenders will not appere before those justices to aunswere as the lawe requireth, till they be, according to the custome of the realme, outlawed; then those justices shall certify by their P'res vnder the seales, the officers of the seigniories, in which such outlawes be withdrawen, abiding or resiaunt, of the outlagary upon them so pronounced.

And that those officers, vpon that certificate, take the bodies of those outlawes, and do execution vpon them in the same seigniory as the lawe requireth, without fine or raunsome, etc.

That wheras diuers persons dwelling in Wales and in the marches thereof, endited and outlawed of treasons and felonies, come into the county of Hereford, to cities and burroughes, faires and marketts, and to other places within that county, sometime by nighte, and there sell, buy marchaundize and tary by two, three, four dayes or more, at their will, and after reterne into their owne countrey without grieuance, impeachment, or execution of the lawe made vpon them by the sherif, his ministers, or any other person.

By reason that the sherif and his mynisters oftentimes haue no knowledge of their persons, nor of their beinge within the county; and other persons, some for faour and amity, and some for doubte of hurte; by reason of which not doing of due execution of the lawe. Those outlawed and endited persons, and other offenders of Wales and the marches, doubte not to come, slea, burne, robbe, and to do other offences in that county, to the p'petue norishment of the commons of the same.

The K. graunted by authority aforesaid, that if the sherif, or any sherif's mynisters, mayor, and baillifs of townes and burroughes, any other person conuersaunt in that county, knowe and see any such person or outlawed in any place within that county; that he shall arrest, take bring him to the jaile of that county, and there delyuer him to the jailor, according to the laws of this realme.

And if any such person indited or outlawed will disobey the arrest to be made as aforesaid, that he against whom such disobedisaunce is made, shall leauy hue and crye.

That euery person that is conuersaunt within that county, that heereth the hue and crye, shall come and aide him that leayed the same hue and crye to t the offender, and therein to do their best endeu'or to their power.

Yf they cannot take him, then to followe and pursue him oute of that county with hue and crye.

That the sheriff, under-sherif, and their mynisters, mayor, and baylifes saunt, and heering of such hue and cryes, shall make due execution of the same ordinaunce according to their power, vpon payne, etc.

That the justices of peace in that county shall haue power to enquire heer determyne vpon the defaultes and necligences in that behalfe, etc.

And that the Statute of Westm'r, touching such like matter, be put in due on, etc.

That the K., hauing by authority of Parliament, ratified and com' all manner of statutes made in any Parlyament against Walshmen, before that t not repealed; by authority aforesaid ordeyned that all grauntes of fraunchises, marketts, faires, and other lib'ties, to buye or to sell, to bale or and to sell within the townes of North Wales, made to any Walshman before tyme shal be voide and of no value. (25 H. VI, ca. 1.)

And that all the K.'s villeins within North Wales shall be bound and constra to do such labours and seruices as of righte and of auncient tyme they haue do. Notwithstanding any graunt made vnto them, or any veage of later time the contrary.

That such officers shall have power to compell them therunto as haue lauffullie vsed to doe before this tyme.

The Statute of Westm'r, made in a' 20 Dec. Regis, upon the grievous complaints of the com'ons of the counties of Hereford, Glouc'r and Salop, adjoyning to the marches of Wales, and of the counties of Somers't, Bristowe, and Chester. That if the goods and cattails of any of the people of those counties were wrongfully taken in any of those counties by any men of Wales, and out of those counties into Wales, or into the marches of Wales, conveyed, carried, brought, or retayned; such taking or takings, receipts, abettments, or holding of such offences, shall be judged hye treason; and whosoever therof shall be attainted, shal be taken and judged as traitors to the K.

That the justices of peace, in their sessions in those counties, shall haue power to enquier, and there to determyne of all such offenders, their abettors and receuors, and to make process against the persons so endited by two capias and an exigent, entry capias, conteyning the space of two monthes betwixt the date therof and the retourne of the same.

That mention be made of those writts of capias, that the sherifs of the counties for the time being shall make proclamation in their counties, that they be indited, shall appere before those justices in their sessions, to aunswere the matters conteyned in those enditements.

Provided that the Lords Marchers, of whome such offenders, their abettors and receauors, shall hold their lands and ten'ts, shall haue the forfeiture therof, and of their goodes and cattailles found within their seigniories, after they shal be atainted of such offences; and that this ordenance should contynue for six yeeres then nexte ensuing.

The K., by the aduise and consent aforesaid, willeth that the same ordenance shall endure fore six yeeres more, etc.

A prouision against perjury of offences vpon trialls in the Ips marchers in Wales; a diuers adherents, frends, and kinsfolkes, resorting to such jurors them to acquit such offenders. (H. VIII, ca. 4.)

By swearing of the keepers of juries, according to the generall custo in vse in England, for the true keping of them from spetch of any, and from and other relief vntill verdict be giuen, etc.

The punishm't of these keeper's defaults, referred to the insticiar, stewarde, lieutenant, or other officer, within Wales or the marches, before whome the same shall happen.

And of the jurors that offend, to the Lo' President and counsell in the marches, for the tyme being, etc.

That forasmuch as the people of Wales, and the marches of the s . . . not dreading the good and wholesome lawes and statutes of this realme . . . of long time continued and perseuered in con'itting of diuers and manifold thefts, murders, rebellions, wilfull burnings of howses, and other haynous and abominable malefacts, to the highe displeasure of God, disquiet of the K.'s well disposed subjects, and disturbaunce of the publiq' weale, which so deeply rooted and fixed in those people, as not like to cease viles some sharpe correction and punishment for redresse therof be provided. (26 H. VIII, ca. 6.)

The K., therefore, by authoritie of p'liament, etc., ordeyned that . . . and singular person or persons, dwelling or resiaunte within Wales or . . . lordships marchers of the same, from time to time at all times hereafter . . . such monition and warning giuen for the courts to be kepte in Wales, or in . . . the lordships marches, as before this time hath been vsed, shall parsonally rep' . . . resorte, and appere before the iustice, steward, lieutenaut, or other officer, at all and euery sessions, courte and courts, to be holden before the same j . . . steward, or other officer, in any whatsoever castle, fortress, or other place within Wales, or within the precincts, lymitts, and jurisdictions of euery the lordships marchers, or seignitories aforesaid, or the marches of the same, as by that justice, steward, or other officer shall be appointed.

And then and there shall geue his or their personall attendaunce to do execute, and accomplish all and euery thing and things, which to him or them sh apperteyne, vpon payne of such fines, forfeitures, and ameracements, as shall be afferred, assessed and taxed by the justice, steward, or other officer to the K.'s Yf it be within any of the K.'s Lordships Marchers; and if it be within other L'ps Marchers, then to the vse of the lord of the same Lordship Marcher for the time being, to be leuied by waye of distres, of the goodes and cattles of euery p'son not appeering at those courts, or not doing their dutie as abouesaid; as the officers in the Lordships Marchers in Wales haue sondry tymes heretofore vnlawfully exacted the K.'s subiects within such l'ps where they haue had rule or authority, by many and sundry wayes and meanes, and also com'itted them to streights, duresse, and imprisonment, for small and lighte fayned causes, and extortiously compelled them to pay them fines for their redemptions, contrary to the lawe.

That therefore if any steward, lieutenaunt, or any other officer of any Lordship Marcher do faine procure or ymagen any vntrue surmise againste any person or p'sons that shall so giue their parsonall attendaunce before them at such courte or courtes, and vpon the same vntrue surmise com'itte them to any laress of imprisonment contrary to the lawe, or contrary to the true or laudable custome of that lordship, that then, vpon suite made vnto the K.'s com'issioners, or counsell of the Marches, for the time being, by any such person or persons so imprisoned, or by any of their frends; that then the said com'issioners or counsell shall haue full power and aucthority to send for such steward, lieufenaunt or officer, and also for the person or persons so imprisoned.

And if the same person or persons so imprisoned can euidently proue before the said counsell, by good and substantiall witness or otherwise, that his imprisonment was vpon any fayned surmise, without cause reasonable or lawfull; that then the same com'issioners shall haue full power and aucthority to asseesse the said officer to pay to the said person or persons wrongfully imprisoned sixe shillings eight pence for euery day of their iuprisonment or more, by the direction of the said com'issioners, according to the hurtes and behauior of the person or persons imprisoned.

And that the same com'rs shall sett further fine vpon the said officer, to be paid to the K.'s vse, as by their discretions shal be thought conuenient.

And in case the said officers do refuse to appere before the same commissioners incontinent, after any commaundment to them directed and deliuered, after any such complaint made to the same commissioners; that then those com'issioners shall haue full power and aucthority, vpon euery defaulte made by any officer or officers, to assess and set vpon every such officer making defaulte, such fine or fines as be leuied to the K.'s vse, as by their discretions shal be thought conuenient.

And that the same com'rs shall haue full power and aucthoritie to compell the said officer or officers, by way of imprisonment, as well to pay such fine as shal be sett and taxed vpon them to the K.'s vse, as to pay unto euery person or persons so imprisoned such som'es of money as they shal be seassed to paye for their wrong imprisonment.

That no person or persons dwelling or resiaunt within Wales, or the Lordships Marchers of the same, of what estate, degree, or condition soeuer, coming, resorting, or repaying vnto any sessions or courte to be holden within Wales or any Lordships Marchers of the same, shall bring, or beare, or cause to be broughte or borne to the same sessions or courte, nor to any towne, church, fayer, markt, or other congregation (except vpon hue and cry, made of any felony or robbery), nor in the highe wayes in affray of the K.'s peace or liege people; any bill, longbowe, crossbowe, hangon, sword, staffe, daggar, halberd, morespik, speare, or any other or armor defensiu, vpon payne of forfeiture of the same, to suffer make fine and ransome to the K., by the discretion of his com'issioners of the time being; excepte it be by commaundment, licence, or assent of those ju or other officers, or of those com'ers of counsell in the marches for the tyme being.

That no person or persons from henceforth, without licence of the said writing, shall, within Wales, or the marches of the same, or in any shires adjoyning thervnto, requier, procure, gather, or leauy any commorth, bidale, tenaunts ale, or other collection or exaction of goodes, cattells, money, or any other thing, vnder colour of marryeng, or suffering of their children saying or singing their first masses, or getting of any priests or clarkes, or for redemption of any murder or other felony, or for any other cause, by what name or names soeuer they shall be called.

Nor shall procure or make, or cause to be made, any games of running, wrestling, leapping, or any other games (the game of shooting only excepted), vpon payne of one whole yeeres imprisonment of euery such offender, as well for making any such collection as any of the games aforesaid; and further to make such fine, as by the discretion of the Com'rs of the Marches shall be thought conuenient.

And that the Com'rs, by this act, shall have power and auctoritye to heere determyne the saide offences by their examynation.

That no person or persons shall hereafter, at any time, cast any thing into any within Wales, or in the Lordships Marchers of the same, by the meane or name of an A by reason whereof the courte may be letted, disturbed or discontinued for that time, vpon paine of one whole yeeres imprisonment of any such offendor, etc.; any custom heretofore vsed to the contrary, notwithstanding.

That all sessions and courts, hereafter to be holden within Wales, or the Lordships Ma(rches) of the same, shalbe kepte within the surest and most peaceable place within the same Lordship Marcher, where the said justice, steward, or other officer shall a

And for the punishment and speedie tryalls, as well of the counterfeito'rs of coyne curraunt within this realme, washing, clipping, or mynishing of the same. As of all and singular felonyes, murders, wilfull burning of howses, manslaughter, robberies, burglaries, rapes, and accessaries of the same, and other offences, felonies, donne or com'itted within any Lordship Marcher of Wales: By the auctor'y afore it is enacted, that the justices of the Gaoll deliuary, and of the peace and eu of them for the tyme being, in the shire or shires of England, where the K.'s writte eth, nexte adioyning to the same L'p Marcher or other place in Wales, where such counterfeicting, washing, clipping of any such coyne, or murder, hath beene or herafter shalbe com'tted or donne, or where any other felonies or accessaries shalbe herafter com'itted or donne, shall have from henceforth full power and auctoritie, at their sessions and gaolle deliuary to enquier by verdicte of twelue men of the same shire or shires, next adioyning within England where the K.'s writte runneth; there to cause all such counterfeiters, washers, clippers of money, felons, murderers, and accessaries to the same, to be indited according to the lawes of this lande, in like manner and form as if the same petty treasons, murders, felonies, and accessories to the same had been donne within any of the sheeres of this realme, and also to heere, determyne, and j the same according to the lawes of the realme.

That all forreigne pleas, pleaded by any of the said malefactors, shal be tried and determyned in the said sheere or sheeres, and that the acquittall and fine, making for any of the causes aforesaid, in any of the Lordships Marchers, shalbe no barre for any parson or persons being endited in the said shire or shires, within two yeeres nexte after any such murder or felonye donne.

Further, the said justices of peace and gaoll deliuey, and euery of them, shall haue full power and aucthority to award all manner of proces, as well of outlawry, as otherwise, against all and euery such offender so indicted, according to the custome and lawes used within the realme of England.

That the said justices, or two of them, afore whome any such offenders shall happen to be outlawed or atteinted by outlawry, shall ym'ediatly vpon the same outlagary or attendor directe and send unto the K.'s officer of his L'ps Marchers, or to their deputies, or vnto the Lords or Lordes Marchers of the same Lordship Marcher, or to his or their officer or officers, or to their deputies, wherein such offence, murder, or felony shall happen to be donne, or where any such offender, murderer, or felon shall happen to be resiaunt, a certificate vnder the seales of them, or two of them, of any such outlawry or atteindor, commaunding them and euery of them by the same, vnder payne of forfeiture of cli. to the K., to be leuyed as well of the goods, chattells, lands, and tenements of the same Lorde or Lords Marchers as of the goodes and chattells, landes, and tenements of the K.'s officers there, to apprehende and attache, or cause to be apprehended and attached, the bodie or bodies of the same offender or offenders so outlawed or atteinted, and them soufely to keepe or cause to be kepte, till such convenient tyme of the nexte sessions of the K.'s justices of his gaoll deliuey of that shire where such offender or offenders shall happen to be outlawed or atteinted, as to the K.'s officers of his L'ps Marchers, or to their deputies, or vnto the Lorde Marcher or Lordes Marchers of the same Lordship Marcher, or to his or their officer or officers, or their deputies, where such offender or offenders shal be apprehended, attached, dettyned, and kepte, shalbe thought expedient for the conveyance and conducting of the same offender and offenders in mauner and forme following, to be deliuered from the K.'s officers or their deputies, or the Lorde Marcher or Lordes Marchers, or his or their officer or officers, to other persons assigned by this acte, to receaue and convey such offender or offenders by indenture to be made betweene the deliuerer or deliuerers, and the receaur or receaurs, viz. :—

That the K.'s officer of his L'p Marcher, or their deputies, or the Lorde or Lordes Marchers of the Lordship Marsher, or his or their officer or officers, or their deputies, where such offender or offenders shall be apprehended, attached, deteyned, and kepte, shall saufely and surely conducte and convey, or cause to be conducted and conveyed, the same offender or offenders to the nexte Lordship Marcher, toward the shire where the same offender or offenders shall happen to be outlawed or attainted.

And that the officer of the same Lordship Marcher, or their deputies, or the Lorde or Lordes Marchers of the same Lordship Marcher, or his or their officer or officers, or their deputies, shall receaue and saufly conduct and convey the same offender or offenders to the nexte Lordship Marcher.

And to the K.'s officers of euery Lordship Marcher, or Lorde or Lordes Marchers of the same lordship, or his or their officers or their deputies, to receaue, conducte, and convey, saufly and surely offender or offenders from one Lordship Marcher to another, by indenture aforesaid, till such offender or offenders shall be saufly deliuered before justices of gaoll deliury vpon like penalty of cli., to be forfeited by the K.'s officers or Lord Marcher, that shall make defaulte to the contrary, to be likewise leauied as aforesaid to the K.'s vse.

And that all and euery officer and officers, lord and lordes, or other persons to whome any certificate shalbe directed as abouesaid, shall at the nexte sessions and gaoll deliury, after thapprehension or attachment of such offender or offenders, retourne the same certificate in due forme, and what he or they haue done in that behalfe vpon the payne aforesaid.

Sauing alwaies to all and euery offender and offenders, all and singular true challenges, exceptions, aduaantages; and all other plees to, of, and upon the outlawry pronounced against the same offender or offenders, accordinge to the custome and the lawes of England.

And that if any person, hereafter indebted, outlawed, arraigned, convicted, or atteinted by force of this Acte, do finde sufficient sureties before the K.'s justices of gaoll deliury, such, as by their discretion shalbe thought convenient; that such person shall not from henceforth com'it nor do any felony, murder, or felonious offence, nor be accessory thervnto, but at all tymes be of good behaviour, against the K., his heyres and successors, his and their lawes and subjects; that then those justices of gaoll deliury, for the tyme being, with the assent of the Lo' President, and two of the K.'s commissioners or counsell of the Marchers for the tyme being, or three of them at the leaste (wherof the Lo' President, or one of the said counsell to be one), shall and may, at their discretion, for one tyme only admitte any such offender to a certaine fine or some of money by them to be taxed vpon him, to be surely paide to the K.'s vse; and shall haue full power and auctoritie by this acte to discharge any such offender or offenders so arraigned, outlawed, convicted, and atteinted, of all and euery such felony, murther, or felonious offence, and accessaries of the same, and of all executions and punishments of death, which the same offender or offenders should suffer by the common lawes of this realme.

So that the same offender or offenders stand not appealed of the same felony, murder, etc., at the time of his discharge.

That the same discharge shalbe availeable to the partie offending, as well against the K., his heyres or successors, as againste all other Lords Marchers for that one tyme only.

A particular prouiso for sauing the liberties of the L.'s Marchers abridged by this Acte, yf the offenders happen not to be indited, arraigned, convicted, or atteinted by force of this acte, within two years next after the facte com'itted.

And wheras vpon diuers murthers, roberries, felonies, etc., donne within the L.'s Marchers of Wales, and in other places of Wales withoute the same lordships. The offenders diuers tymes flee and escape from thence into another Lordship Marcher, where, by the aide, consort, and favour of the lo' of the same lordship, or his officer or officers, they haue been abiding and resiaunt, in which lordships those Lords Marchers haue and do pretend a custome and priuiledge that none of the K.'s mynisters or subjects may enter, to pursue, apprehend, and attach any such offender thether repaired, by meanes wherof those offenders haue passed vnpunished, to the encouragement of the ill-disposed. Yt is therefore provided that every officer and officers, and their deputies, vpon commaundment geuen by the com'res or counsell of the Marchers for the tyme being, shall bring, send or delyuer euery such offender to the officer of the Lordship Marcher, or other place where any such offence is, or shalbe com'itted vpon the merces and bonds of the said lordship, or to those com'res or counsell, according to the said officers by them, shalbe commaunded vpon payne of 40*li*. The same commaundment or com'ission to be directed to any such officer, to be sent, conueyed, or deliuered by a sargent-at-armes or a pursuinaunt, attendaunt on the said counsell of the Marches for the tyme being.

27 Henry VIII, cap. 7.

A prouision for the making voide of diuerse vnlawful customes and vsages within the forests of Wales and the Marches, with diuers vnlawful exactions vsed and taken by the foresters. All which are to encurre the punishment of robbery by the highe waye, to be free in the nexte shire adioyning, before the justices of peace, according to the Lawes of England, etc.

27 Henry VIII, cap. 27.

An acte, declaring that albeit the domynion Principallitie . . . of Wales, justlie and rightly is, and euer hath been incorporated . . . vnited, and subjecte to and vnder the temporall crowne of this realme . . . very member and joint of the same; wherof the K., in mere droit and . . . righte, is true head king, lorde, and ruler.

Yet, notwithstanding, because that in the same countrey, principality, and dominion, diuers rightes, vsages, lawes, and customes, befarre differing from the lawes and customes of this realme. And also because that the people of the same domynion haue and do dailly vse a speech nothinge like nor consonant to the natural mother tongue vsed within this realme, some rude and ignorant people haue made distinction and diuersitie betwixte the K.'s subjects of this realme and those of the said dominion and principallitie of Wales, whareby great discord, variaunce, debate, diuision, murmur, and sedition hath growne betwixte his saide subjects.

That the K., therefore, of a singular loue, zeale, and favour, that he beareth towardses his subiects of Wales, mynding and intending to reduce them to the p'fect order, notice, and knowledge of the lawes of this realme, and vtterly to roote oute all and singular the synister vsages and customes differing from the same, and to bring his subiects of this realme, and his said domynion of Wales, to an amiable concorde and vnitie hathe established (by this acte)—

That his said countrey or dominion of Wales shalbe, stand, and continue for euer from henceforth incorporated, vnited, and annexed to and . . . this his Realme of England.

That all and euery person and persons, borne and to be borne in . . . saide Principallitie, countrey, or dominion of Wales, shall haue, enioye, and inherit all and singular freedoms, liberties, rightes, pryuiledges, and lawes with this realme, and other the K.'s dominions, as other the K.'s subjects, natural borne within the same.

That all and euery person and persons, inheritable to any manners, lauds, ten'ts, reuersions, seruices, or other hereditaments, which shall discend after the fi of all saintes nexste coming, within the said principallitie, countrey, or dominion of Wales, and within any particular lordship, parte or parcell of the said countrey or dominion of Wales, shall for euer, from and after that feaste of All Saincts, inherit and be inheritable to the same mannors, landes, ten'ts, rents, reuer-sions, and hereditaments, after the English tenor, without diuision or partition, and after the forme of the lawes of this Realme of England, and not after any tenu... nor after the form of any Walsh lawes or customes.

That the lawes, ordenaunces, and statutes of England, and none other, from and after the said feast of All Saints nexste, shalbe for euer had, vsed, practised, and executed in the countrey or dominion of Wales, and euery parte thereof in like manner, forme, and order, as the same be and shalbe in this realme, and in such manner and forme as by this acte shalbe further established. Any acte, statute, etc., to the contrary, notwithstanding.

And forasmuch as there be diuerse Lordships Marchers within the saide countrey or dominion of Wales, lying betwene the shires of England, and the shires of that countrey or dominion of Wales, being no parcell of any other shires where the lawes and due correction is vsed. By reason wherof manifold detestable murthers, burning of howses, robberies, thefts, trespasses, routs, riottes, vnlawfull assemblies, imbra-ceries, maintenaunces, receiting of felons, oppressions, breach of the peace, and diuers other offences, contrary to all lawes and justice, haue been there practised and com'itted.

That the offenders, thervpon making their refuge from lordship to lordship, continued without punishment or correction.

For reformation whereof, and forasmuch as diuers and many of the said L'ps Marchers, be nowe in the handes and possession of the K., and the smallest number of them in the possession of other men. Yt is therefore enacted, that diuers of the said Lordshipps Marchers shalbe vnited, annexed, and joyned to diuers of the shires of England, and diuers others to sundry shires of the said countrey or dominion of Wales, as in the same acte followeth.

And that all the residue of the said Lordshippes Marchers, within the countrey or dominion of Wales, shalbe seuered and deuided into certen p'ticuler countries or shires, as in the Acte at lardge, etc., viz.

Monmouth, Brecknock, Radnor, Mountgomery, and Denbighe.

That all actions reals sued for any landes, ten'ts, or hereditaments, or any other thing within the countie of Monmouth, and all actions parsonalls within the same county, of the value of xls. or above, and all actions mixed, shall be sued by originall writte out of the K.'s highe courte of Chauncery in Englande, and be hard, determyned and tried before the K.'s Justices in England, by Assize or Nisi Prius, in the said countie of Monmouth, in such like manner and forme, as all other actions realls, p'sonalls and mixte, be sued hard, determyned, or tried, in or for any shire of England.

That the K.'s justices of his bench, or of his common bench of Westm'r, shall haue full power to directe all manner proces to the sherif and other officers of the saide countie of Monmouth. And also to directe writts of Venire facias to the same sheriff for the triall of euery issue joyned before them; and also to award com'issions of Nisi Prius into the said countie of Monmouth, for the triall of such issues ioyned before them, in like manner and forme as they do into euery shire of this Realme of England.

That all and euery the K.'s subjects and inhabitaunts, with . . . county of Monmouth shalbe for euer from and after the said feaste of All Saints, obliged and bound to be obedient and attendaunt to the Lordes C . . . cellor of England, the K.'s justices, and other of the K.'s most ho' counsell, unto all lawes, customes, ordenaunces, and statutes of this realme of England, in like manner and forme as all other the K.'s subiects within euery other shire of England be bound and obliged. Any acte, vsage, custome, etc., to the contrary, notwithstanding.

That the sherif of the said countie shall hold plea of Replegiart, and all other suits and plaintes vnder xls. in his countie or shire courte, in like manner and forme as all other sherifs do within this Realme of England.

That the sherif, escheator, and coroners, that hereafter shalbe within the said county of Monmouth shalbe obliged and bound to execute all the K.'s processes, and to make due returns thereof, and to vse and exercise their offices according to the lawes and statutes of this Realme of England, in all and every thinge the sherifs, escheators be obliged and bound to do in all and euery other shire of this Realme of England.

That the sherif and escheators in the said countie of Monmouth that hereafter shalbe appointed by the K. make their accounts for their offices in the K.'s Exchequer in England in like manner and forme as other sherifs and escheators do within this Realme of England, and vpon such like paine and penaltie as is vpon other sherifs and escheators of euery other shire within the Realme of England.

That for as much as the counties of Brecknock, Radnor, Mountgomery, and Denbigh are farre distaunt from the city of London, where the lawes of England are commonly used, ministred, exercited and executed: And for that the inhabitants of the said shires of Brecknock, Radnor, Mountgomery and Denbigh are not of substaunce, power, and habilitie to traueill out of their countreys to seeke the administration of justice: That therefore the K. shall haue one Chauncery and one Exchequer at his castle of Brecknock and one other at his towne and castle of Denbigh.

That the sherifs, escheators, and other officers, accomptaunts of the counties of Brecknock, Radnor, Mountgomery, and Denbigh from and after the said feast of All Saints shalbe yeerely appointed by the K. for and within euey of thoseshires of Brecknock, Radnor, Mountgomery, and Denbigh.

And that the sherifs, escheators, and other officers accomptaunts of the counties of Brecknock and Radnor from and after the said feast of All Saints shall yeerly make their accompts before the K.'s auditors and such chamberlen or Baron of the said exchequer as shalbe thervnto appointed by the K. in such like manner and forme as sherifs, escheators, and other officers accomptants do yeerely meke their accounts at Westm'r within this Realme of England.

That justice shalbe executed, vsed, executed and mynistred vnto the K.'s subjects and inhabitants, in euey of the said shiers of Brecknock, Radnor, Mountgomery, and Denbigh, according to the lawes and statutes of this Realme of England according to such other customs and lawes now vsed in Wales aforesaid, as the K. and his most ho' counsell shall allow and think expedient, by such justiciar or justiciars as shalbe thervnto appointed by the K. and after such forme and fashion as justice is vsed and ministred vnto the K.'s subjects within the 3 shires of North Wales.

That the Lordships Marchers annexed to the shires of England shalbe taken, named, and knowen as parcell and member of the same shires to which they are so annexed or vnited, and of such hundreds of those shires to which they are conjoynd and added by force of this Acte, And shall enjoye such and the same priuledge and none other, as that hundred to which they shalbe so annexed.

That those other Lordships Marchers annexed or vnited to any of the Walsh counties shallbe gouerned in the same manner and by the same lawes and customes as those Walshe counties to which they are so joynd and added.

That all Justices, com'issioners, sherifs, coroners, escheators, stewards, and their lieutenaunts, and all other officers and ministers of the lawe, shall proclaime and kepe the sessions, courts, hundreds, leates, sherifs courtes, and all other courtes in the English tongue. And all oathes of officers, juries, and enquests, and all other affidavits, verdicts, and wagers of lawe, to be geuen and donne in the English tongue.

And also that from henceforth no parson or persons that vse the Walsh speech or language shall haue or enjoye any manner, office, or fees within this Realme of England, Wales, or other the K.'s dominion, vpon payne of forfeitinge the same offices or fees, vnless he or they vse and exercize the speech or language of English.

That it shalbe lawfull to the sherif of euery the aforesaid counties of Monmouth, Brecknock, Radnor, Mountgomery, and Denbigh, and euery of them to put euery misruled and suspect person within their sherifwick vnder com'on mainprize, and suretie of their personall appearaunce, as the sherifs do within euery the 3 shires of North Wales.

That the recognisaunces of such com'on mainprize and suretie of appearaunce taken before any of the said sherifs, shalbe as good and effectull as if it were taken by any Justice of Record.

That the sherif of the County of Monmouth shall certify such recognizance, common mainprize, or suretie of apeeraunce at euery Quarter Sessions before the justices of the peace of the said countie of Monmouthe.

That euery person or persons within the county of Monmouth.....common mainprize and bound to his personall appearaunce shall keep.....appearaunces at the Sessions holden within the said county of Monmouth.....after the clause of Easter, and after the feaste of St. Michaell th' Archangel vntill they be therof released according to the course of the lawe.

And that euery of the sherifs of the countyes of Brecknock, Radnor, Mountgomery, and Denbigh, and euery of them, shall certifie suche recognicaunces, com'on mainprize, or surety of appeeraunce by them taken before such justice as shalbe appointed by the K. within euery of the said shires of euery sessions to be holden in any of those shires before the same justices.

The Lords Marchers within their Lordships Marchers to haue the oity of the forfeitures of such mainprize of their owne tenaunts marchers to be payd vnto him by the sherif of the same countie wherein it shall happen, if he can leauy the same. And that sherif to account for the other halfe to the K. in such exchequer as he shalbe accoumptable.

The L. Channcellor to directe the K.'s com'ission vnder the great seale of England to such persons as to him shalbe thoughte conuenient, to enquire and search out by allwayes and meanes they can, all and singular, lawes, usages, and customes vsed in Wales, to returne and certifie the same to the K. and his moste ho' counsell before the said Feast of All Saints, etc. That vpon deliberate aduise taken thereof, All such lawes, vsages, and customes, as the K. and his said counsell shall thinck expedient and necessary to be conteynued in any of those shires of Wales, may stand and be of full force and vertue, And for euer be inuioleable kepte and obserued, etc.

The same order to be obserued within the county of Monmouthe for the election of knights and burgesses to the Parlyamente as in other shires in the Realme of England. The same to haue like dignity, prehemynence and priuiledge, and shalbe allowed such fees as other knightes and burgesses of the Parlement, and be leuied and paid in such order and forme as in other shires of England.

The Lordes Marchers hauing Lordships Marchers, or lordships royall to haue the same courtes, barons courtes leetes, and lawdayes, and all such profites of their tenautes, and all and euery thing to the same courtes appertayninge. And to their lawdaye within the precincte of their l'ps waif, stray, infangtheef and outfangtheef. Treasure trouee, deodands, goodes, and chattells of felons, and of persons condemned or outlawed of felony or murder, put in exigent for felony or murther, wrek de mer, warfage, and customes of straungiers as they haue had in tymes paste, etc.

That this Acte should not take away or derogate any lawes, vsages, or laudable customes, now vsed within the three shires of Northwales.

Nor deprive or take away the whole lib'ties of the Duchy of Lancaster, but that the same lib'ties shall contynue and be and be vsed in euery lordship parcell of that dutchie in Wales, as they are vsed in shire ground, and not countie Palantine in England.

Nor be prejudiciall to any person or persons to auoide any patent ioint patent of any office, fees, annuities, or reuersion of any office, fees, an'uties, to them graunted for tearms of their lief or lyues, by the K., or by any other person or persons, either for the vsing, exercizing, or occupying of any manner, office, or otherwise, being not repugnaunt to this Acte.

And in case any such offices be repugnaunt against this Acte, yet, notwithstanding, the grauntees to enjoye their fees during their lyues, any article or clause to the contrary, etc.

Nor to be prejudiciall to the Earle of Wourcester for his office of justice of the whole countie of Glamorgan.

Nor to take away any other Actes before made for triall of treason, murder, felonies, or accessaries of the same in any Lordship Marcher in Wales or the nexte shires of England adjoyning to the same.

And that landes, ten^{ts}, and hereditaments lying in Wales, which haue been time oute of mynde by the laudable customes of that countrey vsed to be departed and departible, amongst issues and heyres males, shall so contynue still. This Acte notwithstanding, etc.

That, notwithstanding this Acte, the K. shall haue power for three yeeres nexte following to suspend the same Acte, for such time as shall please him, or vtterly to repeale the same as shall please him, so as the same be signified by writinge vnder the great seale of England, etc.

That, where there is appointed one chauncery and one excheq^r at Brecknock and another at Denbigh, the K. shall haue power from tyme to tyme within the tearme of five yeeres next after this Parlement, for due administration of justice in Wales, to erecte and ordeyne such courte or courtes, and so many courtes of recorde in Wales, and such and so many justices, mynisters, officers, and clarkes, as within that time of five yeeres shalbe thought sufficient and conuenient for the good gouernment of that countrey.

A p^ticular reseruatiō for S^r Walter Deuereux, Lo^r Ferrers of Chartley, etc., for his offices of chief justice and chamberlen of South Wales, etc., and of steward and receaour of Buelth, etc.

28 Henry VIII, cap. 3.

An Acte for the more indifferent allottm^t and appportioning shires in Wales for the ease and co^moditie of the K.'s subjects..... then was don by the Acte of 27 cjusdem Rs. before recited.

34 and 35 Henry VIII, cap. ult.

An Acte shewing that the K. of his tender zeale and affection which he beareth towards his louing and obedient subjects of his dominion, principality and countrey of Wales, for good rule and order from henceforth to be kepte and mainteyned within the same, wherby his said subiects may growe to the more wealth and prosperity, hath deuised and made diuers and sundry good and necessary ordinaunces which, at the humble suite of those his subjects of Wales, he is pleased shalbe established by authority of Parlyament as followeth, viz. :

First, yt the said dominion, principaltie, or countrey of Wales be deuided into twelve shires, of which eight haue been shires of auncient tyme, as Glamorgan, Caermarthen, Pembroke, Cardigan, Flint, Caernaruan, Anglesey, and Merioneth. And the fower last shires newly made by the Acte of 27 die Regis, before recited, viz., Radnor, Brecknock, Mountgomery, and Denbigh, ouer and besides the shire of Monmouth and diuers other dominions, manners and lordships in the marches of Wales, vnited and annexed to the shires of Salop, Hereford, and Glouc'r, as by the same Acte appeereth.

That the limitations of hundreds of late made within those hundreds by vertue of the K.'s com'issions out of the chauncery and therinto returned, shall contynue in full strength, according to those lymitations.

Excepte such as haue beene altered by any Acte of Parle- ment, or by any Acte in this present Parlement are to be altered or changed.

That there shalbe a president and counsell remayning in the dominion or principality of Wales, and the marchers of the same, with all officers, clarks, and incidents ther vn. . . in man- ner and forme as hath beene heretofore vsed and accustomed, which president and counsell shall haue power and authority to heere and determyne by their wisdom and discretions such causes and matters as be or herafter shalbe assigned vnto them by the K.'s Ma'ty as heretofore hath been accustomed.

That there shalbe sessions kepte twice euery yeere in euery the said shires of Wales, as Glamorgan, Brecknock, Radnor, Caremarthen, Pembroke, Cardigan, Mountgomery, Denbigh, Flint, Caernaruan, Merioneth, and Anglesey; and the same to be called the K.'s great sessions in Wales.

That the justices of Chester, for the time being, shall hold and kepe sessions twice euery yeere in the shires of Denbighe, Flint, and Mountgomery, and haue nothing besides his old fee of cli. yeerely for the same.

That the justice of North Wales shall likewise hold and kepe sessions twice every yeere in the shires of Caernaruan, Me- rioneth, and Anglesey, and shall haue of the K. the yerely fee of fifty pounds for the same.

That one person learned in the lawes of this Realme of England, by the K.'s M'ty to be named and appointed, shalbe justice of the shires of Radnor, Brecknocke, and Glamorgan, and shall kepe sessions twice euery yere in euery of the said shires, and shall haue yeerely cli. for his fee of the K.

That one other person learned in the lawes of this Realme shalbe appointed as aforesaid to be justice of Caermarthen, Pembroke, and Cardigan, and shall likewise kepe sessions twise every yere in euery the same shires, and shall haue yeerely of the K.'s Ma'ty the like fee of o. cli.

That those persons or justices and euery of them nowe being or that hereafter shalbe, shall haue seueral l'res patents and com'issions for their offices, vnder the K.'s great seale of England, to be exercized by themselves or their sufficient deputies, etc.

That euery of those justices within the limits of their com'issions and auctorities, shall hold all manner of pleas of the Crowne in their sessions in as large and ample manner as the K.'s chief justices of England, and other the K.'s justices of the K.'s bench there, or any of them may do in their places or elsewhere, within the Realme of England; and also hold plees of Assise, and all other plees and actions reall, p'sonall, and mixte, in as large and ample man'er as the K.'s chief justice of the com'on place in England, and other justices of the same place, or any of them, may do in the Realme of England.

That euery of those justices of Wales shall haue power and authority to enquier of all treasons, murders, felonies, riotts, routs, vnlawfull assemblies, extortions, imbraceries, maintenances, reteyners, concealements, contempts, and all other offences of what natures, names, or qualities soeuer they be donne, com'itted, or p'petrated within the lymitts of the com'issions, according to the lawes, statutes, and customes of the Realme of England.

That the sessions shalbe kept and contynued by the sp in euery of the said shires, at either tyme, as is and hath been the said three shires in North Wales. Wherof the justices to cause proclamations to be made in the shire townes of the tyme and place of the sessions at least fifteen dayes before, that the subjects may take notice therof.

That dayes of contynuance, in all plees, plaints, proces, and adiournments shalbe giuen from day to day, and from sessions to sessions, at the discretion of those justices within the seuerall limitts of their auctorities, for the speedy administration of justice, to all and singular the K.'s subiects, as is and hath been vsed in North Wales.

1. That the originall seale, deuised by the K. for administration of justice in the three shires of North Wales, Merioneth, Caernarvan, and Anglesey, shalbe and remayne in the charge and custodie of the chamberlen of North Wales.

2. That another originall seale, to be vsed for the same purpose . . . is the shires of Caermarthen, Pembroke, and Cardigan, shall be and remayne in the charge and keeping of the chamberlein of South Wales.

3. A thirde, for Brecknocke, Radnor, and Glamorgan to remayne in the charge and custody of the steward and chamberlen of Brecknock.

4. A fourth, for Denbigh and Mountgomery to remayne in the charge and custody of the steward or chamberlen of Denbigh.

5. And the originall seale of Chester to serue for Flintshire, and to remaine in the custody of the chamberlein of Chester.

That those stewards or chamberlens euery one of them shall se with the seale to his charge com'itted, allmanner of originall writts and p returnable before the justices at their sessions to be holden in euery of those counties as afore-said, and shall seuerally accoumpte and aunswer the K. for the prouffitts of the same seale.

That none of those stewardest, chamberlens, or chauncellors, by occasion of those seales in their charge, or by colour of office, compell any person or persons inhabiting any of those twelve shires to appere before them or their deputies. Nor shall haue authority to heere or determyne any plees of the Crowne, nor other matters of justice, otherwise then by this Acte is prescribed. But only to seale such originall writts and proces as shalbe retournable before those justices at their sessions which shalbe vsed, made, sealed, and returned as hath bene vsed before the justices in North Wales.

That all such persons as now be or hereafter shalbe the K.'s stewartes, chamberlens, or chauncellors, within any of those twelve shires, which, by reson of their offices, haue charge for the receipte, collection, or accoumpte of, or for any of the K.'s rents, reuenues, farmes, or prouffitts due, or to be due, within the dominion of Wales, may directe process vnder the said seale, being in their charge and custody, within the lymitts of their seuerall authorities, only against bailliffs, reves, fermors, and other ministers accoumptaunt, to appeere before themselves to aunswer to, and for any of the K.'s reuenues, farmes, rents, or profits, and for none other causes nor against any other person or persons in like manner and forme as they haue been accustomed to do in like case.

That all stewards of any lordships in Wales may kepe and holde such courts, lawdayes, and courtbarons as apperteyne and belong vnto such l'ps and mannors wherof they be stewards, and to holde please by plainte vnder the som'e of xls. in euery such Court baron, and haue and enjoye all other authorities, commodities, and prouffitts as stewards of leetes, lawdaies, and courte barons in England, and none other, etc.

That no steward or sherif of those counties in Wales shall haue any power or authority to enquier of any manner, felony, in any such leete, lawday, or turne within that dominion of Wales. And that from henceforth no leete or lawday be kepte by the steward or other officer of any l'pp or mannor in Wales, but in such l'ps and places where it was accustomed to be kepte before the making of the Acte of Parlement concerning Wales, 26 of this K. So alwayes that the place where such courte shalbe kepte be meete and convenient for that purpose.

That all mayors, baillies, and head officers of townes corporate in Wales, may hold pleas, and determyne actions, and do every other thinge, concerning com'on justice, according to their lawfull graunts and laudable customs of such townes. So alwayes they followe the course of the lawes and customes of England, not the Wealsh laws or cusstomes. Saue that in every of the said townes, they may try all issues joyned or to be joyned in any action parsonall by sixe men, as heretofore in diuer places of yt countrey hath beene vsed.

That forasmuch as there be diuers small burroughes and townes corporate within that dominion of Wales, whereof many haue their commencement by graunts made from the L's Marchers, and some by other means, the K., from henceforth, by virtue of this Acte, shall haue full power and aucthority, by the l'res patents to be enrolled in his Ma'ties high courte of Chauncery, at any time within seven yeres nexte ensuinge, to repeale such and so many of such boroughes and townes corporate, and all lib'ties and customes of the same as to his highnes shalbe thought expedient. To thintent his Ma'tie may at his good pleasure duly erecte m . . . such and as many other bourroughes or townes corporate within . . . dominion more apte and conuenient for that purpose, and endue them . . . such lib'ties and franchises as his Ma'ty shall thinck necessary for the good of that countrey.

That the K.'s pleasure is, that such as haue patents of any office of steward, chamberlen, chauncellor, or justice within the said dominion of Wales, for tearme of their lyues, shall haue and enjoye their certeine, ordenary, and annuall fees of money used and accustomed to be paide and borne by the K., by vertue of any their l'res patents during their interest therin, but not to take or clayme any casual fees claymed by coulor of those offices contrary to this ordenaunce, etc.

1. That besides those originall seales aforesaid, there shalbe four iudiciall seales diuised by the K., whereof one to remaine with the justice of Chester, appointed by this Acte to be justice of the shires of Flint, Denbigh, and Mountgomery, to seale all iuditiall proces and billes within those counties, that shalbe sued before the saide justice at the sessions to be holden within those shires.

2. That another of those iuditiall seales shall remayne and contynue in the charge and custody of the justice of North Wales.

3. Another with the justice of the three shires of Glamorgan, Brecknock, and Radnor.

4. A fourth with the justice of the three shires of Pembroke, Caermarthen, and Cardigan.

And those justices shall seale with those iuditiall seales euery of them with that p'ticular com'itted to his seuerall and proper chardge, as well all billes as all other iuditiall process, that shalbe sued before them in the said sessions, vpon any originall billes or writts, and all other proc... that shalbe awarded from any of those justices shalbe sealed with that iuditiall seale.

That euery of the said justices shall accounte and answere to the K. for the prouffts of that seale com'itted to his chardge, as by this Acte is declared.

That the teste of euery bill and iuditiall process, that shall pass vnder the said iuditiall seale, shalbe under the name of such of those justices . . . from whome the same shall passe, in like manner and forme as is vsed in the comon place in England.

That all actions, reall and mixed, atteints, conspiracies, and quare impedit; appealls of marchor and felonie, and all actions grounded vpon any statuts, shalbe sued by originall writts, to be obteyned and sealed with the said originall seale, returnable before the said justices at their sessions, within the lymits of their seuerall auctorities as aforesaid.

That all manner of personall actions, as dett, detinue, trespas, accoumpt and such like, amounting to the some of xls. or aboue, shalbe sued by writts originall, to be obteyned and sealed as aforesaid, or by billes, at the pleasure of the partie suing the same, before the said justices within the lymitts of their auctorities as in North Wales.

That all parsonall actions vnder the some of xls. as dett, detinue, trespas, accoumpte, and such like, shall and may be sued before any of the said justices in the said sessions, by bill as is vsed in North Wales.

That euery originall bill concerning actions parsonalls, shalbe sealed with the K.'s iudiciall seale, being in the custody of the justice before whome such parsonall actions by bill shalbe broughte and com'enced.

That such fees shalbe paid for the writing and sealing of such originall billes and writts as followeth, viz., for euery originall writt vpon the causes aforesaid, and for every bill in action parsonall, wherof the dett or damage amounte to the some of xls. or aboue, the party pursuing the same shall pay for the seale of euery such writte or bill o. viid. And for euery iuditiall proces vpon any such originall writte or bill, o. viid. for the seale wherof the K.'s Ma'y is to haue vid., and the justice id.

That euery bill in parsonall action, wherof the dett, dutie, or demaunde, amounteth not to xls., and all manner iuditiall proces vpon the same, shall also be seale with the K.'s iuditiall seale, and the parties pursuing the same shall pay for the seale of euery such bill, and iuditiall proces therevpon, o. iiid., whereof the K. to haue iid., and the justice id.

That all writts of scire facias and writts of good abearing, or for the peace, or writts of supersedeas vpon the same, and all other proces to be sued from those justices, vpon any record or suggestion admitted by any of those justices within the p'ticular lymitts of their auctorities, shall also be seale with the said iuditiall seale; and the parties pursuing the same to pay for the seale of euery such writte and proces o. viid., viz., vid. to the K., and id. to the justice vt s'm.

That euery exemplification vpon any record before any of the said justices, shalbe seale with the K.'s iuditiall seale, and the parties pursuing the same shall pay for the seale therof o. xxd., wherof the K. to haue xvid., and the justice iiid.

That recoueryes and fines, concordres, and warrants of.... the same, may be taken before euery of those justices, of landes, ten'ts.... hereditaments, within his auctority, by force of his generall com'ission, withoute any writte of dedimus po'tem for the same, in like manner and forme as is vsed before the K.'s chief justice, or of his com'on place in England.

That all fines hereafter to be leuied before any of the said justices, with proclamation made the same session, that such fine shalbe engrossed, and in two other great sessions then nexte to be holden within the same countrey, shalbe of the same force, to all purposes, as fines leuied with proclamations be of yt, be leuied before the justices of the com'on place in England.

That euery person suing writts of entry in the post, or writts of couenaut, or any other writts for any recouery to be had, by assent of parties or otherwise, or for any fyne to be leuied, shall pay such fines to the K.'s vse for the same, aswell fynes pro licentia concordandi, as all other manner of fines vsed in the K.'s Chauncery, or els where in any of the K.'s coartes in Engl'. The same to be paid to such persons as shall seale the originall writts for that purpose, who shall accounte for the same, as for the proufitts of the seale originall, etc.

That the K.'s siluer vpon entry fyne to be leuied to be paid as vsed in the com'on place in England, viz., two shillings, which shall be paid to the justice afore whome such fine shalbe leuied, wherof to the K.'s vse, o. xxd., the rest to be deuided equally betwixt the justice and the Prothonotary that enters it. The justice to accounte for the K.'s parte therof, as for the proffitts of the K.'s iuditiiall seale in his charge.

That there shalbe four protio'taryes, for the making of all iuditiiall proces, and for entring of all pleas, processes, and matters of record . . . in the sessions to be holden before those justices, wherof one shall attend vpon the justice for the three shires of North Wales; and the other three vpon the three other justices for those other nine shires in Wales, before sett downe and appointed.

That those fower prothenotaries, as often as their offices shalbe voide, shalbe named and appointed by the K. by his Ma'ties l'res patents vnder the great seale of England.

That there shalbe a marshall and a cryer in euery of the circuits and lymitts allotted to the said justices, which shalbe named by those justices within the lymitts of their aucthority and com'ission in the same manner as Justices of Assize do in England; which officers are to attend vpon those justices in their circuits, in their owne proper persons, not by their deputies, etc.

That the K. shall haue all fines, issues, ameracements, and all forfeitures of recognizaunces, lost or forfeited before any of those justices in the session aforesaid.

That the prothonotaries shall yeerely, within the lymitts of their offices, extreat those fines, etc., into the Exchequer appointed for that lymitt, that from thence proces may be awarded to the sherifs to leuye the same to the K.'s vse as appertayneth, which sherifs shall yeerely make their accoumpts before the K.'s auditors thervnto assigned.

That besides the said president, counsell, and justices in Wales, there shalbe justices of peace and quorum, and also one custos rotulorum in euery of the said twelve shires.

That those justices of peace, justices of quorum, and custos rot'lor', in the said shires shal be named and appointed by the Chauncellor of England by com'ission vnder the K.'s great seale of England, by the aduise of ye president, counsaill, and justices aforesaid, or three of them, wherof the president to be one, etc.

That there shall not exceede the number of eight justices of the peace in any of those counties, besides the president, counsaile, and justices aforesaid, and the K.'s attorney and solicitor, which shalbe put into euery commission of peace in euery of the said shires.

That such persons as be named to be justices of peace within euery the said counties, shalbe of good name and fame, who, after they be assigned by com'ission, may vse and exercize the office of justice of the peace, though they cannot dispend xxli. p' ann', nor be learned in the lawes of the land, without any penaltie for insufficiency.

That euery of those justices, before they execute their Com'ission, shall take their oaths before the Chauncellor of England, or els before the President, or one of the said justices in Wales, by vertue of the K.'s writt of Dedimus po'tem or before some other person to be appointed by the Lo' Chauncellor of England for that purpose. The following story was unfortunately omitted in the first volume.

The Old Kent Manor House.

In October 1857, and for several months afterwards, Mrs. R——, the wife of a field-officer of high rank in the army, was residing in Ramhurst Manor House, near Leigh, in Kent. From the time of her first occupying this ancient residence, every inmate of the house had been more or less disturbed at night—not usually during the day—by knockings and sounds, as of footsteps, but more especially by voices which could not be accounted for. These last were usually heard in some unoccupied adjoining room; sometimes as if talking in a loud tone; sometimes as if reading aloud; occasionally, as if screaming. The servants were much alarmed; they never saw anything; but the cook told Mrs. R—— that on one occasion, in broad daylight, hearing the rustle of a silk dress close behind her, and which seemed to touch her, she turned suddenly round, supposing it to be her mistress, but, to her great surprise and terror, could see nobody. Mrs. R——'s brother, a bold, light-hearted young officer, fond of field sports, and without the slightest faith in the reality of visitations from another world, was much disturbed and annoyed by these voices, which he declared must be those of his sister, and of a lady-friend of hers, sitting up together to chat all night. On two occasions, when a voice, which he thought to resemble his sister's, rose to a scream, as if imploring aid, he rushed from his room, at two or three o'clock in the morning, gun in hand, into his sister's bedroom, there to find her quietly asleep.

On the second Saturday in the above month of October, Mrs. R—— drove over to the railway station at Tunbridge to meet her friend Miss S——, whom she had invited to spend some weeks with her. This young lady had been in the habit of seeing apparitions at times from early childhood.

When, on their return, at about four o'clock in the afternoon, they drove up to the entrance of the Manor House, Miss S—— perceived on the threshold the appearance of two figures, apparently an elderly couple, habited in the costume of a former age. They appeared as if standing on the ground. She did not hear any voice; and not wishing to make her friend uneasy, she made no remark to her in connection with this apparition.

She saw the appearance of the same figures, in the same dress, several times within the next ten days, sometimes in one of the rooms of the house, sometimes in one of the passages—always by daylight. They appeared to her surrounded by an atmosphere nearly of the colour usually called neutral tint. On the third occasion they spoke to her, and stated that they had been husband and wife, that in former days they had possessed and occupied that manor house, and that their name was Children. They appeared sad and downcast; and, when Miss S—— inquired the cause of their melancholy, they replied that they had idolised this property of theirs; that their pride and pleasure had centred in its possession; that its improvement had engrossed their thoughts; and that it troubled them to know that it had passed away from their family, and to see it now in the hands of careless strangers.

I asked Miss S—— how they spoke, she replied that the voice was audible to her as that of a human being.

After a week or two, Mrs. R—— beginning to suspect that something unusual, connected with the constant disturbances in the house, had occurred to her friend, questioned closely on the subject; and then Miss S—— related to her what she had seen and heard, describing the appearance, and relating the conversation of the figures, calling themselves Mr. and Mrs. Children.

Up to that time, Mrs. R——, though her rest had been frequently broken by the noises in the house, and though she, too, has the occasional perception of apparitions, had seen nothing; nor did anything appear to her for a month afterwards. One day, however, about the end of that time, when she had ceased to expect any apparition to herself, she was hurriedly dressing for a late dinner; her brother who had just returned from a day's shooting, having called to her in impatient tones that dinner was served, and that he was quite famished. At the moment of completing her toilet, and as she hastily turned to leave her bed-chamber, not dreaming of anything spiritual, there in the doorway stood the same female figure Miss S—— had described—identical in appearance and costume, even to the old point lace on her brocaded silk dress—while beside her, on the left, but less distinctly visible, was the figure of her husband. They uttered no sound; but above the figure of the lady, as if written in phosphoric light in the dark atmosphere that surrounded her, were the words "Dame Children", together with some other words, intimating that, having never aspired beyond the joys and sorrows of this world, she had remained "earth-bound" (see vol. i, p. 288-9). These last words, however, Mrs. R—— scarcely paused to decipher; for a renewed appeal from her brother as to whether they were to have any dinner that day, urged her forward.

The figure filling up the doorway remained stationary. There was no time for hesitation; she closed her eyes, rushed through the apparition into the dining-room, throwing up her hands, and exclaiming to Miss S——, “Oh, my dear, I’ve walked through Mrs. Children!”

This was the only time during her residence in the old Manor House that Mrs. R—— witnessed the apparition of these figures. And it is to be remarked that her bed-chamber at the time was lighted not only by candles, but by a cheerful fire, and that there was a lighted lamp in the corridor, which communicated thence to the dining-room.

This repetition of the word “Children” caused the ladies to make inquiries in the neighbourhood, whether any family bearing that name had ever occupied the manor house. But all inquiries were fruitless; every one to whom they put the question declaring that they had never heard of such a name; so they gave up all hopes of being able to unravel the mystery.

It so happened, however, that about four months afterwards, a Mrs. Sophy O——, an old nurse in the family, going home for a holiday to her own family at Riverhead, about a mile from Seven Oaks, and recollecting that one of her sisters-in-law, who lived near her, an old woman of seventy, had, fifty years before, been housemaid in a family, then residing at Ramhurst, inquired of her if she had ever heard anything of a family named Children. The sister-in-law replied that no such family occupied the Manor House when she was there; but she recollected to have seen an old man who told her that in his boyhood he had assisted to keep the hounds of the Children family, who were then residing at Ramhurst. This information the nurse communicated to Mrs. R—— on her return; and thus it was that that lady was first informed that a family named Children really once occupied the Manor House.

All these particulars I received in December 1858, directly from the ladies themselves, both being together at the time.

I enquired of Miss S—— whether the apparitions had communicated to her any additional particulars connected with the family. She replied that she recollected one which she had then received from them, namely, that the husband’s name was Richard. At a subsequent period, likewise, she had obtained the date of Richard Children’s death, which, as communicated to her, was 1753. She remembered also that on one occasion a third spirit appeared with them, who, they stated, was their son; but she did not get his name. To my further enquiries as to the costumes in which the spirits appeared Miss S—— replied, “that they were of the period of Queen Anne, or one of the early Georges, she could not be sure which, as the fashions in both were similar." These were her exact words.

Having an invitation from some friends residing near Seven Oaks, in Kent, to spend with them the Christmas week of 1858, I had a good opportunity of prosecuting my enquiries in the way of verification. I visited the church and churchyard at Leigh, the nearest to the Ramhurst estate, and the old church at Tunbridge, making enquiries in both places on the subject, but to no purpose. All that I could learn was, that a certain George Children left, in the year 1718, a weekly gift of bread to the poor, and that a descendant of the family, also named George, dying about some forty years ago, and not residing at Ramhurst, had a marble tablet, in the Tunbridge church, erected to his memory.

Sextons and tombstones having failed me, a friend suggested that I might possibly obtain the information I sought, by visiting a neighbouring clergyman. I did so, and with the most fortunate result. Simply stating to him that I had taken the liberty to call in search of some particulars touching the early history of a Kentish family of the name of Children, he replied that, singularly enough, he was in possession of a document, coming to him through a private source, and containing, he thought likely, the very details of which I was in search. He kindly entrusted it to me, and I found in it certain extracts from the "Hasted Papers", preserved in the British Museum; of this document, which may be consulted in the Museum Library, I here transcribe a portion as follows:—

"The family of Children were settled, for a great many generations, at a house called, from their own name, 'Childrens', situate at a place called Nether Street, or Lower Street, in Hildenborough, in the parish of Tunbridge. George Children, of Lower Street, who was High Sheriff of Kent in 1698, died without issue, in 1718, and by will devised the bulk of his estate to Richard Children, eldest son of his late uncle William Children, of Hedcorn, and his heirs. This Richard Children, who settled himself at Ramhurst, in the parish of Leigh, married Anne, daughter of John Saxby, in the parish of Leeds, by whom he had issue four sons and two daughters," etc.

In a History of Kent, written by Hasted, I found the following paragraph:—

"In the eastern part of the parish of Lyghe (now Leigh), near the river Medway, stands an ancient mansion, called Ramhurst, once reputed a manor, and held of the honour of Gloucester. . . . It continued in the Culpepper family for several generations. It passed by sale into that of Saxby, and Mr. William Saxby conveyed it, by sale, to Children. Richard Children, Esq., resided here, and died possessed of it in 1753, aged eighty-three years. He was succeeded in it by his eldest son, John Children, of Tunbridge, Esq., whose son, George Children, of Tunbridge, Esq., is the present possessor" (1778.)

It appears, from the above statements, that Richard Children was the only representative of the family who lived at Ramhurst. The family seat, after Richard's time, was Ferox Hall, near Tunbridge. In 1816 the Children family had, from unfortunate circumstances, to sell Ramhurst, and their other estates.¹

Plato, in the Phædo, when speaking of the souls of wicked men, which have been intimately united to the body, says, "The soul, loaded with the weight of flesh, sinks again towards the visible world; it goes wandering, as it is said, among the monuments and tombs, where dark phantoms are often seen, such as the souls of guilty men ought to be, which have departed from life without being previously purified, and have retained somewhat of the visible region, and therefore the eye of man can still behold them."

Lines on a Cemetery.

"Here silence doth for ever reign:
 Nothing it profiteth the dead
 On beds of satin to have lain
 And drank from gold the vine-juice red,
 And lived in glee and lustihead,
 Soon all such joys must be resigned;
 All pass away, and in their stead
 Only the sin remains behind."

M. VILLON DE PARIS.²

A Case of Second Sight.

A Mr. R——, a mining captain, now living, was returning home one night from a mine in the county of C——l; and on his way thither, which lay across a moor, there appeared to be, not far ahead of him, three coffins, each borne by two men. Wishing to ascertain where the men were going, the captain quickened his pace to overtake them; but in spite of his exertions, they still kept the same distance in advance of him. They all proceeded along the path in this manner, for a considerable distance. At length the captain reached the road leading to his own house; and after having walked along it for a few yards he turned his head, thinking to see again the men with the coffins; but they were then lost to view, owing, as he thought, to their having turned along another path. On reaching home, he narrated the details of the affair to his wife, who, with himself, concluded that there had been an accident in a neighbouring mine. This was their impression, until they were aroused in the night with the cry, "the ground has run". This message was brought by some one from the mine at which the captain was employed. It was soon discovered that three men had been buried in the débris, all of whom were killed.

ON CHIVALRY AND NOBILITY.

It is a common opinion with unlearned and superficial minds, that from whatever period chivalry may be traced, and how wide soever its pale extended, it must always be regarded as belonging to nobility, and exclusively attached to civil or aristocratic institutions: it may therefore be right to show the error of such a supposition, before we proceed to speak of nobility, and of the institutions which gave it birth.

Chivalry is a term used to express the spirit and general disposition of mind which belong to the generous and heroic part of mankind, in all ages of the world; consequently, no rank of society can be incompetent to possess it, though there may be occupations and modes of life in the higher as well as the lower classes, which would render its preservation extremely difficult. It is not to be denied, that when this generous spirit is accompanied with the outward splendour of nobility, it gives rise to an image of great majesty; but it is essential to remember that the grand distinction, which alone merits love and admiration, is wholly independent of that adventitious splendour, which, however it may adorn and assist, can never of itself constitute chivalry. The ancients were ever ready to admit this position: 'Ελευθέρως δούλευε, δούλος οὐκ ἔση, says Menander. Plato makes the Spartan say, καὶ καλλωπίζεσθαι χρὴ τῷ καλῶς δουλεύσαι μᾶλλον ἢ τῷ καλῶς ἄρξαι.¹ Another philosopher was asked, who were noble? He replied, “Those who despise riches, and glory, and pleasure, and life.”² Sophocles adopts the same principle. Persons of low birth may have noble minds, and may become noble.

— — καὶ ξ ἀγεννήτων ἀρα
 μυθοὶ καλῶς πίπτουσιν· ἦδε γὰρ γυνή δούλη μὲν, εἴρηκεν δ' ελεύθερον λόγον.³

Plato even affirmed, that to know how to obey required as generous a disposition, and as good an education, as to know how to command. The renown and exaltation of Cicero, who speaks of himself as “homo per se cognitus”,⁴ may be fairly weighed against the silly pride and jealousy of the nobles towards men of merit, which he describes.⁵ And we know, that even the Junian house looked upon L. Brutus, a plebeian, as the founder of its nobility. To be as noble as the king was the pride of Diomedes, when he said to Agamemnon, σοὶ δε διανδιχα δωκε Κρόνου παῖς ἀγκυλομήτεω· σκήπτρω μὲν τοι δωκε τετιμῆσθαι περὶ παντων ἄλκην δ' οὔτοι δῶκεν, δ τε κράτος ἐστὶ μέγιστον.⁶

It is obvious that these sentiments could only gain additional force and extent by the lapse of time, which always confirms the judgments of nature. Truly, we can behold in life, as well as in history and in poetry, “how that genterie is not annexed to possession”.

“For God it wot, men mournful often find
 A lorde's sone do shame and vilanie,
 And he that wol hav pris of his genterie
 For he was boren of a gentil hous
 And had his elders noble and vertuous,
 And n'll himselven do no gentil dedes,
 Ne fowle his gentil auncestrie that ded is,
 He n'is not gentil, be he duk or erl ;

For villain's sinful dedes make a cherl.
 For gentillesse n'is but the renomee
 Of their auncestres, for their high bountee,
 Which is a strange thing to thy persone ;
 Thy gentillesse cometh fro God alone.
 Then cometh our veray gentillesse of grace :
 It was no thing bequeathed us with our place."

"The king may scatter titles and dignities, till lords, like the swarm of dons in Sancho's Island, shall become as troublesome as so many flesh-flies ; but he may not save those among whom he scatters them from rottenness and oblivion."¹ The king can give letters of nobility, but he cannot bestow the sentiment which gives it virtue : his favour cannot grant the inheritance which alone ennobles an illustrious birth ; and his wrath cannot take it away.

"Princes and lords may flourish and may fade,
 A breath can make them, as a breath has made ;"

but the noble chivalry of the heart,

"Flos veterum virtusque virum," must be held as an inalienable privilege, which is the gift of God alone. The Emperor Sigismond replied to a favourite who begged that he would ennoble him, "I can give you privileges and fiefs, but I cannot make you noble." And again, a merchant from Hambourg, who had lent the Emperor Charles V a large sum of money, and was unable to get the interest of it, determined to go to Vienna and get presented at Court ; and having been presented, he asked the Emperor to make him a gentleman. "Sir," said the Emperor, "I can make you a Baron, or a Count, or a Prince ; but as to making you a gentleman, it is out of my power ; it is the gift of God alone." "He who does not possess these virtues," says the poet Arnaud de Marvelli, "though he may have the name of Chevalier, I do not regard him as a true knight." As Talbot exclaims, when he plucks off the garter from the "craven leg" of Falstaff :

“He that is not furnished in this sort
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight,
Profaning this most honourable order.”

And Pierre Cardinal, the old poet of Provence, says, “the King of France is not so powerful that he can change a wicked man into a man of honour; he may give him gold and silver, and robes, and wine, and viands; but as for goodness, God alone can impart that”. He only who is himself free can make men free :

ἐλεύθερος γὰρ οὐτίς ἐστὶ πλὴν Διός.¹

The ancients, notwithstanding their immoderate regard for birth and nobility, were not altogether insensible to the stubborn facts which were against their theory. “Noble sons do not always spring from noble fathers, nor evil from evil,” says Sophocles; “but there is no trusting,” he adds, “to anything mortal.”²

If nobility be understood as the honour consequent upon the circumstance of birth from virtuous parents, it is of an antiquity which is lost in the night of time. “If, indeed, you be his son,” says Nestor to Telemachus, *σέβας μ’ ἐχει εισορόωντα.*³ Menelaus, delighted with the wise answers of Telemachus, exclaims that he must have been born of good blood; and Alcinous, desiring Ulysses to declare his name and parentage, adds an opinion which shows how great were the moral effects attributed to birth.⁵ It is the pride of Penelope that her son is come of a good race; Diomedes begins his speech in council by boasting of the virtue of his father and grandfather, of whom he says, *αρετῇ δ’ ἦν ἐξοχος αὐτῶν,*⁶ and upon this ground he bespeaks the attention of the assembly. No one can ridicule the heroes of the Iliad for having this sentiment in such respect, when he hears the immortal words with which the son of Hippolochus defies his enemy (Iliad, vi, 206). Virgil, in a lower strain, ascribes this sentiment to the Rutuli, in accounting for their affection for Turnus :

² Stobæus, lib. iii, 20.

⁴ Ib., iv, 611.

⁵ Ib., viii, 552.

³ Odyss., iii, 123.

⁶ Ib., xiv, 118.

“Hunc decus egregium formæ movet atque juventæ,
Hunc atavi reges, hunc claris dextera factis.”¹

But the genuine foundation appears again in his description of the assembly to witness the game of Troy before Æneas, when the spectators applauded the contending youths :

“—— veterumque agnoscunt ora parentum.”²

The importance attached to birth appears strikingly in Sophocles.³ Honour, not expediency, is the motive which he knows will operate upon the noble-born youth.⁴ The climax of horrors with Œdipus consists in his remembering that he was born of the noble race of Laius.⁵ The lines of Euripides are celebrated—δεινὸς χαρακτήρ, κἀπίσημος εὐβροτοῖς, ἐσθλῶν γενέσθαι.⁶

Plutarch, in his life of Phocian, proceeds to an immoderate length in speaking of the importance of birth ; but it is impossible not to admire Socrates, when he describes the form of virtuous ancestors.⁷ Polibius assigns the abolition of this principle as one of the chief causes of the ruin of Carthage. Plato, in many places, assumes it as the basis of his instruction. Aristotle admits the principle in its fullest extent.⁸ The most eminent of the Roman patriots, not excepting even Cato, acknowledged their belief in the influence of generous birth, in elevating the soul, and in filling it with a desire of virtuous deeds. Upon the whole, therefore, nothing can be more certain, than that the merit of despising an illustrious descent was unknown to the wisest and most virtuous men of antiquity ; nay, at Rome, when the people became eligible to the offices of military tribune and quæstor, they invariably returned men of patrician family to the ninth election ; and this, notwithstanding the utmost efforts of the tribunes and the leaders of the popular party. In the year 333, Antistius and Pompeius, both of them tribunes, demanded the office of quæstor : the first for his son, the second for his brother ; and yet, strange to relate, they were both disappointed, and patricians were elected by the people. That the same sentiments prevailed among the ancient Persians appears from the expression of Otanes, when he sent that celebrated message to his daughter, which is related by Herodotus ;¹ as also from the words of Otanes to Darius : “ that it was beneath men of rank to contend with an adversary of inferior degree”.²

The heroic origin of many of the great families had a charm to which Cicero was not insensible. The Junian family might have the images of twenty of the noblest houses allied to them carried with their dead in procession.³ The Julian family, at the funeral of Drusus, displayed, in long order, those of Æneas and all the Alban kings, Romulus and the Sabine nobles, Attus Clausus and his successors of the Claudian house.⁴ The Æmilian family traced their descent from Numa, or, indeed, from Mamercus, son of Pythagoras ; the Marcii traced their descent from Ancus Marcius, the grandson of Numa. Plutarch says that the houses of the Publicola, the Messalæ, the Valerii, illustrious for the space of six hundred years, still acknowledged Publicola as the fountain of their honour. The descendants of Pinarius, who gave hospitality to Hercules when he came to the spot which is now Rome, were at Rome in the time of Diodorus, and regarded as the most ancient of the noble houses.⁵

In heroic ages it was certainly believed that virtue was the source of nobility, and there is nothing real in nobility, but what is independent of a monarch's will. “ If the offspring of great men”, says the herald “ vaunt of their lineage or titular dignity, and want their virtues, they are but like base serving-men, who carry on their sleeves the badge of some noble family, yet are they themselves but un-noble persons.” Virtue produced nobility, therefore it can only be preserved by virtue.¹ Such is the language of all heraldic writers of eminence. If that birth which no king could impart was regarded as the highest proof of nobility, it was from the opinion that the semblance of great souls and the character of great men might sometimes be conveyed by secret and undiscernible conveyances, in consequence of that divine favour which would be extended to generations descended from a man who was faithful to Heaven, or from a belief in the action of a more general principle, such as is implied in the lines of Shakespeare—

“O worthiness of nature ! breed of greatness !
Cowards, father cowards, and base things, sire base.”

For that sometimes parents did seem to revive in their offspring, not only in countenance and form of limb, but even in disposition of mind, was an opinion too firmly established by history and experience to be shaken by any arguments from reason. The Claudian family flourished at Rome during so long a period, with the same characteristic features of pride and ferocity ; it produced the sad Tiberius, then the monstrous Caligula, and at length, after six hundred years, it became extinct in the death of Nero. Æschylus bursts out in a sublime and somewhat prophetic strain : “How the destiny of families directing their ways according to justice always produces good children. But ancient insolence is wont to generate, indeed, new insolence, to the mischief of mortals some time or other, whenever the appointed time comes.”²

There is no doctrine of political science more certain than that, under all circumstances of government, the harmony of social life, the cultivation of the arts, the interests of literature, the happiness of the people themselves, no doubt the secret end of all institutions coeval with society, require the preservation of degree. “Nothing”, says Bacon, "doth derogate from the dignity of a state more than confusion of degree."

"Take but degree away, untune that string,
 And hark, what discord follows! each thing meets
 In mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters
 Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
 And make a sop of all this solid globe.
 Strength should be lord of imbecility,
 And the rude son should strike his father dead.
 Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong,
 Between whose endless jar justice resides,
 Should lose their names, and so should justice too,
 Then everything includes itself in power;
 Power into will; will into appetite;
 And appetite, an universal wolf,
 So doubly seconded with will and power,
 Must make per force an universal prey,
 And, last, eat up himself."¹

"The governing, and being governed", says Aristotle, "is not merely to be classed with things unavoidable, but with those also which are beneficial. Immediately from their birth, some things are set apart for being governed, and some to have the power of governing; and there are many forms of being governed and of governing; for, in all things throughout universal nature, there are that which governs and that which is governed, not merely in all things that have life, but even in those which are without life there is a certain ruling power as a harmony."²

Cicero shows that in Rome the destruction of the regal power was only the abolishing a name, while the thing itself remained.³ "Nothing", he says, "belongs more essentially to the condition of nature than rule or empire, without which neither a house, nor a state, nor a tribe, nor the human race can stand, nor the whole nature of things, nor the world itself, for that has to obey God." Government does not result from the consent of those who are to be governed, any more than a father derives authority from his children, or a master from his servants, or a teacher from his scholars. "In everything", says Plato, "that which rules is older than that which is ruled, that which leads than that which is led."¹

In the letters of Richmond, Clarencieux King of Arms, in the reign of Henry VII, quoted by Sir James Lawrence from the Harleian MSS., the gentlemen are named before noblemen. So Edward Coke counts all noble who have a right to bear arms; and Camden, Clarencieux King of Arms, speaks of gentlemen as the "nobiles minores".

Matthew Carter, in his Honour Redivivus; Sir John Ferne, in his Blazonry of Gentry and Nobility; Sir Thomas Smith, in his Commonwealth of England; Gwillim Edmondson Peacham, in his Complete Gentleman, etc., are all express as to the nobility of the British gentry, who were considered of equal rank with the nobility of France, at the Court of Bordeaux and Poitiers, in the days of the Angevine sovereigns. Their nobility is also proved by Sir James Lawrence, from proclamations, state papers, and monumental inscriptions, in which the gentry are styled noble. "The knights and squires of England", continues Sir James Lawrence, "preferred being styled the gentry to being styled the nobility; they were logicians enough to know the axiom, 'Omne majus continet minus', and they, being allowedly gentlemen, could never dream of their nobility being contested; and the peers were styled the nobility, not because they were the only nobles, but because, as there were many peers who were not gentlemen, they could not collectively be styled the gentry of the upper house. The peer, therefore, is not always at the head; he may be at the tail of his family."²

Plato supplies a beautiful passage in which Socrates speaks of birth; when Critias assures the philosopher that the young man Charmides, his cousin, is as remarkable for temperance and all virtue as for beauty of person, Socrates replies: "Certes it is but right, O Char-mides, that in these things you should excel other men ; for I do not think that any person could show among all the Athenians two houses from the union of which it is more probable that there would succeed a more noble and excellent offspring, than those from which you are sprung ; for your paternal house, that of Critias, is celebrated by Anacreon, and by Solon, and by many other poets, as having excelled in beauty and virtue and all happiness ; and your maternal descent is equally illustrious, for than Ppyrilampus, your uncle, no one on the whole continent is said to have had a more beautiful person and greater renown, and generally this whole house is in no manner inferior to the other. So that being sprung from these, it is probable that you would be the first in all things. And now, as far as what pertains to the eyes to determine, O dear son of Glaucon, you appear to me to be no disgrace to your ancestors ; but if, in addition, you possess temperance and all other virtues which this man ascribes to you, dear Charmides, your mother bore you in a happy hour."

Having made, therefore, these few remarks on the nature of true nobility, I will proceed to give what account I can of the descendants of the ancient nobility of Powys Fadog.

A POEM ADDRESSED TO OWAIN GLYNDYFRDWY,
AFTER HIS OVERTHROW.

By IOLO GŌCH. (See vol. i, p. 220.)

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, Esq.

Tall man! thou mark for Harry's hate,
 Art living still? is past thy fate?
 If thus it be, with fiery spear,
 Come, show thy shield, say, "I am here."
 Thou gold-girt warrior! seek thine home;
 Come! cinctured round with arms of Rome;
 Coming possess of Peter's Seal,
 Thy cause full just will God reveal.
 Come from the East! so shall, o'er thrown,
 Thou Bull of strength! be tow'rs of stone.
 Before thee rays of fire be shed,
 And gifts by all be freely spread,
 From Lochlyn,¹ Earl of keen-edged sword,
 Come! of the Glyn thou gen'rous Lord;
 Who bearest, for thy shield's contents,
 A fair escutcheon, four descents;²
 Three Lions' as the empyrean, blue,
 Three steel frets seen the wild fire through.
 Set we, the stainless Peacock o'er,
 Set you a Chief, o'er Bear and Boar:
 So, there conjoin'd, are axes three,
 A mighty host, where strife shall be.
 Loose soon seven noble ships from shore,
 Soon as may be seven hundred more.
 Come from the North, 'tis Mona's will,
 To Ireland, and her hope fulfil.
 Call also,—may God grant her thee—
 Thou needs must have her—Italy.
 Pure Galahad, rise! we'll hear thy call,
 Ere come the Baptist's Festival;
 Thy beacon raise, brisk Chief, with haste,
 In Dublin yonder, o'er the waste.
 Raise a fair fleet, of seamen's power,
 In confines of the Gael, and Gower.

¹ Llychlyn is the name of Denmark and Norway.

² I suppose, by four descents, the Bard means four quarterings.

Come! Hero of my heart, betrayed,
 From Man, and be not long delay'd.
 To Gwyddyl, best of signals sped,
 For fight's the Yellow (Or), and the Red (Gules).
 Llywelyn's Standard consecrate;¹
 Those colours will thy men elate,
 Parade before thee Britain's host,
 Lo! Lloegyr's for her treason lost.
 Of temper true thy weapon bring,
 And reign o'er all the Isles a King.
 Eagle of might! one moment more,
 And light a flame on Mona's shore;
 Beat down the Castles, forts of woe,
 And London, lair of dogs, lay low.
 Strike, strike and slay! Let Normans ken
 That horns of gold² have Mona's men.
 Needs must thou—'tis of prophecy—
 Full many a bout of battle ply.
 Do battle, and the foe shall flee;
 Yet thou, at will, canst gentle be;
 But if thine arm with wrath be sped,
 In Berwick far behold the dead!
 Thy fortune's turned, I know full well,
 Thro' summer fight, with conflict fell;³
 Like oaks, thy foes shall fall full fast,
 Not Fochno's⁴ fight did longer last.
 March through the ford of Ieithon's glen,⁵
 With Mona's banner, throngs of men;
 Be nine⁶ the number of thy fights,
 Their own nor less nor more requites.
 Sword of Cadwaladr the Blest!
 Take all thy Grandsire e'er possessed:
 Take back for all thy kin their share:
 From us take bondage hard to bear.

ARMORIAL BEARINGS OF OWAIN GLYNDYFRDWY,
PRINCE OF WALES.

I have stated, in vol. i, p. 209, that Prince Owain summoned a Parliament at Machynlleth in Cyfeiliog, where he was proclaimed Prince of Wales, and formally crowned, on the 20th of September 1402.

From the time of his coronation he used his Royal Seals, which are thus described by Sir Henry Ellis, from the seals attached to two deeds deposited in the Hotel Soubise, at Paris:—"The Great Seal has an obverse and reverse; on the obverse, Owen is represented with a bifid beard, very similar to Richard II, seated under a canopy of Gothic tracery; the half body of a wolf forming the arms of his chair on each side; the background is ornamented with a mantle semée of lions, held up by angels. At his feet are two lions. A sceptre is in his right hand, but he has no crown. The inscription is Owenus.....Princeps Walliæ. On the reverse, Owen is represented on horseback, in armour; in his right hand, which is extended, he holds a sword, and in his left a shield, charged with, quarterly, four lions rampant; a drapery, probably a kerchief de plesaunce, or handkerchief, won at a tournament, pendant from his right wrist. Lions rampant also appear upon the mantle of the horse. On his helmet, as well as on his horse's head, is the Welsh Dragon. The area of the shield is diapered with roses. The inscription on this side seems to fill the gap upon the obverse, Owenus Dei Gratiâ . . . Wallie." Pennant mentions a pardon granted by him to one John ab Howel ab Ieuan Goch, to which this seal was attached, and which is dated "anno principatus nostri VI° datum apud Cefn Llanfair X° die Jan. per ipsum principem." Amongst the witnesses are two of his sons,¹ Gruffydd ab Owen, and Maredydd ab Owen; his Chancellor Gruffydd Yonge, and Rhys ab Tudur and Gwillim

ab¹. “The Privy Seal”, says Sir Henry Ellis, “represents the four lions rampant, towards the spectator’s left, on a shield surmounted by an open coronet; the Dragon of Wales as a supporter, on the dexter side; on the sinister a lion. The inscription seems to have been, Sigillum Oweni Principis Walliæ. No impression of this seal is probably now to be found in Wales or England.”²

Ambition’s dream I’ve seen depart,
 Have rued of penury the smart,
 Have felt of grief the venom’d dart,
 When hope was flown:
 Yet rests one solace to my heart—
 My harp alone.

Heaven lies about us in our infancy.
 Shades of the prison-house begin to close
 Upon the growing boy;
 But he beholds the light, and whence it flows—
 He sees it in his joy.
 The youth who daily further from the east
 Must travel, still is Nature’s priest,
 And by the vision splendid
 Is on his way attended.
 At length the man perceives it die away,
 And fade into the light of coming day.³

Prince Owain Glyndyfrdwy died as before stated, September 20th, 1415, in retirement at the house of one of his daughters. (Vol. i, p. 211.)

In vol. i, p. 205, allusion was made to a letter written on May 15th, 1402, by Prince Henry (afterwards King Henry V.), when he was at Shrewsbury, to the Privy Council: the following is a copy of it:—

“Very dear, and entirely well beloved, we greet you earnestly with our entire heart, thanking you very dearly for the good care which you have had of the businesses which concern us in our absence, and we pray you, very affectionately, for your good and friendly continuance, as our trust is in you.

³ Wordsworth.

And for news in this part, if you will know, among others, we were lately informed that Oweyn de Glyndourdy assembled his forces of other rebels, his adherents, in great number, purposing to make an incursion, and to fight if the English would resist him in his purpose, and so he boasted to his people. Wherefore we took our forces, and went to a place of the said Oweyn, well built, which was his principal mansion, called Saghern (Sycharth), where we expected to have found him, if he had had will to fight in manner as he said; and, at our coming thither we found nobody, and therefore we caused the whole place to be burnt, and several other houses thereabouts of his tenants. And then we went straight to Glendourdy, to seek him there, and there we burnt a fair lodge in his park, and all the country thereabout. And we lodged ourselves by there all that night, and certain of our people sallied forth there into the country, and took a great gentleman of the country, who was one of the said Oweyn's chieftains, who offered five hundred pounds for his ransom to have had his life, and to have paid the said sum within two weeks; nevertheless, it was not accepted, but he was put to death, as well as divers others of his companions who were taken in the expedition. And then we went into the commote of Edeyrnion, in the county of Merionyth, and there we ravaged with fire a fair country, and well inhabited. And thence we went into Powys, and there being a scarcity of provender for horses in Wales, we caused our men to carry oats with them, and we remained days. And to inform you more fully of this expedition, and of other news here at present, we send to you our very dear esquire, John de Waterton, to whom you will be pleased to give entire faith and credence in what he shall report to you from us, touching the news above mentioned. And may our Lord have you always in His holy keeping. Given under our signet, at Shrouesbury, this fifteenth day of May."¹

The answers of the said Jurie to the seuerall Articles giuen them in charge, viz:—

To the first article: The township of Abimbery, whereof this manor taketh name, is bounded on ye south with ye riuer Clywedock runninge eastward, and on ye north with one little spring called Abere Gwinyon, running eastward; likewise to ye river Clywedock on the north part, with certaine lands belonging to ye manor of Iscoyd, and on ye south with certaine lands belonging to the right honorable the Earle of Derby. Item: there belongeth to ye said manor as partes, parcells, and members thereof, one close of land called Cae Rhys, lying in Aymburye Vechan, and one close called beyn y boe in Acton, and diuers tenements and parcells of lands in ye severall townships of Morton, Anglicorne, Cacadutton, Ridley, Erlesham, Marwhiell, Erthig, Esculsham, Morton, Wallicorn', Sonlley, Arbistock, Ruyabon, Eton, Dynulle, and Abrimbury Vechan, as appeareth by ye severall names of the freeholders and tennaunts which are reputed and taken as partes and parcell of the said manor.

To the second article they say, that they have no demesnes in the manor.

To the third article they say, that ye names of all ye freeholders, and what everie of them doth holde, and their rents, are particulerlie laide downe, and as for ffee farmes, they know of none in ye manor.

To the fourth and fifth they say, that ye customarie tennaunts of this manor are ye Prince his Highness tennants by leases, and doe holde the messuages, landes, and tenements upon their severall names sett downe, and doe respectively pay for ye same the severall rentes vpon their names appearinge by their leases for forty yeares, and so from forty to forty for ever, and doe pay two years' rent for a fyne, vppon ye takeing of their leases, according to ye composition made between ye late Queen Elizabeth, of famous memorie, and ye tennaunts of Bromfield and Yale, in the fourth year of her late most happy reign, the effect of which composition is sett downe in ye pr'sentm'ts of Burton, Ruyabon, and others. Whereunto, for more certainty, this jury doe referre themselues; and this jury doe not knowe of anything paid or due to be paid by any of ye said tennants upon the mariage of their daughters.

To the sixth article they say, that the King's high waies excepted, there is no waste or commons within ye said manor, to their knowledge.

To the seventh article they say, that there is no great quantity of wood in that manor, and that Roger Griffith, Thomas and Roger ap John did fall some to repaire ye highwaies.

To the eight article they say, that there is no parke or warren w'thin this manor.

To the ninth, they say as to ye sixt, that they have no com'ons or wast w'thin this manor, an no incrochments.

To the tenth they say, that the lands held from fortie yeares to fortie yeares in the holding of these tenants, are ye customarie landes of this manor, and that there is one parcell of land called by ye name of Cae Edneuet, nowe devided into two parcells, conteyning by estimac'on six acres, in the towneshipp of Sonlley, nowe in ye occupac'on of Hugh lloyd as escheat, and that one Robert Powell claymeth ye same. And one parcell of land called Kae yr meibion, conteyning by estimac'on one acre, sometyme the land of Griffith ap Jenkin Moreton, and, as this jury is informed, is in the hands of Richard Leighton, Esq., held at will.

To the eleaventh they say, that there are no mynes of coale, leade, or chalke, but for quarries of stone and marle, some small quantitie there is vpon ye freeholde, which the freeholders hold, the benefitt whereof they do not knowe.

To the twelfth and thirteenth they say, that they doe not know yt any freeholder died without heire, generall or speciall, and that there is not any towne corporate, burrough towne, or other within ye said manor.

To the fourteenth and fifteenth they say, that they knowe not of any suche exchanges, or vnlawfull inserting of landes into leases as are demanded in that article, and yt the Prince hath no customary mill or other in this manor.

To the sixteenth they say, as to ye sixth and ninth, that they hane no com'ons or waste at all, nor peate, or turfe.

To the seventeenth, that the freeholders and tennants of this manor, beeing a member of the lordship of Bromfield, doe serve at ye leete and lawe daies of the said lordshipp, as they are bounden to doe; and that they pay no fynes of head silver or king's silver, and that they pay all fynes of alienac'ons, amertiaments of courtes mizes, and all other payments for their rate and portions as other ye tenants and freeholders of that lordshipp doe, when and as often as ye same are due.

To the eighteenth they say, that there is no copyholde tenement in decay within this manor, to their knowledge.

To the nineteenth they say, that they knowe not whether ye casualties mentioned in this article bee due to the Prince or to ye King's most excellent Ma'tie.

To the twentieth they say, that there belongeth to this manor fishinge of the whole water of Dee, and that Jarrard Eton, Esq., payeth, therefore, yearlie to ye Prince xxs.; and as for fowling they doe not knowe anething at all, nor any great profit had thereby.

To the twenty-first, twenty-second, and twenty-third they say, they haue no markets or faires within any townshipp in this manor, and that they knowe not of any rents or land concealed or withheld in this manor, nor of any reprises or payments going out of ye same.

To the twenty-fourth they say, that there are yearlie made at ye leete after Michaelmas, by the jurie of Eglussegle Rubon and Aymbury, theis officers, viz.: pettie constables, which doe searve for ye year followinge, within ye senerall townshippes of ye manor; and yt ye cheif steward, as this jury have credible heard, is the right honorable ye Earl of Bridgewater, and yt John Jeffreys, Esq., John Dauies, and Thomas Foster, gent., are his deputies, and that Thomas Trafford, Esq., is receavor; but what fees they or either of them have, this jurie knoweth not.

To the twenty-fifth article they say, there are no benefices or advowsons in this manor.

To the twenty-sixth they say, that as farre as they can learne and find out, the old and accustomed acre vsed in these parts, and in ye most of ye countries next adjoyning, contey' 160 perches in euerie acre, and yt euerie of the said perches conteyne twenty-four foote to the perche or pole.

LLWYN ON.

Cae Cyriog MS. ; Harl. MS. 4181.

Dingad, lord of Maelor Gymraeg or Bromfield, and Yr Hôb, the third son of Tudor Trevor (see vol. i, p. 309) married Cicilia, daughter of Severus ab Cadifor Wynwyn, prince of Buallt, azure, three open crowns in pale, or, by whom he had a son and heir, Rhiwallawn ab Dingad, lord of Maelor Gymraeg and Yr Hôb, who died in 1040. He married Lætitia, daughter of Cadwaludr ab Peredur Goch of Môn, by whom he had a son and heir,

Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn, lord of Maelor Gymraeg and Yr Hôb. He bore ermine, a lion rampant sable, armed and langued, gules, and married Judith, daughter of Ifor Hen, lord of Rhos, argent, a rose gules, by whom he had issue twelve sons ; 1, Niniaw, of whom presently ; 2, Ednyfed, lord of Broughton, who bore ermine, a lion statant guardant gules, armed and langued azure ; 3, Gruffudd ; 4, Bleddyn, ancestor of Hugh Jones of Bersham, Roberts of Ty Cerrig, and Edward ab John ab Tudor of Bersham, whose house is now called Plâs Power ; 5, Hoedliw of Cristionydd ; 6, David, ancestor of the Lloyds of Clochfaen ; 7, Hwfa, whose only daughter and heiress, Angharad, married Gwgan ab Idnerth, the great-grandfather of Ednyfed Fychan (see Plâs Tregayan) ; 8, Einion ; 9, Llywelyn, the ancestor of Philip Bird ab David Bird of Eastwick, in the parish of Ellesmere (see Dudleston); 10, Iorwerth; 11, Ieuaf, whose only daughter and heir, Arddûn, married Ednyfed ab Gruffudd ab Rhys Fychan; and—12, Blettrws. Cynwrig ab Rhnwallawn, who, for some time was Prince of Powys, was slain in a battle fought, when he was suddenly attacked unawares by Gruffudd ab Cynan, in Lleyn, in the year 1074 (see vol. i, pp. 72, 73). He was buried in Wrexham Church; the stone lid of his coffin, on which he is represented recumbent in armour, with a lion rampant on his shield, and this inscription, "Hic jacet Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn", round the verge was seen by John Erddig of Erddig, Esq. He was succeeded, in a portion of his territories, by his eldest son,

Ninniaiw ab Cynwrig, who married, and had issue a son and heir,

Ieuaf ab Ninniaiw, who had Llwyn On, Sonlli, Eyton Uchaf, Frondeg, Erddig, Esclusham, Hafod y Bwch, Hafod y Wern, Llwyn y Cnotiau, Abynbury, and part of Yr Rhiwlo. He married Mali, daughter of Llywarch, son of Trahaiarn ab Caradog, King of North Wales, who was slain at the battle of Mynydd y Garn, in South Wales, by Gruffudd ab Cynan, in 1080 (see vol. i), by whom he had issue nine sons; 1, Iorwerth, of whom presently; 2, Gruffudd, ancestor of the Bershams of Bersham; and, according to the Cae Cyriog, and other MS. of Madog yr Athro (see Plâs Madog); 3, Einion, lord of Sonlli and Eyton Uchaf, the ancestor, according to the Cae Cyriog, and some MS. of the Sonllis of Sonlli, and the Eytons of Eyton Uchaf; 4, Ieuaf Fychan; 5, Awr, ancestor of the Jefferies of Acton, the Lloyds of Plâs Madog, and Robert ab William of Trefynant; 6, Llywarch, ancestor of the Sontleys of Sonlli, and Eyton of Eyton Uchaf, according to the Harl. MS., 4,181; 7, Howel, ancestor of Jenkyn Llwyd ab Ieuau ab David Llwyd; 8, Ednowain: and 9—Madog, ancestor of Richard Tegin, and Badies of Plâs yn y Delf.

Iorwerth ab Ninniaiw, the eldest son, had Llwyn On, and a great deal of land in Wrexham, Gresford, Marchwial, Holt, Erbistog, and Bangor. He married, first, Margaret, daughter of Cynwrig Fychan ab Cynwrig ab Hoedliw of Cristionydd, by whom he had two sons ; 1, Gruffudd, of whom presently ; and—2, Iorwerth Fychan, and a daughter, Gwenllion, who married Owain Wan, lord of Caerllion. He married, secondly, Eva, daughter and co-heiress of Llywelyn ab Meurig ab Caradog, son of Iestyn ab Gwrgant, Prince of Glamorgan, and founder of one of the five Royal Tribes of Wales, gules, three chevronells argent. (See Eyton of Eyton Isaf), by whom he had a third son, Hwfa ab Iorwerth, who had Hafod y Wern, who bore sable, three lions passant in pale argent.

Gruffudd ab Iorwerth, the eldest son, had Llwyn On, and a great deal of land in Marchwiall, Bangor, and Erbigog. He married Margaret, daughter of Rhys Fychan ab Iorwerth ab Rhys Grug ab Yr Arglwydd Rhys, according to the Cae Cyriog MS., but according to the Harl. MS., 4,181, she was the daughter of Rhys Fychan ab Rhys Grûg ab Yr Arglwydd Rhys, Prince of South Wales, argent, a lion rampant sable, armed langued and crowned gules, by whom he had issue four sons ; 1, Iorwerth, of whom presently ; 2, Madog Ddû ; 3, Llywelyn, who had issue an only daughter and heiress, Margaret ux Robin ab Rhys ab Robert of Kinmael, sable, a chev. inter three mullets argent ; 4, Ieuaf, and three daughters : 1, Margaret, ux Llywelyn ab Ynyr, lord of Gelli Gynan in Iâl, whose monument is yet to be seen on the south side of the altar of the church of Llanarmon yn Iâl. Gules, three pales or, in a border of the second, eight ogresses ; 2, Gwladys, ux Madog Fychan ab Madog ab Rhirid ab Owain ab Bleddyn ab Tudor ab Rhys Sais ; and—3, . . . ux Ieuan Ddû ab Gwylim of Iâl.

Iorwerth ab Gruffudd, the eldest son, had Llwyn On. He married Annest, daughter of Owain ab Bled-dyn ab Owain Brogynton, lord of Dinmael ; argent, a lion rampant sable, debriused by a baton sinister gules ; by whom he had issue, besides a daughter Agnes, ux David ab Madog Foel, three sons ; 1, Llywelyn, of whom presently ; 2, David ab Iorwerth, of Yr Hôb, who married the sister of Llywelyn ab David of Yr Hôb; and—3, Madog, the father of Llywelyn, who had two daughters, co-heirs, Dyddgu, who died s. p., and Mallt, who married Ieuan Fychan ab Ieuan ab Howel y Gadair of Cadair Benllyn, ab Gruffudd ab Madog ab Iorwerth ab Madog ab Rhirid Flaidd, lord of Penllyn, vert, a chev., inter three wolf's heads erased argent.

Llywelyn ab Iorwerth of Llwyn On. He married Margaret, daughter of Madog ab Ednyfed Goch of Broughton, ab Cynwrig ab Gruffudd Fychan ab Gruffudd ab Einion ab Ednyved, lord of Broughton, ermine, a lion statant gardant gules, second son of Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn, by whom he had issue four sons; 1, Ieuan ab Llywelyn, of whom presently; 2, Howel ab Llywelyn, of whom presently; 3, Gruffudd, and—4, Madog ab Llywelyn of Llwyn y Cnotiau, who married Erddylad, daughter and co-heiress of Howel ab Tudor ab Ithel Fychan, lord of Mostyn, by whom he had a son and heir, Deicws Vongam, who gave the great bell, called yet Cloch Ddeicws, to Wrexham Church.

Ieuan ab Llywelyn of Llwyn On, married Margaret, daughter of David Eyton of Eyton Uchaf, constable and governor of Holtt Castle, by whom he had three daughters, co-heirs; 1, Anest, ux Richard Kynaston of Cru-gott; 2, Margaret, ux David ab Gruffudd ab David ab Llywelyn, descended from Sanddef Hardd, lord of Burton and Llai, and—3, Gwenllian. These three ladies had their portion in money, as the estate of Llwyn On went to their uncle, Howel ab Llywelyn of Llwyn On, who was living 17 Richard II, 1395. He married Margaret, daughter of David, third son of Ednyved Gam of Llys Pengwern, in Nanheudwy, by whom he had issue, besides a daughter Margaret, ux David Llwyd ab Bleddyn of Yr Hersedd, in Ystrad Alun, descended from Edwyn ab Goronwy, four sons; 1, Einion; 2, Robert; 3, Madog, who all died without issue; and—4, Iorwerth ab Howel.

Iorwerth ab Howel of Llwyn On, married Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Thomas de Wilde of Borasham, ab Jenkyn de Wylde of Holtt, argent, a chevron sable, on a chief of the second, three martlets of the field, and relict of William Allynngton of Alynton or Trevalun. Her mother was Angharad, daughter and heiress of Ieuan ab Llywelyn ab Gruffudd Lloyd ab Llywelyn ab Ynyr of Iâl, by whom he had two sons; 1, Robert, of whom presently; and—2, Gruffudd, who had lands in Abynbury and Bangor Is y Coed. He was ancestor of John Roberts of Abynbury, whose daughter and heiress married John Saunders, gentleman, father of Janet, his daughter and heiress, who married Gabriel Goodman of Merlyn, gent., father of Mary, his daughter and heiress, who married Owain Salisbury of Rûg, the great genealogist. Gruffudd ab Iorwerth was ancestor also of the Wynns of Gerwyn Fawr, and others in Bedwal and Coed Abynt.

Robert ab Iorwerth of Llwyn On, living 18 Edw. IV. He married Margaret, daughter of John ab Elis Eyton of Rhiwabon, Esquire of the Body to the King. He died 21 Edw. IV, 1481, and Margaret his wife died in 1528, as lately appeared by their sepulchral monument of freestone in the Isgoed chauntry of Wrexham church, close to the south wall. Formerly there were plates of brass upon the said monument, and an inscription relating to the chronology aforesaid, and two escutcheons upon other plates of brass on the same stone, with the impalement of the coat of arms of the said Robert ab Iorwerth and his lady; all which plates, however, were taken off by some base, rapacious, and barbarous hands in the late civil wars. However, the stone chest and plain table, whereon the said plates and inscription were laid, remain still in the said church of Wrexham, to be seen (1675).

In 1457 (35 Henry VI), Wrexham Church was burnt down, and the then Pope granted an indulgence of forty days for five years, to all who should contribute to rebuild it; and the teams of the Llwyn On family brought the first load of stone for that purpose.

whom presently ; and—2, Gruffudd, and seven daughters ; 1, Angharad ux Madog ab Robert ab Gruffudd Fychan Brochdyn, ermine, a lion statant gardant gules ; 2, Janet ux Lewys Sutton ab Thomas Sutton of Gwersyllt, owner of the house and land Mr. Cawlay now has. 3, Margaret ux John ab Edward ab Madog ab Ieuan ab David of Erlisham, ancestor of the Erlishams of Erlisham or Erllys ; 4, Elen ux Robert ab Howel ab David ab Gruffudd ab Llywelyn ab Madog Voel of Marchwiall ; 5, Catherine ux Robert ab Thomas Sutton of Gwersyllt ; 6, Elizabeth ux David Llwyd ab Gruffudd ab Ieuan of Iâl, descended from Ithel Felyn, lord of Iâl, and—7, Alice ux Robert ab David ab Robert of Stansti, whose daughter and heiress married John Wynn of.....

John ab Robert of Llwyn On married Jane, daughter of John Almor of Almor, Sergeant-at-Arms, azure, a lion rampant or, by whom he had issue two sons ; Robert, of whom presently, and Roger, and four daughters ; 1, Margaret, who married first, Hugh Lloyd of Llwyn y Cnotiau, whose daughter and heir married Hugh Puleston ab Sir John Puleston, knight ; Margaret married, secondly, David Deckaf of Tyfod : 2, Elen, who married first, Morgan ab David ab Robert of Stansti, whose daughter and heir married Richard Mareddydd of Trevalun. Elen married, secondly, William Davies of Trevalun, and—4, Catherine, ux Gruffudd of Rhiwlo.

¹ Born at Beaumaris July 15th, 1816, and was baptised there; married at St. James's Church, Piccadilly, June 17th, 1846; died at Aberdunant, January 23rd, 1870; and was buried at Llanbedrog, February 2nd (see Plâs Tregayan).

MEINI HIRION.

I have just received the following information from the Rev. G. W. Griffith, Vicar of Llangurig, which he obtained from Mr. Williams (ab Morrus), of Carnarvonshire, relative to the Meini Hirion. The following is a translation of what Mr. Williams says :—

“There is no doubt but that there are different opinions in connection with the Meini Hirion, as with everything else. There are several of these stones dotting the Island of Anglesey, as well as Lleyrn, as I dare say you are aware of. I have heard that a curse is still dogging one family in A——, because of their ancestor having presumed to move the Maen Hir which adorned his field near G——, in the parish of Llan—d—.”

A like tradition is current in connection with a family who lived at B——, in the county of Carnarvon. It is said that an ancestor removed a Maen Hir beside the F——, and took it home with much trouble, and set it up as the lintel of his barn. The consequence was, that a lasting curse fell upon the place. (See vol. i, pp. 54, 55.)

TREF GAYAN.

Ednyfed Fychan was the distinguished general and able minister of Llywelyn ab Iorwerth,¹ Prince of Wales, in the early part of the thirteenth century. He was a nobleman of extensive power and possessions in Anglesey, and was the son of Cynwrig ab Iorwerth ab Gwgan ab Idnerth ab Edryd ab Inathal, who was called Prince of Abergeleu.

This Inathal, or Inathan, was the son of Iassetth ab Carwed ab Marchudd, Lord of Uwch Dulas about the year 846. Marchudd bore gules, a Saracen's head erased at the shoulders, ppr., wreathed argent and azure; and resided at Bryn Ffanigl, in the parish of Bettws Wyrion Wgan, and was the chief of one of the noble tribes of Gwynedd.

On one occasion, Ednyfed Fychan was sent by his prince in command of the Welsh armies to defend the frontiers against the English, under the command of Ranulph,² Earl of Chester, whom he defeated, and slew; also three of the chief commanders and a host of the common soldiers. The rest having been put to flight, he returned in triumph, and displaying the three heads; he was commanded by the prince, in addition to many gifts, as a further reward, to bear in future for his arms "gules a chevron ermine, inter three Englishmen's heads in profile coupéd at the neck, ppr.", which is still borne by his descendants at the present day. From the death of Prince Llywelyn (which occurred on April 11th, 1240) his posterity were the most illustrious and powerful men in Wales; and from him was directly descended Henry VII, and every monarch that has since ascended the English throne.

² Ranulph or Randolph Blondville, Earl of Chester, bore azure, three garbs, 2 and 1 or. He succeeded his father, Hugh Cyfeiliog, in 1181, and died in 1233.

He married, first, Gwenllian, daughter of the Lord Rhys ab Gruffudd, Prince of South Wales (gules, a lion rampant, in a border indented or), by whom he had issue two sons,—1, Gruffudd ab Ednyfed; and 2, Goronwy ab Ednyfed, of whom presently.

Gruffudd ab Ednyfed had all the Hên Glawdd for his portion. He married Gwenllian, daughter of Howel ab Trahaiarn ab Gwgan, Lord of Brecknock (sable, a chevron inter three spears' heads embued argent). According to a letter in the Harleian MS., 1971, fol. 196, he "fled to Ireland for some slander given to him touching Joane, the daughter of King John, and wife of Prince Llywelyn ab Iorwerth, and stayed there as long as the prince lived, and was highly entertained". By his wife, Gwenllian, he had issue two sons,—1, Sir Howel ab Gruffudd, knight, who is called by Lewys Dwnn, vol. ii, Sir Howel y Fwyall, or Sir Howel of the Battle Axe; and 2, Sir Rhys ab Gruffudd, knight, who was the father of Sir Gruffudd Llwyd, knight, of Tref Garnedd and Dinorwig, who was the first to convey to Edward I the intelligence of the birth of his son, afterwards Edward II, at Caernarvon Castle, for which he was knighted. In 1232 he revolted against the English, and was afterwards taken prisoner, and confined in Rhuddlan Castle.

Sir Howel ab Gruffudd, or Sir Howel y Fwyall, knight, married Tanglwystl, daughter of David Goch ab Howel Fychan ab Howel ab Ieuaf, Lord of Arwystli (argent, a lion rampant sable, crowned or), by whom he was the father of Gruffudd ab Sir Howel, who married Nesta, daughter of Gwrward ab Gwilym ab Gwrward, Lord of Cemmaes and Bryn Bugaf in Gwent, by whom he had two sons,—1, Sir Rhys Hen, knight; and 2, Robert ab Gruffudd of Kinmael, who bore gules, a chevron inter three mullets or, and was father of Rhys ab Robert of Kinmael, who bore sable, a chevron inter three mullets argent, and was the ancestor of the Lloyds¹ of Kinmael, the Williamses of Llanfair Talhaiarn, and several other families.

Ednyved Fychan, married, secondly, Eva; but, according to Lewys Dwnn, vol. ii, p. 130, Eva was his first wife, daughter of Llywarch ab Bran, lord of Cwmmwd Menai, chief of one of the Noble Tribes of Gwynedd, who bore argent, a chevron sable, inter three Cornish choughs, with an ermine spot on their bills, ppr., by whom he had issue six sons; 1, Sir Tudor ab Ednyfed, who had Plâs yn y Nant, and Llangynafal in Môn; 2, Rhys,² who had Garth Garmon; 3, Howel ab Ednyfed, “a Friar, who in the yeare 1235, became Bishoppe of Saint Assaphe. In the year 1239, hee gave to the nunnes of Llanllugan in Powys-land, the tythe of the Rectory of Llanvaire, in Caereinion; hee impropried also Llangollen vnto the Abbey of Valley Crucis, anno 1236, and the Rectory of Llanassaph, vnto the fabricke of the Cathedral Church, anno 1247; hee died at Oxford, and was there buried;” 4 and 5, Llywelyn and Cynwrig, who had the Creuddyn; and—6, Iorwerth, who had Abermarlais.

Ednyfed Fychan, who lived chiefly at Tref Garnedd in Môn, died about the year 1233, and gave the three manors of Penymynydd, Tref Castell, and Arddreiniog, with Tref Gayan and other extensive estates, to his second son,

Goronwy ab Ednyfed, who, like his father, was an illustrious and powerful man, died in 1270. He married Morfydd, daughter of Neurig ab Ithel, lord of Gwent, by whom he had a son and heir, Tudor Hên of Tref Castell, Penmynydd, Arddreiniog and Tref Gayan. He spent an honourable life at Penmynydd, and died the 9th October 1311, and was buried in Bangor Monastery, which he himself had built, in a tomb made for him in the south wall of the Friars' Chapel. He divided his lands between his three sons; 1, Goronwy, of whom presently; 2, Howel, who died s. p., and 3, Madog, a priest, who became Archdeacon of Anglesey, and afterwards a most renowned Abbot of Aberconwy, and left his lands to his monastery.

Goronwy ab Tudor had Tref Castell, Penmynydd, Arddreiniog, Tref Gayan, and the lands of his brother Howel. He married Gwerfyl, daughter of Madog, Baron of Hendwr, in Edeyrnion (argent, on a chev. gules, three fleur de lys, or). He died 11th October 1331, and was buried with his father in the Friars' Chapel at Bangor, leaving a son and heir,

Sir Tudor ab Goronwy, of Tref Castell, Penmynydd, Arddreiniog, and Tref Gayan. He changed his arms from the Englishmen's heads to three closed helmets, argent. An account of his assuming without authority the honour of knighthood, and its being confirmed to him by King Edward III, will be found in Powell's History of Wales, p. 314, edition of 1702.

He married Margaret, daughter and coheir of Thomas ab Llywelyn ab Owain ab Maredudd, lord of Isgoed, the heir of the Sovereign Princes of South Wales, by whom he had issue five sons; 1, Goronwy ab Tudor of Penmynydd, who was made Forester of Snowden for life by the Black Prince, and Constable of Beaumaris Castle by Richard II. (He left an only daughter and heiress, Morvydd, who married Gruffudd ab Gwilym of Penrhyn, ab Gruffudd ab Heilin ab Sir Tudor, knight, the eldest son of Ednyfed Fychan, by whom she had a son, Tudor Fychan, the ancestor of the Tudors of Penmynydd) 2, Ednyfed ab Tudor of Tref Castell in the Cwmwd of Tindaethwy in Môn, and Tref Gwenhelyth in the Cwmwd of Llivon; and left two daughters coheirs, Angharad and Myfanwy, of whom Angharad married Ieuan ab Adda ab Iorwerth Ddu ab Ednyfed Gam of Llys Pengwern in Nanheudwy, the ancestor of the Mostyn family; 3, Gwilym, whose posterity is nearly extinct; 4, Maredudd, who married Margaret, daughter of David Fychan ab David Llwyd, by whom he had a son, Owain Tudor, who married Catherine, relict of Henry V, King of England, and daughter of Charles VI, King of France, by whom he had a son, Edmund Tudor of Hadham, created Earl of Richmond in 1453, who bore France and England quarterly, in a border azure, charged with fleur-de-lys and martlets or, who by his first wife Margaret, daughter and sole heiress of John Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, was father of Henry VII, King of England; and 5, Rhys ab Tudor, of whom presently. Sir Tudor ab Goronwy died at Tref Castell on the 19th September 1367, and was buried in the Friars' Chapel at Bangor, having bequeathed Arddreiniog and Tref Gayan to his fifth son, Rhys ab Sir Tudor of Arddreiniog and Tref Gayan. He died in 1412, and was buried in the Chapel of the Friars at Bangor, leaving an only daughter and heiress, Gwerfyl who married Madog ab Ieuan ab Einion ab Howel son of Gruffudd ab Howel of Aber Cyn or Y Perkynd, in the parish of Llanystundwy in Evionydd.

Jeuaf ab Llywarch, Lord of Sonlli and Trefwy, or Eyton Uchaf, ab Ieuf ab Niniaw ab Cynwrig ab Rhiw-allawn (see Llwyn On) married, and had issue three sons; 1, Einion Goch, of whom presently; 2, Awr ab Ieuf, ancestor of the Jeffrieses of Acton, the Lloyds of Plâs Madog, and Robert ab William of Trefynant; and 3, Gruffudd ab Ieuf.

Einion Goch, Lord of Sonlli and Eyton Uchaf, married Gwenhwyfar, daughter of Ieuf ab Llywelyn ab

Cynwrig Evell, Lord of Y Glewysegl and a part of Ystrad Alun (gules, on a bend argent, a lion passant sable), by whom he had a son and heir, Iorwerth ab Einion, Lord of Sonlli and Eyton Uchaf, who married Tibot, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Hamwyt, or Hammond de Pulford, Knt., Lord of Pwllffordd, or Pulford, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Rowley Corbet, of Lee, Knt., and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Cynwrig Sais (sable, a cross argent for De Pulford); by whom he had issue four sons; 1, Gruffydd ab Iorwerth, of whom presently; 2, Ednyved, or Ednowain ab Iorwerth; 3, Einion ab Iorwerth, who married the daughter of Ednyfed Goch, of Gnottyn ab Goronwy ab Owain, by whom he had an only daughter and heiress, Gwenllian ux Howel Maelor ab Ieuaf Ddû ab Ieuaf ab Madog ab Bledrws, twelfth son of Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn; and 4, Madog ab Iorwerth.

Gruffudd ab Iorwerth, Lord of Sonlli and Eyton Uchaf, married Angharad, daughter of Madog ab Llywelyn ab Gruffudd, Lord of Eyton Isaf, Erlisham and Borasham (ermine, a lion rampant azure), by whom he had issue, besides a daughter . . . wife of Iorwerth Goch ab Ieuaf Foelfrych ab Iorwerth Fychan, des. from Idnerth Benfras, Lord of Macsbrwy, three sons, who were celebrated bards.

I. Ednyfed ab Gruffudd, of whom presently.

II. Madog Benfras, of Marchwiail. At the great Eisteddfod, held at Marchwiail, he won the chair and a birchen wreath, for a poem to a lady, "Whereupon, Davydd ab Gwilym sang kindly of him for that poem." He flourished from 1300 to 1350. Some of his compositions are preserved in manuscript, and several of them have been published in the Myvyrian Archæologia of Wales.

III. Llywelyn Llogell Rhyson, Parson of Marchwiail. He composed the Englynion of "Marchwiail bedw briglas" in the ancient style of poetry, when the great Eisteddfod was held there in the time of King Edward III.

These three brothers had been the disciples of Llywellyn ab Gwilym Emlyn, of Dôl Goch in Ceredigion, when the said Llywelyn was in concealment at Gwern y Cleppa, the court of Ivor Hael, at Maes Aleg. It was in their time that the great Eisteddfod took place at Marchwial in the time of Edward III, under the patronage of the Earl of Mortimer; to which bards from Gwynedd, Powys, South Wales and Glamorgan assembled for the purpose of renovating in memory the ancient arts and secrets of vocal song, that had been almost lost in Gwynedd and Powys; there being but few trained in the art and knowledge of vocal song, except in Glamorgan, Anglesey and Ceredigion, in consequence of having lost the Princes who patronised the bards. The Congresses of Ivor Hael at Maes Aleg, of Llywelyn ab Gwilym Emlyn at Dôl Goch in Emlyn, and of Marchwial, were called the three regenerating Bardic conventions.¹

Ednyfed ab Gruffudd, Lord of Sonlli and Eyton Uchaf. He was the preceptor of the bard Iolo Goch.² At the Eisteddfod held at Dôl Goch Ednyfed won the chair for his "Cywydd Gwr" and shorter stanzas of "Eery Mynydd." He married Lleicu Bach, daughter of Ieuan ab Philip ab Maredudd ab Madog Danwr, Lord of

² Iolo Goch was one of the most eminent poets of the Principality. He was Lord of Llechryd, and resided at Coed Pantwn, in the parish of Llan Nevydd, his mother, according to Gruffudd Hiraethog, being the Countess of Lincoln. Being possessed of considerable property, he received a liberal education, and took his degree of Master of Arts in one of the Universities. The Pantons of Plâs Gwyn, in Anglesey, are descended from him. During the insurrection of Owain Glyndyfrdwy Iolo Goch employed his muse with great effect in rousing the spirit of his countrymen against the English, and when very old he resided some time with Owain at his palace of Sycharth, in Cynllaith; and we learn several interesting particulars respecting the domestic life of Owain, and the magnificence of the place, from his poems addressed to him. Iolo must have lived to extreme old age, as among his poems is an elegy on the death of Tudor ab Goronwy, who died in 1315, and a poem written on the comet which appeared in 1402. More than fifty of his poems are still preserved in manuscript. He also wrote a history of the three Principalities of Wales.—Williams's Eminent Welshmen.

Llangurig (ermine, a lion rampant sable, in a border gules, charged with eight mullets or), by whom he had issue, besides two daughters—1, Margaret, who married, first, Rhys ab Cynwrig ab Rotpert; and, secondly, Rhys Wynn of Fachnallt ab David, son of Ithel, Parson of Llaneurgain, son of Ithel Fychan, Lord of Mostyn, who bore azure, a lion statant argent, son of Ithel Llwyd ab Ithel Gam, Lord of Mostyn, son of Maredudd ab Uchdryd ab Edwin ab Goronwy, Prince of Tegeingl; and 2, Morfydd, ux. Gwilym ab Maredudd of Yr Hôb—four sons; 1, Llywelyn ab Ednyfed, of whom presently; 2, Howel ab Ednyfed; 3, Gruffudd ab Ednyfed; and 4, David ab Ednyfed.

Llywelyn ab Ednyfed, Lord of Sonlli and Eyton Uchaf, who married Angharad, daughter of Ieuan ab Maredudd of Yr Hôb ab Llywelyn ab Gruffudd ab Llywelyn ab Ynyr of Iâl (gules, three pales or, in a border of the third, charged with eight ogresses), by whom he had issue four sons; 1, Morgan ab Llywelyn, of whom presently; 2, David ab Llywelyn, alias David Eyton, Lord of Eyton Uchaf; 3, Madog ab Llywelyn, who died in 1481 (20th Edward IV)—he married Gwen, daughter of Ieuan ab Madog Goch, by whom he had two daughters, coheirs; 1, Angharad ux. David Llwyd ab Deicws ab Madog; and 2, Margaret ux. David ab Gruffudd ab David ab Badi ab David Goch, of Croes Foel and Havod y Bwch—and 4, Rhys ab Llywelyn.

Llywelyn ab Ednyfed had also four daughters; 1, Gwenllian, ux. Maredudd ab Hwlkin Llwyd; 2, Lleucu, ux. Jenkyn ab Ieuan ab Llywelyn of Iâl; 3, Eva, ux. Morgan ab David ab Madog of Sonlli; and 4, Catherine ux. John ab Howell ab Einion Goch of Traian.

Morgan ab Llywelyn of Sonlli, married, first, Elen, daughter of Iorwerth, or Edward of Plâs Newydd yn Y Waun, second son of Ieuan ab Adda ab Iorwerth Ddû ab Ednyfed Gam of Llys Pengwern in Nantheudwy, by whom he had one son, Robert Wynn Sonlli, of whom presently. He married, secondly, daughter of Rhys ab Howel Fychan ab Ieuan ab Einion, by whom he had one daughter, Angharad, who married, first, David Goch ab Howel ab Ieuan of Erddig, ab Llywelyn ab Gruffudd ab Iorwerth Fychan ab Iorwerth ab Ieuf ab Niniaw, by whom she had no issue; and, secondly, she married Jenkyn Morton.

Robert Wynn Sonlli Hên of Sonlli, married Catherine, daughter and heiress of John Luter, of Llyn y Wesefer, in the upper part of Wrexham parish, receiver of Bromfield under Sir William Stanley, ab David ab John ab Humphrey Luter, by whom he had issue two sons; 1, Robert Wynne Sonlli, of whom presently; and 2, John Sonlli of Frondeg; and four daughters; 1, Catherine, ux. Thomas ab Iorwerth ab Ieuan ab Owain Glyndwr (see vol. i, p. 217); 2, Margaret ux. Edward ab William of Bersham; 3, Elen, ux. Howel ab David ab Howel ab Deicws ab Howel of Hendref Gynon by Cefn Uchaf; and 4, Gwenllian, ux. Geoffrey Wilkinson. Robert Wynn Sonlli married, secondly, Elizabeth,¹ daughter of John Brereton of Borasham, and relict of John ab Madog ab Ieuan ab David.

Robert Wynn Sonlli, of Sonlli, married Elizabeth, daughter of John Puleston, Tir Môn (see Havod y Wern), and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Piers Stanley of Eulo; by whom he had issue six sons; 1, John Sonlli, of whom presently; 2, Roger Sonlli; 3, Robert Sonlli; 4, Hugh Sonlli, rector of Marchwial, 1556, and vicar of Wrexham in 1566, ob. 1598; 5, David Sonlli, and 6, Owain Sonlli; and four daughters; 1, Catherine ux. Nicholas, Clerk of Bowset; 2, Elizabeth, who married, first, Hugh ab David Trevor; secondly, Henry Pennant; and, thirdly, Robert Puleston; 3, Jane, ux. William Edgebury, or Eddisbury; and 4, Lily, ux. Randle ab Howel ab Edward of Cristionydd.

IV. Gruffudd ab Meilir, who married Angharad, daughter and heir of Llywelyn ab Meurig ab Caradog ab Iestyn ab Gwrgant, Prince of Glamorgan, founder of one of the Five Royal Tribes, gules, three chevronells argent, by whom he had issue four daughters, co-heiresses ; 1, Gwladys, who married, first, Ithel ab Eunydd ab Gwernwy, one of the noble tribes, and Lord of Trevalun Y Groesfford, in Maelor, and Lleprog Fawr, Lleprog Fechan, and Trefnant y Rhiw in Tegeingl ; and, secondly, she married Cynwrig ab Hoedliw of Cristionydd, ab Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn, ermine, a lion rampant sable ; 2, Angharad, ux. Iorwerth Hên ab Owain ab Bleddyn ab Tudor ab Rhys Sais, Lord of Chirk, Maelor Saesneg, and Nanheudwy ; 3, Angharad Fechan, ux. Cadwgan y Seithydd, Lord of Hên Fachau, argent, a chevron gules, inter three pheons, pointed to the centre, sable. Cadwgan y Saethydd was the son of Rhirid ab Cadwgan ab Rhirid ab Bleddyn ab Cynfyn, Prince of Powys ; and 4, Gwenllian.

v. Madog ab Meilir.

Cadwgan ab Meilir, Lord of Eyton, Erlisham, and Borasham, married Myvanwy, daughter and heir of Eunydd ab Llywarch ab Brân, Lord of Cwmmwd Menai in Môn, who bore argent, a chevron sable, inter three Cornish choughs, ppr., each with a spot of ermine in their bills. Llywarch dwelt in the township, which is called from him Tref Llywarch, and in which Caer Gybi, or Holyhead is situate, and was steward to his brother-in-law Owain Gwynedd, Prince of North Wales, for both their wives were sisters, the daughters of Goronwy ab Owain ab Edwyn, Prince of Tegeingl. By this lady, Cadwgan had issue, besides a daughter Clementia, wife of Ithel ab Howel ab Moreiddig ab Sanddef Hardd, Lord of Burton and Llai, vert, semé of broomslips, a lion rampant or—a son and heir, Gruffudd ab Cadwgan, Lord of Eyton, Erlisham and Borasham. He married Jannette, daughter of Sir Fulke Fitz-Warren, Knt., Lord of Whittington, son and heir of Sir Warren de Weaux, a nobleman of Lorraine, quarterly and per fess indented gules and argent, in the dexter chief a canton chequy or and azure. It is not known in what year Gruffudd died, but his coffin-lid was found a few years ago in an old barn at Pant Iocyn. By his wife Janet, he had issue—besides three daughters; 1, Margaret, ux. Gruffudd. “y Barwn Gwyn”, Lord of Glyn-dyfrdwy, Iâl, and half of Cynllaith, argent, three pales gules, a lion salient sable; 2, Agnes, ux. Iorwerth ab Hwfa Llwyd ab Gruffudd Goch ab David ab Tegwared of Traian, in the lordship of Whittington or Drefwen, sable, a chevron inter three spear’s heads imbrued, argent; and 3, Elen, ux. Llywelyn ab Gruffudd ab Iorwerth of Llansantffraid and Drewen—a son and heir, Llywelyn ab Gruffudd, Lord of Eyton, Erlisham and Borasham. He married, first, Angharad, daughter and sole heiress of Maredudd, Lord of Rhiwabon, second son of Madog ab Gruffudd Maelor, Prince of Powys Fadog, and Lord of Castell Dinas Brân, argent, three pales gules, a lion salient sable. Her mother was the Princess Catherine, daughter of Gruffudd ab Llywelyn ab Iorwerth, Prince of Wales, quarterly, gules and or, four lions rampant counterchanged. As Maredudd had no male issue, his lordships went to his eldest brother, Prince Gruffudd, but his lands passed to his daughter Angharad, and through her to the Eyton family, and part of these lands was the ancient camp called Caer-Ddin, and vulgarly Gardden, and a farm called Cae Cuwppa, adjoining it. This remained in the Rhiwabon branch of the Eyton family till the time of the late Mr. Eyton Evans of Watstay: yr hwn a ymadowoddod ar Mannau hyny i Sir Gerard Eyton (his father-in-law) ar ryw amnodau sâl. By his first consort Angharad, Llywelyn ab Gruffudd had issue—besides two daughters, Lleucu, ux. David ab Iorwerth ab Madog ab Gruffudd ab Owain Brogyntyn, and Angharad, ux. Gruffudd ab Ieuf ab Iorwerth, descended from Eunydd ab Gwernwy, azure, a lion salient or—two sons.

I. Madog ab Llywelyn, of whom presently.

II. Gruffudd ab Llywelyn of Bodylltyn in the township of Rhiwabon, whose son and heir, Ednyved ab Gruffudd of Bodylltyn, had an only daughter Lleucu, heiress of Bodylltyn, who was the second wife of Madog Llwyd of Isgoed in Maelor Saesneg, son of Gruffudd of Maelor Saesneg, second son of Iorwerth Foel, Lord of Chirk, Maelor Saesneg, and Nantheudwy.

Llywelyn ab Gruffudd, Lord of Eyton, married, secondly, Gwenllian, daughter of Owain ab Trahaiarn ab Ithel ab Eunydd ab Gwernwy, Lord of Dyffryn Clwyd, Trefalun, and Y Groesfordd in Maelor, etc., azure, a lion salient or, by whom he had, besides a daughter Margaret, the wife of Madog ab Ednyvet Goch of Bersham, ermine, a lion statant gules, armed and langued azure—two other sons.

III. Iorwerth ab Llywelyn, who had lands in Borasham and Rhuddallt. He married Margaret, daughter of Iorwerth ab David ab Goronwy ab Iorwerth ab Howel ab Mereiddig ab Sanddef Hardd, Lord of Morton (or Burton), and Llai, vert, semé of broomslips, a lion rampant or, and was ancestor of the Borashams of Borasham, or Bwras.

IV. Howel Grach ab Llywelyn. He married Margaret, daughter and heiress of David, Lord of one fourth part Caer Einion, viz., Pentyrch, Celli Caswallawn, Penarch and Rhiwarch, fifth son of Gruffudd ab Gwennwyn, the last sovereign Prince of Powis Wenwynwyn, who died in 1289, and was buried in the church of the Franciscan monastery, or Grey Friars in Shrewsbury, or, a lion rampant gules, quartered with or, a lion's gamb erased bendways gules. The mother of Margaret was Elen, daughter and heiress of Howel, third son of Madog ab Gruffudd Maelor, Prince of Powys Fadog, argent, three pales gules, a lion salient sable. By his consort Margaret, Howel Grach had issue an only daughter and heiress Angharad, who married Madog yr Athro, the ancestor of the Lloyds of Plâs Madog in Bodylltyn.

Madog ab Llywelyn, Lord of Eyton, Erlisham, and Borasham, married Angharad, daughter of David Hên ab Goronwy Hên ab Iorwerth ab Howel ab Moreiddeg ab Sanddef Hardd or the handsome, Lord of Morton and Llai, vert, semé of broomslips, a lion rampant or. He died in 1331, and was buried on the feast of St. Matthias, in the north aisle of Gresford Church. He is represented recumbent in armour, with the lion rampant on his shield, and this inscription, "Hic jacet Madog ab Llywelyn ab Gruffudd". This tomb is now placed in the south wall of the church.

By his wife Angharad, Madog ab Llywelyn had issue, five sons and five daughters.

I. Ieuan ab Madog, of whom presently.

II. David Llwyd of Havod y Bwch and other lands in Borasham, married, and had issue, besides three daughters, Gwladys, Angharad and Lleucu, two sons, Howel and Ieuan ab David, who joined Owain Glyndyfrdwy, and on this account the estates of David Llwyd were all forfeited to the king. These lands were sold to Thomas de Weild of Holht. Ieuan ab David, who had Hafod y Bwch, had an illegitimate daughter, who married David ab Ieuan Painod; but by his wife Eva, daughter and heiress of Gruffudd ab Gruffudd Ddû ab Gruffudd ab Howel ab Hwfa ab Iorwerth ab Gruffudd ab Ieuf ab Niniau ab Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn, gules, two lions passant argent, for Iorwerth ab Gruffudd of Bersham, he had a son and heir, Goronwy ab Ieuan, who appears to have had Havod y Bwch, who married Gwenllian, daughter of Ieuan ab Gruffudd Goch of Bers, ab Madog ab Ednyfed Goch, ermine, a lion statant gardant gules, by whom he had an only daughter, and heiress of lands in Maelor, who married David Lloyd ab Tudor of Bodidris in Iâl.

III. Howel ab Madog, who married Eva, daughter of Gruffudd of Maelor Saesneg, second son of Iorwerth Foel, Lord of Chirk, etc., by whom he had an only daughter and heiress, Margaret, ux. David ab Ithel ab Goronwy.

IV. Iorwerth Goch, married Lleucu, daughter of Goronwy ab Tudor ab Goronwy, Lord of Tref Castell, Penmynydd, Arddreiniog, and Tref Gaian in Môn, son of Ednyfed Fychan, gules, a chevron argent, inter three Englishmen's heads in profile, coupé at the neck and crined and bearded, ppr., by whom he had an only daughter and heiress, Erddylad, who married Ieuan ab

v. David Fychan ab Madog.

The five daughters of Madog ab Llywelyn of Eyton were ; 1, Erddylad or Erminallt, ux. Tudor ab Ithel Fychan, Lord of Mostyn, azure, a lion statant argent ; 2, Gwenhwyfar, ux. Gruffudd ab Iorwerth ab Einion Goch, Lord of Sonlli and Eyton Uchaf, ermine, a lion rampant sable ; 3, Angharad, ux. Llywelyn ab Gruffudd ab Iorwerth ab Maredudd ab Mathusalem ; 4, Lleucu, ux. Madog Foel of Marchwiall, ermine, a lion rampant azure ; and 5, Margaret, ux. Iorwerth Fychan ab Iorwerth ab Awr, ancestor of the Lloyds of Plâs Madog in Bodylltyn.

Ieuan ab Madog, Lord of Eyton, married Anne, daughter of Sir Richard Puleston of Emerall, Knt., sable, three mullets argent, by whom he had issue three sons ; 1, Madog ab Ieuan, of whom presently ; 2, Jenkyn ab Ieuan of Acton, who married Angharad, daughter of Ieuan ab Adda, by whom he had no issue (he had, however, three illegitimate children, Howel ab Jenkyn of Acton, John ab Jenkyn, and Angharad, ux. Ieuan Deccaf—see Acton) ; 3, Gruffudd ab Ieuan ; and 4, Iorwerth ab Ieuan.

Madog ab Ieuan, Lord of Eyton, married Margaret, daughter of Iorwerth Ddû ab Ednyfed Gam of Llys Pengwern in Nantheudwy, fourth son of Iorwerth Foel, Lord of Chirk, Maelor Saesneg and Nantheudwy, by whom he had, besides a daughter, Gwenllian, ux. Howel ab Einion Goch, a son and heir,

James Eyton, Lord of Eyton, who married Gwenllian, daughter of Cynwrig ab Rotpert ab Iorwerth ab Rhirid of Llaneurgain, ab Iorwerth ab Madog ab Ednowain Bendew of Llys Coed y Mynydd in the parish of Bod Vari, chief of one of the noble tribes of Gwynydd, argent, a chevron inter three boar's heads coupéd sable, tusked or, and langued gules, by whom he had issue a son and heir,

John Eyton Hên, Lord of Eyton, 18 Henry VI, steward of the lordship of Bromfield, 1477. He married Gwenllian, daughter and co-heiress of Einion ab Ithel of Rhiwaedog, Esquire of the body to John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster 1395, and High Sheriff of Meirionydd for life; ab Gwrgeneu Fychan ab Gwrgeneu ab Madog ab Iorwerth ab Madog ab Rhirid Flaidd, Lord of Penllyn; 1, vert, a chevron, inter wolf's heads erased argent; 2, argent, a lion sable in a border or, for Elissau, Lord of Llangar; 3, or, a lion rampant in a border gules, for Madog ab Gwenwynwyn. By this lady, John Eyton Hên had issue Elis Eyton of Rhiwabon, and then was divorced from her upon account of near consanguinity, by which means his son Elis was made illegitimate; but afterwards he obtained a dispensation from the Pope to marry her again, and then had issue, besides two daughters, Margaret, ux. Howel ab Rhys ab David ab Howel, Lord of Rug in Edeyrnion; and Mallt, ux. Gruffudd ab Rhys ab Ieuan ab Llywelyn Ddû of Branäs in Edeyrnion—a son and heir, William Eyton of Eyton, ob. 1479. “The same jury do answere to the several articles given them in charge by John Norden the Elder, Esq., and John Norden the Younger, Gent., the Prince, his Highness, Commissioners of Surrey, for the Lordshippe of Bromfield and Yale, as followeth, viz. :

“THE MANOR OF RHIWABON.

“This manor contains the townships of Rhiwabon, Marchwiail, and Rhwytyyn or Tref y Rug.

“The manor or township of Rhiwabon leadeth westward from ye brooke called Gwerindd' vnto the river Dee, and so along the said river for one myle or there aboute, south unto another brook called Avon Cristionydd, and from this brook along a certaine way unto ye howse of one Roger David ab Llewelyn in the manor of Fabrorum, and to a greene called Rhôs John ab Madog; from thence to a place called Y Synder, conteyning one myle and a half eastward, and so downward to the Avon Ddu and to the Avon Goch, and followeth these twoe brookes unto the highway leading from Pentref Cristionydd to ye towne of Wrexham northwards; but some parts of the manors of Fabororum, Is y Coed, Abimbury, and Morton Anglicorum, are intermixed within ye bounds of this manor.

“Item, there belongeth out of ye townshipp of Marchwiail and other townshippes as followeth, vnto ye manor of Rhiwabon, viz. :

“Tenementes of freeholde lands and tenementes of lease or customarie landes from the townshipp of Rhwyton.

“Tenementes of freehold and tenementes of coppihold.

“Tenementes out of ye townshipp of Dutton Diffaeth of freeholde, and from ye townshipp of Sutton, tenementes of freeholde.

“There are no demeasmes in the said manor (1620).

“There is a rough and rockye common within the township of Rhiwfabon, called Nant y Belan, and belongeth to his highness’ tennaunts, who pay for the same to the riavors bayliff of this manor xvjd. yearlie, and for the quantitie thereof this jury knoweth not. And sayen further that there is another common called Nant y Glyn Ddu, being moorishe and rough, overgrowne with brambles and shrubbes, which belongeth to the freeholders of the townshippe of Rhiwfabon, as appertenaunt to their freehold landes.

“There is no parke nor warren at all in this manor.

“There is a quarrie of stone in Nant y Belan, and no proffit made of it, savinge that some of the neighbours thereabout gett thereof for the makinge of their ovens, and that there is no mine of coale, lead, chalke, or other benefitt menconed, but there is marle in some places in this manor.

“There is no towne corporate or priveleged in this manor.

“The Prince has no mill in this manor.

“There is no common within this manor that yieldeth any turfe, furse, or any other like commoditie.

“This manor, being a member of the Lordship of Bromfield, doth serve at the leete and lawdaies of ye said lordshipp, as they are bound to doe, and that they pay no ffyn’es, head silver, and king silver, but that they pay their rent, fynes and alienations, amerciaments of courtes, mizes, and all other payments for their rate and proporcon, as other ye tennants and inhabitants of ye said lordshipp doe, when and as often as ye same are due.

“There is no fishing or fowling place belonging to this manor.

“There is no market or fair within this manor.

“There is yearly made at ye leete, after Michaelmas, pettie constables within the townshippes of this manor, and that the Chief Steward (1620) is the Right Honourable John, Earl of Bridgewater, and that John Jefferies, Esq, John Davies, Gent., and Thomas Foster, Gent., are his deputies, and that Thomas Trafford, Esq., is receiver."

TOWNSHIP OF RHIWABON.

This township contains the villas or hamlets of Hafod, Bodylltyn, Rhuddallt, and Belan. This township, as most probably also the other two townships of the manor of Rhiwabon, viz., Rhwyton and Marchwiail, was given by Madog ab Gruffydd Maelor, Prince of Powys Fadog, who died in 1236, to his second son Maredydd, who was styled Maredydd of Rhiwabon from that circumstance. He took up his residence in the township of Rhiwabon, at a place subsequently called Watstay, and now Wynnstay, in the villa or hamlet of Hafod. He married the Princess Catherine, daughter of Gruffydd ab Llewelyn ab Iorwerth, Prince of Wales, who bore quarterly gules and or, four lions rampant counterchanged. By his consort, Maredydd had issue one only daughter and heiress, named Angharad, who had her father's landed estates, part of which was the ancient camp called Y Gaer-Ddin, and a farm called Cae Cuwppa adjoining it, which remained in the Rhiwabon branch of the Eyton family, till the late Mr. Eyton Evans of Watstay exchanged them with his father-in-law, Sir Gerard Eyton of Eyton, knight banneret, for some other compensation. As Maredydd died without male issue, his lordships went to his eldest brother, Prince Gruffydd. But his estate of Rhiwabon devolved upon his daughter and heiress Angharad, who married Llewelyn ab Gruffydd ab Cadwgan, Lord of Eyton, Erlisham and Borasham, ermine, a lion rampant azure; who thus, in right of his wife, became possessed of this estate, which continued to form a portion of the Eyton estate till the time of John Eyton Hên, Lord of Eyton and Seneschal, or steward of the lordship of Bromfield in 1477.

This John Eyton of Eyton and Watstay married Gwenhwyfar, second daughter and co-heiress of Einion ab Ithel of Rhiwaedog in Penllyn, esquire of the body to John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and High Sheriff of Meirionydd for life, by whom he had issue two sons, Elis and William, and one daughter Margaret, wife of Howel ab Rhys, Lord of Rûg. Soon after the birth of the eldest son Elis, it was discovered that his parents were too nearly related to each other, to be able to marry without a dispensation from the Pope, which, as they had not obtained, Elis was pronounced by the Church to be illegitimate, and his parents were divorced; and his youngest brother William, who was born after his parents had got married again with the necessary dispensation from Rome, was made the eldest legitimate son, and inherited the Eyton estate. The estate of Rhiwabon, however, was left by his father to Elis.

RHIWABON, AFTERWARDS CALLED WATSTAY, AND NOW WYNNSTAY.

Cae Cyriog MS., Harl. MS., 4181.

ELIS EYTON of Rhiwabon, the eldest son of John Eyton of Eyton, married first, Elizabeth, daughter of Gruffydd Hanmer of Hanmer, by whom he had no issue. He married secondly, Angharad, daughter of Madog Puleston of Bers, argent, on a bend sable, three molets of the field, ab Robert Puleston ab Richard ab Sir Roger Puleston of Emral, knight, sable, three molets argent, by whom he had issue, besides a daughter Gwenllian, ux. John Edward Hên of Plâs Newydd, in the lordship of Chirk, receiver of Chirkland, from 2nd July, 13 Henry VII, to the 22 Henry VII, four sons—1, John ab Elis Eyton, of whom presently; 2, David Eyton, who married first, Marsly, daughter of Howel ab Rhys ab Howel, by whom he had no issue; and secondly, he married . . . daughter of Morgan ab David ab Madog, by whom he had an only daughter and heiress, Margaret, who married Randle Broughton ab Iorwerth Goch ab Ednyfed of Broughton, ermine, a lion statant gardant gules; 3, Elis Eyton, who married Parnel, daughter of Sir Thomas Bulkeley, knight, ab William Bulkeley of Shaklys, by whom he had an only daughter and heiress, Margaret, who married first, Randle Goch Brereton, eldest son of Edward Brereton ab William Brereton of Borasham, Esq. ; and secondly, Richard Powel ab Howel Hynaf ab Morgan of Alrhey, ermine, a lion statant gardant gules; and 4, Sir Edward Eyton, a priest.

JOHN AB ELIS EYTON of Rhiwabon, the eldest son, fought in the army of King Henry VII, at the battle of Bosworth, in 1485. For his services in this battle, the King granted him a reward in land, as appears by a charter, seen by Mr. Salusbury of Erbistog. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Hugh Calveley of the Lee, and Lord of the Manor of Calveley in Cheshire, knight (who was killed at the battle of Bloreheath, in 1459), argent, a fess gules, inter three calves sable, and Mary his wife, daughter of Sir Gilbert Hoghton of Hoghton Tower in Lancashire, knight. Elizabeth died 11th June 1524, and was interred in the chancel of Rhiwfabon church; and her husband, John ab Elis Eyton, died 28th September 1526, and was buried with his wife in the chancel, under an altar tomb, with figures of monks weeping on the sides, and angels holding shields of now defaced arms. On the top are two figures recumbent, an armed man with a collar of SS, and a lady lying on a cloak; at their feet a lion, with a monk sitting on it, with his head recumbent on one hand. Round the edge of the tomb is this inscription:—Orate pro a'ia Joh'is ap Elis Eyton Armigeri qui obiit vicesimo . . . die mensis Septembris An'o D'ni . . . El'sabeth Calfley uxoris ej' que obiit xj die mensis Junii Anno D'ni M'o D'o xxiv. Quor 'a'ibus propitiatur Deus. Amen.

By his wife, Elizabeth Calveley, John ab Elis Eyton had issue one son, John Eyton of Rhiwabon, of whom presently, and one daughter Margaret, ux. Robert ab Edward of Llwyn On, in the manor of Abynbury, and parish of Wrexham, ancestor of the Jones Parrys of Madryn and Llwyn On, ermine, a lion rampant sable, armed and langued gules. Margaret died in 1528, as appears by the inscription on her tombstone in Wrexham church.

John ab Elis Eyton had four illegitimate children by two other women. By Eva, daughter and heiress of Richard ab David ab Sidan, he had Roger Eyton, who married Gwenhwyfar, daughter and heiress of Edward ab Madog ab Deio ab Madog Llwyd of Bodylltyn, and ancestor of the Eytons of Bodylltyn. By Margaret, daughter of Thomas ab Llewelyn ab Madog of Edeir-nion, who lived with him fifteen years, he had three daughters—1, Elizabeth, ux. William Bwras ab John ab Einion ab Iolyn ab Iorwerth of Bwras, or Borasham, (ermine, a lion rampant azure), by whom she had two sons, William Bwras, and Sir John Bwras, collated to the vicarage of Rhiwabon, in 1537; 2, Margaret Eyton, who married Gruffydd ab Nicholas ab Deicws of Coed y Llai, or Leeswood (her father loved her so dearly, that he caused her to name both her sons John Eyton, the same name as himself, in remembrance of him); and 3, Jane Eyton, ux. Gruffydd ab David Ddû ab Tudor.

JOHN EYTON of Rhiwabon, married, first, Emma, daughter of Sir Roger Kynaston of Hordley, knight (ermine, a chevron gules), by whom he had, besides a daughter, Elizabeth, ux. John Trevor Goch of Wignant, ab Edward Trevor, constable of Whittington Castle, a son and heir, John Eyton Fychan, who married Catherine, daughter of John Puleston Hên of Hafod y Wern and Bers (argent, on a bend sable, three molets of the field), by whom he had no issue. He died in 1534, a prisoner in Holt Castle, for having killed William Hanmer.

John Eyton of Rhiwabon married, secondly, Annest, daughter of Elissau ab Gruffydd ab Einion of Gwyddel-wern, ab Gruffydd ab Llewelyn ab Cynwrig ab Osbern Wyddel, of Cors y Gedol (ermine, a saltier gules, a crescent or, for difference), by whom he had issue four sons and five daughters; 1, William Eyton, of whom presently; 2, Owain Eyton of Glyn y Gwestl, now called Eglwyseg, who married Catherine, daughter of Hugh ab

John ab Ieuan ab Deicws of Llanerchrugog (ermine, a lion rampant sable), and daughter also of his own sister Catherine, as is shown in the Harl. MS., 4181 (by his wife Catherine, Owain Eyton had a son and heir, William Eyton of Glyn y Gwestl, the father of Edward Eyton of Glyn y Gwestl, the father of Owain Eyton of Glyn y Gwestl); 3, Richard Eyton of Belan, sergeant-at-arms, who built Melin y Sergeant in Rhuddallt; and 4, Roger Eyton, who died s. p. The daughters of John Eyton, by his second wife, were; 1, Janet, ux. David Lloyd ab John ab Edward ab Madog Puleston of Plâs Uchaf, in Cristionydd; 2, Catherine, ux. Hugh ab John ab Ieuan ab Deicws of Llanerchrugog (ermine, a lion rampant sable); 3, Jane, ux. Matthew Wynn of Llys Trevor, in Nanheudwy (party per bend sinister, ermine and *ermine*s, a lion rampant or, in a border gules); 4, Constans, ux. David Fychan ab Madog ab Robert ab Einion of Morton; and 5, Gwenhwyfar, ux. Robert Jones of Esclusham, brother of Edward Jones of Plâs Cadwgan, ab John ab David ab Robert ab Gruffydd ab Howel of Croes Foel, ab Gruffydd ab Iorwerth Fychan ab Iorwerth ab Ieuf ab Niniab ab Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn (ermine, a lion rampant sable).

Besides these, John Eyton had several illegitimate children. By Gwenllian, daughter of Ieuan ab Howel, he had a son Edward Eyton; by Myfanwy, daughter of Gruffydd Llwyd of Llanfyllin, he had another son, John Eyton, butler to Sir Thomas Hanmer, and a daughter Margaret.

WILLIAM EYTON of Rhiwabon, the eldest son, married, first, Gwenhwyfar, second daughter and co-heir of Richard ab Rhys ab Maurice of Cynllaith, ab Ieuan Gethin ab Madog Cyffyn (party per fess sable and argent, a lion, rampant counterchanged), by whom he had one daughter, Elizabeth, who married Martin Bromfield of Bryn y Wiwair, in the township of Morton Anglicorum (argent, a cross flory, engrailed sable, inter four Cornish choughs, ppr., on a chief azure, a boar's head couped argent, tusked or, and langued gules). William Eyton married, secondly, Agnes, daughter of William ab William ab Gruffydd ab Robin ab Gruffydd ab Gwilym ab Gruffydd of Cwchwillan (gules, a chev. ermine, inter three Englishmen's heads coupéd at the shoulders, ppr.), and thirdly, he married Blanche, daughter of Richard Trevor ab Edward Trevor ab David ab Ednyfed Gam, by whom he had a daughter named Gwenhwyfar.

In 1637, William Eyton gave a house and lands in Crimbal Lane (the original income was £5 4s. 0*d.*, but it is now £15, per annum), for the distribution of a loaf of white bread to the poor on Sundays; and it is still distributed as the will directs. On the plate of a large oak chest, which exists in the church, are the following lines:—

Within this chest are writings lay'd,
Whereby six pounds a year conveyed,
Unto Rhuabon poore t'was given,
By William Eyton, now in Heaven.

In 1641 he gave lands, the original income of which was £4 8s. 0*d.* per annum, to be given to the poor of the parish of Rhiwabon on Good Friday; which was thus distributed to the poor on that day, from 1642 to 1687.

William Eyton,¹ by his second wife Agnes, had issue four sons; 1, Edward Eyton, of whom presently; 2, John Eyton of Belan, who, by Jane his wife, daughter of Hugh Puleston, Esq., had a son and heir, William Eyton of Belan; 3, William Eyton of Plâs Newydd, in Pentref Rhiwabon, in the villa of Rhuddallt, who died s. p. in 1633; and 4, Roger, who died young; and a daughter Mary, who married Edward Eyton of Eyton, Esq., whose only daughter and heiress, Mary, married Owain Brereton of Borasham, Esq.

EDWARD EYTON of Rhiwabon, who died 1623, in his father's lifetime, married, first, Catherine, only daughter and heiress of John Wynn Puleston of Plâs Isaf in Cristionydd, ab Howel ab Edward ab Madog Puleston; he married, secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Cynwrig ab Robert ab Howel of Bryn y Grogyn in Marchwial, ab David ab Gruffydd ab Llewelyn Fychan ab Llewelyn ab Madog Foel of Marchwial, (ermine, a lion rampant and border azure), and relict of David Powel, D.D., vicar of Rhiwabon, by whom he had no issue; but it is said that he used to court her in the time of her first husband, the Doctor. By his first wife Catherine, Edward Eyton had issue two daughters co-heirs, Mary Eyton, who died young, and

DOROTHY EYTON of Rhiwabon, who married Richard Evans of Treflech, in the Lordship of Oswestry, son and heir of Thomas Evans Hên, Attorney-General for the Court of the Marches, then held at Ludlow Castle. Argent, a fess gules, fretty or, inter three fleurs-de-lys sable.¹ She died in giving birth to her only son,

THOMAS EVANS of Rhiwabon. He changed the name of his house to Watstay, and married Anne, daughter of David Powell of Rhuddallt, D.D., Vicar of Rhiwabon, (sable, on a chevron inter three goat's heads erased or, three trefoils of the field), by whom he had issue a son and heir,

EYTON EVANS of Watstay, gwr lledwrion oedd. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Gerard Eyton of Eyton, knight banneret (ermine, a lion rampant azure), by whom he had four daughters, co-heirs:—

name of the place from Watstay to Wynnstay, which he left to a relation of his, Sir Watkin Williams of Llanfordap, Bart., on condition of his taking the name of Wynn. He thus became Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, of Wynnstay, Bart., and was the ancestor of the present Baronet of Wynnstay. Although Sir John Wynn had no issue by his Clawdd in the parish of Chirk, ab David Lloyd, third son of John Edwards Hên of Plâs Newydd, in the same parish, Esq. He married Gwenhwyfar, daughter of David ab Mareddydd, by whom he had two sons, John Lloyd and Edward of Glyn Ceiriog.

EDWARD of Glyn, the second son of Ieuan Lloyd, was the father of Hugh ab Edward of Glyn; who had two sons, Edward ab Hugh of Glyn and John ab Hugh of Rhiwabon. Edward ab Hugh of Glyn had two sons, Owain of Crogen Iddon; and Hugh Edward of Glyn, whose only daughter and heiress married Richard Wynn of Aber Cynllaith, descended from Idnerth Benfras; both Richard Wynn and his wife Jane were living in 1697.

JOHN AP HUGH of Rhiwabon married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of John ab Ieuan ab Howell of Pennant y Belan, by whom he had two sons; 1, Thomas Hughes; and 2, Gruffyd Hughes, who, by his will, dated 1706, left to the poor of Rhiwabon, lands adjoining Pentref Isaf farm, the annual rent of which, in 1828, was £21.

THOMAS HUGHES of Pennant y Belan, receiver of the king's rents in the greatest part of Maelor and other places, 1697. He married Sarah, fourth daughter and co-heiress of Edward ab Rondle of Rhuddallt, in the Manor of Rhiwabon, son of John ab John ab Madog ab Ieuan ab Madog ab Ieuf ab Madog ab Cadwgan Ddû ab Cadwgan Goch ab Y Gwion ab Hwfa ab Ithel Felyn, Lord of Iâl and Ystrad Alun (sable, on a chevron inter three goat's heads erased or, three trefoils of the field). By this lady Thomas Hughes had issue three daughters, co-heirs:—

wife, he had several illegitimate children by other women. By Eliza, daughter of Edward ab Thomas, alias Edward Yr Housman, of Rhiwabon, he had John Wynn, Mary Wynn, and Mary who died young. By Elizabeth Partin, daughter of William Partin, of "The Gyfeiliau", in the parish of Rhiwabon, he had Jane Wynn, who married Thomas Hanmer, of Maes Gwaelod, in Maelor Saesneg, 1700; Catherine; and Elizabeth.

In 1678 he built a stone wall around a large piece of land at Watstay for a deer park, and in 1688 he made the avenues of oak, elm, and ash; and in 1691 he made the fishpond.

1. Mary, who married William Platt of Rhyd Onen, in the comot of Dogfeilin and in the parish of Llanynys in Dyffryn Clwyd, son and heir of Richard Platt of Pant Glâs, near Ruthin, and Mary, his wife daughter and heiress of John Edwards of Rhydonen. By his wife, Mary Hughes, William Platt had issue, an only daughter and heiress, Sarah, who was married at Llanynys, 20th December, 1723, to Rhys Lloyd of Clochfaen, in the parish of Llangurig in Arwystli Uwch y Coed, High Sheriff for the county of Montgomery, in 1743. Mrs. Sarah Lloyd died at the age of eighty-five, and was buried with her husband, who pre-deceased her, in the chancel of Llangurig Church, January 10th, 1781. Her only son, Jenkyn Lloyd of Clochfaen and Rhydonen, High Sheriff for co. Montgomery in 1755, married at Erbistog, in Maelor Gymraeg, April 30th, 1743, Elizabeth, eldest daughter and heiress of Edward Lloyd of Plâs Madog in Bodylltyn, in the township of Rhiwabon.

2. Phœbe, the second daughter and co-heir, married David Lloyd of Llangollen, second son of Edward Lloyd of Llangollen, who died in the lifetime of his father; who was the son and heir of John Lloyd of Trevor, in Nanheudwy, who died in 1686, son of Edward Lloyd ab Edward Lloyd ab John ab Madog ab Iorwerth of Trevor, second son of Howel ab Ieuaf ab Adda ab Awr of Llys Trevor.

3. Rebecca, the third daughter and co-heiress of Thomas Hughes, married John Griffith, eldest son and heir of John Griffith of Cae Cyriog, in the township of Rhiwabon, the author of the folio volume of Heraldry and Genealogy, from whence this account is taken. John Griffith of Cae Cyriog became possessed, in right of his wife Rebecca, of Pennant y Belan, and took up his residence there. (See Cae Cyriog.) Thomas Hughes of Pennant y Belan, by his will dated 1715, left £15 to the poor of the parish of Rhiwabon.

CAE CYRIOG IN THE TOWNSHIP OF HAFOD.

JOHN of Cae Cyriog, son and heir of David of Cae Cyriog, who was living in 1560, son of Ieuan of Cae Cyriog, who was living in 1500, son of Llewelyn of Cae Cyriog, who was living in 1480, the son of David of Cae Cyriog, the third son of DeIEWS ab Dio of Llanerchrugog, in the township of Morton Uwch y Clawdd, married, first, Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of Robert ab John ab Robert of Synder ; by whom he had issue three sons, the youngest of whom was Gruffudd, of whom presently. John ab David married, secondly, Jane, daughter of Geoffry Bromfield of Bryn y Wiwer, in the villa of Bodylltyn, and relict of John Lloyd ab Randle ab John of Plâs Madog, in Bodylltyn, by whom he had issue two sons ; William, who died in London, s. p., and Gruffydd : and a daughter, Ermine, ux. Edward Fowler of Bryn y Fallen. John ab David of Cae Cyriog died, and was buried at Rhiwabon, 20th February 1619, and was succeeded by his third and only surviving son, GRUFFYDD AB JOHN of Cae Cyriog. He married, first, Jane Brochtyn (Broughton), daughter of John Brochtyn ab David Brochtyn ab John Brochtyn, alias John ab John ab Tudor. This Jane was sister of Edward Broughton or Brochtyn, whose son William sold his ancient patrimony, and died without issue in Ireland.

By this lady Gruffydd ab John had issue three sons ; 1, John Griffith, of whom presently ; 2, Roger Griffith ; and 3, Edward Griffith : and two daughters, Margaret ; and Mary, at whose birth the mother died. Gruffydd ab John married, secondly, Gwen, daughter of David ab David of Llan y Cafn, in the parish of Overton Madog, by whom he had David, Gruffydd, and Catherine; and, thirdly, he married the widow of Gruffydd Goch of Cefn.

JOHN GRIFFITH of Cae Cyriog, son and heir of Gruffydd ab John ab David, married, first, Elizabeth, daughter (by Joice, his wife, daughter of John Eyton of Bodylltyn, ab Edward ab Roger Eyton of Bodylltyn) of William Eyton, second son of Cynwrig Eyton of Eyton, Esq., and Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Sir Richard Brooke of Norton, in Cheshire, knight. John Griffith married, secondly, Alice, daughter of Thomas ab David of Rhiwabon; she died in 1675. And, thirdly, he married Jane, relict of Robert Wynn, jun., of Tref Fechan, in Cristionydd, and daughter of Plâs y Drain, in the township of Morton Uwch y Clawdd, son of David Lloyd of Pentref Clawdd, in the villa of Hafod. John Griffith died May 26th, 1688, leaving issue by his first wife Elizabeth, three sons, John, Roger, and Peter.

JOHN GRIFFITH of Cae Cyriog, the eldest son and heir, was the author of a folio volume of Heraldry and Genealogy. He had a large and excellent library, which contained, among other valuable works, the Black Book of Basingwerk Abbey, by Guttyn Owain, which is still in the possession of the family. He married Catherine, daughter (by Margaret, his wife, daughter of Venables of Ysgeifiog) of Hugh Piers¹ of Penbedw; by whom he had issue one son, John Griffith, and one daughter, Margaret. He died October 31st, 1698, aged forty-four, and was succeeded by his only son, first wife. John Brereton died 24th Jan. 1622, and was buried at Wrexham (arms, 1, argent, two bars sable, for Brereton; 2, argent, a chevron inter three crescents gules, for Ipstones of Ipstones; 3, or, two ravens ppr., for Corbet of Wattlesborough; and, 4, sable, an escarbuncle of eight rays or, for Tirret). By this lady Owain Lloyd had issue one son, Thomas, a merchant, who died without issue at Hamburgh, and one daughter and eventual heiress, Elizabeth, wife of Edward Lloyd of Plâs Madog; 3, Richard Lloyd, who married Jane, fourth daughter (by Gwenhwyfar or Gwenllian, his wife, daughter of John Erddig ab David Goch of Erddig (ermine, a lion rampant sable) of John Hughes of Llanerchrugog ab Hugh ab John ab Ieuan ab Deicws (ermine, a lion rampant sable); 4, John Lloyd; and, 5, Roger Lloyd. Catherine, the eldest daughter, married Hugh ab John Wynn ab John ab Robert of Rhiwabon; and Mary, the second daughter, became the wife of Humphrey Lloyd of Llwyn Yn, in Ystrad Alun, descended from Edwin ab Goronwy. William Lloyd was succeeded by his eldest son,

EDWARD LLOYD of Plâs Madog, who was living in 1620. He married Anne, daughter of John Eyton of Leeswood, or Coed y Llai, in Ystrad Alun, descended from Cynwrig Efell, Lord of Y Glwysegl (gules, on a bend argent, a lion passant sable), and Jane his wife, daughter of John Lloyd of Bodidris yn Iâl, by whom he had issue six sons and two daughters: 1, Edward Lloyd of Y Glwysegl, M.A., who died in his father's lifetime; 2, Piers Lloyd of London, baptised 5th Jan. 1601; 3, Thomas; 4, John; 5, Owain; and, 6, Matthew. Jane, the eldest of the two daughters, married Owain Bady ab Roger Bady of Rhiwabon (ermine, a lion rampant sable); and Elizabeth, the second daughter, became the wife of John Lloyd ab John Lloyd ab Richard of Coed Cris-tionydd. Edward Lloyd of Y Glwysegl, M.A., the eldest son of Edward Lloyd of Plâs Madog, died in his father's lifetime in Cambridgeshire, leaving issue two young children; Edward, of whom presently; and Catherine, who became the wife of John Powel of Rhuddallt, eldest son of Daniel Powel ab David Powel, D.D., of Rhuddallt, vicar of Rhiwabon, the celebrated Welsh historian (sable, on a chevron inter three goat's heads erased or, three trefoils of the field). This Edward Lloyd of Plâs Madog bought the great tithes of Bodylltyn and Cristionydd Cynwrig from the Lord Wootton, who owned the abbey of Valle Crucis. He died in December 1636, and was buried at Rhiwabon, 1st January 1637; his wife Anne, who predeceased him, was buried at Rhiwabon 22nd August 1636: he was succeeded by his grandson,

EDWARD LLOYD of Plâs Madog. He married Elizabeth, only daughter and heiress of Owain, second son of William Lloyd of Plâs Madog, by whom he had issue,—1, John of Plâs Madog, who was a captain in the Royal army, in the regiment commanded by Colonel Robert Ellis of Y Groes Newydd near Wrexham. In the engagement that took place at Middlewick, March 13th, 1643, Colonel Ellis and Captain Lloyd were taken prisoners, the former continuing in custody till the following September.¹ Captain Lloyd subsequently took part in the attempt made by Lord Byron to relieve Beeston Castle, when six men of his company were taken prisoners, January 18th, 1645, by the Parliamentarians under Sir William Brereton.² Captain Lloyd was one of the seven Denbighshire gentlemen deemed fit and qualified to be made a Knight of the Royal Oak. At that date his estate was valued at £800 per annum.³ He was living in 1667, but was killed in London with Sir Evan Lloyd of Bodidris; 2, William, who died without issue; and 3, Samuel, who succeeded to Plas Madog; and one daughter Anne, who married William Lloyd of Plas Benion in Bodylltyn, and Trefynant in Cristionydd Cynwrig.

Edward Lloyd of Plâs Madog died in 1691, and was buried at Rhiwabon; and his wife Elizabeth was buried there October 28th, 1676: he was succeeded by his third and youngest son,

SAMUEL LLOYD of Plâs Madog, baptised June 1st, 1633. He married Sarah, second daughter and co-heiress of Luke Lloyd of the Bryn in the parish of Hanmer, descended from Tudor Trevor. By this lady, who was buried at Rhiwabon, June 7th, 1699, he had issue six sons: 1, Edward, of whom presently; 2, John, buried at Rhiwabon, December 28th, 1694; 3, William, buried December 1st, 1698; 4, Charles, buried December 16th, 1698; 5, Samuel, buried September 2nd, 1723; and 6, Luke. Samuel Lloyd of Plâs Madog was buried at Rhiwabon, May 2nd, 1701, aged 68, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

EDWARD LLOYD, of Plâs Madog, baptised December 1686. He married Anne, second daughter and co-heiress of William Lloyd of Plâs Benion and Trefynant, second son of Joseph Lloyd of Castle Lyons, in Ireland, second son of John Lloyd ab John Lloyd ab Richard of Coed Cristionydd; by which lady, who died the 23rd Sept., and was buried at Rhiwabon on the 26th of the same month, 1745, he had issue one son and five daughters.

Edward Lloyd, born in 1716, married Margaret, second daughter and co-heiress of Thomas Lloyd, of Trevor Hall, Glanhavon, and Valle Crucis Abbey, High Sheriff for co. Montgomery in 1716, but died without issue in 1734, aged 18.

1. Elizabeth, born April 31st, 1718, married at Erbistog, April 30th, 1743, to Jenkyn Lloyd of Clochfaen, in the parish of Llangurig, in Arwystli Uwch Coed. She died at Plâs yn y Wern in Cristionydd Cynwrig, and was buried at Rhiwabon, December 12, 1758, aged 40, leaving an only daughter and heiress, Sarah, aged twelve years at the time of her mother's death.

2. Mary, born in 1719, married Edward Williams of Hafod y Bwch (ermine, a lion rampant sable), who assumed the name of Lloyd, upon succeeding to the estate of Pen-y-lan. By this gentleman she had issue an only daughter, Mary Lloyd, heiress of Pen-y-lan, who married Roger Kenyon of Cefn, brother of Lloyd, first Lord Kenyon.

3. Anne, who received for her share of the property, Plâs Benion in Bodylltyn, and Trefynant. She married John Rowland, Esq. In 1782, she built four dwellings at Nant y Gwaliau, near Pont Adam, which she freely gave to four poor families of the parish of Rhiwabon, each family to be appointed and placed there by Mrs. Rowland and her heirs for ever.

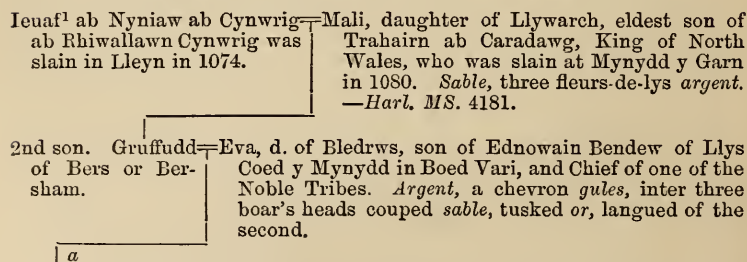

4. Margaret, who married Robert Ingram, of Neuadd Glyn Hafren, in the parish of Llanidloes, Esq.

5. Bennette, who was married to Lewys Lewys of Rhuddallt.

Edward Lloyd of Plâs Madog died August 8, aged 74, and was buried on the 11th of the same month, 1760. By his will, dated 1757, he left to the poor of the parish of Rhiwabon £150, to be distributed in coals, schooling for three boys and two girls from the townships of Cristionydd and Coed Cristionydd, secured by a rent-charge on lands in Westyn Rhyn, in the parish of St. Martin's, co. Salop. These lands were purchased from the Lloyd family by Mr. Kenyon of Pen-y-lan.

LLOYD OF PLAS MADOG AND CLOCHFAEN IN LLANGURIG, IN ARWYSTLI.

MADOG DANWR ("Ignifer, Fire-bearer"), or, as he is called in some MSS., Madog Danwr Trevor, Lord of Llangurig, Aber Havesp, and Dolfachwen. He was a faithful servant, and a commanding officer, in the army of Gwenwynwyn, Prince of Powys; and for his services in battle, the prince gave him the whole parish of Llangurig, and many other lands¹ in Llanidloes and other places, and at the same time granted him, as an augmentation to his coat of arms, a border gules, charged with eight mullets argent; or, according to others, charged with eight lions rampant or;² others, again, state that the border was charged with eight bezants or cinquefoils or.³ Having obtained these lands in Arwystli, at the time that Gwenwynwyn conquered that province in 1197, he made Llangurig his place of residence, and became the founder of many families in Llangurig and Llanidloes, some of whom still have possession of their ancestral lands at the present time. An account of the descendants of Madog Danwr has already been published in the History of the Parish of Llangurig.⁴ This parish contains 49,604 acres, and the Harl. MS. 4181, p. 317, states that the Lord of Powys gave the whole lordship of Llangurig to Madog Danwr for his good services.

⁴ History of the Parish of Llangurig. By Edward Hamer and Howel W. Lloyd, Esqrs.

“DANWR hael yn dwyn rheolaeth
Hên ben haeddol boneddig
Ai brig ar Gurig i gyd.”

“DANWR the generous, the bearer of rule ;
The noble, meritorious, ancient stock,
Whose branches are spread over the whole of Llangurig.”

MADOG DANWR was the son of Ieuan ab Maredudd ab Madog ab Gruffudd ab David, sixth son of Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn, lord of Maelor Gymraeg or Bromfield (who bore ermine, a lion rampant sable, armed and langued gules), who was killed in battle against Gruffudd ab Cynan, who had come upon him unawares in Llein, in the year 1074. See vol. i, “Trahaiarn Caradawg”.

Madog Danwr married, and had issue three sons ; 1, Idnerth Goch ; 2, MAREDUDD ; and 3, Gruffudd, who had Cefn yr Hafodau.

MAREDUDD, Bydr ei Hosanau, was Lord of Llangurig, and was Lord of Aber Havesp in Cydewain, and Dolfachwen in Arwystli. He married Arddun, daughter of Einion ab Llywelyn ab Meilir Grûg, lord of Trefgynon and Westbury, descended from Brochwael Ysgythrog, King of Powys (sable, three horse's heads erased argent), by whom he had issue three sons ; 1, IORWERTH, of whom presently ; 2, Gruffudd ab Maredudd, ancestor of Ieuan ab Jenkyn ab Llywelyn of Esgair Graig ;¹ and 3, Philip ab Maredudd.

IORWERTH AB MAREDUDD, the eldest son, married . . . daughter of Ieuan Goch ab Goronwy ab Meilir of Geneu'r Glyn in Ceredigion, ab Gwallawg ab Gwrgeneu Fychan ab Gwrgeneu ab Hoedliw ab Cadwgan ab Elystan Glodrudd, Prince of Fferlis, founder of the Fourth Royal Tribe of Wales (quarterly 1st and 4th gules, a lion rampant regardant or, 2nd and 3rd argent, three boar's heads coupéd argent, tusked or, and langued gules), by whom he had issue, besides a daughter Margaret, the wife of Maredudd ab Ieuan Glynn of Glyn Clywedog, descended from Aleth, King of Dyfed (azure, three cocks argent, crested, wattled, and armed or), three sons; 1, Llywelyn, of whom presently; 2, Philip; and 3, Einion ab Iorwerth.

LLYWELYN AB IORWERTH, the eldest son, married Eva,¹ daughter of Howel ab Iorwerth ab Trahaiarn ab Iorwerth, Lord of Garth Mael (argent, three lions passant gardant in pale gules), son of Einion ab Rhys Goch ab Llywelyn Fychan ab Llywelyn Eurdorchog, Lord of Iâl and Ystrad Alun, by whom he had issue two sons; 1, Howel Lloyd of Llangurig; and 2, Philip of Cefn yr Hafodau; who married a daughter of Gruffudd Llwyd ab Gruffudd Fraslwyd of Pwll Glâs in Tref Eglwys, son of Gruffudd ab Meilir ab Selyf ab Brochwael ab Aeddan of Llanerch Brochwael (sable, three horse's heads erased argent), by whom he had issue, besides a daughter the wife of Ieuan ab Gwilym ab Goronwy Gethin, a son and heir, Llywelyn of Cefn yr Hafodau; who by . . . his wife, daughter of Rhys Gethin ab Llywelyn ab Gwalter, had issue an only daughter Angharad, the heiress of Cefn yr Hafodau. Angharad married, first, Rhys ab Llywelyn ab David Chwith of Cynwyl Gaio in Caermarthenshire² (sable, a wolf passant argent, its head and nails gules, for Meurig Goch): and, secondly, she married Llywelyn ab Howel ab Rhys ab David of Gilfachwen in Cardiganshire, descended from Cadifor ab Dyfnwal, lord of Castell Hywel.

Llywelyn ab Iorwerth was succeeded in the upper portion of the parish of Llangurig, viz., the townships of Llan y fynu, Llan y wared, Glyn Gynwydd and Glyn Brochan, by his eldest son,

HOWEL LLOYD of Llangurig, who appears to have resided at Clochfaen. He is spoken of by the bards in the highest terms of praise as a warrior, as we shall presently see in the few poems that have come down to us in honour of some of his descendants. Unfortunately, all accounts of his exploits, or any poems that might have been addressed to him, appear to have been all lost, for what MSS. were preserved at Clochfaen all perished in the flames, when the house, an old timber one similar to many still existing in Montgomeryshire, was burnt down in 1760; and all we can now gather of the history of this branch of the House of Tudor Trevor, is from the genealogies, and the poems in the Llyfr Ceniarth, which appear to have been transcribed from the originals at Clochfaen; and the poems preserved in the British Museum. Howel Lloyd was succeeded by his son and heir, GRUFFUDD AB HOWEL of Clochfaen. From the allusions in the poems addressed to his son Ieuan, he appears to have married . . . the daughter and co-heiress of Rhys Lloyd of Creuddyn, ab Iorwerth of Creuddyn, ab Rhys of Llan Uwch Aeron, ab Gruffudd ab Iorwerth ab Cadifor ab Gwaethfoed, lord of Ceredigion (who bore or a lion rampant regardant sable), by whom he had issue two sons; 1, IEUAN, of whom presently; and 2, Rhys Ddû of Pont y Rhydgaled; who married Margaret, daughter of Ieuan of Rhys Gethin of Creuddyn ab Ieuan ab Rhys ab Llawddyn, Lord of Uwch Aeron (gules, a griffin, segreant or), by whom he had a son Thomas of Pont y Rhydgaled the ancestor of the Richards of Llangurig, now extinct.

² David Chwith, of Cynwyl Gaio, was the son of Rhys ab Iorwerth ab Gruffudd Fychan ab Gruffudd ab David Fychan ab David Fongam ab David ab Meurig Côch, Lord of Cil y Cwm, who bore, sable, a wolf passant argent, its head and nails embued.

IEUAN AB GRUFFUDD of Clochfaen, who was living in 1430, married, first, Gwenllian, daughter and co-heir of Ieuan ab Gruffudd Goch ab Philip ab Iorwerth ab Maredudd ab Madog Danwr, by whom he had two sons; 1, Jenkyn Goch, his successor; and 2, Llewelyn of Llangurig, who married Gwenllian, daughter of Ieuan Llwyd ab Howel, by whom he had a son, Maurice of Llangurig, for an account of whose descendants, see History of the Parish of Llangurig, p. 303. Ieuan ab Gruffudd married, secondly, Gwenllian, daughter of Rhys ab David ab Ieuan ab Rhys ab Llywelyn, by whom he had one daughter, Golenbryd, ux. David of Llangurig, son of Rhys ab Adda ab Howel of Henfaes in Ceri, ab Adda Ddu ab Gruffudd of Maes Mawr, ab Maredudd ab Einion ab Cynfelyn, Lord of Manafon (azure, a lion passant argent), ab Doiphwyn ab Rhiwallawn ab Madog ab Cadwgawn, Lord of Nannau (or, a lion rampant azure). From the poems we learn that Ieuan had lands in Ceri and Creuddyn, given him by his kinsman Rhys Lloyd of Creuddyn.

The following fragments of a poem entitled "Cywydd i Teulu y Clochfaen", an Ode to the Clochfaen family, are to be found in the Llyfr Ceniarth:—

CYWYDD I TEULU Y CLOCHFAEN.

Un agwedd, wrth fynegi,
 A Mursen feinwen wyf fi;
 Chwer(th)in, a thro (i) min i 'r medd
 Wylo blin y 'r ail blynedd.
 E ŵyr Duw y roed Ieuan
 Yrnwrw 'n oed dydd ym mron tân;
 O lawer swydd hen ffordd yw Lys,
 Gair mawr a gai dir Morys,
 Am ei roi i Sais mawr les wyr
 Ieuan werth tri o wyr.

I bear a likeness, if the truth be told,
 To a fair coquettish dame,
 Who laughs, and puts her lips to the mead,
 Yet weeps wearily in the second year.
 Ieuan, God knows, was given
 To place himself, as the day waned before the fire;
 To many an office is his mansion the ancient road.
 The land of Maurice has gained a high repute
 For its gift to the Saxon of a large aid in men.
 Ieuan the worth of three men.

From the above, it appears that Ieuan went with a large body of men from Llangurig, to aid the English in some of their wars. Who Maurice was, I know not; for Maurice, the father of the four brothers of Llangurig, was the grandson of the Ieuan mentioned in this poem. Unfortunately, we know scarcely anything of the history of the parish of Llangurig during the 13th, 14th, and the 15th centuries, with the exception of the glimmering light thrown upon it by the poems in the Harl. MS. and the fragmentary poems preserved in the Llyfr Ceniarth.

The following fragments of poems, in praise of Ieuan of Clochfaen, and of the Church and Parish of Llangurig, are likewise preserved in the Llyfr CeniARTH, and translated, like the preceding ones, by Howel Wm. Lloyd, Esq.

TRANSLATION.

A resplendent choir of Heaven is in a nook of the river's bank,
 A garden for all minstrels is this.

Abundant is our wine for the sacred song.
 Many a one obtains gold in sight of all the land.
 . . . a spot delightful for a poor man to traverse,
 . . . fair to me are the banks of the Wye.

Nowhere can there be a better parish,
 There is no land like the parish of Curig.

Long since, my own land—my treasure,
 My cornfield, and my storehouse in time past,
 My maintenance and my joy,
 My gain since time began, my free mansion,
 My abundance of wine, my yellow gold,
 My silver and gold laid up in my purse,
 My picture, my profit, my all,
 My whole safety, and my retreat.

* * * * *

The hand of God, because we revere Him, will prosper
 The host of our race, as prolific as the vine ;
 Yet not a man, save one, hath been born
 A true . . . graft on the blood of the Fire-bearer.¹
 A hundred times, when he knew us to be poor,
 Has he come to me in my need.
 My generous helpers, against the day of wrath,
 Are the lovers of the Choir of Curig.
 Let them not be brought low, for they are pure,
 'Tis Ieuan's gifts that bring him good repute.

¹ This date is doubtless as apocryphal in the case of this as of the other poems to which dates have been affixed, probably from conjecture only, by the compiler of the "Ceniârth MS."—History of the Parish of Llangurig, p. 193. Ieuan and Gwenllian were living in the year 1400.

ODE TO IEUAN AND GWENLLIAN OF CLOCHFAEN, ANCESTORS OF THE CLOCHFAEN FAMILY.

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, ESQ., M.A.

Who is the valiant arrayer of the mighty host?
When its complement is full, who is leader?
Who is it yonder holds the powder
With the hands of a stately hero?
Who will shatter a plate [of armour], who will strike its side,

A pillar on the topmost height of Powys-land?

It is Ieuan¹—in frame, grasp, and staff,

Square-built and impetuous—

A vigorous soldier as they well know,

With the huge square spear of old Morys.

[Four imperfect lines.]

Bring but thy potent lips beneath thy finger

And the two Powyses are subject to thy scabbard

To turn the men of round Ceri behind thee,

. all in succession.

[A gap of four missing lines, and four imperfect lines.]

A mighty one is our guardian!

[Five imperfect lines.]

All—every sort of person—will come

To thy three ports to be received;

Thy wife,² Ieuan, for ever

Would be freely distributing meats to all the world.

No festival would there be without the prayer of the poor,

Nor will Gwenllian be empty-handed.

Ieuan, a courteous server,

Would not fill [his cup] for joy

Without ministering constantly, from the close of day,

To his old and poor one if he come late.

[Two imperfect lines.]

Thy portiou with weight of fist and staff

He, thro' havoc and war.³

³ The wars referred to in this poem may have been those of Owain Glyndyfrdwy, in whose army Ieuan, as he was living in 1430, probably served. Owain Glyndyfrdwy died in 1415.—See vol. i.

[Three imperfect lines.]

Thy pure wheat, if we come thy way,
 Is the [object of] the lively respect of South Wales.
 Good are thy pure pedigrees from their source—
 Faultless are thy pedigrees in thee.
 Thy bounty in thy mansion for a while
 Would the bards obtain, happy they!
 A good profit to them was thy mansion,
 The lady's dish was covered with white sugar.
 Very soon would the sick begin to mend,
 From the ministration of Gwennllian ;
 The great reputation hath reached the (extreme) corner of the sea,
 That her illustrious blood has brought her.
 She bestows on the soldiers yellow gold,
 Ieuan, her father,¹ hath caused this.
 Thou art one who will be a man free from pride,
 With a faug on every man obstinate in his pride :
 Nine strong men shall drag him in their grasp,
 And shall lead him to the farthest end of the bench.
 No man would go unless he were unwise,
 When yonder man, impetuous, resolute, and wise, bears his part.
 There hath not been—there will not be hereafter, one resolute and generous.

[A line wanting.]

[Seven imperfect lines.]

[A line wanting.]

. . . . By Ieuan hath not been taken
 The least grain of any one's share of corn :
 There is not a man but it would be worse for him,
 Who would not quake at an enquiry on thy part.
 If there flow upon the cheek but for a little while
 The blood of one or two, thou wilt become angry ;
 And when thou art angry, no one will take anything in thy wrath
 But, should he have decamped, will bring it back.
 Complaints tho' there be, dissension there will be none
 Over the hill if thou hast thy way :
 Thou wilt not lay hand on thy dagger,
 Unless the blood run on thy neck.

They had better not remain an instant
 Under thy fist, if thou get angry :
 Thou art an energetic man, the most energetic that I know :
 We shall all be merry, now that thou art made our head.

ODE TO THE BRIDGE OF THE WYE.

TRANSLATED BY HOWEL W. LLOYD, ESQ.

I purposed—here will I lament it—
 In resolute guise to go the nearest way.
 I am sad for (want of) paths to the Court
 Of Ieuan,¹ who possesses old Maurice's greatness.
 There was a vast gathering to his house:
 Good families this year were above the dale.
 I longed to be where was the rich broth of Ieuan and his wife.

To draw, across the Wye where it is wide-spread,
 Towards Clochfaen to him, is not easy:
 A tangled dyke impeded the flood before me
 ('The free speech of Gwenllian urged the gift).
 In impetuous fashion the flood rushed on unheard,
 And carried away a piece of my fine road.
 The Wye threw down the projecting earth-work
 Of the wooden bridge—hitherto its wood was strong—
 The water yesterday made two pieces.

[Twelve imperfect lines.]

The vengeance of wrath made a strange bridge.
 Is it not cruel, close to Curig's door?²
 Raise it up again; to bring wood for it
 Would be found just. 'Twould be alms for the soul,
 Against long delay, to grant a rate
 For mending the work of the rough onset of the Wye.
 I shall obtain of God a quick, clear, and clean road
 At last, to the house of Ieuan,

² The bridge is close to Llangurig Church.

If, for the sake of me, the complainant,
 Ye will replace the piece that is gone with the water.
 Repair it, that so we may, through Jesus,
 Have a better bridge where it has been over the Wye.

TRANSLATION.

God, of old time, granted not unjustly
 To Abraham, thro' the Hebrew land,
 The coming to Him of the obedient people
 By his impulsion : numerous as the forest.
 God gave the East to be taken as in a net,
 By the onslaught of their twelve tribes.
 To the endowment of Abraham came the Hebrews,
 And for his gift he gave thanks to God.

² The MS. has "d da in gulan Ieuan." The reading, as amended, is conjectural only.

³ The original has "wacd", and "a'i ran" in the next line.

⁴ "Dyuru" in MS.

For my gift, too, in the height of summer,
 To God in my turn will I give thanks.
 It is God who freely gives us a house,
 Between the slope of Wye's bank and the mountain.
 The son of Gwilym Gam, blameless and wise,
 Possesses Ieuan for his weal.
 I, myself, in the summer—the greater is my portion—
 Am goodman of the house over Ieuan's Court:
 Courteous and free am I at the generous board.
 In praise whose boldness is like the lark's?
 A strain he utters—he, the lark of summer,
 Throwing his breast askant in its ascent.
 I have loved, in following the chase of the hart,
 In like manner to pour forth my voice.
 Gay, trim, and pleasant to frequent
 Is Clochfaen Court on the winding of the Wyc.
 . . . Warm is the slope of the hill,
 And wheresoever my lot be cast,
 To live there is best of all.
 Maurice¹ shall gain distinguished rank
 And greatness in the future.
 A youth who will never be angry with me—
 A wall of strength to his kindred in Curig's land Is Jenkyn Goch, of pale complexion;—a Roland² in stature—
 Scion of the noble line of Howel Lloyd,
 Kinsman of Rhys Lloyd³ yonder, who gave him
 The rock of Ceri, Creuddyn⁴ red as gold.
 Full will the table of Gwenllian be;⁵
 They also shall rule in towns.
 Consideration beneath the oak
 Will she entertain for the weak and old.
 Grace verily hath Jesus given for her portion.
 Marvel at the understanding allotted to Ieuan—
 Deliberate is the noblest of men—

¹ Maurice was the son and heir of Jenkyn Goch, and the grandson of Ieuan.

² The hero of romance, and nephew of Charlemagne.

³ Ieuan's mother was one of the daughters and co-heirs of Rhys Lloyd of Creuddyn.

⁵ Ieuan married Gwenllian, daughter and co-heiress of Ieuan ab Gruffudd Goch ab Philip ab Iorwerth ab Maredudd ab Madog Danwr.

Deliberate is the flight of the eagle.
 In the Tribe, when strife hath arisen,
 No Head will there be, except there be a Bridge.
 These shall preserve the hawks of the ancient forest—
 Not one of them shall be made weak—
 In the strongest corner of the wooded upland,
 To incite them on the crown of the smiling hill.
 But Ieuan also is well able
 With his foot to hold his ground.
 So long as his lion's career shall last,
 Shall the towns of Arwystli be great at his back.
 There no man has been greater than he.
 . . . So long as Ieuan shall live,
 Its men shall not want a Chieftain of their blood.
 * * * * * *

This is all that remains of this poem, from which it appears that Ieuan must have been advanced in years at the time in which it was written. At his death, he was succeeded by his eldest son,

JENKYN GOCH of Clochfaen. He married Catherine, daughter and heiress¹ of Maurice Fychan ab Maurice ab Madog ab Einion ab Howel of Ceri and Mochdref, second son of Tudor ab Einion Fychan ab Einion, Lord of Cefn y Llys. Einion, Lord of Cefn y Llys, married Janet, daughter and heiress of Owain ab Maredudd ab Rotpert or Robert, Lord of Cydewen, ab Llywarch, son of Trahaiarn ab Caradawg, King of Powys and Gwynedd, who was slain by Gruffudd ab Cynan, at Mynydd y Garn, in 1080. Argent, a lion salient sable, crowned or, armed and langued gules.² Einion, Lord of Cefn y Llys, was the son of Ieuf, Lord of Cefn y Llys, in the comot of Is Mynydd in the cantref of Elvael, son of Goronwy ab Ifor ab Idnerth ab Cadwgawn ab Elystan Glodrudd, Prince of Fferlis (quarterly 1st and 4th gules, a lion rampant regardant gules, 2nd and 3rd argent three boar's heads couped sable, tusked or, and langued gules.) The mother of Catherine, the daughter and heiress of Maurice Fychan, was Janet, daughter of Ieuan ab Howel of Bryngwyn, in the parish of Llanfechain.¹ For a further account of this family, see the History of the Parish of Llangurig, p. 336 to p. 358.

By his wife Catherine, Jenkyn Goch had issue two sons; Maurice, who succeeded him, and Ieuan; and five daughters; 1, Catherine, wife of Ieuan Wynn ab Jenkyn ab Llywelyn of Cefn yr Hafodau, ab Howel ab Rhys ab David ab Howel Fychan of Gilfach Wen, co. Cardigan (sable, a spear-head argent, embrued between three scaling-ladders of the second, two and one; on a chief gules, a tower triple-turreted, ppr.); 2, Angharad, wife of Llywelyn Lloyd of Llanidloes, descended from Einion ab Cynfelyn, Lord of Manafon (azure, a lion passant argent, armed and langued gules), ancestor of the Gwynns of Llanidloes; 3, Deuli, wife of Ieuan Goch ab Maurice ab Rhys ab Cadwgan ab Llywelyn Y Moel-Wyn Mawr Lord of Buallt, ab Maredudd Bengoch ab Hywel Lord of Pen Buallt ab Sitsyllt ab Llywelyn, Lord of Buallt, eighth son of Cadwgan ab Elystan Glodrudd Prince of Fferlis, by whom she had an only daughter and heiress, Deuli, who married Thomas of Aber-Magwr, in the parish of Llanfihangl-y-Creuddyn, younger son of Maurice Vaughan of Trawsgoed (Crosswood Park) co. Cardigan, ancestor of the Earls of Lisburn, descended from Einion ab Collwyn ab Tangno Lord of Eivionydd and Ardudwy (sable, a chevron inter three fleurs-de-lis argent); and 4, Annie, the wife of Morgan ab Ieuan ab Dio ab David of Creuddyn, ab Gruffudd ab Rhys ab Ieuan ab Rhys ab Llawdden Lord of Uwch Aeron (gules, a griffon, segreant or).

MAURICE AB JENKYN GOCH of Clochfaen, married Margaret, daughter of Llywelyn ab Rhys Lloyd of Creuddyn, ab Gruffudd ab Ieuan ab Llywelyn ab Rhys ab Gruffudd ab Rhys ab Iorwerth ab Cadifor ab Gwaethfoed Lord of Ceredigion (1, or, a lion rampant regardant sable; 2, sable, a lion rampant argent, armed and langued for Teithwalch Lord of Ceredigion; 3, party per

The mother of Margaret was Elen, daughter of Gruffudd ab Llywelyn ab Rhys of Creuddyn, ab Llywelyn ab Rhys ab Iorwerth ab Rhys ab Gruffudd ab Einion ab Collwyn ab Tangno, Lord of Eifionydd, Ardudwy, and a part of Lleyn (sable, a chev. inter three fleurs-de-lys argent).¹ Elen's mother was Arvillo, daughter of Medifor Fychan ab Ieuan ab Hywel Fychan.²

By this lady, Maurice had issue four sons ; 1, Ieuan of Crûgnant ; 2, Owain ; 3, Jenkyn ; and 4, William ; of all of whom presently : and four daughters ; 1, Elen, wife of Llywelyn ab Maurice of Llangurig, ab Rhys ab Adda ab Hywel of Henfaes in Ceri, ab Adda Ddu ab Gruffudd of Maesmawr in Arwystli, ab Maredudd ab Einion ab Cynfelyn, Lord of Manafon and Maesmawr (azure, a lion passant argent) ; 2, Goleubryd ; 3, Margaret, second wife of Thomas ab David Dêg of Carno in Arwystli, ab Ieuan ab Maredudd ab Ieuan ab Owain Goch ab Llewelyn ab Tudor ab Gwen ab Goronwy ab Einion ab Seisyllt Lord of Mathafarn in Cyfeiliog (argent, a lion passant sable, inter three fleurs-de-lys gules), by whom she had issue three sons, Ieuan, Maurice, and Iorwerth ; 4, Tangwystl ; and 5, Gwenllian.

Huw Cae Llwyd, a bard who flourished from 1450 to 1480, composed the following ode in praise of Ieuan, Owain, Jenkyn, and William, the four sons of Maurice ab Jenkyn Goch.

¹ This wine must have been imported direct from France to the neighbouring port of Aberystwyth. This passage, and one in another poem, in which Llangurig is described as noted for the excellence of its wine, furnishes a curious proof of the existence of a trade with France in wine at that early period. I have been informed that the Welsh got the wine in exchange for their wool.

HUW CAE LLWYD, a'i Cânt.

THE FOUR BROTHERS OF LLANGURIG.

BY HUW CAE LLWYD.

TRANSLATED BY HOWEL W. LLOYD, ESQ., M.A.

Who daily scatter weighty gold ?
 Whose veins the blood of Powys hold ?
 Whose soldiers are the best in fight ?
 The grandsons they of Chiefs of might.
 What brothers they—well known to fame,
 Since every land hath heard their name ?
 Four comrades these, in force full strong,
 To ban the boldest deeds of wrong.
 In front, lo ! Ieuan shields the rash,
 Three thousand dare not wait his dash.
 Braver than all—in either host—
 Never will Owain quit his post ;

¹ Y caid. The Llyfr CeniARTH has “cadwo”.

² Cyd rhannu hwnt. The Llyfr CeniARTH has “Cydran himp”.

³ The Llyfr CeniARTH has “ynial”.

⁴ The British Museum MS. has “gerddiant ysgweirereaid”.

The gentle Siankyn gives the wine ;
 William 's the lion of his line ;
 Four sons of Morys, noble all,
 These are Llangurig's ward and wall,
 In war their grandsire¹ was renown'd,
 Noble and valiant was he found,
 Siancyn, who gave his men the wine,
 (For lavish is Howel Llwyd's line),
 Madog, the Fire-bearer's blood,
 A man renown'd of Einion's brood,
 Kin to an Earl, Rhys Lloyd,² of old—
 All these the brothers forbears bold.
 A forest ever will they be,
 Wide spread is Rhys's progeny.
 His grandson's sons our island guard,
 Their precious gifts are our reward.
 How noble they ! their hands how free !
 How mettlesome their chivalry !
 How stately in their mien they stand,
 Sharing alike their father's land !
 A mighty oak, on either side,
 Hath spread abroad its branches wide—
 These branches are their country's stay—
 Its pillars loved and feared are they.
 Together are they seen to grow,
 Their love and wealth together go ;
 Saint Curig ! shield them well from wrong,
 Encased in mail, oh ! make them strong.
 Together they maintain the host,
 Together feast, and share the cost,
 Givers together in their time,
 Together may they pass their prime !
 The Cymry they together love.
 Their stature to a rib is told,
 Measured as mighty men of old.
 As three vast rocks they stand secure,
 The three bear all one portraiture.
 The three have one consentient word,
 They rule the fair with one accord.
 Tree lives, I ween, have all the three,
 As four, then, may the fourth life be !

THOMAS AB IEUAN of Crûgnant was living in 1583. He married Elen, daughter of Thomas Lloyd, who was the third son of Rhys Lloyd of Rhos Fferrig, by Jane his wife, daughter of William Herbert ab Sir Richard Herbert of Montgomery, Knt. The said Rhys Lloyd was the son of Thomas Lloyd ab Maredudd ab Morgan ab Gruffudd ab Owain of Rhos Fferrig, son of Richard of Buallt ab Gruffudd ab Llywelyn Moelwyn Mawr Lord of Buallt, ab Maredudd ab Hywel Lord of Penbuallt, ab Sitsyllt ab Llywelyn Lord of Buallt, ab Cadwgawn ab Elystan Glodrudd Prince of Fferlis (quarterly, 1st and 4th gules, a lion rampant regardant or; 2nd and 3rd argent, three boar's heads coupéd sable). By this lady, Thomas ab Ieuan had issue, besides a daughter, Florence, the wife of David ab Ieuan ab David ab Owen, two sons: 1, Rhys ab Thomas; and 2, Ieuan ab Thomas, who married Jane, daughter to Rhys ab Thomas ab Y Bedo, according to the Add. MS. 9865, by whom he had issue, Thomas, Edward, and Anne.

RHYS AB THOMAS of Crugnant. His name appears on the Grand Jury list at the Assize held at Llanidloes in 1606. He married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of David, fourth son of Rhys ab Maurice ab Llywelyn, second son of Ieuan ab Gruffudd ab Hywel Lloyd of Clochfaen. The mother of Elizabeth was Jane, daughter of Maredudd of Llandinam, youngest son of John Pryse ab Maredudd of Glan Miheli in Ceri, ab Rhys ab David Lloyd of Newtown Hall in Cydewen, descended from Elystan Glodrudd Prince of Fferlis. By this lady, Rhys ab Thomas had issue, besides two daughters, 1, Margaret, the wife of Rhys ab Ieuan ab Rhys of Llangam-march in Buallt,¹ and 2, Florence, the wife of David ab Ieuan ab David ab Owain of Llangurig,¹ a son and heir,

ODE TO IEUAN AB MORYS AB SIANCYN GOCH
OF CLOCHFAEN IN LLANGURIG.

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, Esq.

God has been good, and man blameless.
 Thou goest to the course⁶ of the three men,
 Ieuan; at thy back come three hundred men,
 As kinsmen of a valiant man.

² Sic, the line seems corrupt.

³ "iw" in MS.

⁴ "Corri" in MS.

⁵ "bus" in MS.

⁶ "Rhediad", literally a running. Perhaps a foot-race is meant.

To-day thou art at the head of the bridge for them—
The people of Blessed Curig—with thy gallant giant's palm.

Wise, vigorous, and well bred art thou,

Resolute ever art thou

. . . there thou bearest the palm,

With a spear in thy two fists, thou scion of noble Morys !

. . . great is the nature within thee,

Thou marvellous man, grandson of Jenkyn Goch !

To Ieuan shall a noble forest of sons grow up together.

To the old breed of Hawks of the "Tanwr" of yore.

From the wood of Howel were ye sprung—

The generous, resolute, gallant Lion, Howel Lloyd.

The next four lines are imperfect and untranslatable.

Cætera desunt.

CLOCHFAEN.

OWAIN, the second of the four brothers of Llangurig, the sons of Maurice ab Jenkyn Goch of Clochfaen, appears to have lived at the ancestral mansion with his brothers Jenkyn and William, the latter of whom appears to have died unmarried.

Owain married Tangwystl,¹ daughter of Morgan ab Maurice, younger son of Thomas of Aber Magwr in the parish of Llanfihangel y Creuddyn, a younger son of Maurice Vychan of Trawscoed in the parish of Llanavan y Creuddyn in Cardiganshire, descended from Einion ab Collwyn ab Tangno, Lord of Eivionydd and Ardudwy (sable, a chevron inter three fleurs-de-lys argent).

The mother of Tangwystl was Catrin, daughter of David ab Ieuan of Llwyn Newidion in the parish of Llanfihangel y Creuddyn, ab Maurice ab Llywelyn ab Rhys Goch of Creuddyn,² ab Ieuan ab Rhys Du ab Llywelyn ab Cadwgawn of Carrog, ab Cadwgawn Vychan ab

Cadwgawn Vawr ab Rickart ab Rhys ab Rhydderch ab Cadifor ab Dyfnwal, Lord of Castell Hywel.

The following fragment of a poem in praise of Owain is found tacked on to another poem, in praise of Ieuan ab Gruffudd and Gwenllian of Clochfaen, in the Llyfr Ceniarth :

“Ni bu erioed heb angau
Far Owain frod Einion frau ;
Frwm o’i gedyrn train gydiwyd
Du aros Llew dewr Rys Llwyd.”

“Never at any time has Owain’s spear,
Fervent with Einion’s onset, been without death.
A heavy train of his strong men was joined together
To await the black bold Lion, Rhys Lloyd.”¹

Owain had issue by his wife Tangwystl several sons, and a daughter named Mallt. He died on the evening of January 8th, 1500, as we learn from one of the elegies composed upon him, fragments of two of which are preserved in the Llyfr Ceniarth, and have been translated by Howel Wm. Lloyd, Esq.

ELEGY ON OWAIN AB MORYS AB JENKYN GOCH OF LLANGURIG.

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, Esq., M.A.

Woe to us, blessed God ! because of thine anger towards us,
 Bearing is all the hill-side sad tapers of wax before Curig.
 Lo ! the January day hath dight its visage in blackness—
 Mourns the day itself for the son of Gwinai⁵ the mighty, Yesterday hath there been cutting of earth and of wood for the laying
 Over the temples of Owain the earth as he lay in his coffin.
 Full twelve lands made wailing that day, as they followed his body.
 In cold sorrow is steeped the country for two of its mansions,
 Sorrow that death hath seized the noble scion of Morys.

⁵ This, if the word be read as "gwrnau", may mean "the excellent auburn-haired youth".

'Fall'n is the grandson of Jenkyn Goch' should be its burden.

Cold is the heart of steel that beat high for the round Arwystli,

From the heights of Ceri as far as the region of Caron.

Woe is Creuddyn now! chastised hath she been severely.

Woe is the line of Rhys Lloyd's blood,¹ and all of his kindred!

When hath there ever been seen upon the earth a more powerful gallant?

What man better than he, when whilom in health and in vigour

Boldly the hero would face the foe when arrayed for battle?

Not ten men in a pass, if they met, could overmatch him;

If King Arthur himself had fought him in single combat

Not King Arthur himself had ridden scatheless after:

Surely a giant were worsted, if giant had dared to attack him,

Under the process made by the scion of Howel Lloyd.

Like to a fortress or rampart was Owain before his departure;

Now is the rampart a breach, for Owain lives no longer.

[Two imperfect lines.]

Worse shall the world wax now, for the bright blade of Owain is buried.

[Four imperfect lines.]

Then shall that which was gloom be changed into lively enjoyment,

Just as the light serene oft-times is foreshadowed by tempest;

'Tis the bright sun's nature, by anticipation, to nurture

With its pervading force the frost of the rugged winter;

So, overcasting the time, in similar manner, hath increase

Haply befallen Owain for a season before his departure,

Owain gifted with talents, of wealth far and wide the possessor.

Yesternoon, on the street, the sun with its rays fell brightly;

Owain is gone, and to-day it is buried in gloom for Owain.

Lo! I am here, on his grave, and calling—but Owain is silent.

Woe to the earth beneath, woe, woe to his kindred above it.

Woe to the country around, that rejoiced in the wealth of the rich man.

Woe to the Brothers Three, the defenders now of the district.

Woe to the earth itself, for the earth is constantly opened !
 Woe to us all beside, for we have all been slain with sorrow !
 Woe that we e'er should have gazed on the livid corpse of the hero !

Great have we seen the soldier by sea, may his sons be yet greater.

[Hiatus of one or three lines.]

Mary, blest Virgin Mother ! how grievous it is to bewail him !

[Here follows an hiatus of several lines, and a leaf has been torn from the MS. The last line has certainly the appearance of being a closing one ; and, if so, the above lines must have formed a separate elegy, and the following fragments have been part of another. In that case, probably, each was composed by a different author.]

Faintly Gwennllian hath uttered a cry, ere she swooned in her sorrow,

Cold on our hearts hath it struck,—that cry of sorrow for Owain !

Owain the pride of his race, her noble and generous brother ;
 Ne'er will his sister smile, while she bides in the land of the living.

Up to the Heaven above hath ascended the wailing of maidens, Frozen with grief are their bosoms ! six years are we left without banquets.

Woe for the burial ! Woe the world's vanity ! Woe is the Baron !

May the Saints offer their prayers for the peace and repose of his Spirit !

Woe for the greatest on Wye that we heavily make lamentation !
 Woe for the tidings abroad ! and the grief that it daily grows greater !

Woe to us, God ! that the lustre which shone in our jewel is darkened.

Woe to us, heavy the grief that its worth is departed for ever.
 What, for the loss of our Owain, save rivers of tears can console us ?

And, to the Will divine, since nought now is left save submission, Speed him to Heaven with prayers that God may receive him to glory.

8th January, 1500.

ELEGY¹ ON ELEN,² WIFE OF LLYWELYN AB MORYS
 GOCH OF LLANGURIG IN UWCHGOED.

Mary ! the gloom of night hath us o'erspread,
 The bier's unwelcome work hath made us weary,
 Ah, Mary ! vengeance boots not for the dead ;
 The hill-side crag for me were home less dreary.

For Ellen, noble thro' her eight degrees,
 Cold is my heart, as blast upon the mountain ;
 By God's command alone the spirit flees—
 Ne'er hath her like been born of honour's fountain.

3.

A lady's form hath vanished from the light,
 And Curig's land is lifeless in its sorrow,
 As when with blackening frost its face is dight ;
 The joy of Howel's³ race hath found its morrow.

² Elen was the eldest daughter of Maurice ab Jenkyn Goch of Clochfaen.

³ Howel Lloyd.

4.

With weak'ning vigils are our people worn,
 God on our land hath lain a long affliction ;
 Mute will our travail be until the morn,
 O God ! that dawns upon our dereliction.

A night of suffering hath befall'n the line
 Of Howel Lloyd, and all its scions noble ;
 Ah, never, while we live, within a shrine
 Shall lie entomb'd a woman less ignoble.

Fled from his land is Curig's purest blood,
 Of Creuddyn's best the grave hath gained possession,
 And mourning on the house hath burst in flood,
 Its Lord, Llewelyn, boots not intercession.

7.

The hearth is stricken—trunkless is the tree—
 To sick and poor alike their hope is blighted,
 The land where chiefest would her children be
 Is wounded sore by stroke on her that lighted.

8.

Her fair and gallant sons bear forth the shroud
 Upon its oaken bier with bitter wailing ;
 Sound merrily no more, or harp, or crowd,¹
 Naught save the sobs are heard of poor and ailing.

Borne by the hands of all the country side,
 Dim tapers these in slow procession follow ;²
 The name she leaves behind her will abide Memorial in all hearts that are not hollow.

10.

Behind her, Ellen's place of pain is left,
 Nor heat nor cold can reach her blissful mansion ;
 The poor her smiles and bounty mourn bereft,
 Upon the path that knew their sweet expression.

¹ The "Cwth", a musical instrument, the player on which was, by the English, called a "crowder", whence the name Crowdero in Hudibras.

² "Aeth wlad i ddwyn cwyr," i.e., to bear wax tapers in the funeral procession. The funeral seems to have taken place at night.

11.

In Llys Gelyddon, whither thronged the poor,
 Buried is she who gave of her provision ;
 Woe is the sick despoiled of all her store !
 Mary ! how long her like shall fail our vision.

Two only of Ellen's sons are given in the Harl. MS., 1973, and the Add. MS., 9865. These two sons, David Lloyd ab Llywelyn, and Morgan ab Llywelyn, whose names appear on the gaol file, 35 Henry VIII, 1543 ; Morgan was also High Constable of the hundred of Llanidloes, 8 Elizabeth. Ellen was the second wife of Llywelyn ab Maurice, whose first wife was Goleubryd, daughter of Thomas ab Rhys Ddû of Pont y Rhydgaled, ab Gruffudd ab Howel Lloyd of Clochfaen, by whom he had two sons, Jenkyn ab Maurice of Llangurig, whose name appears on the Grand Jury List, 10 Elizabeth ; and John Fychan, whose name is mentioned on the gaol file, 35 Henry VIII.¹

JENKYN, the third of the four brothers of Llangurig, succeeded his father Maurice ab Jenkyn Goch at Clochfaen. He married Catherine, daughter of Morgan ab Rhys ab Howel of Llangurig, ab David ab Howel Fychan of Gilfachwen in Ceredigion, ab Howel ab Rhys Foel of Gilfachwen, ab Rhys ab Rhydderch ab Cadifor ab Dyfnwal Lord of Castell Howel, Gilfachwen, and Pant Streimon (sable, a spear-head argent, embrued between three scaling-ladders of the second two and one ; on a chief gules, a tower triple-turreted ppr.). The mother of Catherine was Catherine, daughter of Bedo ab Rhys ab Llywelyn ab Dafydd Chwith of Cynwyl Gaio in Caermarddenshire, ab Rhys ab Iorwerth ab Gruffudd ab Meurig ab Gruffudd of Cynwyl Gaio, son of David Fongam Lord of Cil y Cwm, ab David ab Meurig Goch Lord of Cil y Cwm (who bore sable, a wolf argent, his head and claws gules), son of Gruffudd Lord of Cyl y Cwm, ab Cadifor Lord of Cil y Cwm son of Selyf King of Dyfed. The arms of Cadifor ab Selyf were ermine, a chevron or, on a chief argent, a lion passant gules, which were the armorial bearings of his mother Éva, daughter and co-heir of Gruffudd ab Morda Frych Lord of Cil y Cwm. By this lady Jenkyn ab Maurice had issue two sons; 1, David ab Jenkyn, of whom presently; and 2, Ieuan ab Jenkyn, who had Clochfaen Isaf; who married and had one son, Edward ab Ieuan of Clochfaen Isaf, together with a daughter Catherine, the wife of Owain Gwynn ab Morgan Gwynn of Llanidloes.

In 1546, 37 Henry VIII, Jenkyn ab Maurice ab Jenkyn gave six shillings and eightpence to the collection of the benevolence from the inhabitants of the hundred of Llanidloes.¹

ODE TO JENKYN AB MORYS AB JENKYN GOCH OF CLOCHFAEN AND HIS BROTHERS.

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, Esq., M.A.

1.

“Long and lasting be thy health and life, thou upright man !
 the privilege
 Of the strong-taloned bird from its sheltered nest is thine !
 Thou art the tallest, the most generous gentleman of thy race !
 Thine be it long to live, and late may thy son² succeed thee !

2.

“May scions of the line of Howel Lloyd and Trevor
 In the land of Curig be ever on the increase !
 Tables hast thou—thy porter ushers in bards—
 For bards are the tables outspread with cheer.

3.

“They who are invited are bards, to the end that thou mayst obtain,
 As it is hoped, a gift from God in thy portion ;
 At parting with thee are recited the virtues
 Of Jenkyn, grandson of Jenkyn—a long narration.

“To Jenkyn's powerful frame art thou witness, to thy portion
 Thou hast the pedigree of the Fire-bearer,³ and of Rhÿs
 Lloyd.⁴
 Thy mien bespeaks his character, amiable and holy ;
 The hero's form and stature reappear in thy powerful frame.

5.

“A stag of Morys' powerful frame, and as just ; vividly
 Shall we recall thy stern aspect ;
 Thou lovest toil, we find thee strong ;
 The stags of Einion's⁵ stock love success.

² David, heir of Clochfaen.

³ Madog Danwr.

⁴ Rhys Llyd of Creuddyn.

⁵ Jenkyn Goch of Clochfaen married Catherine, daughter and heiress of Maurice Fychan ab Maurice ab Madog ab Einion ab Howel of Mochdref and Ceri, son of Tudor ab Einion Fychan ab Einion, Lord of Cefn y Lys.

6.

“ Brave progeny of Einion, bright is thy genius, sturdy thy courage ; in thy strength
 We are joyful to possess thee ;
 It befits us that we live to enjoy thee,
 The gifted one we love, who hast no guile.

7.

“ A man whom, when I give him away, I will have him all back again . . .
 Catherine, the generous daughter of Morgan,
 . . . good for you is a solid broad table,
 God in your portion.

“ . . . wine . . . the bright mansion of the Clochfaen,
 , . . . luxurious ;
 The great host of the noble lion, Morys,¹
 . . . we worship in thy mansion.²

9.

“ The note of thy covenant here is the destruction of evil:
 Arrogance is destroying the world :
 In the work of thy life there has been done
 Nought save that which is good.

10.

“ Rectitude of life will lead to union at last : God
 Is the Exemplar of justice ;
 To live wickedly is to encourage iniquity ;
 Thy life has been such as to uphold vice in none.

11.

“ Of thine eight generations thine estate is the greatest ; in aspect
 Thou art fearless when there is work to be done :
 Of a talented race thou art the ablest ;
 The ablest of men in the strength of thy hands.

12.

“ O man, to him who finds it thou art an excellent prop ; thy firm energy
 Undertakes the aid of the innocent ;

² As the Roman Catholic religion was suppressed about 1535, the offices of that creed appear from this to have been secretly solemnised in the house of Clochfaen, the mansion of Jenkyn ab Maurice.

Well dost thou maintain the cause of the guiltless and weak,
Thou man that swervest not, well dost thou head thy followers !

Honest and true, thou hast not swerved ; just in thine office,
The proud ones shall not live by their arrogance ;
Thy dauntless breast, thine heart of steel, hast thou not given
To a city, for all its men of high stomach.

14.

. . . . will give increase to the weak ; at no time
Does the floor receive thy remnants :
. that the poor should obtain
Fire is befitting to Llys Gelyddon.

An hiatus of several stanzas.

A bitter condition
. . . for the gain of Harry the Eighth ;
These were all of the same tribe ;
Ere our affliction can be reversed, they must run their course.

Curig ! we have come to affliction—give,
Give us, Blessed One ! to drive away our foes ;
Such beneficence will greatly rejoice
The populace in yonder town of Idloes.

17.

May the uplands of Curig's parish of its ancient people
Be superabundant in population ;
On Severn also are they good,
Brave, and pure men all.

18.

Men are they animated with the bravery of wrath against their enemies—the bravery of lions ;
With the bravery of soldiers do they grasp at glory ;
Very brave in their blameless strength, brave are they to my heart's content,
Braver than thought can reach, brave will they be during life.
Brave men, By Mary ! are they found, daily do they love
Idloes ;
Pure is the increase of both for the satisfying of brave men ;
Never have they deemed distasteful the care of the poor.

The favour of Curig hath prevented it, Curig hath brought prosperity ;

A word to the memory, praise of Curig,
Curig do they honour—Curig for his favour towards them.

19.

Men, By Mary ! are they, who, in invoking him,
With wax-tapers worship Blessed Curig in his image ;
For Curig and his image here¹ they sign themselves with the cross,

Curig do they welcome, they all love Curig.

The Lord Himself the man Curig yonder,
They earnestly pray to Curig, the energetic (servant) of Jesus our God.

20.

An hiatus of four lines.

. all men bear Curig in remembrance,
One—the Blessed Curig—is their conductor to Heaven.

21.

An hiatus of two lines and a half.

. they accompany,
. . . . of royal blood they strike very harmoniously together
. . . . concordantly with surpassing vigour and skill
do they fight,
. . . . concordantly do they make peace.

22.

They are not irrational, they follow blindly no phantom of passion or judgment ;

If one have a thought they agree well together,

Like swans are they in harmony, concordantly do they quarrel,

Concordantly are they ardent lovers, concordantly they excel ;
Concordant are their chances in life, concordant their purveyance ;

Concordant are their energy and skill, concordant their invitations.

Concordantly do they both² invite to festivals in public,

Concordantly are they generous, concordantly do they pay ;

Of a blameless race are they the head, they have learnt the best manners,

² Viz., the two surviving brothers.

They are the heads of society, yea, as to speech, they are the best informed of all ;
 By their wealth they are the heads of the host, at the head of all is their shout,
 Heading the ambush in the pass, of proud ones are they the head.

24.

Chief masters are they of musters—even so far as St. David's ;
 Chiefest in their career to-day, theirs is the chiefest prosperity ;
 The chief roots of noble achievements, they bear the chiefest fame ;
 The chief of all their country, they gain the chiefest praise ;
 The purer and livelier the blood, the abler the upholders of their line ;
 Proportionate to the fervour of their rulers is the favour and fortune of the people.

ODE TO JENKYN AB MORYS AB JENKYN GOCH

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, Esq., M.A.

Man of stature, and of strength,
 Thy daring is proportionate to thy size,
 (Three imperfect lines.)
 Jenkyn, thou grandson of Jenkyn the Sturdy,
 Thou art ready and resolute, if there be any provocation.
 Thou spirited fledgling of the Eagle of Curig's Land,
 Thou huge rampart of the domain of the ancient Falcons,
 Mighty is thy talon's clutch of the necks of proud ones.
 Wondrously perfect is the line of Howel Lloyd,
 That hath come down from afar, through the blood of Earls.³
 If families of high birth enter the street,
 Thou art a scion of the line of the Fire-bearer⁴—let them give place.
 Thy staff hath the stoutness of Fulk's⁵—it is God's gift.
 Distinguished on Einion's⁶ side is thy race.

³ Tudor Trefor, Lluddoccaf, and Caradog, who were successively Earls, or, more properly speaking, "Reguli, Kings of Hereford and Gloucester.

⁴ Madog Danwr.

⁵ Sir Fulke FitzWarren, a Lord Marcher, son and heir of Sir Warren de Weaux, a nobleman of Lorraine. He attacked, defeated, and slew Sir Meurig Llwyd, Knight, Lord of Whittington, and took possession of his castle and lordship, which were confirmed to him by Henry III.

⁶ Einion ab Howel ab Tudor of Mochdref and Ceri, of the Royal House of Elystan Glodrudd, Prince of Fferlis.

From Ceri thou possessest two¹ roots,
 Who art a rock in the path of a tawny stag.
 Stout, if a blow from thy fist fell upon them,
 Would be those who await thee, whose wrath is that of Rhys
 Lloyd's falcons of old,

. by thy special donation
 Has rent come to the poor for their benefit.
 The fair Catherine² hath distributed the banquet
 For thy support, O Eagle, and for thy greatness.
 There was provision of corn for thy party yonder,
 And great and powerful was it over the March.

. . . everything fair to the view,
 [An hiatus of two lines.]

There hath not been given—so bountiful a Lord art thou over them—

Wine or mead to the discontent of any one.
 A marshaller of proud ones, thou wilt not leave
 The mead of honour to a hot tempered servant.
 Thou wouldst not support a hand as sharp as smoke
 In the fair, were thou not compelled to it:
 A man of mark will dispel mischief;
 Let such a one use his nose to guard his eyebrow.
 Never hath weapon been drawn by thee from its sheath,
 Save when necessitated by offence given from below.
 If they have given thee offence, of necessity they must Tremble, and beg for their lives.
 Never was equipped, since thy ninth ancestor,
 One of higher mettle than thou art.
 At thy mansion is the very best of drink,
 And of meat for all who enter it.
 Scarcely will it pain them, when the gallant gentleman urges it

Again to drink on to the end.
 They would toss off the liquor, far and near,
 In shovelsful all the night long.
 Is it a decent thing that, after this,
 All should pay their quota to the good wife?
 One contribution³ has been paid; is it a duty on our part

¹ Two roots, for Einion married Nesta, the daughter and heiress of Adda ab Meurig ab Adda of Ceri, son and heir of Madog, Lord of Ceri, who was one of the three hostages for Llywelyn ab Iorwerth, Prince of Wales, who was put to death by King John in 1213.

² Catherine, the wife of Jenkyn Goch.

³ "Gildio, computationum expensas persolvere."—Davies's Dict.

To have to pay a contribution a second time ?
 Thou wert pleased to satisfy her,
 By paying her due thyself.
 There is no offence in a word—the weal of the populace
 Is to be worshipped on both thy knees.

[The poem concludes with one blank and three imperfect, and (in their present state) unintelligible lines.]

DAVID, the eldest son of Jenkyn ab Maurice, succeeded his father at Clochfaen. He married Catherine, daughter of Ieuan ab David ab Ieuan ab Gutto ab Gruffudd of Creuddyn, ab Maredudd ab Rhys ab Ieuan ab Rhys ab Llawddyn, Lord of Uwch Aeron, who bore gules, a griffon segreant or. Her mother was Tangwystl daughter of Ieuan Wynn of Dol Bachog, descended from Cadifor ab Dyfnwal, Lord of Castell Howel. By this marriage David ab Jenkyn had issue, besides a daughter Elen, wife of Jenkyn¹ ab Maurice ab Rhys ab Maurice ab Llewelyn of Llangurig, second son of Ieuan ab Gruffudd ab Howel Lloyd of Clochfaen, two sons; 1, Evan, his successor; and 2, Jenkyn, who married Owain Blaeney of Ystymgwen, ab Howel ab Owain ab Ieuan Blaeney of Grugynog (sable, three horse's heads erased argent).

EVAN AB DAVID of Clochfaen, living anno 1626. His name is on the list of the Grand Jury summoned for the Assize held at Llanidloes in 1606. He married Mallt, or, according to others, Elizabeth, daughter of David Lloyd Blaeney of Grugynog, in Cydewen, High Sheriff for co. Montgomery in 1577 and 1585 (sable, three horse's heads erased argent), and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Lewys Gwynn of Bishop's Castle, by whom he had issue two sons; 1, Rhys Lloyd, his successor; 2, David Lloyd, and a daughter, Gwenhwyfar, the wife of John Glyn, second son of Morgan Glynn of Glyn Clywedog, in the parish of Llanidloes, descended from Aleth, King of Dyfed, who bore azure, three cocks argent, crested and wattled or.

RHYS LLOYD of Clochfaen, who was a staunch Royalist, was obliged to compound for his estate with the Parliament by a payment of "£011 000s. 10*d.*"¹ He married in 1626, Margaret, daughter of Jenkyn Lloyd of Berth Lloyd, High Sheriff for co. Montgomery in 1588 and 1606, and seneschal or steward of Arwystli, in the reigns of James I and Charles I (ermine, a lion rampant sable, in a border gules, charged with eight mullets argent), and Dorothy, his first wife, daughter of Edmund Walter of Ludlow, Chief Justice of South Wales, and Mary his wife, daughter of Thomas Hackluit of Eyton. Rhys Lloyd's name was on the Grand Jury list in 1650, during the time of the Commonwealth, but he was not selected, on account of his being a Royalist. By his wife Margaret he had three sons; 1, Jenkyn Lloyd; 2, Edward Lloyd of Glyn Gynwydd, who was on the Grand Jury list of Llanidloes, 14 Charles II, 16th October 1663, but not selected, on account of his being a recusant, and his refusing to frequent the parish church of Llangurig or elsewhere, for which he and his wife Margaret were presented before the Grand Jury; and 3, Evan Lloyd of Bwlch y Garreg, in the parish of Llangurig, who, together with his wife Mary, was presented by the Grand Jury, for not frequenting their parish church, on the 16th October 1663.

Rhys Lloyd, who was living in 1650, was succeeded, at his death, by his eldest son, JENKYN LLOYD of Clochfaen. He married Mallt, daughter of Morgan ab David ab Ieuan of Llanbryn-mair, ab David Gethin ab Gruffudd ab David Bwl ab Madog ab Llywelyn of Cyfeiliog, ab Gruffudd of Cyfeiliog, who was one of the twenty hostages given by Prince Gwenwynwyn to King John in A.D. 1204; son of Maredudd of Cyfeiliog, who was one of the witnesses to a charter of Gwenwynwyn, Prince of Upper Powys, to the Abbey of Strata Marcella in 1199, son of Philip of Cyfeiliog, son of Uchdryd, Lord of Cyfeiliog, son of Edwyn ab Goronwy, Prince of Tegeingl (argent, a cross flory en-grailed sable, inter four Cornish choughs ppr.), by whom he had issue eight sons; 1, Rhys Lloyd, his successor; 2, Morgan Lloyd, who married Sarah, daughter and heiress of Richard Morgan of Caelan in Llanbrynmair, son of Morgan ab David ab Ieuan ab David Gethin of Llanbrynmair, as above, by whom he had issue two sons; Littleton Lloyd, a clergyman of the Church of England; and Rhys Lloyd, both of whom died without issue; and one daughter Sarah, who married Edward Pritchard of Ceniarth, near Machynlleth. Morgan Lloyd's will bears the date of 13th November 1702; by it he bequeathed a "tenement in the parish of Trefeglwys, called Cefn y Cloddiau, to the poor of the parish of Llanbrynmair, the rents, issues, and profits thereof to be distributed at the discretion of the vicar and overseers of the poor of the said parish".¹ Part of the rent is now applied to the maintenance of the parish school. An old local bard named David Manuel, whose residence was in the neighbourhood of Cefn y Cloddiau, wrote an Elegy on the death of Mr. Lloyd, and another on the death of his wife Sarah, which is dated in 1696; 3, John Lloyd of St. Harmon's; 4, David Lloyd of Darowain; 5, Jenkyn; 6, Evan; 7, Kyffin; and 8, Richard Lloyd. Of the daughters, Mabel, married Humphrey Williams² of Pentref Cynddelw, in Llanbrynmair, descended from Elystan Glodrudd, Prince of Fferlis. Jenkyn Lloyd was on the Grand Jury, 14 Charles II, 16th October 1663, and was succeeded, at his death, by his eldest son,

RHYS LLOYD of Clochfaen. He married Mary, daughter of John Thomas of Belan Dêg, in the parish of Manafon, and of Llanlloddian, in the parish of Llanfair Caer Einion, ab Thomas ab John of Belan Dêg, ab Ieuan ab John ab David Fychan ab David Lloyd ab Gwellin ab Einion ab Ieuan ab Einion ab Llywelyn ab Meilir Grûg ab Gruffudd ab Iorwerth ab Owain ab Roderic ab Howel ab Gwaeddan, Lord of Tref Gynon and Westbury, son of Brochwael ab Aeddan, of Llanerch Brochwael, Lord of Cegidfa, Broniarth, and Deuddwn (sable, three horse's heads erased argent). Mr. Thomas became possessed of the estate in Llanfair in right of his wife Margaret, daughter and heir of John Owen of Llanlloddian, ab Owen ab Ieuan Llwyd ab Dackin ab Deio ab Gruffudd Wynn. Besides his daughter Mary, John ab Thomas had a son and heir, Evan Jones of Llanlloddian, whose son and heir Evan Jones, married Miss Cupper the heiress of Llantysilio Hall in Iâl, and was the ancestor of the Joneses of Llanlloddian and Llantysilio Hall. Rhys Lloyd was buried at Llangurig, 11th December 1699, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

JENKYN LLOYD of Clochfaen, who was born in 1681, and was Mayor of Llanidloes in 1705, and High Sheriff for Montgomeryshire in 1713. He married at Llangurig, 21st Feb. 1698, Rachel, sister and co-heir of Edward Fowler of Abbey Cwm Hir in the county of Radnor, High Sheriff for that county in 1715, and daughter of John Fowler of Abbey Cwm Hir and Bron Dref Fawr, High Sheriff for Radnorshire in 1690. John Fowler was a younger son (by Margaret his wife, daughter of Richard, Lord Newport of High Ercall, and Rachel his wife, sister of Sir Richard Levison of Trentham, co. Stafford, Knt., and daughter of John Levison of Haling in Kent, Esq.) of Richard Fowler of Harnage Grange in the county of Salop, High Sheriff for Radnorshire in 1655, eldest son of William Fowler, eldest son of Richard Fowler of Harnage Grange, co. Salop, Esq., High Sheriff of Radnorshire in 1600, by Mary his wife, eldest daughter of Sir Edward Littleton of Pillaton Hall, co. Stafford, Knt., and Margaret his wife, daughter and co-heiress of Sir William Devereux, Knt., youngest son of Walter, Lord Viscount Hereford, K.G., who died in 1558. John Fowler, who inherited Abbey Cwm Hir from his father, made an immense fortune as a merchant, and purchased several other large estates. He died in 1697, and was buried at Llanbistair. By his will, which was proved the following year at Doctor's Commons, he left all his lordships, manors, estates, and hereditaments in the several counties of Radnor, Salop, and Montgomery, to his three children, Edward, Rachel, and Jane. Edward died unmarried in 1722, and was buried at Llanbistair. He entailed the Abbey Cwm Hir estates upon his sisters and their heirs, appointing his cousin Sir Richard Fowler of Harnage Grange, Bart., to be trustee. In the Llanbistair parish registers the names of John Fowler and Edward Fowler have been nearly erased, and those of Sir Richard Fowler and his son Sir William Fowler written over them on the erasure. Jane, the second daughter of John Fowler, married George Robinson of Brithdir in the county of Montgomery, Esq., of the family of Nicholas Robinson, Bishop of Bangor, and died without issue ; the following is a copy of her will.

In the name of God Amen. I Jane Robinson of Brithdir in the county of Montgomery wife of George Robinson of the same Gentr being of a sound and disposing mind and memory thanks be to Almighty God do make publish and declare this my last will and Testament in writing. Jenkyn Lloyd died in 1722, and was buried at Llanurig on December 11th; his wife Rachel survived him, and, dying in 1749, was also buried at Llangurig, leaving issue three sons and three daughters,—1, Rhys Lloyd; 2, John Lloyd, who had Llwyn Gwyn. He was born in 1702, and died unmarried in 1766. He left his estate of Llwyn Gwyn to his sister Jane; and 3, Edward Lloyd, who died s. p.; 1, Anne, born in 1701, ux. Charles Richards of Penglais, co. Cardigan; 2, Jane, born in 1702, ux. Richard Ingram, Clk., Vicar of Llanurig and Rector of Cemais in 1747, and son of Robert Ingram of Neuadd Glyn Hafren, Esq., son of Richard Ingram of the same place, High Sheriff for co. Montgomery in 1680 (ermine, on a fess gules, three escallops or), by whom she had an only daughter, Mary Ingram, heiress of Llwyn Gwyn, who married David Owen of Glyn Gyngynwydd, who persuaded his son, Evan Owen, when he came of age, to cut the deed of entail, and thus the estate passed by mortgage to their relative Sir Arthur Owen of Glansevern, co. Montgomery, Knt. Mary, the third daughter of Jenkyn Lloyd, was born in 1707 and died in 1796. Married, first, Lingaine Owen of Bettws Hall, in the county of Montgomery (argent, a lion rampant, and canton sable); and secondly, John Gethyn of Vaenor (or, a cross moline, pierced inter four lozenges azure).

RHYS LLOYD, the eldest son, succeeded his father at Clochfaen. He was baptised at Llangurig 10 March 1699, and married, the 20th December 1723, Sarah daughter and heiress of William Platt of Rhydonen in the comot of Dogfeilin, and parish of Llanynys in Dyffryn Clwyd (azure, on a chevron inter three escallops argent, three leopard's faces gules), and Mary his wife, eldest daughter and co-heiress of Thomas Hughes of Pennant y Belan in Rhiwabon, descended from Tudor Trevor. (See p. 183.)

The Abbey Cwm Hir estates were the property of Mr. Lloyd's mother, who was imbecile, which afforded an excuse for the trustee, Sir Richard Fowler, retaining the management of the property, and he, at his death in 1737, transmitted it to his son Sir William Fowler. Rhys Lloyd was High Sheriff for Montgomeryshire in 1743, and, dying in 1748, was buried at Llangurig the 15th of July in that year. His wife, who was born at Rhydonen in 1696, survived him, and at her death was buried at Llangurig, 10th January 1781. Rhys Lloyd left issue, besides three daughters,—1, Mary, who died s. p.; 2, Rachel, who was one of the maids of honour to Caroline, wife of Frederick Prince of Wales (mother of George III), and afterwards housekeeper at Kensington Palace, who died in 1793, and was buried at Llangurig; and 3, Sarah, born in 1728, who married John Jones of Dol y Myneich in Radnorshire—an only son and heir,

JENKYN LLOYD of Clochfaen and, jure uxoris, of Plâs Madog. He was born in 1724, and married 30th April

1743, at Erbistog, Elizabeth, eldest daughter and heiress of Edward Lloyd of Plâs Madog in Rhiwabon, descended from Tudor Trevor (see p. 197). He was High Sheriff for Montgomeryshire in 1755, and shortly after the death of his grandmother Rachel Fowler, which took place at Llangurig in 1749, he commenced a lawsuit for the recovery of the Abbey Cwm Hir estates, which were then retained by Sir William Fowler. To meet the expenses, Mr. Lloyd had to sell and mortgage a considerable portion of the Clochfaen estates. The suit was progressing favourably up to the Christmas of 1765, at which time Mr. Lloyd, not feeling very well, went to Shrewsbury to consult his medical adviser. At Shrewsbury he had an interview with Sir William Fowler, and, in a few days afterwards, on January 6th, 1766, he died suddenly from the effects of poison, which was supposed to have been administered to him in his medicine. He was buried first at Shrewsbury, but was afterwards disinterred and buried at Rhiwabon, February 5th, 1766, and a mural tablet has recently been put up in the Church there to his memory. Soon after this, Sir William Fowler left England in a ship bound for Calcutta, which foundered at sea and all on board perished. I must here record a remarkable instance of fidelity and affection evinced by a dog. Jenkyn Lloyd had a favourite setter that always slept on his bed at night; when, in consequence of his ill health, he had to go to Shrewsbury, the dog refused to quit his room, and for some time kept up a continued howling, and refused to leave the room except when hunger and thirst compelled him to do so, and after he had satisfied himself he returned to the empty room. This was his constant practice till the 5th of February 1766, on which day the remains of his loved master were brought to Rhiwabon. Impelled by some instinct he accompanied those who left the house to meet the funeral procession as it was passing along the road, then about a mile from the house, and walked quietly under the hearse till it reached the village. When the coffin was brought into the Church and placed on the bier in front of the Communion Table, the dog jumped upon it and there lay full stretched out till the coffin was lowered into the grave, and the affectionate animal leaped down after it, and there remained howling piteously till the service was ended, when it was forcibly removed and ran off, and, it is said, was never seen afterwards.

Mr. Lloyd left an only daughter Sarah Lloyd, the heiress of Clochfaen, Plâs Madog, and Rhydonen. She was born February 19th, and baptised at Rhiwabon, March 2nd, 1746. She married, first, in 1768, John Edwards of Glyn in Crogen Iddon in Nantheidwy, Gallt y Celyn, Hendref Brys, and Plâs Iolyn in Yspytty-Ieuan, and Lord of the Manor of Yspytty-Ieuan, descended through Madog Ddu of Cop'r Goleuni from Edwyn ab Goronwy, Prince of Tegeingl (pali of six pieces argent and sable), by whom (who died in 1771) she had no issue. She married, secondly, in 1773, the Rev. Thomas Youde, of Brasenose College, Oxford, and of Rowley's Mansion in Shrewsbury, the eldest son of Thomas Youde of Galchog, near Ruthin, the eldest son of Thomas Youde or Eude, a French gentleman (argent, a lion rampant azure, the shoulder charged with a fleur-de-lys or), who was sent by the Court at St. Germain's on a political errand to Sir Gruffydd Jefferies of Acton, near Wrexham, in 1711. Here he became acquainted with, and shortly afterwards married, Mary, the eldest daughter and co-heiress of John Hill of Rowley's Mansion in Shrewsbury, by his first wife Priscilla, daughter and heiress of Seth Rowley, of Rowley's Mansion, younger son of William Rowley son and heir of Roger Rowley of Rowley, Esq., the head of an ancient family long seated at Rowley, in the parish of Worfield, co. Salop, who bore argent, on a bend sable, inter two Cornish choughs ppr., three escallops of the field. The mother of the Rev. Thomas Youde (who died in 1806 at the age of 78, and was buried at Rhiwabon), was Dorothy, daughter of John Jones of Calchog, near Ruthin, and Mary his wife, sister of Eubule Thelwall of Jesus College, Oxford, and daughter and heiress of Edward Thelwall of Ruthin, son of Thomas Thelwall, son of Edward Thelwall, second son of John Wynn Thelwall of Bathafarn Park, Esq. (gules, on a fess or, between three boar's heads coupéd argent, three trefoils sable). The above-named John Jones (who bore vert, a stag trippant argent, attired and unguled or, quartered with sable, guttée d'or; on a bend cottised of the second, a rose between two annulets of the field; on the sinister side, two crossed swords of the second) had a considerable property in the several parishes of Y Fanechtyd, Cyffyllog, Clocaenog, Llanrhudd, Llanfwrog, and Llanfair Dyffryn Clwyd. This property was all sold by the trustees of the Rev. Thomas Youde.

Mrs. Sarah Youde died at Plâs Madog, December 20th, 1837, and was buried at Rhiwabon in the ninety-third year of her age. She had issue,—1, Thomas Watkin, born 1775, who succeeded to the Clochfaen and Plâs Madog estates on his father's death in 1806. He was a Deputy Lieutenant for the county of Denbigh, and High Sheriff of Montgomeryshire in 1816. He died unmarried at Cheltenham, and was buried at Rhiwabon in 1821. 2, Edward, born in 1781, who succeeded to the estates on the death of his mother in 1837. He sold Rowley's Mansion, and, dying at Ostend, was buried at the village of Ghistalles, near that town, in 1846. He married Mary, sister and heiress of Charles Greenaway, Esq., of Barrington and Burford Priory, co. Oxon, Esq., late M.P. for Leominster, by whom he had issue one daughter, Mary Jane, now of Burford Priory. And 3, Charles Madog, who died unmarried in 1797, and was buried at Rhiwabon.

Mrs. Sarah Youde had likewise three daughters; 1, Sarah, who died unmarried, in her eighteenth year, and was buried at Rhiwabon, in 1798; 2, Julia Elizabeth, who was born 29th May 1783, succeeded to the estates on the death of her brother Edward, and, dying unmarried, at Weymouth, 19th September 1857, was buried at Llangurig; and 3, Harriet, who was born 30th March 1787; married at Rhiwabon, June 29th, 1815, Jacob William Hinde, of the 15th Hussars, D.L. and J.P. for Middlesex, eldest son of Charles Hinde of Langham Hall, co. Essex, and lord of that manor, late captain in the 15th Hussars, and major in the 3rd Buffs, and deputy-lieutenant for the counties of Essex and Middlesex.

Captain J. W. Hinde died at Clifton, July 1st, 1868, and was buried at Brislington; and Mrs. Hinde died at Heffleton House, in the county of Dorset, 24th October 1856, and was buried at Llangurig, having had issue three sons and three daughters.

I. J. YOUDE WILLIAM, now of Clochfaen, M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. In March 1868, he joined the Pontifical Zouaves, and on the 12th December 1868, received Her Majesty's licence and authority to assume the name of Lloyd of Clochfaen, in lieu of that of Hinde, and also to bear the arms of Lloyd. In September 1870, he was created a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great, by Pope Pius IX. The Plâs Madog estate passed by mortgage, in 1858, to G. H. Whalley, Esq., M.P. for Peterborough.

II. Charles Thomas Edward, born at Plâs Madog in 1820, entered the service of the East India Company in 1840. In 1853, he volunteered his services to Omar Pasha, then commanding the Turkish Army on the Danube, and was appointed a lieutenant-colonel, under the name of Beyzad Bey. Shortly afterwards he acted as adjutant-general to the force under General Cannon (Bairam Pasha), which was despatched from Shumla for the relief of Silistria. He took part in the defence of the latter town, and was lying side by side in an embrasure at Redoubt Kale, with the late Captain O. Butler, at the time he received his death-wound. In July 1854, he took an active part in the passage of the Danube, and the battle of Guirgevo. He accompanied the army of the Danube to Bucharest, thence to Eupatoria, and was present at various skirmishes before Sebastopol, in the years 1855-56. From the Crimea he accompanied the force of Omar Pasha to Mingrelia, and was present at the battle and passage of the Ingur. For these various services he received the English Crimean Medal, the Turkish medals for Silistria, the Danube, and the Order of Medijee, together with his brevet majority, and honorary lieutenant-colonelcy. He returned to India in 1857, and was at once appointed to a command in the state of Rewah, where he raised and organised a force of 800 men, and at their head, in January 1858, opened the grand Deccan road by capturing six forts, with forty guns and two mortars from the mutineers, for which service he received the thanks of the Governor-General in Council. Twice more during the mutiny he received the thanks of the Governor-General of India in Council. He was promoted to the rank of colonel in 1862, and to that of major-general in January 1870. He married Harriette Georgina, only daughter of the late Captain Souter, by whom he had issue a daughter, Harriet-Julia-Morforwyn, who was born at the Castle House, Aberystwyth, and married, in 1866, George Hope Verney, Esq., of the Rifle Brigade, second son of Sir Harry Verney of Claydon, in the county of Bucks, Bart. Major-General Hinde died at Brussels, on the 15th of May 1870, and was buried in the cemetery of Ixelle.

III. Edward Lloyd, who died in infancy, and was buried at Rhiwabon.

Of the three daughters, the eldest, Harriet Esther Julia, married Daniel Todd of Buncrana Castle, county of Donegal, J.P., and deputy-lieutenant for that county. She died s. p., at Weston-super-Mare, 16th December 1864, and was buried at Torquay, where her husband, who predeceased her, had been previously interred; 2, Julia Sarah, who was born at Plâs Madog, died at the Castle House, Aberystwyth, 11th August 1843, and was buried at Llangurig; and 3, Mary Charlotte, who died at Southsea, 27th April 1880, and was buried at Llangurig.

Captain George Hope Verney, by his wife Morforwyn, has issue three sons and two daughters.

I. James Hope Verney, born 5th February, and christened 5th March 1869. In August 1881 he and his brother Vortigern, aged seven, were playing in a lonely spot, far from any house, on the banks of the river Mole, which runs at the bottom of the grounds of a place called The Cedars, in Esher, Surrey. Not far off from the shore, and parallel to it, is a spring board, which the little Vortigern tried to jump to, but, missing his footing, tumbled into the river, at that time much swollen by the recent heavy rains. He was immediately carried away by the now rapid torrent of water, when James, aged only twelve, immediately jumped in after him, and, after some time, and being carried into deep water, where the current was not so strong, he managed to save the life of his little brother, and brought him safe to the bank of the river, where he was able to get him out and to bring him home. In September, the Royal Humane Society awarded him their bronze medal for his heroic act.

II. Harry Lloyd Verney, born 23rd January, and christened at Esher, 6th March 1872.

III. Edward Vortigern Verney, born 8th March, and christened at Esher, 6th May 1874.

I. Catherine Morforwyn Verney, born 4th August, and christened at Calcutta, 1867.

II. Morforwyn Mary Levison Verney, born at Esher, 6th August 1880.

ELEGY ON MR. MORGAN LLOYD OF THE CLOCH-FAEN, IN LLANGURIG.

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, ESQ., M.A.

Alas, my Muse! woeful is my wail,
What sorrowful song shalt thou sing?
Curdled, alas, is Ceulan's water
With ice, and yet I am merry!
Assuredly her banks will be hereafter
In flood between their two sides.
Empty is the parish, henceforth, of praise,
All desolate, and not to be comforted;
From that day forth a gap is made,
A wide gap, o'er all the land;
A gap made by a man of perfect temper,
In every village and in every mansion.
May God bring—well would it requite
Our long groaning—his son to mount into
And keep his place, with his prosperity,
With a reputation like his for boldness.
Sadly is it felt that the staff of the just
Should be broken in twain like a bent stick;
There is a stir as of a strong wind
For in one are cut off a hundred;
Cut off is the head of the House of Pennant,
Cut off is its Guardian Angel,
Cut off is its primest jewel, cut off is the soul of the banquet.

Painful was the blow, when struck down
Was Morgan Lloyd, the strong yet gentle sapling!
The support of the dwelling, who succeeds him,
Shall not be cut off ere his course be run;
A gentle Hart is he, who well knows how to give gifts,
A Lion brave and open-handed,
An ensuer of peace, one who freely fills;
Merry, ingenious, full of affection,
In nobleness cheerful, like summer,
Worthy of respect, if any such ever has been,
A scion of the majestic line of Trevor,
Earl of Hereford, chiefest in honour;
Of the race of Madog Danwr of varied fame,
Liberal and bearing rule,
As the ancient head of a noble stock,

With his descendants over all Curig's land.
 Then the ancient, meritorious sire,
 By service done to his cause, acquired the parish ;
 By nature ever a virtuous graft upon these
 Are the Lloyds of fair Berth Lwyd.
 Their ancient honour flows
 From the stock of the land of fair Gwynedd ;
 Of the line of Howel Lloyd, a warlike house,
 Fair and delicate, red as Mathew,
 A most courteous race, willing to be questioned ;
 Good, without anger, and cheerful.
 The mansion will mourn with daily pain,
 That the gravel is this night upon his cheek :
 That he, a man of vigorous age,
 In the prime of life, is laid in the narrow chest.
 What lament—haply with salt tears—
 What loud plaint shall I sing,
 To console the gentle star,
 His fair wife, kindly and noble?
 One shall come, and bring her to salute
 Her dearest son, and his daughter,
 And her young and only grandson, his father.

 The relatives, deep is their affection,
 Are uttering a cry in all the land ;
 The parish was bereft of his winning speech,
 When his soul was taken by God.
 Passing devout was he,
 Why did God take him to-day ?
 Many a time would he take in a shower
 The weak and the wretched with him.
 'Tis heavy to behold how mournful is every mansion
 For him, with his kindly countenance.
 Liberal has he been in his good house
 Of his beer as well as his bread ;
 A charitable, well-provided mansion,
 And one ever liberal and compassionate.
 May God still, on the spot where he was interred,
 Highly honour Littleton Lloyd,
 And Sarah, proportionately to their long descent.
 And long be the life of the little Rhys Lloyd,
 And may he cultivate the same affection
 To the second generation, after his father.
 For his soul let there be patience

In every parish, and in every society
 Of his relatives, and those he exalted,
 From Corwen even to Llangurig.
 And long be their life without hurt or hindrance,
 And a host be it blest with gladness;
 And may the grace of God, in waves of fire,
 Descend on his children and grandchildren.
 One thousand seven hundred and two, they say,
 Was the sorrowful year that made the gap,
 When 'neath a pile of stones was placed his gentle head, to remain
 Till the voice of the heavenly host shall come:—
 “Arise, thou gentle man, and mount aloft!”

I quote the following from the History of the Parish of Llangurig:—"The following extract is from a poem which is interesting for more reasons than one. It furnishes the solitary instance of a poem by Huw Arwystli addressed to a member of the Clochfaen family, which has been found elsewhere than in the Ceniarth MS., being taken from No. 250 of the Collection of W. W. E. Wynne, Esq., of Peniarth, to whom the writer (Howel W. Lloyd, Esq.) is indebted for the kindness of copying it, and it furnishes a contemporaneous proof of the correctness of the pedigree (published in the Archæologia Cambrensis, vol. for 1867, third series, p. 27), of the person to whom it is addressed, viz., Rhys ab Morys ab Llywelyn of Llangurig, who was the younger brother of Jenkyn Goch of Clochfaen, and therefore great uncle to the Four Brothers "of that ilk". The object of the poem is to solicit the gift of a horse, which it would seem, though the passage is somewhat obscure, was to be ridden by the poet to Arwystli, where he proposed to apply it in some way, which is not made apparent, to the payment of his debts. Of the animal, no more need be said than to judge from the qualities of shape, speed, mettle, and trotting and leaping powers ascribed to him by the bard, he might have shamed all competitors in the hunting-field, if he could now be brought out for a day with the Cheshire, or with Sir Watkin. Surely the bards must have deemed themselves seised of some poetical copyhold, entitling them to claim as a heriot for their verse the very pride of the stable."

TRANSLATION. By HOWEL W. LLOYD, Esq., M.A.

Thou Lion, brave and vigorous, for thy activity
 Art thou beloved by all the upland.
 Thine arm and thy sword are thy country's protection,
 Rhys, heir of Morys, thou hast a powerful arm.

Grandson of Llywelyn, unwearied in bounty,
 Chieftain of men, by whom art thou not beloved ?

A man of deliberation, when force hath assailed thee,
 A Lion of Howel Lloyd's pure metal,
 A noble chieftain from the race of Benwyn.
 An energetic nature hath entered into thee ;
 A tribe whose every scion hath a golden seat,
 Of the blood of Trefor, a forest of ancient gold.
 Of the blood of Philip Fychan, a very shield in daring.
 Thy descent, Rhys, is nobly deduced
 From the tribe of Blaenau of Cydewen,
 From the town and land of merchandise on the Wye,
 Is the fount of the possession of Howel of Mawddwy.

Thy bride was a maiden who requited thee,

Faultless in virtue and fidelity,
 As from the moon is her favour turned towards us,
 Her dignity is not enhanced by that of Jenkyn her father.¹
 The grandson of Rhys Lloyd will be liberal to the bard,
 From his hand come wine and gladness.

 Un gau wys o'r galanas
 A Siac Llwyd os accw i llas,
 Lladd Dafydd mae'n lludd dyfyn.
 Fychan hael f'achwyn yw hyn ;
 Lladd mab, lle'ddai Iâ im hais
 Llywelyn nid llai wylais.
 Dwyfil sy'n cwyno Dafydd,
 Ag Ieuan fal un gwyn fydd
 Dwy genedl eu dwg annawn,
 A dwy wlad aeth yn d'lawd iawn ;
 Llinwent Lys lle anun tlawd ;
 O wyno 'r wyf yn lle cawn Rent,
 Cynllwyno pen Cun Llinwent
 Dull a fu i'w dwyllo fo,
 Diau e allwyd ei dwyllo ;
 Er ei lladd nid oedd addas,
 Wrth roi 'i law, Arthur o las.
 Nid oedd ef, yn gynefin,
 A bod a'r ol, o bai drin ;
 Blaenrhed i fyned fu fo
 Ag olaf, pan fai gilio.
 Drwg oedd genyf ei drigaw,
 I gadw'r ôl ynglan Gwy draw :
 Fo heb ymado o'r mann,
 Fu gywyr ef ag Ieuan ;
 Dau frodyr diofrydol,
 Drwg yr aeth drigo ar ol.
 Deuryw dir aeth heb dro da,
 Tir Ieuan o wlad Troyd ;
 Llyna fann yn lai ynn' Fedd
 Llann Girig mae'r Llewn'n gorwedd.
 Gwannach yw'r âch ffordd yr êl,
 Gwanhäwyd egin Howel,¹
 Bod ynys heb Lys heb Lann,

I Bowys fod heb Ieuan.
 Dïal a ddoeth diluw ddw'r
 Mwy ddial yw a'm Ddeu w'r ;
 Diluw'n ol Deulaw a wnafl,
 O dielir nid wylaf.

ELEGY ON DAVYDD VYCHAN AND IEUAN OF CURIG'S LAND.

By the bard IEUAN DEULWYN.¹

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, Esq.

In tears for whom is Powys found
 And all the south, the country round ?
 I mourn, when I would rouse the chase,
 On bank of Wye, in glen of Ewas ;
 Woe's me ! a host is come and gone,
 Where two youths came, now comes not one.
 From Maelgwn's land one, well I wist,
 From Curig's Land another missed !
 Mine office brings me nought but pain,
 On moor and glen I call in vain
 For two—our best—we stay forlorn ;
 They come not—we may wait and mourn.
 As Mary's mourn'd, so I their loss,
 Her son's fell wounds beneath the cross.
 She from her eyes wept tears of blood,
 May mine weep, too, a kindred flood !
 I can no more than turn my gaze,
 Wistful, on yonder upland haze ;
 Long tho' I wait, there comes not one
 From moor to dell, both—both—are gone.
 Sole remuant from the slaughter I,
 Since when Siac Llwyd doth yonder lie,
 I call—nought boots me to complain—
 For gen'rous Davydd Vychan's slain !²
 For both drear sorrow chills my bones,
 Llewelyn also hears my groans.

¹ This bard was from South Wales, and flourished about the year 1460.

² Dafydd Vychan of Llynwent.

For Davydd and for Ieuan¹ vent
 Two thousand hearts their one lament.
 For these two tribes² are sunk in grief,
 For these two lands find no relief;
 In Llinwent's mansion sorrow reigns
 And all Saint Idloes' town complains
 For Llinwent's³ chief, by ambush slain.
 Deep-laid the plan! thro' foul deceit
 He gave his hand—his fate to meet.
 So was he slain—O shameful deed!
 As tho' 'twere Arthur's self to bleed.
 His wont was never to appear,
 When raged the combat, in the rear;
 In battle he the first to meet
 The foe, the hindmost in retreat.
 The rear that he should cover, I
 Lamented, on the bank of Wye.
 To quit their post, to break their troth,
 Were false of him and Ieuan both.
 Twain brethren of devoted mind—
 It stirred them sore to stay behind.
 Two lands diverse are reft of joy,
 For Ieuan's land hath sprung from Troy.
 Fair Curig's church is wrapped in gloom,
 There lies the lion in the tomb.
 Fall'n is that ancient line full low,
 Glides Howel's⁴ stream with weaken'd flow.
 Like land of court and church bereft
 Vengeance in flood burst forth of yore,

⁴ Howel Lloyd of Llangurig.

For greater now the seed is sore ;
 My heart would never broken be,
 Such deluge for such men to see.

EGLWYS LLANGURIG.

Gwyleiddiwn, fy awen, ysgafnwn ein troed
 Fel awel anadla ei hysbryd drwy'r coed,
 Oblegid cydsangwn feddrodau y fan
 Sy'n cynnwys marwoldeb anfarwol y Llan.
 Hen Eglwys Llangurig ! pe byddai pob maen
 O'th furiau yn dafod i'r oesau o'r blaen,
 Llefarent gyfrolau dyddorol i ni
 Nas gwyddom y degwm o hanes dy fri ;
 Ond gwyddom ddigonedd i hawlio'th fawrhad
 Fel un o Eglwysydd boreuaf ein gwlad.

Pan oedd Cristionogaeth fel baban mewn cryd
 A siglid gan Arfaeth Creawdwr y byd,
 Godreuon Pumlumon a gawsont y fraint
 O noddi St. Curig¹ yn benaf o'r saint.
 Y boreu oedd hafaidd, yr awyr oedd glir
 Pan gyntaf y sangodd St. Curig ein tir ;
 Ac os oes amheuaeth o b'le y daeth ef,
 Yr oedd mor dderbyniol ag angel o'r nef.
 Eisteddfa St. Curig ! mae'th berchen mewn hedd ;
 Tros fil o flynyddoedd ymwelsont â'i fedd ;
 Os nad oes lythyren uwch beddrod y sant,
 Mae iddo gogolofn yn nghrefydd ei blant.

Eisteddfa fendigaid! dychymyg sy'n troi
 Dalenau canrifoedd, a'r niwloedd sy'n ffoi
 Nes wyf fel yn ngwyddfod hen arwr y plwy'
 Pan syllai'r waith gyntaf ar Ddyffryn yr Wy,
 Pan fwriodd dewisiad ei goelbren ar fan
 Ddynodir hyd heddyw gan Eglwys y Llan,
 Pan weithiai'n lluddedig o foreu hyd nawn
 Ar adail ddiaddurn gyssegrodd ei ddawn,
 Pan fedai ffrwyth cysur o'i lafur a'i loes
 Wrth ganfod y cynnydd ar Grefydd y Groes,
 Pan seddai fel esgob yn Llanbadarn-fawr¹
 Nes cafodd ddyrchafiad trag'wyddol o'r llawr!
 St. Curig! traddodiad a fynodd o'r bron,
 Mewn oes ofergoelus, ddwyfoli dy ffon;²
 Holl rinwedd Sarph Bres yr anialwch a roes
 Ofergoel i'th lawffon ar gyfrif y Groes;
 Ac os nad oedd rhinwedd meddy-gol mewn llun,
 Mae digon yn Arwr y Croesbren ei Hun!
 Hen Eglwys Llangurig, pwy ydoedd dy sant?
 Hanesiaeth a ettyb yn amwys ei maent:
 Myn rhai mai estronddyn o genedl oedd ef,
 Ond hawlia frodoriaeth â ni yn y nef,
 Oblegid canolfur gwahaniaeth y byd
 Ddymchwela brawdoliaeth y nefoedd i gyd!
 Ymwadodd St. Curig â'i genedl a'i iaith,
 A'i enaid ymgollodd yn mawredd ei waith;
 Er byw ar y ddaiar, y nefoedd ei wlad,
 A dysgodd barablu iaith Palas ei Dad!
 Mae'i lafur yn aros dau wenau ei Dduw,
 Ei Eglwys yn sefyll, a'i grefydd y fyw;
 A thrwy y canrifoedd dilynwyd y sant
 I'r nefoedd gan faith genedlaethau o'i blant—
 Ei blant yn yr Arglwydd, ei blant yn y ffydd
 Olenodd dywyllwch anobaith yn ddydd.
 Am feddrod St. Curig yn ofer y trof
 Ddalenau y gyfrol o feini "Er côf";

¹ Dywed hanesiaeth ddarfod in St. Curig gael ei ddyrchafu i esgo-baeth, a sylfaenwyd gan St. Padarn yn y ganrif flaenorol, yn Llanbadarn.

² Giraldus a ddywed fod llawffon St. Curig mewn cadwraeth yn Eglwys St. Harmon yn ei ddyddiau ef. Desgrifir hi o wneuthuriad addurnol ar ffurf y Groes, a'i gorwychu âg aur ac arian. Priodolir iddi wyrthiau anhygoel nas gellir eu cofnodi mewn hyn o nodyn.

Na, na, ni ddynoda llythyren y fan
 Lle gorwedd gweddillion sylfaenydd y Llan,
 A dichon nad oes yn y muriau y chwaith
 Un gareg osododd sylfaenydd y gwaith !
 Cenedlaeth ddilynodd genedlaeth i'r bedd,
 A'r Eglwys a gollodd wreiddioldeb ei gwedd ;
 Aradrodd tymhestloedd yr oesau ei phryd,
 Ond erys ei chrefydd yn ieuangc o hyd.
 Y fesen a blannodd y sant yn ein plith
 A faethwyd yn dderwen drwy rin nefol wlith ;
 Y dderwen a fwriodd ei mês yn ei thro,
 A choedwig o dderir Efengyl yw'n bro !
 Drwy'r porth cyssegredig yn wylaidd yr äf,
 A gwylio fy nghamrau'n barchedig a wnafl,
 Gan deimlo fod miloedd fu'n sangu'r un llawr
 O'r nefoedd, efallai, yn syllu yn awr !
 Ar gyfer, canfyddaf fedyddfa o faen
 Gyssegrodd bedyddiad yr oesau o'r blaen ;
 Athraw mae'r areithfan addurnol ei gwedd
 Lle sangodd cenhadon sy'n awr yn y bedd ;
 A'r allor ganfyddaf yn olaf fel nod
 Or man sancteiddiolaf i ddeulin gael bod.
 Y porth yw'r fedyddfa i Eglwys ein Duw,
 Y pwlpud a ddysg sut i farw wrth fyw,
 A'r allor lle dyrch crefyddoldeb ei llef
 Yw'r pinacl agosaf i glustiau y nef !
 O ! allor fendigaid ! sawl oes ar ei glin
 Fu'n ymgyfranogi o'r bara a'r gwin ?
 A pha sawl sant faethwyd i'r Jesu yn frawd
 Drwy yfed ei waed a thrwy fwytta ei gnawd ?
 Y nefoedd yn unig sy'n gwybod y rhif
 O'r brodyr cadwedig ysgubwyd gan lif
 Anelwig Iorddonen mewn oesau o'r blaen,— Iaith dynol ddymuniad a gerfir ar faen !
 Hynafol adeilad ! pe gwysid o'r bedd
 Dy gyntaf sylfaenydd i weled dy wedd,
 Llesmeiriai'n rhyfeddol wrth fethu cael un
 Yn aros o'r meini osododd ei hun !
 Dadebrai o'i lesmair yn araf drachefn,
 A molai ei Dduw am gyfnewid y drefn,
 Oblegid yr Eglwys gyfododd y sant
 A'i ddwyllaw ei hun¹ adgyweirir gan gant !

Paham yr ymsoniaf am wysio o'r bedd
 Weddillion y sant a dynghedwyd i hedd?
 A llygad dychymyg, ei ganfod yr wyf
 Yn gweini fel angel gwarcheidiol ei blwyf;
 Er marw'n gorphorol, mewn yspryd mae'n fyw,
 A'i Eglwys dan nodded arbenig ei Dhuw.
 Ar Eglwys Llangurig ni welwyd un rhych
 Na throai i wyneb haelioni yn ddrych;
 Y Llwydiaid o'r Clochfaen¹ erioed fuont hael,
 Ac etto mae'r unrhyw haelioni ar gael;
 Mae hil Madog Danwr a'r Brodyr mewn bri,
 Ac yspryd pur Elen yn aros i ni;
 Yn Nghlochfaen mewn crefydd olynedd yw Lloyd
 Teilyngach nag un o'i ragflaenwyr erioed.
 Haelioni gwâg-eiriau yw nodwedd ein hoes—
 Haelioni yn cloffi rhwng rhagrith a moes;
 Ond pan y mae'r Llwydiaid o'r Clochfaen yn hael
 Mae'r galou a'r llogell yn briod i'w cael!
 Hanesiol ffenestri addurnwyd mor wych,
 Yr ydych i wyneb hynafiaeth yn ddrych;
 Pob arlun geir yn och sy'n gyfrol o foes
 Ysgrifiodd bucheddau arddelwyr y Groes:
 Y Pedwar Brawd enwog o Llangurig wych
 A'u hanwyl chwaer Elen sy'n llenwi'r un drych;
 Nis gallodd tywarchen y beddrod eu cloi,
 Mae' u hysbryd yn Nghlochfaen o hyd yn ymdroi.
 Aeth llawer cenedlaeth i'r beddrod er pan
 Roed Elen a'i brodyr yn nghanell y Llan;
 Mae'r rhelyw dan gysgod Yw annghof yn wyw,
 Tra blodau adgofion y Clochfaen yn fyw;
 Mae hanes y teulu yn haeddu cael rhan
 Yn ffenestr hanesiol sylfaenydd y Llan.
 Draw Curig Fendigaid ganfyddir, a baich
 Arluniol yr Eglwys yn bwys ar ei fraich;

Ac yna St. Curig a'i fam¹ geir yn nghyd
 Dan gledd erledigaeth yn cefnu ar fyd.
 Yn Nharsus canfyddwyd y baban a'i fam
 O fyd gorthrymedig i'r nef yn rhoi llam ;
 O flaen Alexander, "Wyf Gristion!" medd hi,
 A'i phlentyn adseiniai—"A Christion wyf fi!"
 Dan law erledigaeth merthyrwyd y ddau
 I ddim ond i'r grefydd arddelent fywhau !
 Uwchlaw, Maelgwyn Frenhin² yn wylaid a gawn.
 Am erlid gwir grefydd i Dhuw yn gwneyd iawu,
 Drwg offrwm i'w Perchen frasiroedd y wlad
 Ar ddeulin blygedig wrth allor ei Dad.
 Addurnol ffenestri, cyssegrwyd pob paen
 Gan ddwyllaw celfyddyd i'r oesau o'r blaen,
 Hen arwyr y plwyf gan gelfyddyd a roed
 Ar leni goleuni mor fyw ag erioed,
 Ac yma, Arwystli, y derllyn dy blant
 Grymhlethol adgofion twysog a sant.

Caraswn gael syllu am oes yn y drych,
 Ond clywaf undonol alwadau y clych
 Yn gwysio'r plwyfolion ddylifant mewn mwyf
 I ddathlu agoriad³ hen Eglwys y plwyf.
 Yn ebrywdd mae'r orwech adeilad yn llawn
 A moliant yn adsain ei muriau a gawn ;
 Mae'r gwelw weinidog yn teimlo i'r byw
 Ei safle gyfryngol rhwng dynion a Duw,—
 Yn teimlo ei hunan yn gryf ac yn wan
 Mewn pryder duwiolfryd wrth sangu y fan
 Gyssegrodd hyawdledd cenhadon y Groes
 Fudanodd y beddrod am oes ar ol oes !

² Dywed hanesiaeth ddarfod i Maelgwyn, fel iawn am ei erledigaeth, wneud rhodd i'r Leianes o'r tir ar ba un yr adeiladwyd yr Eglwys yn ddiweddarach.

³ Wedi myned o honi o dan adgyweiriad, ail-agorwyd yr Eglwys ar Sulgwyn, 1879, pryd y gwasanaethwyd yn syml ac effeithiol gan y Parch. G. W. Griffith, Ficer llafurus a chymeradwy y plwyf yn bresenol.

Yn ngwendid gwyleiddra mae cuddiad ei nerth,
 Ei ysbyrd wresogodd Preswylydd y Berth ;
 A thra mae'i lerferydd yn graddol gryfhau,
 Yn nagrau gorfoledd mae'r dorf yn gwanhau ;
 Mewn adgof o'r Pentecost cedwir yr wyl,
 A'r un yw athrawiaeth fendigaid yr hwyl !

Hen Eglwys Llangurig, ti gefaist y fraint
 O fod yn fagwrfa canrifoedd o saint ;
 Dy sanctaidd areithfa a lanwyd gan lu
 O enwog ddysgawdwyr drwy'r oesau a fu ;
 Rhyw deilwng olynnydd sydd beunydd yn bod,
 Wrth law gan yr Hwn sydd eiddigus o'i glod,
 A'i ddwyfol nawdd erys dros grefydd y plwy'
 Hyd oni thwng angel "na bydd amser mwy !"
 Pryd hyny daw meirwon Llangurig yn fyw
 Yn addfed gynhauaf toreithiog i Dduw ;
 Ac yn yr hen anthem nefolaidd, ei blant
 Drag'wyddol ymunant â Churig y Sant !

HUW ARWYSTLI, 1881.

Priodas, Cyssegriad serch mewn undeb annatodol yn Nuw. Puredigaeth cymdeithas. Arlun Dewi Sant, Dunawd, ac Elidan Sant. Hen arwyr y Plwyf. Teulu y Clochfaen. Adgyweirydd yr Eglwys. Magwraeth Elusen. Yr Eglwys yn ganolbwynt crefydd a Gwareiddiad y Plwyf.

I'r Dehan fôr-Ti welaist lawer tro
 Ar fyd a chyfnewidiad yn dy fro.
 Cyfreithiau 'n newid, newid teyrnedd gwlad,
 Ond digyfnewid yw'th Efengyl Rad.

Er gwisgo weithiau o'r athrawiaeth lân
 Mewn rhwyd-ymylwath o ddefrdau mân ;
 Newidia'r ffurf, newidia'r agwedd lun,
 Ond deil y Credar Sacramentau'r un—
 Fel ynei gwely llwyda'r ffrwd gerllaw,
 A chwydda dros ei glanau yma thraw,
 Ond cilia 'n ol ac ar ei graian gryd
 Fe loewa'r llif gan dreiglo'r un o hyd—

O fewn y cyssegr gogoneddus yw
 Fel "merch y Brenhin" yn ei gemwaith gwiw :
 Addolgar barch a dirwiolfrydedd dwys
 A leinw'r teimlad yn ei chyntedd glwys,
 Y pell ar agos blethir yma 'n un,
 A phethau nef a daear yn gyttein—
 Gwisg-gyfnewidiol amser wrth ei bwys
 Yn araf, ysgafn, drostynt dyn ei gwys—
 A choffa'r Cyfiawn geidw'n fyw mewn hedd
 Au bywyd ber-arogla uwch eu bedd.

Preswylfa Duw-y digyfnewid Un,
 Ymdrecha ddigyfnewid ddal ei hun—
 Mor hybarch ydyw ei henafol ddrych,
 Ac etto 'n newydd ei haddurnwaith gwych.
 O'r adfyfyrion godant yn ddirif
 I'r cof o ryw bellafion megis llif—
 Pob gwrthrych yma er yn fud ei hun
 Sydd lawn hyawdleud i'r ystyriol un.

Y Ddwyrain ffenestr dlosliwiedig gawn
 O Ddwyf—hanesiol luniau teg yn llawn.
 Hwyl safant—fel ar risiau llawer oes
 I'r naill y llall yn adrodd am y Groes ;
 Neu megis "Carnau gwylarth" bryn uwch bryn
 O'r groes hyd yma taflant oleu gwyn.

Gwel ddarlun baban-ferthyr yn ei waed
 Fel rhosyn fathr anifail dan ei draed,
 Sant Curig yw, ond dan ei boen ai gam
 Fe siriol wena ar ei ferthyr-fam,
 Julitta : dan o wanafoed a rhyw,
 Ond dau o ddewrion ffyddlon, dystion Duw.

Trwy niwl traddodiad uniawn bwyntiant law
 I'r boreu oesoedd yn y Dwyrain draw,
 Pan ydoedd ba'ban-Eglwys Dduw yn mhair
 Erledigaethau erch am Grist a'i air.

O "dân y toddydd" fyth yn lân a phur
 Trwy ganol chwerwon donnau ing a chur
 A'i bychan gwch yn wag o bethau byd
 Mordwyodd hon gan ddwyn y trysor drud
 O Tarsis neu Silencia ar ei hynt,
 A glaniodd ar derfynan "Cymru gynt".

Fel dolen newydd yn y gadwyn hir
 Gwel ddarlun "Curig Lwyd" yn dod i dir
 Ger Aber Ystwyth, mewn môr gilfach glyd—
 Seml oedd ei wisg a dieithr oedd ei bryd, Estronol iaith oedd ar ei wefus ef,
 Ond yn ei galon trysor pur y nef.

Fe ddengys bys traddodiad ol ei droed
 Yn gadaw'r dyffryn ai gauedig goed,
 A dringo rhiwiau serth Plinlumon Fawr
 I olen rhydd agored wybr a llawr—
 Oi ol ymledai cefnfor eang glas,
 O'i flaen agorai gwlad ddyffrynwy fras;
 O fôr a thir tymherus awel lôn
 Chwarenai gylch ei ael, gryfhai ei fron.
 Ar ben y bwlch cisteddai'r Sant i lawr
 Ar garreg lwyd gorphwysai enyd awr,
 Fel Un oedd Fwy ar ffynhon Jacob gynt
 Pan yn lluddiedig ar gyffelyb hynt.

Mal wrth ei draid agorai dyffryn tlws
 Y Gwy i'w dderbyn ei groesawgar ddrws.
 Amrywiaeth dolydd, llawer ffrwd a llyn,
 A'i denai ef i waelod llawr y glyn—
 Dewisodd fan ar fin graianog Gwy
 I godi Eglwys-gwreiddyn "Llan y Plwy":
 Hon adeiladodd ef ai law ei hun,
 O gangan gwydd plethedig seml ei llun,
 Fel "rhwng cortynau" ceid yr arch yn hir
 Cyn cael o Israel lwyr feddiannu'r tir.
 Ond ynddi trigai y Shechinah byw,
 Y Gair, y Sacramentau, Yspryd Duw.

Dan riniog hon dylifai ffrydian gras
 A'r dyffryn tlws a droes yn iraidd fras;

Eneidiau'r lliaws ddenwyd at y Groes
 Prydferthwyd ffurf cymdeithas, purwyd moes.
 Ac fel yr Hafren tu ar fewnol wlad
 Tywalltai hithau ei bendithion rhad.

Trwy ogledd ffenestr cysgod arlun ddaw ;
 O Maelgwyn frenhin ar helwriaeth draw ;
 Yng nghanol cynnwrf helfa wyllt a'i sŵn
 Ei lygaid dyn oddi ar ei gyflym gŵn,
 A gesyd hwy ar Forwyn hardd ei llun
 Ymgolla mewn myfyrdod wrthi ei hun—
 Fe saif yn syn—Gwêl yn ei thawel bryd
 Brydferthwch uwch nac edwol degwch byd.

Llestr ydoedd hon burasai Yspryd Duw
 Yn deml ysprydol i bob rhinwedd fyw ;
 Ei mewnol burdeb, ai thynnerwch mwyn
 I'w gwyneb dafra uwchddaearyl swyn—
 O brydferth bethau llawr prydferthaf un
 Yw sanctaidd wraig yn caru Duw a dyn,
 Yn nesaf wele'r brenhin ar ei lin
 Ger bron y Forwyn, croga ar ei min.
 Yf ei hymadrodd fel yr yfa hydd
 Sychedig ddyfroedd byw ar desog ddydd.

Nid geirau serch ond purion eiriau nef
 Dywalltai hi i'w fuddiol glustiau ef.
 Fel llestr a olchid dan y pistyll glân
 Tra uwch ei ben yn murmur-drydar cân,
 Fe olchwyd calon ddu a phurwyd bron
 Y brenhin hyf gan ffrwd ymadrodd hon.
 Fe roes ei hun i Grist, a rhoes y tir
 Y safai arno yn gynnysgath hir
 I'w Eglwys ef, tra rheda dyfroedd Gwy,
 Ac erys hwn yn feddiant iddi mwy—
 Gosodwyd yma sylfaen dwfn barhâd
 Dan Ddwyfol sêl i hawlfeddian nau gwlad ;
 Nid cyfran bwystfil ddyry Duw i ddyn,
 Ond etifeddiaeth briod iddo ei hun.

Yn nrych dychymmyg gwêl y cyntaf ddyn
 I Grist trwy fedydd yma'n rhoi ei hun.
 Fel Nicodemus, hwyrach, holai ef
 Am waith y geni o ddwfr, a'r geni o'r nef.
 Neu, gallai, fel yr Eunyech ar ei daith,
 Ar ol hir addysg a chynglori maith,

Yn ddirgel, wrtho i hun, gan Gurig Sant
 Bedyddiwyd ef yn nwfr y loew nant,
 I rwymau tyn gyfammod diwahan
 Yn enw'r Tad y Mab, a'r Yspryd Glân.

O un i un cynnullwyd yn y wlad
 Y "bychan braidd" y rhyngodd bodd i'r Tad
 Roi iddynt hwy y deyrnas. Graddol gyd
 Gorphorwyd hwy yn Eglwys yn y byd,
 Cymdeithasddynol wreiddiwyd yn ei Duw,
 Ar newydd sail, i newydd rasol fyw.

Nid llai dyddorol cofio'r cyntaf ddau
 Ger bron yr allor yma yw nesâu
 I Lân Briodas, megis sanctaidd stad
 Yn rhwymyn euraidd Dwyfol ordinhad—
 Ni chipid mwy, ni roddid merch trwy drais,
 Ennillir yma'r serch, y llaw, a'r llais.
 Ir naill y llall y "rhoddant gred" yn nghlyw
 A gwydd yr Eglwys oll, a'r uchel Dduw.
 Yn serch personol gloewyd cnawdol wŷn—
 Duw sy'n cyssylltu, na wahaned dyn.

I dlos ffynhonell bywyd-tarddle serch,
 A halogasid gan bob llygredd erch,
 Tywalltwyd phiol halen purdeb glân
 Sancteddiwyd mwy ei haber-geingciau mân.

Ymddengys Dewi Sant or ffenestr draw
 At Dunawd fel yn moes gyfeirio llaw ;
 Dwy ddisglâer seren foreu "Cymru Fu"
 Y naill o'r De a'r llall or Gogledd gu :
 Ac wedi canie'n iach i Curig Lwyd,
 Elidan Sant a drydd i Ddyffryn Clwyd.
 Ac ni wrthodir yma seddan glain
 I awyr hen Gwladgarwyt Cymru gain—
 Dihunau arwyr yn y llys a'r gad
 Yn byw, a meiddio marw, dros eu gwlad.

Mewn anrhydeddus goffa saif o'n blaen
 Enwogion lli o fonedd gyff bloch faen ;
 Rhed eu gorchestion a'u gwyrhydri hwy
 Fel gwythen aur trwy hanes teg y plwy—
 Rhai fel Trahaiarn flaenent yn y gad
 Ar dewr Gwenwynwyn yn gwrthsefyll brad.
 Mewn cymmwynasgar, elusengar waith
 Disgleiriaai eraill ar eu didrwt daith.

Y lleill mae aur—ganhwyllau yn ein mysg
 O ddentu daflent lemyrch dawn a dysg
 Cyssegrai eraill eu defnyddiol oes
 A'u pob peth at wasanaeth Crist a'i groes.
 Rhai bell ddisgleirient megis gloew Sêr
 Rhai fel rhosynau daenent arogl pêr.

Nid lleiaf, er iw enwi'n olaf, yw
 Adferydd hon fel teilwng deml i Dduw.
 Nid lleiaf yn ei ddewrder dysg, a dawn,
 Ei dwym wladgarwch, a'r ddefosiwn llawn ;
 Ai enu yntau megis seren hardd
 Yn wybr hanesiaeth oesau 'n dod a chwardd.
 Pob fenestr dlos llawn o hanesiaeth yw
 Llefara'r meirw yma fel yn fyw.

Elusen foneddigaidd dyner fron
 A anwyd, fagwyd, yng nghynteddard hon ;
 Gofala am yr hen, y tlawd, y gwan,
 Ac i bob un y rhydd ddymunol ran.
 Cofrestra hefyd eu cynnysgaith hwy
 A phin o ddeir ar furiau Llan y Plwy—
 Hen Lan y Plwyf ! Canolbwynt Dwyfol ddysg
 A theg wareiddiad fuost yn ein mysg—
 Llewyrcha 'n fwy, a mwy defnyddiol bydd,
 A thi a sefi hyd yr olaf ddydd.

CYWYDD-FARWŊAD.¹

MISS MARY CHARLOTTE HINDE-LLOYD, O'R CLOCHFAEN.

GAN CURIG.

MAIR ANWYL ! marw hono
 A barodd frâth i'r brudd fro,
 Ac ymyl-ddu gwmwl ddaeth
 Yn drist hulyn dros dalaeth :
 Cyd-ogrwn cawod dagrau
 Yma ar ei bedd mae'r bau,
 A christwch ddyeithr eistedd
 Yn sy'n ar bob aethus wedd,
 Tra y mae ing yn trymhau
 Baich nwyd byw ocheneidiau !

FROM A DRAWING BY

Interior View of Llangurig Church.

H. H. CUBLEY.

A pha ryfedd? ei phrofiad
 Fy'n ei le o fewn y wlad :
 Penaf friw oedd, pan fu raid
 Claddu hon, fel cledd enaid—
 Cledd miniog claddu menyw,
 A choron-ferch oreu 'n fyw!
 Llangurig! unig annedd
 Y feinir fwyn yw oer fedd ;
 Ei llaw we'n geir yn llonydd—
 Llaw oedd hael drwy ei holl ddydd,
 A'i mynwes gu mwy nis geill
 Roi trysorau tros ereill.
 Wylwn ac och'neidiwn ni,
 Yr em dyner, am dani,
 Oblegid dan ddyblygion
 Eigion bedd mae gwyneb hon!
 Gwelodd torf pan gladdwyd hi
 Gloi enaid gwiw haelioni ;
 Ni fu 'n y byd neu fewn bedd
 Yr un fron fwy ei rhinwedd.

Hi ddilynodd o linach
 Disigl hên d'wysogol âch,
 A theilwng o'i theulu 'nghyd
 Fu yr hyfwyn Fair hefyd :
 Gwaed enwog Madog Danwr¹
 Yn gwbl deg, heb eiliw dŵr,
 Weithi ai 'n goeth yn ei gwythi
 Yn ffrwd boeth drwy'i phurdeb hi ;
 Nid oedd un nodwedd anwyl
 Yn goll yn nghymmeriad gŵyl
 Arwres hen eryrod
 Hanesiol mewn gwladol glod ;
 Y fenyw fâd ni fu 'n fy'r
 O bryd y "Pedwar Brodyr"
 Tan fraint a fuont yn frig
 Llawnen gewri Llangurig.
 Nefol lili fel Elen²
 Oedd Mair hoff, mor hardd, mor wên;

² Ceir cywydd molawd, "Y Pedwar Brawd", o eiddo Huw Cae Llwyd. Eu chwaer, Elen, yr hon oedd briod Llewelyn ab Morys Goch, yn 1546, oedd tra nodedigam haelioni a rhinweddau ereill.

Elen fu o lanaf foes
 Ein Mair wèn am yr einioes :
 Ei chalon yn gysson gaed
 A cholon ei huchelwaed,
 Yma 'n curo mewn cariad
 Efo ei phlwyf a'i hoff wlad ;
 Ac er i bell gyrau byd
 Draw ei swyno dros enyd,
 Curiad brwd caridd ei bron
 Ymlamai am Bumlumon.

Tramwyodd, teithiodd, ond ha !
 Daeth elor y daith ola
 I'w dwyn, o Southsea,¹ dan âr,
 Tra miloedd mewn trwm alar.
 Yn brudd iawn y bröydd oll
 A ddygwyd yno n ddigoll
 Hyd fin ei bedd, â dwfn barch
 Mâd gofion i'w mud gyfarch,
 A bwriodd gwlad dan bridd glô
 Frenhines hael fron yno.
 Ail ein Mair ni welwn mwy,
 Rhy lydan yw'r ôl-adwy
 I obaith am ei bath hi
 Allu haner ei llenwi.

Gwaedoliaeth enwog deulu
 Yn ddi falch ynddi a fu ;
 Hi fylchai drwy falchder âch,
 Darllenai drwy ei llinach
 Ddyledswydd ddeil i adsain
 Clod mil uwch y cleidy main :
 Ei theulu ydoedd ei thlodion,
 Yn ngafael ing, i ofal hon,
 A thyst hir o'i thostwri
 Ddygir yn llawn ddagrau 'n lli'
 Dreigla 'n byd ar gulni bedd
 Prif fanon pwraff fonedd.
 Y fun fâd o'r Clochfaen, fu
 Yn nefolaidd ofalu,
 Alwodd Duw i wledd dawel
 Hyfryd y gwynfyd, lle gwêl
 Son dylodion dyledog
 Friehiai ei phlwyf, a chaiff lôg

¹ Bu farw yn Southsea, ar y 23 ain o Ebrill, 1880, a dygwyd ei gwedillion marwol i Llangurig.

Am drag'wyddoldeb heb baid
 Mewn doniau mwynhad enaid !
 O ! Mair Siarlot, hebot ti
 Poenwyd rhif on pentrefi :
 Gwagle mewn byd ac Eglwys,
 Dyna geir a thi dan gŵys ;
 Ond dwyfol allu defwlch
 Lluniwr byd all lanw'r bwlch !

THE LORDS OF MAELIENYDD AND CERI OR KERRY.

Harl. MS., 2,291.

Madog, the eldest son of Idnerth ab Cadwgan ab Elystan Glodrudd, had the Lordships of Maelienydd, Ceri, and Elfael. In 1136 he took part with Owain and Cadwaladr, the sons of Gruffydd ab Cynan, King of North Wales, in their victorious attack upon the Normans in Cardiganshire, in which the latter were defeated with great slaughter, and their encroachments for the time successfully checked.¹ Madog married Rheinallt, daughter of Gruffydd ab Cynan; but, according to some authors, he married Jane, daughter of Drumbenog ab Maenyrch Lord of Cantref Selyf. He died in 1141, leaving issue: 1, Cadwallon, of whom presently; 2, Einion Clyd, Lord of Elvael; he lived at Aber Edw, in the comot of Llêch Ddyfnog, in Elvael, where are still the remains of an ancient castle, near the confluence of the Edw with the Wye, and bore gules, a lion salient argent in a border of the second, charged with ogresses or pellets. He gave the lands now called Tir y Mynach, in the parish of Clyro, in Cantref y Clawdd, to the Abbey of Cwm Hir. Together with his brother Cadwallon, he joined his forces with Owain Gwynedd and the other Welsh princes, against Henry II, at the battle of Crogen in 1165.² About the year 1177-8, Einion Clyd was treacherously slain by the Normans, who lay in ambush to kill him. His death was avenged by the Lord Rhys ab Gruffydd, Prince of South Wales, who ravaged their lands in Maelienydd, and built the castle of Rhaiadr Gwy. This castle was dismantled and totally demolished during the civil wars, and not a vestige now remains except the foss. Einion left issue, Walter Fychan, Lord of Elfael and Dunreven, who was living in 1215. Gervase and Maredydd, who were addressed by Prince Llewellyn ab Iorwerth, amongst other chieftains residing in the neighbourhood of Ceri, in a letter deprecating injury or violence to the Priory of Ratlinghope, which must have passed between the years 1199 and 1211.¹

The other sons of Madog ab Idnerth were Meurig, Rhys, Howel, Maredydd, Cadwgan, David, and Gruffydd Foel, the ancestors of the Pryses of Mynachdy, in the parish of Bleddfa, in the comot of Is Mynydd, in Elfael. This family of Pryse bore azure, on a bend inter six lions rampant or, armed and langued gules, three cross crosets of the third. Madog had also three daughters, Maud, ux. Llys ab Idnerth Benfras, Lord of Maesbrwg; Elen, ux. Adda ab Gruffydd ab Madog; and Dyddgu, who married, first, Robert, Lord of Cedewain; and, secondly, Collwyn ab Tangno, Lord of Eifionydd and Ardudwy.

Cadwallon, the eldest son of Madog, succeeded his father as Lord of Maelienydd, which contains the comots of Ceri, Glyn Ieithon, Rhiw Abwallt, and Swydd Ygre.² He refounded the Cistercian monastery of Cwm Hir, which he intended for sixty monks, in 1143. In 1165 he joined his forces with those of the Princes of Gwynedd and Powys against Henry II, at the battle of Crogen.³ In 1175, he and his brother Einion Clyd, Lord of Elfael, and Einion ab Rhys, Lord of Gwrthreinion, in the Cantref of Arwystli, and other Welsh lords who had been ² "In the parish of Llanddewi Ystrad Ennau is an ancient camp called 'The Gaer', which occupies the summit of a high hill impending over the Valley of the Ieithon, of an oval form, defended by two parallel entrenchments, and also inaccessible on the Ieithon side. On a hill opposite is Bedd Ygre, or the Grave of Ygre, a large mound or tumulus of earth enclosed in a small moat, but evidently erected in commemoration of a British chief. Two miles hence, on a slight elevation, stood Castell Cymaron, of which not a fragment of the superstructure now remains; the site and moat are only visible. This is supposed to have been erected by the Normans, and destroyed soon after by the Welsh; but again rebuilt by Hugh, Earl of Chester, in 1142, when all Maelienydd became subject to him. It was often an object of contest between the Welsh and the Normans, and was afterwards possessed by the Mortimers in 1360, in whose posterity it continued for ages."—The Rev. M. Price, Vicar of Llanddewi. This parish is partly in the Comot of Is Mynydd (now called the Hundred of Cefn y Llys) and partly in the Comot of Uwch Mynydd (now called the Hundred of Knighton), in the Cantref of Elfael.—Carlisle's *Dic. in arms against the king, were taken by the Lord Rhys ab Gruffydd to the King's Court at Gloucester, and received to the King's peace, after which they returned peaceably to their lands.¹ Cadwallon resided at Castell Dinbaeth, which is situate on an almost inaccessible rock, in a narrow defile, and overhanging the river Ieithron, in the parish of Llananno, in Elfael.

Cadwallon was waylaid and murdered on September 22nd, 1179, by the retainers of Roger, son of Hugh de Mortimer, in returning from the King's Court, and while under the King's guarantee of safe conduct. Diceto tells us, says the Shropshire historian, of the hatred and fear which existed between Cadwallon and the English; also how his murderers were punished. Some who were proved guilty were put to the rack, and forfeited all their worldly possessions; others, who were suspected, were forced from the pale of society. But Diceto does not tell us who was the principal offender, namely, Roger de Mortimer, who suffered two years' imprisonment and forfeiture in consequence. During this period, probably on February 26, 1181, his father Hugh de Mortimer died; and in 1182 the Sheriff of Herefordshire, balancing his account for the year 1181, is allowed a sum of money for the custody of the castle of Camerum (Cymarum), which was in the king's hands by reason of Mortimer's disgrace.² This castle had been built by Roger de Mortimer in the year 1143, after expelling the brothers from the territory. The said sheriff, in 1179, charges two and a half merks for taking the prisoners, who were accused of the death of Cadewill (Cadawallawn), to the court at Windsor, and to Worcester, as the King had ordered.³

Cadwallawn married Eva, daughter of Philip ab Madog ab Adda, by whom he had issue: 1, Maelgwn (of whom presently) and 2, Howel, who was one of the hostages hanged by King John in 1213;⁴ 3, Madog; and 4, Owain. Howel had issue Morgan, Lord of Ceri; and Maredydd and Owain, who

Maelgwn, the eldest son of Cadwallawn, succeeded his father as Lord of Maelienydd. He married Janet, daughter of Morgan ab Howel, Lord of ———, by whom he had issue: 1, Madog, of whom presently; 2, Meredydd, Lord of Ceri, in 1250.¹ He married Anne, daughter of Sir John Scudamore, Knight, by whom he had issue: 1, Madog Lord of Ceri, in 1278 (6 Edward I); 2, Llewelyn, whose son Howel was one of the Lords of Ceri in 1278; 3, Iorwerth; and 4, Adda Moel.

The third son of Maelgwn was Cadwallawn, Lord of Maelienydd, who died at Cwm Hir in 1234; the fourth son was Adda. Maelgwn, who died in 1197,² had likewise a daughter named Gwerfyl, who married Rhys Gloff, Lord of Cymyt Maen in Lleyn.

Madog, Lord of Ceri, the eldest son of Maelgwn. He was one of those to whom Llewelyn ab Iorwerth, Prince of North Wales, wrote on behalf of Ratlinghope Priory.

It had been represented to the prince, who was at this period recognised as superior Lord of Ceri and Cedewaen, that Ratlinghope and Cotes, places consecrated to God and to pious uses, were so near to the land of Ceri as to be exposed to the occasional raids and forays which agitated the border. In the cause of religion, he accordingly writes to the chieftains of North Wales, and all others resident there, whether personally known to himself or not. He promises them the best of his aid and counsel in all their wants and just requests. He shows them that it is their interest, not less than his own, to foster and protect religion, its possessions, and its shrines. He commands all whom his commands can bind, that as they love his person and his honour, they will protect and assist Walter Corbet (an Augustinian canon who has acquired these lands for pious uses) in his designs. He threatens, on the other hand, the loss of his friendship to any one who is disobedient to his wishes. Lastly, he addresses Madog, the son of Maelgwn in particular, reminds him how he had brought him up and promoted him. He conjures him not to return evil for good, but to protect the prince's honour, as he, the prince, would thereafter consult for and succour the said Madog.¹

Madog, Lord of Ceri, was one of the three hostages for the Prince Llewelyn ab Iorwerth, who was so cruelly put to death by John, King of England, in 1213. He married Rose, daughter of Sir Roger Mortimer, by whom he had issue Adda of Ceri, who married Jane, daughter of Hugh ab Llewelyn ab Hugh of Payne (by Eleanor his wife, daughter of Robert Mortimer). By this lady Adda had several children, of whom Meurig of Ceri was the father of Adda of Ceri, whose only daughter and heiress, Nesta, married Einion ab Howel ab Tudor of Mochdref, as before stated.²

² According to Hanes Cymru, the true name of the kingdom of Elystan Glodrydd is Fferyllwg, or Fferllwg, of which those of Fferllys, Fferleg, Fferex, and Fferreg are corruptions. It was sometimes called also "Y wlad rhwng Gwy a Hafren," the country between Wye and Severn. The author adds that some persons regard the country now between those rivers as the original territory of Fferllwg, together with a portion of Herefordshire. Mr. Price's own opinion was, that the nucleus of the kingdom of Fferyllwg was the district called by Saxons "Dena", or the Forest of Dean, noted by Giraldus, as "trans Vagam, citràque Sabrinam." The word "Fferyllwg", he says expresses the distinctive character of the country, and, in his opinion is derived from "Fferyll", a worker in metals, or rather in iron. Fferyllwg, then, is "the land of ironwork", which is to this day a speciality of the Forest of Dean. It was described by Giraldus as "ferro fertilem atque ferinâ." Again, Mr. Williams, in his History of Radnorshire, states that Fferllys was originally a part of the territory of the Silures (Essyllwg), and that this territory had continued to be governed by its own "reguli" during and since the Roman occupation up to the period of its conquest by Elystan Glodrydd; Hereford, the capital, being previously called Fferley. Of the body of Ethelbert, assassinated by Offa, it was written:—

"Corpus tandem est delatum,
In Fferleiâ tumulatum."

If this be so, the origin of the names "Silures" and "Essyllwg" is easily accounted for. The inhabitants of Fferyllwg would have been called in Cymric "Fferyllwys", as those of Lloegr "Lloegrwys". These names the Romans corrupted into "Silures" and "Siluria", whence the Cymry again formed "Essyllwg". The name of Hereford may have been a Saxon or Norman corruption of "Fferyllwg", originating in unsuccessful attempts at the pronunciation of the word.

ELEGIES ON CADWALLAWN AND HOWEL,

SONS OF MADOC¹ AB IDNERTH AB CADWGAN AB ELYSTAN GLODRYDD.

BY THE BARDS CYNDELW AND LLYGAD GWR.

Translated by HOWEL W. LLOYD, ESQ.

The petty kingdom of Fferllys or Fferyllwg preserved its integrity but for a brief period after its conquest by Elystan Glodrydd. The parts of it comprised within the counties of Hereford and Gloucester, including the Forest of Dean, were wrested by William the Conqueror from his son Cadwgan, whose son, Idnerth, appears as lord only of the lands forming his father's paternal inheritance.² Nor was he left in undisturbed possession of these; for William Rufus made a grant of them to Ralph de Mortimer, Lord of Wigmore, one of the Norman invaders of England, with power to conquer them himself. For more than a century of warfare, however, the Mortimers do not appear to have succeeded in acquiring more of the territory from the descendants of Elystan than lay in the immediate neighbourhood of the castles which they erected in it, and garrisoned with their retainers. To this feud, and to the dissensions in the family itself, are to be traced the misfortunes of which there are incidental notices in the Chronicles, and which ended in the ultimate transfer to the Mortimers of the chief portion of the territory. Idnerth, the eldest son of Cadwgan, had twelve sons, of whom Madoc, the eldest, succeeded only to the Lordships of Maeliennydd, Ceri, and Elvael. To his eldest son, Cadwallawn, he bequeathed the two former; and Elvael, the remaining Lordship, to his second son Einion Clyd.

In the year 1159, the brothers Cadwallawn and Einion Clyd were at variance; for we find that the former was made prisoner by the latter, and given up to Owain Gwynedd, who in turn delivered him into the hands of Henry II of England, by whom he was imprisoned at Worcester; whence by the aid of his friends and foster brothers, he contrived to escape.³

² Mr. Jonathan Williams, in his History of Radnorshire, states that Radnor also, or Maesyfed, was seized by William I, who made it a royal demesne, whence it was called "the Honour of Radnor."

³ Brut y Saeson, p. 679; Brut y Tywysogion, Aberpergwm Edit.; p. 713 of Myv. Arch., Edit. 1870. In Annales Cambriæ the account

Another notice of Einion Clyd is in Annales Cambriæ:—"Anus MCLXX . . . Eynann Clut vulneratus est a filiis Lewarchi filii Denawal (Dywal, C.), scilicet Meiler (Meilir, C.), et Ivor," p. 52. And in the Confirmation Charter of Henry III, already referred to, he is said to have been the donor to Abbey Cwm Hir of certain lands, "terram de Carnaff (Carno?) cum nemore quod vocatur Coedeirenis" (the Wood of Aeron).

The first Elegy, of which the following is an attempt at a metrical version, is by the celebrated bard, Cynddelw. He was in high favour with most of the Welsh princes his contemporaries, in the twelfth century, in whose praise several of his poetical compositions are still extant, and are printed in the original among those of the "Gogynfeirdd", in vol. i of the Myvyrian Archæology of Wales. Among them is this poem, interesting not only for its poetical power, but also for the relation it bears to a family remarkable for its singular accumulation of misfortunes. Its hero, Cadwallawn, was the eldest of several sons of Madoc, the son of Idnerth, and he and his brother Einion Clyd lost their lives in the manner already related, the former by the stroke of a pole-axe, not without a desperate struggle with his assassins, so far as may be gathered from the elegy, in which a prudent discretion would appear to have been observed by the poet in his use of obscure and guarded language in reference to the event.

It is remarkable that the Welsh Bruts, Annales Cambriæ not excepted, are silent as to the manner of his death, though one of them, Brut y Tywysogion, states the simple fact that he was slain. "A.D. 1179. Ac yna y llas Kadwallawn." From this silence, and from the record of the death of his brother Einion Clyd, who had been similarly waylaid less than two years before, it might be supposed that the two events had been confounded, were it not that the French Chronicle of the Mortimers, allowed by Eyton to be authentic,¹ and the contemporaneous chronicler, Radulph de Diceto, who was Dean of London in 1181, actually mention "Cadwallon" by name as the person who was waylaid and murdered in returning from the King's Court, and whilst under the King's guarantee of safe conduct. As the latter appears to supply the fullest account extant, albeit hostile and prejudiced, of the event, and of this event is reversed:—"A.D. 1161. Cadwalaun filius Madauc Eynaun Clyt fratrem suum tenuit et Owino Grifni filio carcerandum tradidit: quem Owinus Francis dedit: sed per collectaneos et familiares suos de Wigornia liberatus, nocte evasit," p. 49.

as the judgment exhibited therein of Cadwallawn's life and character contrasts strangely with that passed on him by his countrymen, as displayed in the elegy, a translation of the whole passage is here subjoined:—

“A.D. 1179. Cadwallawn, a person holding some Princedom in South Wales, often transgressed the limits defined of old time between the English and the Britons,¹ and by making violent inroads into the March, and panting open-mouthed for massacres of men, studied to pass the whole course of his life in frequent plunderings and maraudings. Dragged² at length before the king, and assailed by the cries of many persons, when, although then and there safe from the King under the conduct of the King himself, but always admonished in proportion to the enormity of his crimes, he had gone on his way back homeward, being casually intercepted by an ambuscade of the enemy, he was slain on the 22nd of September. Now, because this redounded greatly to the injury of the King's Majesty, Cadwallawn, who so often before ought justly to have been awarded hanging for his deserts in accordance with public law, out of reverence for the King, from whose Court he was returning, ought, to the end that public law might not be outraged, to have had a safeguard from public law, until he should have betaken himself within the boundary predetermined for his full security by the indulgence of the prince. Now, if any one be alarmed by the example of this unwonted event (although nothing like it has occurred in our days, and although the King has not left this unpunished, though in avenging it the punishment exceeded due bounds),³ if he should have been summoned to⁴ the King's Court, let him approach it without fear. For the Welsh may mutually console each other that the death of one of their countrymen has received, in the deaths of many of the March-men, obsequies grievous to the English and odious to the Normans. Therefore, those privy to the murder, and become suspected from concurrent report, and proved liable by a public investigation, were involved in a heavy sentence, some being tortured on the rack,⁵ and condemned in confiscation of goods, and others compelled to lead a wretched life in the hidden recesses of the woods."¹

It never could have occurred to the worthy Dean, although, from the permission accorded to Cadwallawn to return home with no worse treatment than a warning, it seems to have suggested itself to Henry II and his advisers, that the Welsh may have had some foundation of justice for their reprisals in the gratuitous grant of their hereditary territories to the Mortimers by the Red King, solely by the paulo post futurum title of their conquest of it by the sword; to say nothing of the previous assassination of no fewer than four of his brothers, Meredydd, Howel, Cadogan, and Einion, at the hands of these same enemies, the Mortimers. Cadwallawn could not have been "dragged" against his will to the Court, or he would have been entitled to no safe-conduct. Nor could his conscience have reproached him with any crime, the proof of which, in the King's Court, would have forfeited his safe-conduct, and placed him in the power of those who, he well knew, thirsted for his blood. Nor could the King without shame have suffered the great aggressors, the Mortimers, to escape scot free after the perpetration of so atrocious a deed. He must have been aware that the real object of this, as of the foregoing assassinations, was to establish that family for ever in the possession of the remaining property of those whom they had already violently ousted from its largest and richest portion, and which they had little prospect of securing for themselves as long as the brave and warlike Princes lived, and had sons to follow their footsteps in defending it. The perpetration of such deeds was certainly far from atoned for by mere deprivation and imprisonment for a year or two; and this shadow of justice, which Diceto naïvely pronounces excessive, would be one proof more, if such were needed, of complicity in the judge.

The second Elegy is one of the five extant compositions of Llygad Gwr, a bard who flourished in the next generation to Cynddelw.

According to the "Llyfr Coch Hergest" edition of the Brut y Tywysogion, Howel and his brother, sons of Madoc ab Idnerth, were slain, how and wherefore is not stated, nor the name of the second brother. In the Brut y Saeson, the name of the second brother, Cadwgan, is given, with the addition that they were slain in a quarrel, "yn ymryson". In the Aberpergwm edition of the Brut y Tywysogion these statements are supplemented by the addition that there was a quarrel between Howel and Cadwgan, sons of Madoc ab Idnerth, and that they fratricidally killed each other: "Oed Crist 1140 ... y bu ymryson rwng Hywel a Chadwgan meibion Madawc ab Iduerth, ac y lladdasant y naill y llall." This, however, appears to have been copied from the Annales Cambriæ, under an amusing misapprehension of the meaning of the words "de se". "A.D., 1142. Howel et Kadwgaun filii Madauc filii Ydnerth occiduntur, machinante Elya de se——" i.e., Howel and Cadwgan, sons of Madoc, son of Idnerth, are slain by the contrivance of Elias de Say, whose father, Hugh de Say, with Roger Mortimer, was worsted by Rhys ab Gryffydd in an attempt to defend Radnor, 1144. Elias was sixth in descent from Picot de Say of Stokesay. He and his brother Robert died without issue. His sister Margaret married Hugh de Ferrers, and secondly, Robert de Mortimer, by whom she became mother of Hugh de Mortimer, by whom Meredydd ab Madoc, another brother, was slain in 1146.¹ Again, Meuric ab Madoc, the last brother, was slain by his own men in the same year.² Thus, of nine royal brothers, six at least died violent deaths—a sad and striking illustration of the turbulence of the times! Cadwallawn ab Maelgwn ab Cadwallawn, the last Welsh Lord of Maelienydd, died in 1234 at Abbey Cwm Hir, where he had previously taken the religious habit.³ His brother Maelgwm built the Castle of Treffilan.⁴

ELEGY ON CADWALLAWN, SON OF MADOC.

By CYNDELW. (1179.)

May God pour forth to me the gift assured
 Of poesy, the varied lofty ode,
 That I with honour meet may celebrate
 A man, like ocean lashing up his ire,
 That so I may compose with language just
 And studied force Cadwallawn's elegy,
 Like Einiawn's elegy by Morvran⁵ framed.
 What could I love, I, by my lord beloved,

⁵ Morvran Ail Tegid, a bard of the sixth century.

Save honour, mead, and shaggy-coated steeds?
 Stand not my tears in heaps, since he is dead,
 Of chiefs my chiefest pleasure and delight?
 Come suddenly upon me is the day
 Of parting from the flesh that teemed with life,
 Cadwallawn's fix'd, predestinated time.
 The favours I declare of gracious lords
 Dispensing happiness. An ardent flame
 Of passion would I stir when I shall sing
 The home of mournful, but erst comely bards.
 Of one who brings us longing would I speak;
 My tears are trickling for an eagle's might,
 In sadness for the slaughter of my chief,
 Now that the potent lord, the Cymry's prop,
 First in the war-shout of o'erbearing course
 Is gone. The fruitful earth is eloquent.
 Who will maintain Cadwgan's¹ generous seed,
 A stalwart rampart raised around the fort,
 Around the beverage they brew from corn?
 Who will rush now where spears are thrust to slay?
 From shafts now slackened where the blue-edged wound?
 Who on the war-path shall direct the fray?
 What lion brave, with cruel blade, advance?
 What courtly host, in wealthy palaces,
 Shield, and imbue with force, the British bard?
 Will arms be giv'n when heaps are wasted all?
 What harmony of worship will be tuned,
 Now that the stranger hath cut off its life?
 What warrior supreme shall warriors meet?
 Who, as Cadwallawn erst, shall lavish gifts?
 Cadwallawn, Rhodri's² gracious progeny?
 To him th' affray was a chord attuned,
 And dreadful blows on Beli's lifted shield.³
 His loss I know—he show'ed down splendid gifts;
 Have I not lost a lord who freely gave?
 His sons on me red silken robes bestow'd.
 Within me do not stirring memories rise?
 With wrathful indignation am I stirred;
 To me his palm unclosed with gracious gifts
 Unstinted, overflowing, undisguised.
 I was an Ovate by his grace endow'd,

² Rhodri Mawr, or Roderick the Great.

³ I.e., his shield was like that of Beli Mawr.

As all may know. So good a lord was he!
 My golden tints and vessels have I seen
 In mansions, where his love requited mine,
 In tramp of hosts, in halls, 'mid songs at feasts,
 In trodden courts, and gates, 'mid bardic lore,
 What time I was beloved by Ceri's lord,
 The love-compelling prince of lands renown'd.
 His dinted target I must love perforce,
 He loved my welfare, loved me in his house.
 But since the prince of warriors is gone,
 Who kept me well, but made nor heap nor store,
 Silent am I. Too long I hold the peace—
 I will be mute no more—'tis not my part.
 For great Cadwallawn, manhood's glorious light,
 A chain with bars the Southerners prepared.¹
 Cadwallawn's bounty it is mine to praise;
 Whenever generosity was praised,
 None were a third so generous as he.
 His onset, as a flood o'erspreads the shore,
 Forced its way foremost in the rush of war.
 The glades of Powys did my chief revere
 For qualities that gain a man respect;
 Like Madoc, ever generous in will;
 Stern to mow down his foes, yet kind withal.
 Not Owain² brooded more o'er Britain's care,
 Yet slaked his thirst of vengeance in the fight:
 A man to fell men never fell'd before,
 A man of manliest courage in distress,
 A man who laid an ambushade when pressed,
 A mighty tower of strength, a noble king,
 A man who made the Cymry seem disgraced,
 A man who took their manliness away,
 A man who caused St. David to withdraw
 From them his patronage, tho' England's foe.³
 A man who redden'd with a gushing stream
 Of gore his blade, and Teivi's plain once fair,
 And stain'd with mingled gore the azure sea.
 Great is the day, to mark the love we bore
 Our hero, for the joys he bless'd us with,
 Against a host when valiant in the van.
 Not vain our love; his life of precious toil,

² Owen Cyveiliawg?

³ By his prowess casting theirs into the shade.

When fighting for our hearths, subdued our hearts.
 His hewing steel he stain'd with crimson red,
 When in the fiery conflict death was rife,
 By foes encompass'd in the combat's fray.
 Lavish of arms, protector of the song,
 His death that came of devastating war
 Supremely hath afflicted me ; my smile
 Perforce is stay'd : woe's me ! my lord is lost.
 Doth not earth's bosom hold him in the grave ?
 Light of the battle's skirts, he yet was mild.
 Slain is the king of bounty ! grief is come !
 As he hath seen me, would I saw him now !
 Regret assails me, bitter is my pain !
 Huge was his blade, and heavy with its tip
 Of many-tinted brass ; the cavity
 In his shield's centre waver'd not ; he took Pride in his feats of valour ere he fell.
 Where'er he went his fame had gone before.
 With twenty pounds he gifted me unask'd.
 He never bade me from his sight depart ;
 May God ne'er part him from the realms of bliss !
 A king's encroachment is a tyranny ;
 As he hath stood by me, so I by him.
 What happ'd before will hap again ; all die.
 Much, from the noble impulse of my soul,
 The leader of my song will I extol,
 Who loved to dare the venture of a wolf,
 Who gifted bards with noble maintenance,
 Himself their pattern of a perfect life,
 Shelt'ring the winged tribe of flutt'ring birds,¹
 Slaying a foe who erst had left his side.
 The crows' provider ne'er could bear reproach ;
 The crows of Brynaich never wanted loads ;
 Reproach was none that he could e'er deserve.
 He was not one to store up heaps of grain,
 Nor yet was he so far reduced in wealth,
 But bards wayfaring would resort to him.
 Whate'er he had to give was gain to all.
 The soil was honour'd where he slew a foe.
 Where'er he was, that spot was not disgraced.
 He would not turn aside to do a wrong,
 But, where he saw oppression, would oppress.
 Too lofty-minded he to skulk from foes ;

¹ I.e., the bards who fitted like birds from place to place.

Not one would dare so much as rouse him up.
 As falcons are self-confident, so he,
 Faultless, in pride of courage venturesome,
 With brittle spear uplifted, batter'd shield ;
 So was the mounted son of Madoc armed.
 The glorious warrior, mead-fed, on the shore,
 Freely as Mordaf¹ on me did bestow
 Gifts lavish'd on me, ta'en from vagabonds ;
 Ah ! scarce can I again pour forth my lay
 For so to nurture bards he used his wealth.
 Around the Border he would Saxons fell,
 His rage Gwynogion's² jurisdiction ruled,
 And let who would oppose, a hero he.
 Who kings resist with force deserve not peace.
 Angles he mangled,—and when mangled left.
 The Lloegrians hear the fame of ravage still Though he be slain—the lion dire in fight,—
 In wrath protecting all. Exists to-day
 No warrior now as heretofore. To-day
 No peace is left for me, but still the wound
 Within my bosom doth distress me sore.
 For my chief's crimson sword am I distress'd,
 With deep affliction. God deliver me !
 Since fallen on me is this seeming shame.
 To the sad measure of my mournful lot,
 And to the measure of his bounty great,
 Proportionate a poem have I framed
 Of doughty struggles—various the lay.
 My skill hath brought me importunity,—
 Hath brought me wealth—falcons of plumage light,
 Alike in colour, and in speed alike ;
 A gilded saddle, splendid, proudly gay,
 From the majestic knight of coursers fleet.
 Taken to-day ! 'tis this that maddens me—
 For his distracting loss I smart with pain.
 Defending Elfael, when, in autumn, he Drench'd with his blood his country's gory soil,

None greeted me with deferential gift ;
 They came to meet me, but they spared me not ;
 Fell back each coward then, till he was slain,
 Rush'd on each hero then, till he was felt ;
 From head to foot the tumbling helmets fell,¹
 While kin from kin sought succour ev'ry one.
 Slain is the hero, fiery to behold,
 Like a grim wolf, whose lair might lose its prey.
 Gentle Cadwallawn's hand was open aye
 To the world's pale ones' use, open his Court,
 Where strangers went for hospitality :
 In life the bards were fostered in his breast.²
 While lived the country's high-escorted king,
 Of gain and wealth they found the daily use,
 High-trotting steeds, tall-flank'd and grey were theirs
 A wolf was he, the root of manly strength,
 In fight his valiant sword-strokes, wolf-like, fell,
 Of Eithon's³ fortress'd land the sov'reign chief,
 Of Clyd⁴ and Aeron⁵ prince famed far and wide.
 When tried in the discourse of speakers wise,
 Cynddelw I,—my friends are never lost,—
 Of speech harmonious ever, while I live,
 My verse discussion gains in gentle speech.
 In competition my encomium wins,
 As scholars win, when grammar's in debate.
 With vigour will I sing, as I know how,
 As our disciples who have learning know,
 After Cadwallawn, bounteous to bestow,
 Munificently shining as the star
 Seen in the dawn, a blessing to the poor,—
 The suppliants of Britain,—and to bards,
 No empty-handed one shall promise gifts.
 His lance hath memories of mourning left,
 And crimson gashes oozing out with gore.

⁵ This cannot have been Aeron in Cardiganshire. Cwm Aeron, corruptly written Cymaron, where Roger Mortimer built a castle, must be meant. The river Aron, probably Aeron originally, runs through the "Cwm" or Glen.—Hist. of Radnorshire, by Jon. Williams, p. 69. For "Coedeirenis" (Coed Aeron?), see p. 306.

The fiery prince hath left behind him sons,
 Themselves would leave blood-tricklings in their foes.
 Three¹ whelps of leaders bold to thrust the spear,
 In fray of lances eager eagles three,
 Privy to conflicts three, and sword-cuts dire,
 Accordant three to minstrels, and to gifts,
 Three diligent to aid at Saxons' gates,
 Three bold and fearless, mighty to avenge,
 Three generously banded close as one,
 To bar dispersion, and the scare of throngs ;
 Three native hawks, high-famed, of purest breed,
 Stout youths, who wash their cheeks from stain of war.
 Since now, by stroke of battle-axe cut down,
 Our princely lion-monarch is laid low,
 A chief supreme, from ancient sov'reigns sprung ;
 Since our dispenser is in truth no more,
 Lord God ! may he be guiltless in Thy sight !
 Should wrath betide the friend of all the poor,
 Pillar of Britons, and their shelt'ring shield,
 Then, in the realms of light, Lord of the poor,
 Let angels guard him to Heav'n's bright abode !¹

ELEGY ON HOWEL, SON OF MADOC.

BY LLYGAD GWR. (1140.)

Dreadful the loss ! my God, oh ! woe is me
 Since none can save, that left me desolate,
 Made many poor, laid song and music low,
 When died my Lord, whose habitation lay
 Mid peopled dwellings, on a golden plain.
 The mighty hero's height is sunk to naught,
 Who out-topp'd heroes, with his haughty gait.
 Of men the fearless pillar, when a path
 He clear'd thro' foes encompassing a town.
 Woe is the world without his lavish hand,
 Sad that its gen'rous Guardian's ta'en away !
 I, too, must mourn, since now I clearly view
 The course of things confused upon the earth.

¹ The names of four of Cadwallawn's sons are given in the pedigree (supra, p. 303), Maelgwn, Howel, Madoc, and Owain. Maelgwn died in the year 1197, and was father of Madog, Lord of Ceri, who was slain in 1213, the father of Meurig, the father of Adda of Ceri, whose only daughter and heiress, Nesta, married Einion ab Howel ab Tudor of Mochdref and Ceri.—See pp. 216, 304, 325.

It is not good that Howel, Madoc's son,
 A light that shone with glorious majesty,
 Is laid within the bosom of the ground.
 Eternity is long ! Long will the time
 Appear without him now ; and trouble too
 With consternation mingles our regrets.
 Their trappings round him warlike throngs display'd,
 And with his valour grew his nation's fame.
 His wealth enrich'd the crowds who fill'd his Court,
 Draining the mead-horns in the banquet's cheer.
 Fair token was it of the gifts to come,
 When reckon'd were his hundred dignities.
 The gate of Heaven open may he find !
 His lot be at the Son of God's right hand !
 Unwise is he whose faith hath not been fix'd
 Upon the man, the best that e'er was born.
 Our refuge He from Death when on the wing,
 From all our tribulation, and our grief.
 Firm is our faith in Christ, made sad for us.
 Woeful our wail for wrong—no hidden wrong,
 That smote the hero as a falcon brave :
 To feel his loss hath made our blood run cold ;
 No marvel is it if we groan aloud.
 Does not reproachful memory arise,
 For the loved leader with his crimson'd sword,
 Who knew no guile, was pure from all deceit ?
 If I am low, then is not mine the loss ?
 With fervour all sincere he prais'd his bards.
 Is not the mourning dol'rous, is 't not dull,
 To huge Hirddywel from far Berwyn's fells,
 Because the fiery leader hath been ta'en,
 With turmoil, like the herd's upon the hill,
 Whose spear was blood-red, like a blast of blood ?
 Oh ! for the wounded warrior's gilded sword.
 Oh ! for the Flood to come—I care not when—
 Oh ! for his clarions that red harvests reap'd.
 Oh ! for his prowess, proof against the strong.
 So brave in battle, oh ! that he is gone.
 How long, alas ! and he will ne'er return !
 Oh, Mary ! Michael ! can then nought be done ?
 O, God ! that Howel's taken to thyself,
 Who ne'er drew back, hero of heroes he !
 Of justice now be his the sure reward !
 A lord revered, may he ascend on high,
 Borne by the Prince of Angels up to Heav'n.

Y GAERDDIN.

This camp lies in the township of Bodylltyn, and was given, together with the manor and estate of Rhiwfabon, by Prince Madog ab Gruffudd Maelor, to his second son, Maredudd, Lord of Rhiwfabon (see page 155, and the Eyton pedigree). It contains about four acres of ground, protected in some parts by one, in others by two very strong aggers and fosses. The lower agger is made of loose stones, with a wall of vast thickness on the summit. Within the area are many vestiges of buildings, the habitations of those who occupied the place. A fierce battle was fought in 1167 near this camp between Owain Cyfeiliog, who was Prince of Upper Powys from 1148 to 1197, and the English and Normans, and the Cymry gained the victory; which gave rise to a beautiful poem called "Hirlas Owain", composed by the Prince himself, of which we shall give a few verses, composed by that accomplished lady the late Mrs. Hemans.

THE HIRLAS HORN.

Fill high the blue Hirlas that shines like the wave¹

When sunbeams are bright on the spray of the sea!

And bear thou the rich foaming mead to the brave,

The dragons of battle, the sons of the free!

To those from whose spears, in the shock of the fight,

A beam like heaven's lightning² flashed over the field;

To those who came rushing as storms in their might,

Who have shivered the helmet, and cloven the shield;

The sound of whose strife was like oceans afar,

When lances were red from the harvest of war.

Fill high the blue Hirlas! O, cup-bearer, fill

For the lords of the field in their festival hour!

And let the mead foam like the stream of the hill,

That bursts o'er the rock in the pride of its power.

Praise, praise to the mighty, fill high the smooth horn

Of honour and mirth,³ for the conflict is o'er!

And round let the golden-tipped Hirlas be borne

To the lion defenders of Gwynedd's fair shore,

Who rush'd to the field where the glory was won,

As eagles that soar from their cliffs to the sun.

¹ "Fetch the horn, that we may drink together; whose gloss is like the waves of the sea; whose green handles show the skill of the artist, and are tipped with gold."—From the Hirlas Horn of OWAIN CYFEILIOG.

² "Heard ye in Maelor the noise of War, the horrid din of arms, their furious onset loud as the battle of Bangor, where fire flashed out of their spears?"—Ibid.

³ "Fill, then, the golden-lipped horn-badger of honour and mirth."—Ibid.

Fill higher the Hirlas! forgetting not those
 Who shared its bright draught in the days which are fled.
 Though cold on their mountains the valiant repose,
 Their lot shall be lovely—renown to the dead!
 While harps in the hall of the feast shall be strung,
 While regal Eryri with snow shall be crown'd—
 So long by the bards shall their battles be sung,
 And the heart of the hero shall burn at the sound,
 The free winds of Maelawr shall swell with their name,
 And OWAIN'S rich Hirlas be fill'd to their fame.

A POEM

composed by Owain Cyveiliog, Prince of Powys, entitled by him "Hirlas", from a large drinking horn so called, used at feasts in his palace. He was driven out of his country by Owain Gwynedd, Prince of North Wales, and Rhys ap Gruffyth ap Rhys ap Tewdwr, Prince of South Wales, A.D. 1167, and recovered it by the help of the Normans and English, under Henry II. He flourished about A.D. 1160, in the time of Owain Gwynedd and his son David. This poem was composed on account of a battle fought with the English in Maelor.

"When the dawu arose, the shout was given; the enemy gave an ominous presage; our men were stained with blood after a hard contest; and the borders of Maelor Drefred were beheld with wonder and astonishment. Strangers have I driven away undaunted from the field with bloody arms. He that provokes the brave man ought to dread his resentment. Fill, cup-bearer, fill with alacrity the horn of Rhys in the generous prince's hall! for Owen's hall was ever supported by spoils taken from the enemy, and in it thou hearest of the relief of thousands. There the gates are ever open.

"O, cup-bearer, who, with patience, mindest thy duty, forsake us not! Fetch the horn, that we may drink together; whose gloss is like the wave of the sea, whose green handles show the skill of the artist, and are tipped with gold. Bring the best mead, and put it in Gwgan Draw's hand, for the noble feats which he hath achieved. The offspring of Goronwy, who valiantly fought in the midst of dangers; a race of heroes for worthy acts renowned. And men who, in every hardship they undergo, deserve a reward; who are in the battle foremost—the guardians of Hafren. Their friends exult when they hear their voice; the festal shout will cease when they are gone.

"Fill thou the yellow-tipped horn, badge of honour and mirth, full of frothing mead! and if thou art desirous to have thy life prolonged to the year's end, stop not the reward due to his virtue, for it is unjust, and bring it to Gruffyth with the crimson lance. Bring wine in the transparent horn, for he is the guardian of Arwystli¹—the defence of its borders; a dragon of Owain the generous, whose descent is from Cynvyn; a dragon he was from the beginning, that never was terrified in the battle; his brave actions shall follow him. The warriors went to purchase renown, flushed with liquor, and armed like Edwin; they paid for their mead, like Belyn's¹ men in the days of yore. And as long as men exist, their valour shall be the common theme of bards.

“Fill thou the horn, for it is my inclination that we may converse in mirth and festivity with our brave general; put it in the hand of the worthy Ednyfed, with his spear broken to pieces, and his shield pierced through. Like the bursting of a hurricane upon the smooth sea in the conflict of battle, they would soon break in pieces the sides of a golden-bordered shield. Their lances were besmeared with gore after piercing the heads of their enemies. They were vigorous and active in the defence of delightful Gaerddin. Heard ye in Maelor the noise of war, the horrid din of arms, their furious onset loud as in the Battle of Bangor,² where fire flashed out of their

² This was the famous battle of Bangor-is-y-coed, in Maelor Saesneg, after the murder of the monks at the instigation of Austin, the first converter of the Saxons to Christianity. This is the account Humphrey Lloyd gives of that affair:—“Ille vero [Augustinus, S.] ob hanc contumeliam, et quod archiepiscopo Cantuariæ a se constituto, et quod cum Romana ecclesia in quibusdam non convenirent, Anglorum odium ita in eos concivit, ut paulo post (ut dixi) ab Ethelfredo, Ethelberti, Cantiaë regis, ob Augustino incitati, opera et auxiliis, monachi pacem patentes, crudeliter occisi; et postea Britanni duce Brochwels Powisiaë Rege, victi sunt, donec tandem Bletrusii Cornaviaë ducis, Cadvanni Northwalliaë, Mereduci Suthwalliaë regum copiis adjuti, et Dunoti abbatis viri doctissimi concione animati, quique jussit (ut nostri annales referunt) ut unusquisque terram oscularetur, in memoriam communionis corporis Dominici, aquamque ex Deva fluvia manu haustam biberet, in memoriam sacratissimi sanguinis Christi pro eis effusi, et ita communicati, memorabili prælio Saxones, occisis (ut Huntingtonensis refert) ex eis MLXVI. Cadvanumque in civitate Legionis regem creavere.”—Britan. Descript. Commentariolum, p. 90 and 91, Moses Williams's Edition. This battle is called in our annals sometimes Gwaith Caerlleon, that is, the battle of Chester. See vol. i, pp. 10, 11.

spears? There two princes engaged, when the carousing of Morach Vorvran happened.

“Fill thou the horn, for it is my delight in the place where the defenders of our country drink mead, and give it to Selyf the fearless, the defence of Gwygyr. Woe to the wretch that offends him, eagle-hearted hero! And to the son of Madog, the famous and generous Tudor. Like a wolf when he seizes his prey is his assault in the onset. Two heroes, who were sage in their counsels, but active in the field, the two sons of Ynyr, who, on the day of battle, were ready for the attack, heedless of danger, famous for their exploits; their assault was like that of strong lions, and they pierced their enemies like brave warriors; they were lords of the battle, and rushed foremost with their crimson lances; the weight of their attack was not to be withstood; their shields were broke asunder with much force, as the high-sounding wind on the beach of the green sea, and the encroaching of the furious waves on the coast of Talgarth.

“Fill, cup-bearer, as thou regardest thy life; fill the horn, badge of honour at feasts, the Hirlas drinking-horn,¹ which is a token of distinction, whose tip is adorned with silver, and its cover of the same metal, and bring it to Tudor, the eagle of battles, filled with the best wine; and if thou dost not bring us the best of all, thy head shall fly off. Give it in the hand of Moreiddig, encourager of songs, whose praise in battle is celebrated; they were brethren of a distant clime, of an undaunted heart, and their valour was observable in their countenance. Can I forget their services?.....Impetuous warriors, wolves of the battle, their lances are besmeared with gore; they were the heroes of the chief of Mochnant,² in the region Powys. Their honour was soon purchased by them both; they seized every occasion to defend their country in the time of need with their bloody arms, and they kept their borders from hostile invasion. Their lot is praise. It is like a mournful elegy to me to lose them both! O Christ! how pensive am I for the loss of Moreiddig, which is irreparable!

“Pour thou out the horn, though they desire it not, the drinking-horn, Hirlas, with cheerfulness, and deliver it into the hand of Morgant, one who deserves to be celebrated with distinguished praise. It was like poison to me to be deprived of him, and that he was pierced.....by the keen sword.

“Pour, cup-bearer, from a silver vessel an honourable gift, badge of distinction. On the large plains of Gwestun I have seen a miracle; to stop the impetuosity of Goronwy was more than a task for an hundred men. The warriors pointed their lances, courted the battle, and were profuse of life; they met their enemies in the conflict, and their chieftain was consumed by fire near the surges of the sea. They rescued a noble prisoner, Meurig, the son of Griffith, of renowned valour; they were all of them covered with blood when they returned, and the high hills and the dales enjoyed the sun equally.

“Pour the horn to the warriors, Owain’s noble heroes, who were equally active and brave. They assembled in that renowned place, where the shining steel glittered. Madoc and Meilir were men accustomed to violence, and maintained each other in the injuries they did to their enemies; they were the shields of our army, and the teachers of warlike attack. Hear ye, by drinking mead, how the Lord of Cattræth went with his warriors in defence of his just cause, the guards of Mynyddawg¹ about their distinguished chief. They have been celebrated for their bravery, and their speedy march. But nobody has ever performed so noble an exploit as my warriors, in the tough land of Maelor, in rescuing the captive.

“Pour out, cup-bearer, sweet and well-strained mead (the thrust of the spear is red in the time of need) from the horn of wild oxen, covered with gold, for the honour and the reward of the souls of those departed heroes. Of the numerous cares that surround princes, no one is conscious here but God and myself. The man who neither gives nor takes quarter, and cannot be forced by his enemies to abide to his word, Daniel, the valiant and beautiful. O, cup-bearer: great is the task to entreat him; his men will not cease dealing death around them till he is mollified. Cup-bearer, our shares of mead are to be given us equally before the bright shining tapers. Cup-bearer, hadst thou seen the action in the land of Llidwin, the men whom I honour have but what is their just reward. Cup-bearer, hadst thou seen the armed chiefs encompassing Owain, who were his shield against the violence of his foes, when Cawres was invaded with great fury. Cup-bearer, slight not my commands. May we all be admitted into Paradise by the King of kings; and long may the liberty and happiness of my heroes continue, where the truth is to be discerned distinctly!

DAVID POWEL, D.D., a learned divine and eminent antiquary, and said by his contemporaries to be "in omni literarum genere maxime versatus", was the son of

Howel ab David ab Gruffudd ab Ithel. He was born in Denbighshire about the year 1552, and when about sixteen years of age, he was sent to complete his education in Oxford. It does not appear into what college he was first admitted, but in 1571 he removed into Jesus College, which had been newly founded, and took his degree of B.A. in 1572, and that of M.A. in 1576. Having entered into holy orders, he was made vicar of Rhiwabon, in his native country, in 1570, and prebendary of St. Asaph, and in the following year he obtained the rectory of Llanvyllin, which latter he resigned on being preferred to the vicarage of Meivod in 1579. The sinecure rectory of Llansantffraid in Mechain was added to his preferments in 1588. He was now grown eminent for his learning, and took the degree of B.D. in 1582, and that of D.D. in 1583. In 1584, he became chaplain to Sir Henry Sidney, Lord President of the Marches of Wales, who had in his possession the unfinished translation of Caradawg's History of Wales, by the eminent antiquary, Humphrey Llwyd. At his lordship's solicitation, Dr. Powel completed the translation, and enriched the work with many valuable additions. This was printed in 1584, in 4to. His next work was Annotationes in Itinerarium Cambriæ, scriptum per Sib. Giraldum Cambrensem. The same volume also contains "Annotationes in Cambriæ descriptionem per S. Giraldum", and "De Britannica Historia recte intelligenda Epistola". It was first printed in London in 1585, 8vo., with a dedication to Sir Philip Sidney, and it was reprinted by Camden in the Anglica, Normannica, Hibernica, Cambrica, etc., folio, Frankfort, 1603. Another edition was published by the eminent antiquary, Sir Richard Hoare, Bart., in 1806. Dr. Powel also published, in the year 1585, Historia Britannica, or the British History, written by Ponticus Virunius, in six books, London, 8vo. This is an epitome of Geoffrey of Monmouth, and is reprinted among Rerum Britannicarum Scriptores Vetustiores, etc., Lugduni, 1587, folio. Dr. Powel also rendered essential service to Dr. Morgan in the translation of the Holy Scriptures into Welsh, which was completed and published in 1588. He left behind him some manuscripts fit for the press, which were never published, and he was engaged in compiling a Welsh Dictionary, when his labours were terminated by his decease, which occurred in 1598. He was buried in his church at Rhiwabon. He had six sons, whose names were Daniel, Samuel, Gabriel, Raphael, Michael, and John, and six daughters. His son Samuel succeeded him in the vicarage of Rhiwabon, and Gabriel was an eminent scholar. (Williams's Eminent Welshmen.)

GABRIEL POWEL, an eminent scholar, was the third son of Dr. David Powel, and was born at Rhiwabon, in Denbighshire, in 1575. He entered Jesus College, Oxford, in 1592, and took his degree of B.A., and then left the University for a time. He afterwards returned to Oxford, and became a member of St. Mary's Hall, and during his residence he published several works, which made him eminent, and recommended him to his countryman, Dr. Richard Vaughan, Bishop of London. The latter took him into his family, and made him his domestic chaplain, and would have done much for him had he lived, but the bishop and his chaplain both died in the same year, a short time only intervening, in 1607. Gabriel Powel was esteemed a prodigy of learning in his time, being only a little above thirty years of age at his death, and the highest expectations were entertained of him. RHUDDALLT ISAF.

Cae Cyriog MS.; Add. MS., 9864.

LLYWELYN EURDORCHOG, Lord of Iâl and Ystrad Alun, and Prime Minister of Gruffudd ab Llywelyn ab Seisyllt, King of Wales, was the son of Coel, ab Gwered ab Cynddelw Gam ab Elgud, ab Gwrissnadd ab Dwywg Lythyr Aur, ab Tegawg ab Dyfnarth ab Madog Madogion ab Sanddef Bryd Angel. Sanddef is recorded in the Triads, with Glewlwyd Gavaelvawr and Morvran Ail Tegid, as the only three who escaped from the fatal battle of Camlan, and the circumstance was owing to the peculiarity of their persons. Sanddef was so beautiful that a passage was opened for him, without a hostile hand being raised up, as everyone thought that he was an angel. (Myv. Arch., ii, 18, 70.)

Sanddef Bryd Angel was the son of Llywarch Hên, Prince of the Strath Clyde Britons, who, when driven from his dominions by the Picts and Scots, was with his family hospitably welcomed and received by Cynddylan, King of Powys, who was slain at the battle of Tren in 613. Afterwards, having lost all his sons and friends in battles against the Saxons, he retired to a hut at Aber-Cuawg, now called Dôl Guawg, near Machynllaith, to soothe with his harp the remembrance of misfortune, and vent in elegiac numbers the sorrows of old age in distress. He resided also at one time at a place near Llanfor in Penllyn, where there is a circle of large stones, which is called Pabell Llywarch Hên, that is Llywarch Hên's Pavilion. Here he died at the great age of nearly one hundred and fifty years, about the year 634, and was buried at Llanfor, near Bala; and there is his grave, as is proved by a stone in the wall of the church.

Llywelyn Eurdorhog bore azure, a lion passant guardant, his tail between his legs, and reflected over his back or, armed and langued gules; others state that he bore argent, a cross gules, and two leopards or; others, again, say that he bore azure, a lion ramp. guardant or. He married Eva, the daughter of Cynfyn ab Gwyrstan, King of Powys, and sister of Bleddyn ab Cynfyn, by whom he had six sons. He had also two illegitimate sons, Ithel Goch, and Iorwerth Fychan.

His six legitimate sons were: 1, Ithel Felyn, Lord of Iâl and Ystrad Alun, of whom presently; 2, Iorwerth; 3, Idris, who was the ancestor of the Owens of Ysgrwgan in Mochnant Is Rhaiadr and Owens of Tref Geiriog, the Hammers of Pentref Pant in the Lordship of Oswestry, the Lloyds of Llangollen Fechan, the Lloyds of Cawnwy in Llangadfan, and the Evanses of Rhyd y Carw; 4, Dolffyn; 5, Ednowain Eurdorhog, the father of David Esgidaur, the father of Idnerth, the father of Peradwen or Bradwen (Lord of Dolgelli), the father of Ednowain ab Bradwen (Lord of Dolgelli), chief of one of the noble tribes of Gwynedd, who bore gules, three snakes ennowed in triangle argent, and was ancestor of the Lloyds of Nant y Myneich in the parish of Mallwyd in Mawddwy, and William ab David Lloyd of Peniarth in the parish of Llanegryn, who is now represented by the Wynnes of Peniarth; and 6, Llywelyn Fychan, the ancestor of Trahaiarn, Lord of Garthmael, who bore argent, three lions passant guardant in pale gules. This coat of arms, and the manor of Garthmael, were granted to Trahaiarn for his services in battle, by the Prince of Powys: Trahairn was the son of Iorwerth ab Einion ab Rhys Goch ab Llywelyn Fychan ab Llywelyn Eurdorhog, and was ancestor of the Walcots of Walcot, co. Salop; Madog y Twppa of Plâs y Twpa in Bettws y Cedwg; the Lloyds of Berth Llwyd in the parish of Llanidloes in Arwystli; the Joneses of Garthmael in the parish of Aber Rhiw in Cydewain; John Maurice¹ of Ucheldref in Bettws y Cedwg; Edward Humphreys² of Ty'n y Calch; and Gruffudd³ ab Richard of Llanidloes.

ITHEL FELYN, the eldest son of Llywelyn Eurdorchog, succeeded his father as Lord of Iâl and Ystrad Alun. He bore sable, on a chevron inter three goat's heads erased or, three trefoils of the field. He was Lord of the Manors of Llys y Cil, Allt y Gymbyd, Bodanwydog, and Coedrwg in Iâl; the manors of Llwyn Egryn, Gwernaffyllt, and Cil Rhydin in the manor of Hendref Biffa in Ystrad Alun; Caer Fallwch, Hendref Figillt, Pentref Hyfaidd, and Castell Meirchion, in Tegeingl; Nant-Clwyd and Garth y Neuadd in Dyffryn Clwyd; Traian in the Lordship of Trefwen or Whittington; Arnan Mab in the Lordships of Oswestry and Cynllaith; a great portion of Glyndyfrdwy, Y Gaerddin (not the camp itself), and other lands in Maelawr. He married Lleucu, daughter and heiress of Howel ab Brochwel ab Bledrws, who bore sable, three roses argent, by whom he had issue three sons: 1, Hwfa; 2, Llywelyn; and 3, Ystwg; and two daughters, Susanna and Margaret.

HWFA AB ITHEL, Lord of Iâl and Ystrad Alun. He married Elen or Alswn, daughter of Gruffudd ab Cynan, King of Gwynedd, who bore gules, three lions passant in pale argent, armed and langued azure, by whom he had issue six sons:

1. Caswallawn, Lord of Iâl, who, according to the Harl. MS. 2299, was the eldest son. He married Anest, daughter of Cawryd ab Cadvan, Lord of Ceinmeirch, who bore argent, three boar's heads coupéd sable, tusked or, and langued gules; by whom he had a son, Iorwerth ab Caswallawn, Lord of Iâl, who was one of the wit-

Iorwerth married Gwenhwyfar, daughter of Cuhelyn ab Rhun ab Einion Efell, Lord of Cynllaith, who bore party per fess sable and argent, a lion rampant counterchanged; by whom he had a son and heir, Cynwrig ab Iorwerth, who married Janet, daughter of Henri de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, or, a lion rampant purple, who died in 1312, and Johanna, his wife, daughter of William Martyn, Baron of Cemaes in Dyfed. This Janet married, secondly, Gruffudd Fychan ab Gruffudd ab Einion ab Ednyfed, Lord of Broughton, second son of Cynwrig ab Rhiwallawn. Cynwrig had issue by his wife Janet a son named Goronwy, who married Angharad, daughter of Howel ab David ab Gruffudd ab Gruffudd Fychan ab Caradog of Maelor, by whom he had issue two sons, Madog and Goronwy Gethin; and a daughter Annesta, who married, first, Ieuf ab Hwfa ab Madog yr Athro, ancestor of the Lloyds of Plâs Madog in Rhiwabon; and, secondly, she married Gruffudd ab Iorwerth ab Howel of Rhiwabon, ab Iorwerth ab Madog ab Llywelyn ab Madog ab Elidir ab Rhys Sais, Lord of Trefwy or Eyton Isaf. Madog, the eldest son of Goronwy ab Cynwrig, married Alice, daughter of Roger Brereton of Cheshire; by whom he was ancestor of Tudor ab Ieuan ab Tudor ab Llywelyn ab Iolyn ab Ieuf, son of the above-named Madog ab Goronwy ab Cynwrig; David Iâl, Warden of Ruthin, son of Tudor ab Llywelyn ab Iolyn; John Wynn of Y Fynechtyd, in the parish of Llantysilio, who was living in 1598, the son of Robert ab Tudor ab Llywelyn ab Iolyn. Hugh, the son of John Wynn of Y Fynechtyd, married an heiress of lands in Rhiwabon, which her father purchased there, by whom he was father of John Wynn, who was a captain in the army of the commonwealth, and living in 1697. The Wynns of Llanveris¹ in Llys y Cil descend likewise from Madog ab Goronwy ab Cynwrig.

Goronwy Gethin, the other son of Goronwy ab Cynwrig was ancestor of Richard Davies, D.D., Bishop of St. David, from 1561 to 1567.

2. Y Gwion ab Hwfa ab Ithel Felyn, of whom presently ; 3, Iorwerth ab Hwfa ; 4, Ionas ab Hwfa ; 5, Goronwy ab Hwfa ; and 6, Howel Foel of Cymo, who was the ancestor of David Lloyd ab Rhys ab David ab Iolyn of Blaen Iâl ; Roger ab David ab John ab Rhys of Cymo ; Gruffudd ab Rhys ab David ab Gruffudd of Bryn Eglwys ; and Gruffudd ab Ieuan of Castell Meirchion in Tegeingl, ab Y Dai ab Madog ab Einion of Maes y Groes, son of the above-named Howel Foel of Cymo. This Gruffudd ab Ieuan sold Castell Meirchion to his sister Margaret's husband, Tudor Mûl Hên of Rhuddin. The Lloyds¹ of Llanarmon in Iâl descend likewise from Howel Foel of Cymo.

Y GWION, Lord of Iâl and Ystrad Alun, was, according to the Cae Cyriog MS. the eldest son of Hwfa ab Ithel Felyn ; but, according to the Harl. MS. 2299, he was the second son. He was slain in battle by Robert de Mont' Alto, who thereupon took the fortress of Y Wyddgrûg, and the Lordship of Ystrad Alun (see vol. i, p. 112). He married the daughter and heiress of Maredudd, a younger son of Cadwgan ab Bleddyn, Lord of Nannau, or, a lion ramp. azure, by whom he had a son and heir,

CADWGAN GOCH, Lord of Iâl, who was witness to a deed, dated December 5, 1247. This document relates to a dispute between the sons of Ieuf ab Maredudd of "Alhkenbeber" (Allt y Gymer, or Allt y Gymbyd), on the one part, and the Lord Madog, the Abbot, and the

He married Dyddgu, daughter of Ithel ab Howel ab Moreiddig ab Sanddef Hardd, Lord of Morton and Llai, in the manor of Burton, by whom he had issue two sons: 1, Cadwgan Ddû, of whom presently; and 2, Cadwgan Frych, who was surnamed Y Brych of Y Gaerddin. Other writers, however, state that Cadwgan Frych was the son of Cadwgan Ddû, the son of Cadwgan Goch. The Harl. MS. 2299, states that Cadwgan Goch of Iâl married Nesta, daughter and co-heiress of Howel, Lord of Rhôs and Rhiwoniawg, who bore argent, a rose gules, seeded or, son of Ithel ab Madog ab Rhirid ab Bleddyn ab Cynfyn, Prince of Powys.

CADWGAN DDU, Lord of Iâl, married² Mali, one of the daughters of Sir Gruffudd Llwyd of Tref Garnedd in Cwmmwd Menai, Knight, who bore gules, a chevron or, and chief ermine. He was the son of Sir Rhys, Knight, son of Gruffudd of Henglawdd, son of Ednyfed Fychan, Baron of Bryn Ffanigl, and Prime Minister and Senechal of Prince Llywelyn the Great. Sir Gruffudd is said to have been the first to convey to Edward I the tidings of his Queen's accouchement in the Castle of Caernarvon, for which he received the honour of knight-hood. Subsequently, however, in 1322, he revolted against the English government, and, after some struggles, was taken prisoner, and confined for a time in Rhuddlan Castle. By his wife Mali, Cadwgan Ddu had issue four sons: 1, Iorwerth, of whom presently; 2, Madog, of whom presently; 3, Einion,³ ancestor of Rheignallt ab Gruffudd of the Tower, in the township of Broncoed, in the parish of Mold, ab Bleddyn of Coed y Llai, ab Einion Fychan ab Einion ab Cadwgan Ddû; and 4, David Goch, who was the ancestor of Ieuan ab Gruffudd ab David ab Cadwgan ab David ab David Goch ab Cadwgan Ddû. This Ieuan ab Gruffudd had four sons, William, Rhys, John, and Elis.

IV. Sarah Edwards, who married Thomas Hughes of Pennant y Belan (see p. 182).

BROMFIELD OF BROMFIELD.

Add. MS. 9864.

For the marriage of Gruffudd of Bromfield and his descendants, the reader is referred to the pedigree of Bromfield of Bryn y Wiwer, p. 328.

THE PARISH OF RHIWABON.

This parish contains the twelve townships of Coed Cristionydd, Cristionydd Cynwrig, Dinhinlle Uchaf, Dinhinlle Isaf, Morton Uwch y Clawdd or Morton Wallicorum, Morton Is y Clawdd, Morton Anglicorum, Bodylltyn, Rhuddalt, Belan, Hafod, and Tref Robert Llwyd.

The district of Cristionydd, which lies in the manor of Esclys or Esclusham, contains about a third of the whole parish, and is divided into Y Dref Fawr or Cristionydd Cynwrig; Y Dref Fechan or Cristionydd Fechan, which is now called Dinhinlle Uchaf; and Coed Cristionydd.

About the beginning of the reign of James I (who reigned from 1603 to 1625), the lands in the parish of Rhiwabon were held as either freehold or copyhold; but, in the reign of Charles I¹ (who reigned from 1625 to 1648), were made fee-farm. At that time most of the inhabitants lived upon their own estates, which may thus be certified and known. In a hundred years afterwards many of these ancient estates were bought by strangers.

Mr. Richard Myddleton's family bought in Rhiwabon parish from several freeholders, during the Civil War, lands to the amount of £400	400
Mr. Joshua Edisbury's family bought, from several freeholders in the said parish, to the amount of £250	250
Mr. Ellis Lloyd, an attorney in Ludlow, bought lands in the parish to the amount of £400, and as much and more in other places	400
Sir John Wynn of Wynnstey bought about	100

possessors are become tenants, and the parish is become poor; and for every twenty freeholders who had a vote for Parliament in 1660, the parish at this time, July 10, 1712, cannot find above two."¹

From an old rate-book we find that the following persons were the owners of lands in the seignorial manor of Rhiwabon in 1688.

Township of Rhiwabon.—Sir John Wynn, Knight; Thomas Hughes (of Pennant y Belan); Robert Panton; Wm. Broughton; Mrs. Jane Lloyd.

Hafod.—Joshua Edisbury, Esq.; John Griffith (Cae Cyriog); Sir Richard Myddleton, Bart., for Maes y Llan (in 1620, Maes y Llan belonged to Sir Edward Broughton of Marchwial, Knight); Dr. Lloyd; John David of Llwyn Howel; Charles Myddleton, Esq.; William Edwards, Esq.; Mr. John Robinson, Vicar.

Belan.—Sir John Wynn, Knt. and Bart., for Watstay and Belan; Thomas Hughes, Gent. (of Pennant y Belan).

Rhuddallt.—John Powel, Gent.

Bodylltyn.—Edward Lloyd, Esq., and his son, Samuel Lloyd, Gent. (Plas Madog); Edward Williams, Gent.; William Wynn, Gent.; Eubule Lloyd, Gent.; Sir Richard Myddleton, Bart., for Gaerddin; William Lloyd, Gent.

RHIWABON CHURCH.

This church, which is situate in the township of Rhiwabon, is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and the wakes are kept on the 15th August. This church, together with the other churches of Maelor Gymraeg, were formerly chapels of ease to the Mother Church of Llangollen.

In the manor of Dinhinlle, in the parish of Rhiwabon, is another chapel, called Capel Collen, and perhaps it is to this place that Edward Llwyd alludes, when he states

¹ The parish of Rhiwabon is in extreme length from east to west seven and a half miles, and in extreme breadth from north to south four miles and three quarters. The surface area of the whole parish is about 16,000 acres, of which about 3,000 acres are open mountain land. The total population in 1871 was 15,148.

“Kappel Kolhen a galwant gae lle mae kroes ymhlwy Rhiwabon: Ei gwyl mabsant a gadwant dhydh gwyl Golhen dair wythnos o hav.” The festival of St. Collen is on the 21st of May.

The poet Churchyard, who wrote in 1580, on leaving Newbridge after visiting Rhiwabon Church, describes it as follows, making particular allusion to the tomb of John ab Elis Eyton, already described :—

Not farre from this, there stands on little mound
 A right fayre church, with pillars far and wide.
 A monument therein of good account,
 Full finely wrought, amid the queere I spyde ;
 A tombe there is right rich and stately made,
 Where two doth lye in stone and auncient trade—
 The man and wife, with sumptuous sollemne guyse,
 In this rich sort before the aulter lies.

His head on crest and warlike helmet stayes,
 A lyon blew on top thereof comes out ;
 On lyon's necke along his legges he layes,
 Two gauntlets white are lying there about.
 An auncient squire he was, and of good race,
 As by his arms appeares in many a place ;
 His house and lands not farre from thence doth shoe,
 His birth and blood was great long agoe.

The trimmest glasse, that may in windows bee,
 (Wherein the roote of Jesse well is wrought)
 At aulter head of church now shall you see,
 Yea, all the glasse of church was deerely bought.

About the year 1818, when making room for the building of the wall separating the churchyard from the highway leading from the station, a stone statue was found buried in the soil, and with it a low pedestal, upon which it appears to have been fixed, and carved to resemble the four paws of a lion. The body appears clad in a suit of mail, and had a short sword carved transversely across the breast. The head was at that time cut off, and it was ordered by the Vicar, Mr. Wingfield, to be taken to the Vicarage; whilst the other portions were taken possession of by Mr. John Davies, father of the late

Mr. E. Davies of the Bricklayers' Arms (and they are now in the possession of Mr. Moses, Mill House, Cefn.) At that time there were four letters, A. B. O. N., carved upon the breast, but these are now obliterated.

There are also two ancient coffin-lids, on which are the recumbent effigies of warriors in armour, and heater shields, each charged with a lion rampant, lying under the tombs of the Plâs Madog family, in the churchyard. For a further account of the church and parish of Rhiwabon, the reader is referred to The History of the Diocese of St. Asaph, by the Rev. D. R. Thomas, M.A.

The wakes or festival of this parish church are held on the 15th of August, in honour of the bodily Assumption of the Virgin Mary into heaven. The birthday of the Virgin Mary is said to have been on the 8th day of September, and that of Jesus Christ her son on the 25th day of December. These dates correspond in so singular a manner with those of certain well-known facts in nature, that I transcribe the following for the consideration of my readers.

The Egyptians celebrated, at the winter solstice, the birth of the son of Isis (Plut. de Iside), and the delivery of the Goddess who had brought this young child into the world, feeble and weak, and in the midst of the darkest night. This child, according to Macrobius, was the god of light, Apollôn, or the Sun, painted with his head shorn of its beaming hair, his head shaved, and with only a single hair left. By this, says Macrobius, the dimness of the light at the winter solstice, and the shortness of the days, as well as the darkness of the deep cave in which this god seemed to be born, and from which he issued forth to rise in the direction of the northern hemisphere and the summer solstice, in which he reassumed his dominion and his glory, were indicated (Macrob. Sat. i, 1 Cap. xxi.)

It was of this child of whom the Virgin Isis called herself the mother in the inscription over her temple at Sais (Plut. de Iside), which contained the words: "The fruit which I have begotten is the Sun" (Procl. in Tim.,

p. 30). This Isis of Sais has been correctly assumed by Plutarch to be the chaste Virgin Minerva, who, without fearing to lose her name of virgin, nevertheless says of herself that she is the Mother of the Sun. This Isis cannot be the moon, for she would never be called the Mother of the Star, whose light she borrows. She is the virgin of the constellations, who is called by Eratosthenes, a learned Alexandrian (Eratosth., cap. vii), Dêmêtêr, Ceres, or Isis—that Isis who opened the year, and presided over the birth of the new solar revolution and of the god of day—in a word, of her in whose arms we shall soon see the symbolic child.

Proclus, who, as well as Plutarch, has given the inscription over the temple of the Virgin of Sais, the Mother of the Sun, whom they say is identical with Minerva, speaking of the seat of this goddess in the heavens, gives her two places; the one near Aries, or the equinoctial Lamb, whose form the God of light assumes in spring; and the other in the celestial Virgin, or in the sign which presides at her birth (Procl. in Tim., p. 43). So that it appears that Isis, the mother of the Sun, to whom the temple of Sais was dedicated, was the same that Eratosthenes places in the constellation Virgo, which opened the year. The symbolic representation of the year itself was a woman called Isis, according to Horapollo (vol. i, cap. iii). It was in honour of this same virgin, the image of the pure and luminous substance, that the celebrated feast of lights (on which Candlemas is founded) was celebrated.

The Romans also had their solar festival, and their games of the circus, in honour of the birth of the God of Day. It took place the eighth day before the Kalends of January—that is, on December 25, the Yule day of the Scandinavians. Servius, in his Commentary on verse 720 of the seventh book of the Æneid, in which Virgil speaks of the new sun, says that, properly speaking, the sun is new on the 8th of the Kalends of January—that is, December 25. It was on this day that the birth of the invincible sun (Natalis Solis Invicti) was celebrated at Rome, as can be seen in the Roman Calendars, published in the reign of Constantine and of Julian (Hymn to the Sun, p. 155). This epithet, "Invictus", is the same as the Persians gave to this same god, whom they worshipped by the name of Mithra, and whom they caused to be born in a grotto (Justin. Dial. cum Tryph., p. 305).

All learned men are agreed that the festival of the birth of this God was celebrated at the winter solstice. M. Feret (Mem. de l'Académie des Belles-Lettres, t. xvi, p. 270) is of this opinion, and says it was the greatest festival of the religion of the Magi. Hyde also fixes it at the winter solstice. The Roman Calendar, which was published in the reign of Constantine, evidently fixes it at December 25, which was the date adopted from the time of Julius Cæsar, because it was extremely difficult, as Beausobre observes (t. ii, p. 697), to fix the exact moment of the solstice, and because exact calculations were not considered necessary in public festivities. It was in the reign of Constantine, also, that this worship began to spread in the West, for there is no doubt that the words N.I., or Natalis Invicti, signify the festival of the birth of the God of Light, and the epithet "Invictus" is given to Mithra by the monuments of that period. Hence the inscriptions on the statues and images of that God, "Deo soli invicto Mithræ", "Nomen invictum sol Mithra", "Deo soli invicto Mithræ et lumen æternæ", or "Soli omnipotenti Mithræ".

If we look at the sphere at the precise moment of this nativity, we see the Virgin-Mother Isis, with the image of a young new-born child, which she is suckling. In fact, if we adjust a globe so as to place Capricornus, into which sign the sun entered at the winter solstice, under the lower meridian, the first sign which then rises on the eastern horizon, and which fixes the hour of the birth of the day, or of the sun-god, whose birth is commemorated at this time, is Virgo. She is called Ceres, and Ceres herself is called "the Holy Virgin" (Hesych. v), and gave birth to the youthful Bacchus, or Dionysos of the Mysteries. This is the virgin who, the learned librarian of Alexandria, Eratosthenes, says, was called Isis (Eratosth., cap. ix), the mother of the youthful Horus, or the sun; the virgin whose delivery was celebrated at the same solstice (Plut. de Iside); the same who mourned the death of her son, and rejoiced some days afterwards, at having found him again. In the same manner, Démêtêr mourns for the loss of Persephone in the winter, and rejoices when she finds her again in the spring.

This virgin, then, the only one who can merit the title of Queen of Heaven, or of Minerva Belisame, carries a young child in her arms in the ancient spheres, and in the sphere of the Magi, or the Persian sphere. Scaliger, in his notes on Manilius, has given us a description of the three spheres called the Persian, the Indian, and the sphere of the Barbarians. In the first decan, a decan which peculiarly belongs to the sun, we read: "Sphera Persica, Primus decanus; Virgo pulchra, capillitio prolixo, duas spicas manu gestans, sedens in siquilastro, educans puerum, lactans et cibans eum."

"Here rises a perfectly beautiful virgin with long hair, holding two ears of corn in her hand, sitting on a throne, bringing up a young child, whom she suckles and feeds." A man is also seen at her side. This man is Bootes, the guardian of Horus, that is, of her son.

At the end of eight months, when the sun-god, having increased, traverses the eighth sign, he absorbs the celestial virgin in his fiery course, and she disappears in the midst of the luminous rays and the glory of her son. This phenomenon takes place every year, about the middle of August. The Roman Calendar of Columella (Col. lii, cap. ii, p. 429) marks the death or disappearance of Virgo at this period. The sun, he says, passes into Virgo on the thirteenth day before the Kalends of September, that is, on the 15th of August; and on this day the ancient Greeks and Romans fix the Assumption of Astræa, who is the same as Isis. At the end of three weeks or thereabouts, the Calendar notes the birth of the virgin Isis, or her release from the solar rays. On the third day before the Ides, that is, the 8th of September, it says the middle of Virgo rises, so that the same constellation, which is born on the 8th of September, presides at midnight on the 25th of December over the birth of the sun, or seems to give birth to him, and is reunited to him and eclipsed in his glory on the 15th of August.

In an Arabic manuscript at the Paris Library (No. 1165) we read: "In the first decan of the sign of the Virgin, according to the oldest traditions of the Persians, the Chaldeans, the Egyptians, and of Hermes and Esculapios, is seen a young girl, who is called in the Persian language 'Seclenidos de Darzama', which in Arabic is 'Adrah Nedheefah; that is to say, a chaste, pure, immaculate virgin, beautiful in form, with a pleasing countenance, a modest look, with long hair, holding in her hands two ears of corn, seated on a throne, feeding and suckling a young child."¹

Here, then, we see that the Virgin Isis was declared by the ancient Ægyptians, Chaldeans, and Persians, to be immaculate. She is represented, also, as sitting on a throne as a queen.

In his Encyclical Letter, dated December 8, 1864, His Holiness Pope Pius IX commends to the venerable brothers to whom the Encyclical is addressed, "incessant prayer; and, in order that God may accede the more easily to our and your prayers, let us employ in all confidence, as our Mediatrix with Him, the Virgin Mary, Mother of God, who sits as a Queen upon the right hand of her only-begotten Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, in a golden vestment, clothed around with various adornments."¹ On November 1, 1870, His Holiness issued another Encyclical, denouncing the acts of the Piedmontese Court, and prays for "the intercession of the Immaculate Virgin Mary, Mother of God."²

THE WORSHIP OF THE SUN-GOD OR MITHRA.

In the monument of Mithra, discovered at Oxford in 1747 (W. Stukeley, Palæograph. Brit.), is seen among the figures on the lower part of it a woman who is about to suckle her child, or the goddess of the year who is suckling the god of day.

On a particular day in the year, he says, the Romans celebrated the great festival of Mithra, to which especial honours were paid in a cave which was consecrated to him. The Persians called the festival the Night of Light, or the Birthday of Mithra, and they sacrificed to the Supreme on the summits of the loftiest mountains. The ancient Druids celebrated this same festival by a general illumination, lighting fires on the summits of the lofty mountains. This Mithraic worship, he says, had spread over the whole of the Roman Empire, and especially in Gaul and Britain. He also adduces the testimony of St. Jerome, who tells us that the pagans celebrated the festivals of Adonis, or the Sun-god (Mithra in Persia, Adonis in Phœnicia,) in a cave like that of Mithra, and that the cave where the ancient inhabitants of Palestine celebrated them was in a cave at Bethlehem. (See vol. i, p. 46.)

MEINI HIRION, OR COLUMNS.

Pliny tells us that the earliest monuments, such as upright stones and obelisks, were so many monuments dedicated to the Sun-god, and the God himself appears as Dionysos Stylos, the Pillar or Upright Stone (see vol. i, p. 54). In the Book of Genesis, chapter xxviii, v. 18, we read that Jacob, being very much afraid, set up a stone pillar, and poured oil on the top of it, and called the name of that place Beth El, that is, the House of God. (See p. 128.)

STONEHENGE.¹

TO THE EDITOR OF THE STANDARD.

SIR,—My father having been the incumbent of Amesbury for fifty-nine years, I have had the pleasure of knowing Sir Edmund Antrobus from my boyhood, and thinking that possibly he might not have seen your article on Friday last, I sent him a copy of that day's impression.

I have a letter from him this morning, in which he says, "I wonder what would have been the view as to my fulfilment of the duties of property if, after having obtained an opinion from an architect of high standing, which was to the effect that the existing state of the Eastern Trilithon was dangerous to health, I had left all alone. It is propped to prevent danger to human life. The stones can be easily restored to the perpendicular, and Stonehenge remain as it is; at any rate, but little less a ruin, if considerably less dangerous. There is no doubt the Eastern Trilithon was moving—the cross stone was springing, and it might have fallen at any moment. If I could have bound it to fall by night, with an engagement that no visitor should be present, so entire is my detestation of restoration of such a monument, I think I should have been tempted to agree to it, and have left all alone; but in what Court can I enforce adherence to the engagement?"

The above will be satisfactory to all your readers who venerate this monument of world-wide celebrity. No person at Amesbury or in the neighbourhood would desire that anything more should be done beyond what is necessary for the preservation of human life, and Sir Edmund Antrobus is the very last man to be guilty of vandalism.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

T. LLOYD FOWLE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE STANDARD.

SIR,—Referring to your article in The Standard of to-day upon "Stonehenge", a confirmation of the view there taken as to its extreme antiquity is the fact that a large circular British barrow cuts at its base completely through the "avenue", or raised approach to Stonehenge. Sir Richard C. Hoare examined this barrow, and from its contents pronounced it "to be of high antiquity, long prior to the Roman occupation". The "avenue" thus desecrated must have fallen into disuse, or become obsolete and without reverence when this barrow was made; and if the avenue, why not the temple to which it led? If it belongs to the most ancient of all religions of human creation, "Sun or fire worship", the circular character of these so-called Druidical remains, which, as you say, range from India to Peru, can be better understood than by any reference to what we know of the Druids.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

¹ See vol. i, pp. 36, 37, 54, 55.

JOHN W. FORD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE STANDARD.

SIR,—The theory mentioned by Mr. Gibson as to the original use of Stonehenge as a Temple of the Sun is one which has been the subject of considerable dispute, and as the probability of this theory appears to depend greatly upon the accuracy of the asserted orientation of the structure, it may be of interest to Mr. Gibson, and possibly to other of your readers, to know that this point was tested by a careful survey of the remains made some years ago by a party of engineers.

I may say that Mr. Gibson's description of the "four stone pillars" is not quite accurate; there are, outside the circle, two isolated stones and two depressions in the ground, which may perhaps mark the site where two other stones have once stood, and these four points are so situated that the line through each pair is directed roughly towards the point of sunrise on the longest day and the point of sunset on the shortest day; but the depressions are of considerable width as compared with the length of the line, and are too indistinctly marked to afford any reliable basis of accurate measurement.

There is, however, a much more conspicuous line, which appears to have formed the axis or centre-line of the structure, and which is marked at one end by the "Friar's Heel" (the largest of all the stones) standing away from the circle and in the line of the long "avenue" which led up to it, and at the other end by the centre of the circle itself and by the altar-stone placed at the end of the elliptical inner choir, facing the avenue and the "Friar's Heel" stone. The bearing of this line was carefully taken, and was found to coincide very closely with the point of apparent sunrise at the time of the summer solstice, but still more closely with the point at which the sun may be calculated to have risen several centuries ago. Assuming the present outline of the rounded top of the stone to represent also its original outline, the coincidence appears to have been most perfect about 1,000 or 1,200 years ago (assuming a certain change in the obliquity of the ecliptic to have taken place in that period).

I may add that the line is defined not only approximately in azimuth, but still more closely in altitude, the "Friar's Heel" stone being of such a height that, although placed on lower ground, the top of the stone coincides exactly (as seen from the altar) with the visible horizon, which is a few degrees above the true horizon.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

T. CLAXTON FIDLER.

MYSTERIES OF DIONYSOS.

The sacred gates of the temple at Athens, in which the initiation into the mysteries of Dionysos or Bacchus and Persephonê took place, were only opened once a year (Demosth., in Næar. Schol. Aris., ad v. 583), and no stranger was ever allowed to enter them. Night lent her veil to these august mysteries, which were not allowed to be revealed to anyone whatever (Paus. Corinth. cap. lxxxvii). This was the only occasion on which the representation of the death, descent into hell, and resurrection of Dionysos or Bacchus, similar to that of the sufferings of Osiris, which Herodotus tells us were commemorated at Sais, in Ægypt, was given. On this occasion, the body of the god was distributed and eaten (Clem. Prot. Eur. Bacch., ver. 139). This emblematic representation consisted of raw flesh, which each of those present partook of, in memory of the death of Bacchus, who had been torn to pieces by the Titans. His sufferings and death were represented every year, at Chios and at Tenedos, by the immolation of a man who represented him (Porph. De Abat., l. ii, § 56). This festival was celebrated at the vernal equinox, like our Easter, at the time when the sun passed into the sign of the zodiac, which was formerly occupied by the Bull, whose shape Bacchus assumed, and subsequently by the Lamb (Plut. De Cup. Div.)¹

The Rev. Mr. Faber says (Pag. Idol., book iv, chap. 8), “Dionysos is cut to pieces by the Mænades, on the top of Mount Parnassus; St. Denis² is put to death in the same manner on the summit of Montmartre. Dionysos is placed on a tomb, and his death is bewailed by women; the mangled limbs of St. Denis are collected by holy females who, weeping, consign him to a tomb, over which is built the Abbey Church that bears his name. Dionysos experiences a wonderful restoration to life, and quits the coffin in which he had been confined; St. Denis rises again from the dead, replaces his severed head, to the amazement of the spectators, and then deliberately walks away. On the southern gate of the Abbey, the whole history of this surprising martyrdom is represented. A sculptured sprig of the vine, sacred to Dionysos, and laden with grapes, is placed at the foot of the holy man; and in all parts may be seen the same tree, blended with tigers, and associated with a hunting match. Dionysos, Agrionios, or Rusticus, is represented as attended by lions, tigers, leopards, and other savage animals, on account of the ferocity of his cult.”

THE ASHERA OR GROVE.

We find in the Bible that Abraham planted a grove in Beersheba, and called there on the name of the Lord, the everlasting God.³ The word usually translated “grove”, in the English version of the Hebrew Scriptures, mostly signifies a tree, or a pillar of wood, when it does not mean the divinity of whom the tree or pillar was the symbol—the Aschera, Astarte, or Ashtaroth of Phœnicia, the Mylitta of Babylonia, the Aphrodite of Greece, the Venus of Rome, the Syria Dea of Lucan, personification of the passive element in the reproductive power of nature, usually associated with the Sun-god, or active generative principle and object of adoration with all the peoples of the ancient world.¹ We have before stated what the emblems of the vital powers of nature were that formed at once the altar and the ashera or grove (vol. i, p. 54). In the xxviii chapter of Genesis, Jacob, it is said, set up a stone for a pillar, and poured oil on the top of it, and called the name of that place Beth El, the House of God. “And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father’s house in peace, then shall the Lord be my God: and this stone which I have set for a pillar, shall be God’s house.” In the xxxi chapter, we are told that the angel of God appeared in a dream to Jacob, and said, “I am the God of Beth El, where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me;.....now, therefore, arise, and return unto the land of thy kindred.”

³ Gen. xxi, 33.

Stones, as enduring things, appear to have been, almost universally, objects of reverence and worship with men in the long-continued infancy of the human mind. As pillars they had a special significance, and were then looked on as typical of the instrument efficient in the wonderful faculty possessed by the life-giving powers of nature. The stone column or token set up by Jacob was neither more nor less than this, an emblem, before which he and his forefathers were wont to prostrate themselves, as the natives of Bengal and other parts of the East do to this day. And the oil he poured on its top was a further offering to the Divine power it represented for fertility and increase. The Jews, through the whole of their history, even to the time when the Temple of Solomon was built, erected pillars of wood and stone to the gods they worshipped—to Baal and Aschēra, in particular, before which they presented their sacrifices, and at the feet of whose altars they poured the blood of their victims, and their drink-offerings. Nor can it be said that the sacred stone, disguised as column, obelisk, or steeple, has yet gone out of date, though its meaning is no longer understood. The Egyptian obelisks, and the spires of our churches, are emblematic of the same thing as the stone which Jacob set up, as the columns erected on the “high places” to Baal and Aschēra, and as those that stood before Solomon’s Temple. In certain districts of India—the country that gave birth to so many of the religious ideas, and to all the philosophy of the world—at the present time, every village has its SACRED STONE, usually set up under the shade of a TREE, upon which people come and seat themselves, after pouring a libation of ghee or oil on its top.¹ (See pp. 128, 362.)

ARWYSTLI.

The Cantref of Arwystli contained the three Comots of Arwystli Isgoed, Arwystli Uwchgoed, and Gwrthry-nion. The two first named Comots contain the parishes of Llangurig, Llanidloes, Trefeglwys, Llandinam, Carno, Llanwnog, and Penstrawad. The Comot of Gwrthry-nion comprises the parishes of Rhaiadr Gwy, St. Harmon, Nant-mel, Llanfihangl-Fach, and Llanfair-yn-Rhôs. In 1175, Einion ab Rhys was Lord of Gwrthry-nion (see p. 301), which now forms a part of the modern county of Radnor, and the remaining portion of Arwystli now forms a part of the county of Montgomery. THE STORY OF MRS. VEAL.³

“One thing has much contributed to sink the credit of the story with many who have known it no otherwise, and that is, its being published in a new edition of Drelincourt's Treatise of the Christian's Defence against the fears of Death, by the accident mentioned of that book's falling into the subject of conversation, and being preferred by Mrs. Veal. The bookseller, to promote the sale of his book, printed it with such an account of the story as he had picked up, which is not only most wretchedly confused and imperfect, but fails in most particulars, and this makes the thing itself, in a great measure, pass for a trading story.

“Mrs. Bargrave, who was not forward to propagate a thing by which she never got anything but trouble, was so offended at the bookseller’s publishing as he did, that she could not forbear rallying him on the subject; but the thing has a better authority than that of the bookseller, by whom, as it never received, so it can never lose credit with such as have a better information.

“Nor does the matter so altogether rest on Mrs. Bargrave’s testimony, but it may speak for itself; for, besides that the story was communicated while Mrs. Veal was supposed to be living, it is impossible that such an invention could be made so consistent with itself, and the circumstances attending it, as not to be detected in time, either through some slip of the contriver, or the appearance of inconsistency in facts; whereas, Mrs. Bargrave never deviated from her account, nor has time, and the general curiosity which stories of such consequence must raise, ever produced anything to discredit it; only Mr. Veal would have it, that the gold said to be in his sister’s cabinet, was in another place; but as ill-humour had so much the better of him in another instance, it may be liable to suspicion in this case.”

CLOCHFAEN PEDIGREE.

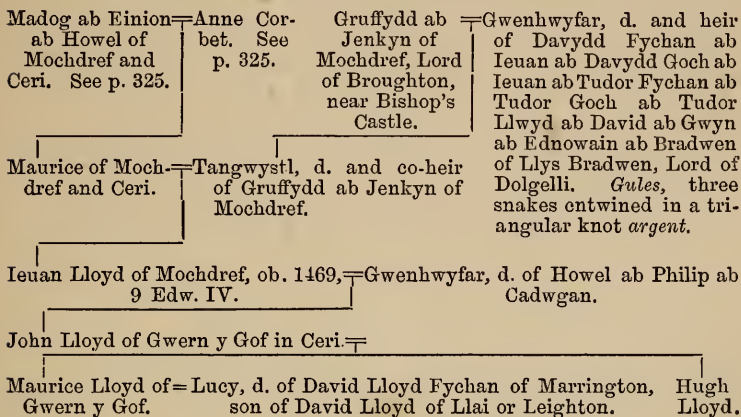

(See p. 255.)

The grandmother of the late Rev. Thomas Youde was Mary, sister of Eubule Thelwall, of Jesus College, Oxford, who died unmarried, and daughter and heiress of Edward Thelwall of Ruthin, younger son of Edward Thelwall of Plâs y Ward, and Margaret his wife, daughter and heiress of Andrew Maredith of Glantanad, by Dorothy his wife, daughter of John Owen Vaughan of Llwydiarth. MANOR OF RHIWABON.

At page 172, Richard Leighton of Gwern y Gof in Ceri, Esq., appears among the list of landowners in this manor, and at page 16, he appears as a lessee of lands in the manor of Abyntbury, in 1620. Gwern y Gof was formerly a Grange belonging, till the dissolution of the Monasteries in 1542, to the Abbey of Cwm Hir. Previous to the dissolution, it appears to have been held by John Lloyd, Esq., whose pedigree is as follows:—

I have not been able to trace this family any further, or to ascertain how Richard Leighton became possessed of Gwern y Gof. Subsequently, we find that Gwern y Gof, part of Mount Nebo, with the farms of Cefn y Berin, Gwenlhrew, Cwmearl, and Bacheithlon farms, all in the parish of Ceri, and formerly belonging to the Monastery of Cwm Hir, belonged to Robert Knight, Earl of Catherlough, by whose trustees they were sold to Mr. Mather for £40,000, in 1809.

CLAWDD OFFA.

From the inscription on the pillar of Eliseg, that king appears to have recovered his kingdom of Powys out of the hands of the English after the death of Cadell by violence. "Ipse est Eliseg qui recuperavit hereditatem Potosiæ post mortem Catteli per vim e potestate Anglorum." This may probably have taken place in 765, for the Brut y Tywysogion states in that year "the Cymru devastated Mercia, and defeated the Saxons, and spoiled them sorely; on which account Offa, King of Mercia, made the great dyke called Clawdd Offa or Offa's Dyke, to divide Wales from Mercia, which still remains". "This dyke extends from the river Wye, along the counties of Hereford and Radnor to Pwll y Piod, a tavern between Bishop's Castle and Llanfair in Cydewain or Newtown; from thence through Montgomeryshire, by Llandyssilio and Llan y Myneich, to Tref y Clawdd over the race-course on Cefn y Bwch, above Oswestry, above Selatyn; from whence it descends to the Ceiriog; and thence to Glyn; after which it passes between Chirk Castle and the village of Chirk, crosses the Dee below Cefn y Wern, and enters Maelawr; then leaving Plâs Madog on the left, passes by Tir y Fron, below Caerddin to Wrexham and Pentref Bychan, where there is a mound; then by Plâs Bower to Adwy'r Clawdd, near Minera or Mwyn-glawdd (the mine upon the dyke); by Brymbo,² crosses the river Cegidog, and through a little valley on the south side of Bryn Ioreyn mountain to Coed Talwrn and Cae Dwn, a farm near Treuddyn chapel, in the parish of Y Wyddgrug, or Mold (pointing towards the Clwydian hills); beyond which there can be no further traces discovered."¹

CLAWDD WAT.

About a mile from Oswestry, in the parish of Selatyn, lies a fine military post, on an insulated eminence of an oblong form, which has been fortified with much skill. The top is an oblong area, containing 15 acres, 3 roods, and 18 perches of fertile ground, surrounded by two ramparts and fosses of great height and depth. This is called Old Oswestry, Hên Ddinas, and anciently Caer Ogyrfan, from Gogyrfan Gawr, a hero co-existent with King Arthur,³ who was crowned King of Britain at Cirencester in Gloucestershire, by St. Dubricius, Archbishop of Llandaff, in the year 519, when he was only sixteen years of age.¹

A great dyke or foss, called Clawdd Wat, is continued from each side of Caer Ogyrfan. This work is little known; notwithstanding it is equal in depth, though not in extent, to that of Offa, Wat's Dyke can only be discovered on the southern part of Maesbury Mill, in Oswestry parish, where it is lost in morassy ground; from thence it takes a northern direction to Caer Ogyrfan, and by Pentre'r Clawdd to Gôb Owain, the site of a small fort, called Bryn y Castell, in the parish of Trewen or Whittington, then crosses Prees Henlle Common, in the parish of St. Martin; goes over the Ceiriog between Bryn Cunallt and Pont y Blew Forge, and the Dyfrdwy or Dee river below Nant y Belan; from whence it passes through the park of Wynstay, formerly called Watstay, by another Pentre'r Clawdd to Erddig, where there was another strong fort on its course; from Erddig it goes above Wrexham, near Melin Puleston, by Dolydd, Maes Gwyn, Rhos Ddû, Croes Oneiras, the mansion of Gwersyllt Isaf, the ancient seat of the Sutton family, crosses the river Alun, and through the township of Llai to Rhydin, above which is Caer Estyn a British post; from hence it runs by Llanestyn in Yr Hôb, along the side of Ystrad Alun, which it quits towards the lower part, and turns towards Mynydd Sychdin, Mynachlog Rhedin, in the parish of Llaneurgain in Tegeingl, by Llaneurgain Mills, Bryn Moel, Coed y Llys, Nant y Fflint, Cefn y Coed, through the Strand fields, near Treffynnon or Holywell, to its termination below the Abbey of Dinas Basing or Basingwerk. Clawdd Wat is often confounded with Clawdd Offa, which attends the former at unequal distances, from five hundred yards to three miles, till the latter whose course has been already described, is totally lost.²

The poet Churchyard makes the following allusion to these dykes:—

“There is a famous thing,
Cal'de Offa's Dyke, that reaches far in length;
All kind of ware the Danes might hither bring:
It was free ground, and cal'de the Briton's strength.
Wat's Dyke, likewise about the same was set,
Between which two, both Danes and Britaines met,
And trafficke still, but passing bounds by flight,
The one did take the other prisoner streight.”¹

Qui dicunt super Sacrament' sua.

To the first article they say and pr'sent: That they have hereafter sett downe all ye lands that they know or have hadd notice to appertayne unto ye Prince within the said mannor, but because other severall mannor are in sundry places intermixt with the said mannor, they cannott plainelie sett downe ye meeres and bounds of this mannor of Dynn'lle.

To the second they say: That they know not what demesne landes are in ye said mannor.

To the third they say: That they know no freeholders within ye said mannor.

To the fourth and fifth articles they say: That they are not able to distinguish the auncient severall tenures of the said mannor, such as ye same were before ye composition, but they referre themselves to the pr'amble.

Further, they pr'sent that all the former severall tenures of the said manor are now, by vertue of the said composi'tion, reduced (as they take it) to one tenure. And all or ye most part of ye ten'nts of the said mann'r, after ye composi'tion, and upon ye takeing of newe grauntes or l'res patente, have surrendred and departed with their copies and other auncient deeds, whereby they holde before ye said composi'tion.

To the fifth article they further say: That they do not know neither have heard that any of the tennaunts of the said manor ought to pay any fine uppon the marriage of their daughters.

To the sixth article they say: That they know of no commons or wastes that doe in perticuler belong unto this mannor.

To the seaventh article they say: That there are severall woodes and underwoodes uppon most of ye tenants' lands, which for aught they know are not spoiled nor further used then for ye necessarie behoof of ye tennants, according to ye tenor of their letters pattents or grauntes.

To the eight they present: That in the said mannor there is a plott of grounde called Parke Dynn'lle (nowe disparked), and is helde by Sir Nicholas Fortescue, Knight, but by what right they know not.

To the ninth.

To the tenth they present: That the messuages, landes, and tenementes in this mannor, and the tennante right thereof by force of the said composic'on are holden, and to be holden by the tennantes thereof forever, from fortie yeares to fortie yeares, at, for, and under the usuall rents, fynes, reliefe, and customes nowe used in this manor, saving suche landes as are graunted for a shorter tyme, whiche are unknowne to them (if any such be).

To the eleaventh article they say: They are ignorant of any comoditie made or to bee made of any suche thinges as are mentioned in the said article w'thin this manor.

To the xijth, xvjth, xvijth, xxjth, and xxijth articles they say: That they knowe of no suche thinges as in any of the same articles are mentioned and required, save onely they say, that there was a certaine water cornemill, nowe decayed and fallen downe, within ye said manor, w'ch stood upon ye side of a parcell of lande now called y dolle vawr, which is ye Prince his Highnes landes, sometymes in the tenure of John Wyn' ap Sir Mathewe, and now in the tenure of Cornelius Manley.

To the last article they say: (That they take it) there are eight score perches, everie perche conteyninge fowre and twentie foote, in the Welch customarie acre.

sable. He was the son of Eunydd ab Cadivor ab Peredur Peiswyrdd, Lord of Ceredigion, ab Einion ab Eunydd ab Pwll ab Sanddef ab Gwyddno Goron Aur, or Garan Hir,¹ Prince of the Cantref y Gwaelod. Gwaethfoed is recorded in the Triads as one of the three "Hualogion Teyrnedd", band-wearing princes, who assumed those insignia of royalty, like the primitive kings of Britain, instead of crowns; the other two were Morgan Mwyn-fawr, King of Morganwg, and Elystan Glodrudd, Prince of Fferlis. He lived in the eleventh century, and is frequently confounded with Gwaethfod Fawr, a Prince of Powys. He married, and had issue Cadifor, Lord of Ceredigion; Cynan Feiniad, Lord of Tevana, father of Ednowain Bendew of Tegeingle, Chief of one of the Noble Tribes of Gwynedd; Rhydderch, Lord of Gwinfai; Aeddan, Lord of Grismwnt; Gwyn, Lord of Castell Gwyn; Bach, Lord of Ysgynvraith; Ednowain, Abbot of Llanbadarn Fawr, who entertained Archbishop Baldwin, and Giraldus Cambrensis in 1188, by whom he is called an old man, "waxen old in iniquity"; Cynddrych, Lord of Seinghenydd; Cinillin, Lord of the Cwm, of whose line we have to treat; and Cristian, Abbess of Tal y Llychan.

John, the second son of Edward ab Maredydd of Fron Dêg,¹ married Angharad, daughter of Thomas ab Richard of Fron Dêg, by whom he had issue six sons, whereof Rondle and Gruffydd were twins, and the four other sons, David, Maredydd, Edward, and John, all died without issue. John ab Edward had also two daughters : 1, Angharad, ux. John ab David ab Llywelyn of Pen y Bryn in Cristionydd ; and 2, Myfanwy, ux. Roger, second son of Hugh ab John ab Ieuan ab Deicws ab Dio of Llanerch Rugog.

Gruffydd, one of the twin sons of John ab Edward, married Janet, daughter of John ab Maurice of Oernant, by whom he had three sons, William, Richard, and Edward ; and two daughters—1, Angharad, ux. David ab

Tudor of Trevor ; and 2, Catherine, ux. Aaron ab William of Trevor.

Randle, the other twin son, married Catherine, daughter of Ednyfed ab Edward ab Gruffydd of Cyssylltau, by whom he had three sons : 1, Matthew, of whom presently, and Hugh and David who died without issue ; and three daughters—1, Elizabeth ; 2, Angharad, ux. Ieuan ab David ab Morgan of Rhiwabon, father of Richard ab Ieuan of Mortyn in Rhiwabon ; and 3, Janet.

Matthew ab Rondle of Y Coedladd in the parish of Rhiwabon, died in 1664, and was buried at Rhiwabon. By his first wife Alice, daughter of John ab Madog ab Y Gwion of Yr Bistog, he had no issue ; by his second wife Jane, daughter of John ab Roger of Nant Hir, and relict of Edward Lloyd of Hafod in Cristionydd, second son of David Lloyd of Cefn y Fedw, he had issue, besides three daughters—1, Mary, ux. John Williams of Pentref Tyrnorion (ab Edward Williams), Coroner for co. Denbigh at the death of his brother-in-law, John Matthews ; 2, Jane, s. p. ; and 3, Anne, s. p. ; a son and heir,

John Matthews of Coedladd, one of the Coroners for Denbighshire, and Deputy Receiver for Maelor and Iâl. He married, first, his cousin Mary, daughter of Thomas ab John ab Roger of Nant Hir, whilst they were both children ; but, when the time arrived for them to fulfil the marriage, they discovered that neither cared for the other, so they determined to separate and marry others that they might like better. Accordingly, John Matthews married Anne, daughter and heiress of John Williams of Is y Coed, by whom he had issue, Charles and Richard who died s. p., Matthew (ledwirion), Mary (geffeilliaid), Elis and Sarah. Having squandered all his property, he died in Wrexham, and was buried at Rhiwabon in 1691.

ADDENDA.

ANCIENT FORESTS.

(See Vol. I, p. 291.)

“An examination of the delta of the Mississippi has led to some curious discoveries. It shows that for a distance of three hundred miles there are buried many forests of large trees, one above the other, with interspaces of sand. Ten distinct growths are in fact observed, which must, in the opinion of the erudite men who have examined them, have succeeded one another. They prove to be the bald cypress of the Southern States, and some have been found over twenty-five feet in diameter, one boasting as many as five thousand seven hundred rings. From these facts the geologists of the neighbourhood have drawn the conclusion that the antiquity of each forest-growth is ten thousand years, thus giving a hundred thousand years to the entire set. One can but admire the closeness of the calculation which these figures suggest. To the great minds which have grappled with the phenomena it has not occurred that they took periods of different length to constitute themselves; with the great advantage that the philosophers thus escape what would have been esteemed enormous difficulties by other scientific men, such, for instance, as Sir Charles Lyell.”—Daily Telegraph, December 28, 1881.

THE DRAGON OF WALES.

(See page 110.)

“Heralds, as well as believers in the marvels of folk-lore, will be glad to learn upon good authority that the dragon, far from being a fictitious beast, really existed at a somewhat remote period of the world’s past history. In all probability, its best days were considerably antecedent to those of St. George, our venerated patron saint; of Moore of Moore Hall; and even of Siegfried, the son of Siegmund, whose encounter with its German equivalent, the Lindwurm, has been so brilliantly illustrated in “tone-colour” by Richard Wagner. It may be, however, that those heroes were fortunate enough to light upon and subdue the latest surviving specimens of an all but extinct race, which certainly infested vast districts of our earth, both in Europe and America, long before the valiant Bishop of Cappadocia or the intrepid Squire of Wantley earned immortality by his feats of derring-do. From the remains of seven dragons recently discovered in different parts of the kingdom of Wurtemberg, Professor Fraas of Stuttgart, an eminent German geologist, has reconstructed a complete “Snabian Lindwurm”, now exhibited in the Natural History Museum of that capital. This amazing creature combined in itself the leading characteristics of the lizard, bird, kan-
