

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

THE LIBRARY OF
THE UNIVERSITY
OF CALIFORNIA
LOS ANGELES

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

TOURS IN WALES.

VOL. III.

LLANFAIR CHURCH AND PLASNEWYDD.

TOURS IN WALES,

BY

THOMAS PENNANT, ESQ;

With Notes, Preface, and Copious Index,

BY THE EDITOR,

JOHN RHYS, M.A.

PROFESSOR OF CELTIC IN THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD:

TO WHICH IS ADDED,

An Account of the Five Royal Tribes of Cambria, and of the Fifteen Tribes of North Wales, and their Representatives, with their Arms, as given in Pennant's History of Whiteford and Holywell.

---

VOL. III.

---

CAERNARVON:

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY H. HUMPHREYS.

1883.

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2008 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

D.A.
727
P324
1833
v. 3

THE
FOUR IN NORTH WALES,

MDCCLXXIII.

FROM Caernarvon I crossed in the ferry to Tal y Foel, in the island of ANGLESEY.

THE Mencai is here two miles broad. In my passage had a view of Abermenai, the very narrow ABERMENAI. passage into the port of Caernarvon, and rendered more dangerous by the sands both within and without. Abermenai has its ferry, and is one of the five over this strait. They were originally the property of the crown of England; till Henry VIII. granted all of them to Richard Gifford, one of the sewers of his chamber; who again set them to William Bulkely, in the 33d year of his royal master: but since that period, every one, except this, has been transferred to other hands.

I soon reached Newborough, about three miles NEWBOROUGH. from the shore, a place greatly fallen away from its antient splendor. Here had been one of the residences of our princes. In Mr. Rowlands's time, the foundation of the Llys or palace, was to be seen a little to the south of the church, which is supposed to have been the domestic chapel. In its neighborhood, at Frondeg, is a stone which I overlooked. I find it mentioned in the manuscripts of Mr. ROWLANDS; who has given the following inscription: CUR . . . . FILIUS CUURICINI EREXIT HUNC LAPIDEM. The author of the History of Anglesey<sup>a</sup> also mentions it, but varies in the name of the founder, and his father. His reading is thus: FILIUS ULRICI EREXIT HUNC LAPIDEM. I am credibly informed that the inscription is at present illegible; but the style of the memorial induces me to give it to a Dane: such are extremely frequent in Scandinavia. STODINGUS fecit erigi lapidem in memoriam ARNONIS filii sui qui profectus est in HARDALAM<sup>b</sup>—THORSTATUM & GURA fecerunt erigi saxum in memoriam LAFSONIS patris sui<sup>c</sup>—and the imperfect one, like this of Ulric, SAXO lapidem hunc posuit<sup>d</sup>, are proofs of the custom in the Baltic kingdom.

THE Danes frequently invaded Anglesey; and between the years 969 and 972 Godfryd, the son of Harold, subdued the whole island<sup>e</sup>: a pious son in one of these invasions might, according to the custom of his country, have erected this monument to his father; but from the imperfect state of the inscription, we are at a loss to know whether it was sepulchral or votive.

<sup>a</sup> P. 43, printed for Dodsley, 1775. 4to.

<sup>b</sup> Pering skioldi Monum. Sæv-gothic. 289.

<sup>c</sup> The same, 301.    <sup>d</sup> Wormii Mon. Danica, 501.    <sup>e</sup> Powel, 34. 62.

NEWBOROUGH, or more properly Rhos-fair, the British name, was a manor of our princes. It was divided into two parts; the one consisted of officers of the household under the prince, which were of two kinds, and had twelve gavels in land between them: part maintained the Maer-drefwyr, or those who overlooked his demesne; the other was for the Garddwyr, certain persons resembling our cottagers, who possessed small parcels of land called Gerddi<sup>1</sup>. There were besides eight gavels, which were the property of freeholders; the posterity of whom enjoyed the same to the very time of my author, Mr. Rowlands. This was also the seat of justice for the whole comot of Menai, and continued so, long after it became subject to the English. Some respect to a royal seat was still maintained by the new royal possessors. It became a manor of the princes of Wales. Edward I. erected the town into a corporation, and gave it a guild mercatory, and other privileges, which were confirmed by parlement, in the first year of Edward III<sup>2</sup>. From this time it was called Newborough. In the latter part of that reign were found ninety-three houses, thirteen gardens, one orchard, twelve crofts, and sixty small pieces of ground inclosed for the use of the houses. The crown had its steward for this district, with a salary of ten pounds a year. The palace and royal chapel existed in the time of Edward III.; for it appears by an inquisition taken here in 1329, before William de Shaldeford, representative of Richard earl of Arundel, justiciary of North Wales, that the tenants of the comot of Menei had been required to put those buildings into repair: but, on their representing that, if that duty was put in force, they would be of little or no advantage to the king, the justiciary was directed to enquire into the truth; and whether it would not be better for him to take an annual sum in lieu of the repairs, not only of the palace and chapel, but of all the other buildings on the royal manor<sup>b</sup>. In after times it had the honour of sending representatives to the British parlement. Richard ap Rhydderch ap Myfyrion sate in the third of Henry VIII. and John ap Robert Llwyd in the first of Edward VI.; who in the next year transferred this honor to Beaumaris. The glory of Newborough is now passed away.

<sup>1</sup> Record of Caernarvon, in Biblioth. Litteraria, 23.

<sup>2</sup> Mr. Rowlands' MSS.

It now subsists by a manufacture of mats, and Rhosir morhesg ropes, made of sea-reed-grass; a plant of which Queen Elizabeth, in tenderness to such of her subjects who lived on sandy shores, wisely prohibited the extirpation, in order to prevent the misfortunes which have since happened, of having half the parish buried in the unstable sands<sup>1</sup> by the rage of tempests.

<sup>b</sup> Schright MSS.

SUCH is the case of Llanddwyn, a parish which LLANDDWYN. extends below into the sea, and terminates in a narrow peninsula: almost the whole of which is at present covered with sand-hills. We are told that in the time of Edward III. there were on it no more than eight small houses, or, as they were then called, weles<sup>k</sup>; yet in the reign of Henry VIII. it was one of the richest prebends in the cathedral of Bangor. Its wealth arose not from the real fertility of the place, but from the superstition of the common people; from pilgrimage to crosses, reliques, holy wells, ordeals, and what Mr. Rowlands calls ιχθυομαντια, or divination by fishes<sup>l</sup>. In the time of Owen Glyndwr, one Yerwerth Fychan, rector of Llanddoged, made pretensions to the offerings, and sacrilegiously seized on them; but Gryffydd le Yonge, chancellor to our hero, interfered, and by a decree of his put a stop to the invasion of the rights of the place<sup>m</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> See the sad effects of these moveable sands in Mr. Cordiner's Letters, 86, 87, and my Tour Scotl. 1769, 4th ed. 144. 168.

<sup>k</sup> Rowlands' MSS.

<sup>l</sup> Rowlands' MSS.

<sup>m</sup> The same, and Hist. Anglesey, 44.

CHURCH.

ON the peninsula are the ruins of the church, dedicated to St. Deuven, daughter of Brychan, one of the holy Colidei, or primitive Christians of Britain. Near it are the small remains of the prebendal house. The first appears to have been no inelegant building. The last is noted for the residence of Richard Kyffyn, then rector of Llanddwyn, and afterwards dean of Bangor, known by the name of y Deon du, or the black dean. He was a strenuous friend to the house of Lancaster, and here concerted with Sir Rhys ap Thomas, and other Welsh chieftains, a plan for bringing in the duke of Richmond, then in Britany; to whom they transmitted, by means of fishing-vessels, all necessary intelligence.

FROM Newborough, I, several years ago, made an excursion to Aberffraw, about seven miles to the north, in search of another palace of our ancient princes. They took one of their titles from this place, Princeps de Aberffraw, which preceded that of Dominus de Snowdon. I crossed, at low-water, the arm of the sea called Malltraeth; and rode by the church of Llan-Gadwaladr, said to have been founded by Cadwaladr, last king of the Britons, and made one of the sanctuaries of the island. Over the door was an inscription in memory of Cadfan, grandfather to the founder, to this effect: CATAMANUS Rec sapientissimus opinatissimus omnium Regum<sup>n</sup>. The stone on which this is inscribed, is said to be in form of a coffin; and probably in the former church had a more suitable place.

ON a tombstone in the church, is the following curious

EPITAPH.

In obitum Owini Woode Armigeri qui obiit 6. die April

A<sup>o</sup>. D<sup>o</sup>l. 1602. Ætat suæ 76.

Felix ter felix, marmor, quia nobile lignum

Quo caret infelix insula, marmor, habes,

Owen et patriæ vivens fuit utile lignum,

Et lignum vite post sua fata Deo.

Filius ista meo posui monumenta parenti,

Sit precor ut tecum nomen ita Omen idem.

1602.

ABOUT a mile or two farther reach the site of ABERRFFRAW. the princely residence. It is now reduced to a few poor houses, seated on the river Ffraw, near a small bay. Not a vestige is to be seen of its former boast. It was a chief seat of our princes, and one of the three courts of justice for the principality<sup>o</sup>. Here was always kept one of the three copies of the antient code of laws; another at Dinevaur in Caermarthenshire; and the third was kept by the doctors of laws, for their constant use<sup>p</sup>. This place was of great antiquity, being one of the three fixed on by Roderic the Great, about the year 870, for the residence of his successors. In

<sup>n</sup> Camden, ii. 566. Rowlands, 157.

<sup>o</sup> Leges Wallicæ, 147.      <sup>p</sup> The same, 6.

962 it was ravaged by the Irish<sup>a</sup>. An extent was made of Aberffraw in the 13th Edward III; from which may be learned some of the antient revenues of the Welsh princes. It appeared that part arose from rents of lands, from the profit of mills and fisheries, and often from things taken in kind; but the last were frequently commuted for their value in money.

BUT to return to the Menai. From Newborough
 LLANIDAN. I visited Llanidan, a seat of Lord Boston's, finely situated on that arm of the sea, commanding upwards a beautiful prospect of Caernarvon, and the Snowdon hills. The church, which is adjacent, once belonged to the convent of Beddchelert. In 1535 it followed the fate of that house. Queen Elizabeth granted it to Edmond Downam and Peter Ashton; who sold it in 1605 to Richard Prytherch of Myfyrion, whose daughter married a Llwyd of Llugwy, on the other side of the island. On the extinction of that family all their estates were bought by Lord Uxbridge, who left them to his nephew Sir William Irby, the late lord Boston.

IN the church is a reliquary, made neither of gold nor silver, nor yet ornamented with precious stones; but of very ordinary gritstone, with a roof-like cover. Whether it contained any reliques of the patron saint, a St. Aiden, of whom the venerable Bede makes such honourable mention<sup>r</sup>, I cannot say. The church of Durham possessed his cross, three of his teeth, his head, and two Griffin's eggs<sup>s</sup>. The living is a vicarage, to which are annexed the chapels of Llanedwen, Llan-ddaniel, and Llanfair y Cwmmwd.

<sup>a</sup> Powel, 62.

I MUST not pass unnoticed the celebrated stone of Maen Mordhwyl, or the stone of the thigh, now well secured in the wall of this church. In old times it was so constant to one place, that, let it be carried ever so far, it would be sure of returning at night. Hugh Lupus earl of Chester, determined to subdue its loco-motive faculties, fastened it with iron chains to a far greater stone, and flung it into the sea; but, to the astonishment of all beholders, it was found the next morning in its usual place<sup>t</sup>.

I NOW enter on classical ground, and the pious seats of the antient Druids; the sacred groves, the altars, and monumental stones. A slight mention of what I saw must content my reader; who is referred to the works of the celebrated and learned Mr. Henry Rowlands, the former vicar of this place, and to those of my friend the late reverend

<sup>r</sup> De vita Cudbereti, c. 4.      <sup>s</sup> Smith's Beda, App. No. XV.

<sup>t</sup> Giraldus Itin. Cambr. lib. ii. c. vii. and Powel's note. Sir Rich. Hoare ed. vol. ii. p. 103. Giraldus says, the stone took its name from its shape.

Dr. Borlase, who hath added fresh illustrations of these obscure remains.

TRE'R DRYW. AT Tre'r Dryw, or the habitation of the Arch-Druid, I met with the mutilated remains described by Mr. Rowlands. His Bryn Gwyn, or Brein Gwyn, or royal tribunal, is a circular hollow of an hundred and eighty feet in diameter, surrounded by an immense agger of earth and stones, evidently brought from some other place, there not being any mark of their being taken from the spot. It has only a single entrance. This is supposed to have been the grand consistory of the druidical administration.

NOT far from it was one of the Gorseddau, now in a manner dispersed, but once consisting of a great copped heap of stones, on which sate aloft a Druid instructing the surrounding people<sup>a</sup> multa de Deorum immortalium vi et postestate disputare, et juventuti tradunt.<sup>x</sup>

HERE are also the reliques of a circle of stones, with the Cromlech in the midst; but all extremely imperfect. Two of the stones are very large; one, which serves at present as part of the end of a house, is twelve feet seven inches high, and eight feet broad; and another eleven feet high and twenty-three feet in girth. Some lesser stones also remain. This circle, when complete, was one of the temples of the Druids, in which their religious rites were performed. It is the conjecture of Mr. Rowlands, that the whole of these remains were surrounded with a circle of OAKS, and formed a deep and sacred grove, Jam per se roborum elegant lucos, neque ulla sacra sine ea fronde conficiunt.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Mona Antiq. 92, tab. iv.

<sup>x</sup> Cæsar Bel. Gal. lib. vi.

NEAR this is Caer Leb<sup>z</sup>, or the moated entrenchment, of a square form, with a double rampart, and broad ditch intervening, and a lesser on the outside. Within are foundations of circular and of square buildings. This Mr. Rowlands supposes to have been the residence of the arch-druid, and to have given the name, Tre'r Dryw, to the township in which it stands.

CAER LEB.

AT Tref-Wry<sup>a</sup> I saw several faint traces of circles of stones, and other vestiges of buildings, all so dilapidated, or hidden in weeds, as to become almost formless. To divert our thoughts from their present dreary view, let us change the period to that in which they

TREF-WRY.

Were tenanted by Bards, who nightly thence,
Rob'd in their flowing vests of innocent white,
Issu'd, with harps that glitter to the moon,
Hymning immortal strains<sup>b</sup>.

Bod-drudau, or the habitation of the Druids,

<sup>y</sup> Plin. Hist. Nat. lib. xv. c. 44.

<sup>z</sup> Mona Antiq. 88, tab. iii.

<sup>a</sup> Mona Antiq. tab. iii. fig. 2.

<sup>b</sup> Mr. Mason's Caractacus.

BODOWYR. Tre'r Beirdd, or that of the bards, and Bodowyr, or that of the priests<sup>c</sup>, are all of them hamlets, nearly surrounding the seat of the chief Druid, composing the essential part of his suite. At the last I saw a thick Cromlech, resting on three stones.

THE shore near Porthamel, not far from hence, is famed for being the place where Suetonius landed, and put an end in this island to the Druid reign. His infantry passed over in flat-bottom boats, perhaps at the spot still called Pant yr Yscraphiau<sup>d</sup>, or the valley of Skiff's. His horse crossed partly by fording, partly by swimming. The description of the conflict is so animated, that I beg leave to give it in the words of the Roman historian.

“STAT pro littore diversa acies, densa armis “virisque, intercurantibus fæminis: in modum fu“riarum, veste ferali, crinibus dejectis, faces prefe“rebant; Druidæque circum, preces diras subla-“tis ad cœlum manibus fundentes. Novitate as-“pectus perculere milites, ut quasi hærentibus
 “membris, immobile corpus vulneribus præberent.
 “Dein cohortionibus ducis, et se ipse stimulantés,
 “ne muliebre et fanaticum agmen pavescerent, “inferunt signa, sternuntque obvios et igni suo in“volvunt. Præsidium posthac impositum vicis,

<sup>c</sup> Rowlands, 240.

<sup>d</sup> The same, 99.

“ excisique luci, sævis superstitionibus sacri. Nam
 “ cruore captivo adolere aras, et hominum fibris
 “ consulere deos fas habebant<sup>c</sup>.”

“ ON the shore stood a motley army in close ar“ ray, and well armed; with women running “ wildly about in black attire with dishevelled hair,
 “ and like the furies brandishing their torches,
 “ surrounded by the Druids, lifting up their hands
 “ to heaven, and pouring forth the most dreadful “ imprecations. The soldier stood astonished “ with the novelty of the sight. His limbs grew “ torpid, and his body remaining motionless, re“ signed to every wound. At length, animated “ by their leader, and rousing one another not to “ be intimidated with a womanly and fanatic band, “ they displayed their ensigns, overthrew all who “ opposed them, and flung them into their own “ fires. After the battle, they placed garrisons in “ the towns, and cut down the groves consecrated “ to the most horrible superstitions: for the Bri- “ tons held it right to sacrifice on their altars with “ the blood of their captives, and to consult the “ gods by the inspection of human entrails.”

WHAT a scene was this! and how worthy of the pencil of an inspired painter!

THERE are no traces of any works of the Ro-

<sup>c</sup> TACITI Annales, lib. xiv. c. 30.

BRYN
GWYDRYN.

mans left in this country. Their stay was so short, that they had not time to form any thing permanent. At Bryn Gwydryn, behind Llan-idan, are two or three dikes and fosses of a semi-circular form, each end of which terminates at a precipice, leaving an intervening area of no great space. Both from its figure and name, Caer Idris, I suspect it to be British.

I AM sorry that it is not in my power to give a better account than the following of that prodigy of learning the reverend HENRY ROWLANDS, vicar of this parish. His account of the druidical antiquities of this part of the island, and his illustrations of them, is a most extraordinary performance, considering that he never enjoyed any other literary advantages than what he found in his native isle. It is said that he never even travelled farther than Conwy; but I believe it is certain that Shrewsbury was the utmost limits of his travels. He died in 1723, aged 68, and was interred under a slab of black Anglesey marble, in the parish of Llanedwen. He was descended from Henry Rowlands, who died Bishop of Bangor in 1616, and who in 1600 purchased from Robert Gryffydd of Penrhyn the estate of Plas Gwyn, in the fore-mentioned parish, which remains to this day in his posterity. The inscription on his tomb was of his own composing, and is as follows.

M. S.

Depositum

HENRICI ROWLANDS

de Plás Gwyn, Clerici,

Hujus Ecclesie Vicarii;

Qui hinc cum hisce Exuviis

Per Spiritum JESU,

Animam interea refocillantem,

in ultimo die

Se fore resuscitatum

Pia fide sperabat:

Ac inde,

TRIUMPHANTE MISERICORDIA,

In eternum cum Christo gaudium

Fore susceptum,

Quod maxime anhelabat;

id est

Esse semper cum Domino.

Obiit 21 die Novembris

Anno Salutis 1723

Ætatis suæ 68.

Spiritus ubi vult spirat.

Laus tota Tri-Uni.

*Omnia pro nihilo nisi quæ tribuebat egenis,
Ista valent cum artes pereant & scripta fatiscant.*

ABOUT three miles from this place is Moel y MOEL Y DON.
Don ferry. It is said, that Aeloedd, king of Dub- lin, and father to Racwel, mother of Gryffyd ap Cyman, built a castle here, called in old times Cas- tell Aeloedd Frenin, but by the country people
Bon y Dom†. The army of Edward I. in 1282, ENGLISH made here an attempt fatal to many a gallant man. DEFEAT.
He landed his forces in this island, and, after reducing to obedience the few inhabitants who had not taken the oath of fealty to him, built a bridge of boats near this place, some say at the very spot where Agricola passed. The Welsh, aware of his design, flung up entrenchments to secure the entrance into the mountains. Luke de Tany, a gallant commander, who had lately come from Gascony with a number of Gascon and Spanish troops, rashly passed over the unfinished bridge at low-water, in contempt perhaps of the enemy: none appeared; but on the flowing of the tide, which cut off access to the nearest part of the bridge, the Welsh suddenly rushed on them with hideous shouts, slew numbers, and forced the remainder into the sea. On this occasion perished Tany himself, Roger Clifford the younger, thirteen knights, seventeen young gentlemen, and two hundred soldiers; William Latimer alone escaped by the goodness of his horse, which swam with him to the bridge<sup>g</sup>.

† Life of Gryffydd ap Cyman. Sebright MSS.

LET us suppose a panic at this time to have seized the English forces; yet, as that must have been unforeseen by the Welsh, we should give due praise to the intrepidity of our countrymen, at a period in which (in comparison of the well-appointed soldiery of other countries) they fought nearly unarmed. A poet of the latter end of the thirteenth century thus describes the character and

ANTIENŦ
WEAPONS
OF THE
WELSH.

<sup>g</sup> Powel, 372.

accoutrements of the army of antient Britons, led by our valiant prince Richard Cœur de Lion into France.

Gens Wallensis habet hoc naturale per omnes
 Indigenas, primis proprium quod servat ab annis.
 Pro domibus sylvas, bellum pro pace frequentat,
 Irasci facilis, agilis per devia cursu,
 Nec soleis plantas, caligis nec crura gravantur,
 Frigus docta pati, nulli cessura labori.
 Veste brevi, corpus nullis oneratur ab armis,
 Nec munit thorace latus, nec casside frontem.
 Sola gereus, hosti cædem quibus inferat, arma,
 Clavam cum jaculo, venabula, gesa, bipennam,
 Arcum cum pharetris, nodosaque tela, vel hastam,
 Assiduis gaudens prædis, fusoque cruore<sup>h</sup>.

AT a small distance from Moel y don I entered into the fine woods of Sir Nicholas Bayley<sup>i</sup>, skirting the Menai for a considerable way. The wooded part of the island commences at Llanidan, and recalls the antient name of Anglesey, Ynys Dywyll, or the Dark Island, on account of the deep shade of its groves; but at present it is (except on this side) entirely divested of trees, and the climate so averse to their growth, that in most parts it is with great difficulty the gentry can raise a plantation round their houses.

WOODS.

PLAS NEWYDD, the seat of Sir Nicholas Bayley, lies close upon the water, protected on

PLAS NEW-
YDD.

<sup>h</sup> William Brito, as quoted in Camden's Remains, 10.

<sup>i</sup> Now of the earl of Uxbridge. ED.

three sides by venerable oaks and ashes. The view up and down this magnificent river-like strait is extremely fine. The shores are rocky; those on the opposite side covered with woods; and beyond soar a long range of Snowdonian alps. Here stood a house built by Gwenllian, a descendant of Cadrod Hardd<sup>k</sup>. The mansion has been improved, and altered to a castellated form, by the present owner.<sup>1</sup>

CROMLECHS. IN the woods are some very remarkable druidical antiquities. Behind the house are to be seen two vast Cromlechs. The upper stone of one is twelve feet seven inches long, twelve broad, and four thick, supported by five tall stones. The other barely separated from the first, is almost a square, of five feet and a half, and is supported by four stones. The number of supporters to Cromlechs are merely accidental, and depend on the size or form of the incumbent stone. These are the most magnificent we have, and the highest from the ground; for a middle-sized horse may easily pass under the largest.

DR. BORLASE has shown the improbability of these stones ever being designed or used as altars. The figure proves the impossibility of making fires, or performing sacrifices on their sloping summits; and almost all which I have seen have an inclination. It is reasonable to suppose them to have been sepulchral, and that the body might be lodged in the space beneath; and that near the monument divine honors might be payed, or sacrifices performed to the Manes of the dead<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> Plas Gwyn MSS.

<sup>1</sup> The earl of Uxbridge. Ed.

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

THIS species of monument is to be found in most parts of Europe; in Scandinavia<sup>m</sup>, in Holland<sup>n</sup>, and in France: in the last, the Pierre Levée, near Poitiers, is a stupendous specimen<sup>o</sup>. Cromlechs extend even farther south; for Mr. Armstrong gives a drawing of one of this nature in Minorca<sup>p</sup>. They vary in form: in many the space between the supporters is closed up with stones of greater or lesser sizes<sup>a</sup>; and thus gave security to the remains of the deceased therein deposited. Probably all those which we see in our island might originally have been thus closed up; but in time destroyed, either through the sacrilegious hope of finding wealth deposited with the corpses, or, as is the case often at present, for the sake of applying the stones to oeconomic uses. Others again are quite bedded in the Carnedd, or heap of stones; of which instances may be produced in Ilan

<sup>1</sup> See what the learned author offers in support of his opinion Antiq. Cornwall, p. 210 and the following.

<sup>m</sup> Wormii Monum. Dan. 7.

<sup>n</sup> Oudheinkundige Brieven, &c. tab. i.

<sup>o</sup> Braunii Civitat. v. 18.      <sup>p</sup> Hist. Minorca.

<sup>a</sup> Exemplified in Montfaucon, Supplem. v. tab. lxx. highest figure.

Faelog, in this island, in that of Arran<sup>r</sup>, and in the county of Meirionedd<sup>s</sup>.

CARNEDD. NOT far from the Cromlech is a large Carnedd: part has been removed, and within was discovered a cell about seven feet long and three wide, covered at the top with two flat stones, and lined on the sides with others. To enter it I crept over a flag, placed across the entrance. On the top of the stone were two semicircular holes, of size sufficient to take in the human neck; it is conjectured there might have been another above; so that both together might perform the office of a stocks. It is indeed conjecture, yet not an improbable one, that in this place had been kept the wretches destined for sacrifice; as it is well known that they performed those execrable rites, and often upon captives who had suffered long imprisonment<sup>t</sup>, perhaps in cells similar to this.

VAENOL. A LITTLE below Plas Newydd, on the Caernarvonshire side, appear the extensive woods of Vaenol, with the old house of the same name. This place had long been the residence of the Williams, a branch of the family of Ednyfed Vychan, and which was honored with a baronetage June 15th 1622. Sir William Williams, the last of the line, was a man of profligate life; had been married, but had no issue. He got acquainted with Sir Bourchier Wrey of Trebitch, and a young man brought up to the law. In a drunken fit he was prevailed on to make a will, and dispose of his whole estate to Sir Bourchier for the term of his life, and that of his brother the reverend Chichester Wrey, and the remainder to king William in fee. The young lawyer also left to himself 540*l.* annuity in fee, the odd forty pounds towards the trouble and expence of collecting the rest. He also purchased the life estates, which his representatives enjoyed till the death of the reverend Mr. Wrey; on which the late Mr. Smith, of Tedworth in Hampshire, took possession of it by virtue of a grant from king William to his ancestor, a commissioner of the salt office: and at present the whole, to the amount of upwards of 4000*l.* a year, is enjoyed by his great nephew Ashton Smith esq.

<sup>r</sup> Voy. to the Hebrides, 2d ed. 208.

<sup>s</sup> See pages 262, 263, of preceding volume. <sup>t</sup> Borlase Antiq. Cornwall.

LEFT TO KING
WILLIAM.

FROM Plas Newydd I continued my journey within sight of the water. At Craig y Ddinas I was irresistably delayed by feasting my eyes with the fine view of the noble curvature of the Menai. Not far from hence I rode towards the shore, to admire the furious current of the Swelly, or Pull THE SWELLY. Ceris, a part where, by opposition of rocks, and the narrowness of the channel, are great over-falls and violent whirlpools, during the time when the flood or ebb makes strong. At low-water the channel, for a considerable space, appears pointed with rocks black and horrible. The fury of the tide amongst them, at the times I mention, is inconceivable, unless by the navigator. I (when very young) ventured myself in a small boat during its greatest rage, and never shall forget the rapid evolutions between rock and rock, amidst the boiling waves, and mill-race current. At high-water all is still. This is a great obstacle to the navigation of large vessels, which must consult the critical season, and a good pilot. The rest of this strait is secure: its whole length is about fourteen miles; ten from Bay Glás, near Beaumaris, to Caernarvon, and four from thence to its entrance at Abermenai.

A LITTLE lower down, on a small rocky peninsula, stands the church of Llandyssilio, jutting far into the water; a most dreary cure. It is remarkable that most of the seventy-four parishes, which this island is divided into, have their churches not remote from the shores.

PORTH-AETHWY.

PORTH-AETHWY, the most general ferry into Anglesey, is immediately below the church. The passage of cattle at this place is very great: I cannot enumerate them; but it is computed that the island sends forth annually from twelve<sup>u</sup> to fifteen thousand head, and multitudes of sheep and hogs.

<sup>u</sup> The number is probably exaggerated; the editor has reason to believe that it does not exceed five thousand. Ed.

FORTHAETTY FERRY.

It is also computed that the remaining stock of cattle is thirty thousand<sup>x</sup>. From the same authority it appears, that in 1770 upwards of ninety thousand bushels of corn were exported. The author reckons only barley, rye, and oats; but I have seen most incomparable wheat growing on the island. The improvement in husbandry has increased since the suppression of smuggling from the Isle of Man; before that time every farmer was mounted on some high promontory, expecting the vessel with illicit trade: but since that period, he sets in earnest to industry and cultivation. Not but that the island was in most remote time famous for its fertility. Môn Mam Gymry, Anglesey, the nursing-mother of Wales, was a title it assumed even in the twelfth century<sup>y</sup>.

A BARBAROUS custom in the feudal system prevailed in this island, and possibly in many other parts. Here was exemplified the power of a lord to sell his vassals and their offspring, as he would the cattle of his estate. It was done in the township of Porth-aethwy, many years after the reign of our princes<sup>z</sup>. The deed of sale in this instance is not extant; but I find among Mr. Rowlands' three specimens, of which the following is the full form of the cruel usage.

A BARBAROUS
CUSTOM.

<sup>x</sup> Hist. Anglesey, 6.

<sup>y</sup> Giraldus Itin. Camb. Sir Richard Hoare's ed. vol. ii. p. 103.

<sup>z</sup> Rowlands' Mona Antiq. 122.

“ EDNYFED Vychan ap Ednyfed, alias dictus “ Ednyfed ap Arthelw uz Davydd ap Gryffydd et “ Howel ap Davydd ap Ryryd, alias dictus Howel
 “ ap Arthelw uz Davydd ap Gryffydd, Liberi te“ nentes D<sup>ni</sup> Regis villæ de Rhandir Gadog, &c.
 “ dedimus et confirmavimus Willimo ap Gryffydd
 “ ap Gwilim armigero et libero tenenti de Portha- “ mel, &c. septem nativos nostros; viz Howel ap “ Davydd Dew, Matto ap Davydd Dew, Jevan ap
 “ Evan Ddu, Llewelyn ap Davydd Dew, Davydd
 “ ap Matto ap Davydd Dew, Howel ap Matto ap “ Davydd Dew, et Llewelyn ap Evan Coke, cum “ eorum sequelis tum procreatis tam procreandis
 “ ac omnibus bonis catellis, &c. habend. &c. præ-“ dictos nativos nostros, &c. præfato Willimo
 “ Gryffydd ap Gwilim heredibus et assignatis suis
 “ in perpetuum. Datum apud Rhandir Gadog,
 “ 20 die Junii, an. Henr. 6ti. 27mo<sup>a</sup>.

THE country from hence, and quite to Holyhead (twenty five miles) right and left, is dreary, woodless, hedgeless, rising into small hills, watered with numberless rills, and fertile in grass and corn.

I CONTINUED my ride<sup>b</sup> near the Menai, which now widens considerably. The opposite limits are inexpressibly beautiful, lofty, and finely clothed with hanging woods. Bangor opens on the Caernarvonshire side; and in front is a magnificent bay, bounded by the great promontory Penmaen Mawr, and the vast Llandudno, apparently insulated; the estuary of the river Conwy flows at its bottom between those noble headlands. This prospect appears to the best advantage from that beautiful spot the Green, near the castle of Beaumaris: from whence may be seen, in addition, Priestholm island, and the semilunar bay from thence to the town, the fortress itself, Baron Hill, and its elegant improvements; nor must Red Hill, the house of Mr. Sparrow, seated at the head of a wooded dingle, directing the eye to great part of this delicious view, be left out of the description.

<sup>a</sup> Rowlands MSS.

<sup>b</sup> By the munificence of Lord and Lady Bulkeley an excellent carriage-road has been formed at a great expence from Porth-aethwy to Beaumaris, presenting a succession of scenery of unrivalled beauty, as the charming bay gradually opens.—It may with justice be styled one of the finest terraces in the world. ED.

NOBLE VIEWS.

THE town of Beaumaris is, as the name implies, pleasantly seated on a low land at the water's edge; it is neat, and well built, and one street is very handsome. Edward I. created the place; for, after founding the castles of Caernarvon and Conwy, he discovered that it was necessary to put another curb on my headstrong countrymen. He built this fortress in 1295<sup>(1)</sup>, and fixed on a marshy spot, near the chapel of St. Meugan, such as gave

BEAUMARIS.

CASTLE.

(1) Beaumaris castle was commenced in 1295, but, like all the other castles of Edward I. in Wales, it was several years in building.

him an opportunity of forming a great foss round the castle, and of filling it with water from the sea. He also cut a canal, in order to permit vessels to discharge their lading beneath the walls<sup>o</sup>: and, as a proof of the existence of such a conveniency, there were within this century iron rings affixed to them, for the purpose of mooring the ships or boats. The marsh was in early times of a far greater extent than at present, and covered with fine bullrushes<sup>d</sup>. There is a strong tradition that one Helig ap Clunog<sup>(1)</sup> had great possessions, which extended even to Dwygyfylchau, and a fair house where now the sea flows; all which were suddenly overwhelmed: and it is pretended that there still may be seen, at very low ebbs, ruins of houses, and a causeway from Priestholm pointing towards Penmaen Mawr<sup>o</sup>.

THE lands, on which Edward built the castle, were private property: and it appears that he made the owners full satisfaction; and among other recompences, bestowed on Eneon ap Meredydd, Gryffydd ap Evan, and Eneon ap Tegerin, lands in the township of Earianell and Tre'r

<sup>o</sup> Sebright MSS.      <sup>d</sup> Sebright MSS. and Plás Gwyn MSS.

(1) This ancient mariner is usually called Helig ab Glannog, and his territory is somewhere called Tyno Helig, or Helig's Hollow or Hole, which seems to have been the sea on the coast of Arfon and Mona: it is from Glannog that Puffin Island has its name of Fyns Glannog, mentioned at p. 35. J.R.

<sup>o</sup> Plás Gwyn MSS.

Ddôl, free from rent or service. The castle itself being built on their ground†.

EACH of Edward's three castles differs in form. This has the lest clame to beauty, not having the height or elegance of Caernarvon or Conwy. The exterior walls are guarded by ten strong round towers. These are the case to the castle, which stands within at a considerable equidistant space, is far superior in height to the former, and has also its round towers. Within is a square of one hundred and ninety feet, or as Mr. Grose expresses it, a square with the corners canted off. The great hall has five windows in front, is seventy feet long, and twenty-three and a half broad. The approach seems to have been through a sub-hall, by a flight of steps.

HALL.

WITHIN the walls on one side is a beautiful chapel, in form of a theatre, the sides ornamented with Gothic arches, and the roof supported by ribs springing from elegant pilasters, between each of which is a narrow window, and behind some are small closets, gained out of the thickness of the wall, probably allotted to the officers, or persons of rank. A narrow gallery runs within the whole space of the castle walls.

CHAPEL.

THE entrance faces the sea; and near it is a long narrow advanced work, called the Gunners Walk.

† Rowlands' MSS.

CONSTABLE
OF THE
CASTLE.

THE first governor was Sir William Pickmore, a Gascon knight, appointed by Edward I. There was a constable of the castle, and a captain of the town. The first had an annual fee of forty pounds, the last, of twelve pounds three shillings and four-pence: and the porter of the gate of Beaumaris had nine pounds two shillings and six-pence. Twenty-four soldiers were allowed for the guard of the castle and town, at four pence a day to each<sup>g</sup>.

THE constable of the castle was always captain of the town except in one instance: in the 36th of Henry VI. Sir John Boteler held the first office, and Thomes Norreys the other.

THE castle was extremely burthensome to the country: quarrels were frequent between the garrison and the country people. In the time of Henry VI. a bloody fray happened, in which Dafydd ap Evan ap Howel of Llwydiarth, and many others, were slain.

FROM the time of Sir Rowland Villeville, alias Brittayne, reputed base son of Henry VII. and constable of the castle, the garrison was withdrawn till the year 1642, when Thomas Cheadle, deputy to the earl of Dorset, then constable, put into it men and ammunition. In 1643, Thomas Bulkeley esq; soon after created Lord Bulkeley, succeeded: his son, Colonel Richard Bulkeley, and several gentlemen of the country, held it for the king till June 1646, when it surrendered on honourable terms to General Mytton, who made Captain Evans his deputy-governor. In 1653, the annual expence of the garrison was seventeen hundred and three pounds.

<sup>g</sup> Dodridge, 58.

TAKEN IN
1646.

EDWARD I. when he built the town, surrounded it with walls, made it a corporation, and endowed it with great privileges, and lands to a considerable value. He removed the antient freeholders, by exchange of property, into other countries. Hennlŷs, near the town, was the seat of Gwerydd ap Rhys Goch, one of the fifteen tribes, and of his posterity till this period, when Edward removed them to Bodllewyddan, Flintshire, and bestowed their antient patrimony on the corporation<sup>h</sup>. It sends one member to parlement. Its first representative was Maurice Gryffydd, who sat in the 7th year of Edward VI<sup>i</sup>.

TOWN.

THERE is a very good anchorage for ships in the bay which lies before the town; and has seven fathom water even at the lowest ebb. Vessels often find security here in hard gales. The town has no trade of any kind, yet has its customhouse for the casual reception of goods.

THE BAY.

THE ferry lies near the town, and is passable at low water. It was granted by charter to the corporation in the 4th of Queen Elizabeth. I find an order from Edward II. to Robert Power, chamberlain of North Wales, to inspect into the state of the boat, which was then out of repair; and, in case it was feasible, to cause it to be made fit for use, at the expence of the baileywick: but if the boat proved past repair, a new one was to be built, and the expence allowed by the king. It appears that the people of Beumaris payed annually, for the privelege of a ferry, thirty shillings into the exchequer; but by this order it seems that the king was to find the boat<sup>k</sup>. After passing the channel, the distance over the sands to Aber in Caernarvonshire, the point the passenger generally makes for, is four miles. The sands are called Traeth Telen, and Wylofaen<sup>(1)</sup>, or the Place of Weeping, from the shrieks and lamentations of the inhabitants when it was overwhelmed by the sea, in the days of Helig ap Clunog.

FERRY.

<sup>h</sup> Plús Gwyn MSS.

<sup>i</sup> Willis's Notitia Parliam. iii. 23.

CHURCH. The church is dependant on Llandegvan, which is in the gift of Lord Bulkeley. The former is called the chapel of the Blessed Virgin; yet in ancient writings one aisle is called St. Mary's chapel, and another that of St. Nicholas. In the first is a beautiful monument of a knight and his lady in white alabaster, placed recumbent on an altar tomb. It had been removed to this place on the dissolution from the religious house at Llanvaes, and the memory and names of the persons represented lost. On the south side of the altar is a stone with the following inscription: how it came here, or for what purpose, I cannot discover.

<sup>k</sup> Sebright MSS.

<sup>(1)</sup> As a matter of fact, the name as now sounded is Traeth Lafun, whatever the latter word may mean. J.R.

HENRICUS SYDNEY, ordinis Garterii, miles, presidens ex conciliis marchii Walliæ, Dominus deputatus in Hibernia.

ANTONUS SENTLEGER, ordinis Garterii, miles, quondam deputatus in Hibernia.

FRANCISCUS AGARD, armiger, ex consiliis in Hibernia.

EDWARDUS WATERHOWS me posuit.

GWILLIELMUS THWAYTES, armiger, obiit 20 die Januarii 1565.

Nosce Teipsum.—Fide et Taciturnitate.

It appears to have been erected by an Edward Waterhowe. Sir Henry Sydney had been Lord Deputy of Ireland, but died in England in 1586. Sir Anthony St. Leger was another. The two others are unknown.

ABOVE the former is a mural monument of black marble, in memory of Thomas, sixth son of Sir Julius Cæsar, master of the rolls, who died rector of Llanrhuddlad, in this island, in 1632.

Mem<sup>o</sup> Sacrum

Ornat<sup>mi</sup> viri Tho. Cæsaris S. S. Theol. Profes<sup>ris</sup> filii C<sup>ti</sup> Honor<sup>mi</sup> D<sup>ni</sup> Julii Cæsaris Equitis aurati, Rotulor Mag<sup>tri</sup> et Ser<sup>mis</sup> Regib. Jacobo et Carolo a sanctiorib. conciliis. Qui summæ Spei Juvenis Oxonie in Collegio Reginali politiores inchoavit

literas Adultior fact. lectissimæ Coll. omnium animar̄ ascriptus est societati: Demum Rector Ecclesiæ Llanrithlad. Cantabrigiæ, tam merita, quam insolita indulgentia Doctaratus assumpsit gradum: Sic utriusque Academiæ sumis evectus honoribus Juvenis adhuc [años meritis præveniens] vitam morte comutavit 5<sup>to</sup> Martii 1632. Ætatis suæ 32.

Joanna Cæsar Conjux amantissima Filia et unica Hæres Hugonis ap Will<sup>m</sup>. Prichard armig<sup>ri</sup>.

De Comot̄ Llivon Anglisey: Hoc Monumentum Amoris ergo
Extrui curavit.
Año Dñi 1634.

LLANFAES. AT a small distance from the town, on the shore, stand the remains of Llanfaes, or the Friers. It was founded by Prince Llewelyn ap Jerwerth, and, according to the general tradition of the country, over the grave of his wife Joan, daughter of King John, who died in 1237, and was interred on the spot. Here also was interred a son of a Danish king, Lord Clifford, and many barons and knights who fell in the Welsh wars<sup>1</sup>. It was dedicated to St. Francis, and consecrated by Howel bishop of Bangor, a prelate who died in 1240.

<sup>1</sup> Leland's Collect. i. 65, and Henry V.'s patent in Sebright MSS.

The religious were Franciscans, or minor friers. Their church and house were destroyed, and their lands wasted, in the insurrection made soon after the death of Llewelyn, our last prince, by his relation Madoc. Edward II. in consideration of their misfortunes, remitted to them the payment of the taxes due to him, which before the war were levied at the rate of twelve pounds ten shillings. These friers were strong favorers of Glyndwr. Henry, in his first march against Owen, plundered the convent, put several of the friers to the sword, and carried away the rest; but afterwards set them at liberty, made restitution to the place, but peopled it with English recluses. It possibly was again reduced to ruin; for Henry V. by patent, establishes here eight friers, but directs that two only should be Welsh<sup>m</sup>.

At the dissolution, Henry VIII. sold the convent, and its possessions, to one of his courtiers. They became in later days the property of a family of the name of White (now extinct) who built here a good mansion. It of late became, by purchase, the property of Lord Bulkeley. The church is turned into a barn, and the coffin<sup>n</sup> of the Princess Joan now serves for a watering-trough.

<sup>m</sup> Sebright MSS.

<sup>n</sup> This coffin has been removed from its state of degradation, and placed under an elegant gothic building in a beautiful situation in the grounds at Baron-Hill. ED.

I am informed, that on the farm of Cremlyn Monach, once the property of the friery, is cut on a great stone the effigies of its patron St. Francis; and that his head is also cut on the stone of a wall, in a street of Beaumaris, to which all passengers were to pay their respects, under pain of a forfeit.

BATTLE. ABOUT the year 818, a bloody battle was fought near Llanfaes: neither occasion or parties are mentioned; but by the text<sup>o</sup> I guess it to have been between Egbert king of the West Saxons, and the Welsh; for the former, in the reign of Merfyn Frych, carried his arms into all parts of North Wales.

CASTELL
ABER
LLIENAWG. A LITTLE farther is Castell Aber Llienawg, a small square fort, with the remains of a little round tower at each corner. In the middle stood a square tower. A foss surrounds the whole. A hollow way is carried quite to the shore, and at its extremity is a large mound of earth, designed to cover the landing. This castle was founded by Hugh Lupus earl of Chester, and Hugh the Red earl of Shrewsbury, in 1098, when they made an invasion, and committed more savage barbarities on the poor natives, especially on one Kenred, a priest, than ever stained the annals of any country. Providence sent Magnus king of Norway to revenge their cruelties. His coming was to all appearance casual. He offered to land, but was opposed by the earls. Magnus stood on the prow of his ship, and, calling to him a most expert bowman, they at once directed their arrows at the earl of Shrewsbury, who stood all armed on the shore. An arrow pierced his brain through one of his eyes, the only defenceless part<sup>p</sup>. The victor seeing him spring up in the agonies of death, insultingly cried out, in his own language, Leit loupe—Let him dance<sup>q</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> Powel, 24.

THIS fort was garrisoned so lately as the time of Charles I; when it was kept for the parlement by Sir Thomas Cheadle; but was taken by Colonel Robinson in 1645 or 6<sup>r</sup>.

ABOUT a mile farther I visited the Priory of Penmon, placed, like the former, on the shore. The remains are the ruinous refectory, and the church; parts of the last is in present use. Within is a small monument, informing us that Sir Thomas Wilford, of Ildington in Kent (one of whose daughters married Sir Richard Bulkeley) died January 25th, 1645. About a mile from the shore is the little island of Priestholm, St. Sciriol, or Glannauch<sup>(1)</sup>, which perhaps might have been

PENMON
PRIORY.

<sup>p</sup> Torjæi Hist. Norveg. iii. 423.

<sup>q</sup> Girald. Itin. Camb. 867. Sir Rich. Hoare's ed. vol. ii. p. 105.

<sup>r</sup> Plus Gwyn MSS.

(1) Otherwise written this was Glannaw, Ynys Glannog, or Glan-nog's Isle: its historical interest lies in the fact that Cadwallo was the principal residence of the religious, for the priory goes under both names: usually they were called Canonici de insula Glannauch<sup>s</sup>. Probably part might reside on the main land, to look after their property, and others be engaged in acts of devotion in their retirement. The only remains of their residence is a square tower; but abundance of human bones scattered up and down, are strong proofs of its reputed sanctity, and the superstitious wish of the people to have this made the place of their interment. The first recluses of this island, according to Giraldus, were hermits; of whom (as usual) he tells a superstitious tale, that whenever they disagreed, they were plagued with swarms of mice; which quitted them as soon as they had layed aside their animosity<sup>t</sup>. Their successors were black monks, dedicated to St. Mary, endowed, by Llewelyn ap Iorwerth, before the year 1221<sup>u</sup>, but according to the history of Anglesey, founded by Maelgwyn Gwynedd. The Prior was one of the three spiritual lords of Anglesey. At the dissolution the revenues were valued at 47*l.* 15*s.* 3*d.* in the whole, or 40*l.* 17*s.* 9*d.* clear; blockaded in it when driven to straits by Edwin in 629: the entry in the Annales Cambriæ is, "Obsessio Catguollaun regis in insula Glannauc." This Edwin, king of the Angles of Northumbria, conquered Mona, and gave it the name of Anglesey, or the Isle of the Angles.

J.R.

<sup>s</sup> Dugdale Monast. ii. 338.

<sup>t</sup> Girald. Itin. Cambr. lib. ii. c. 6, p. 868. Sir Rich. Hoare's ed. vol. ii. p. 106.

<sup>u</sup> Tanner, 699.

PUFFIN AUK.

granted in the 6th of Queen Elizabeth to John More.

THE channel, or, as it is called, the Sound, between the main land and Priestholm is very deep, PRIESTHOLM. and is the common passage for ships to and from the road of Beaumaris. On the other side is the East passage, which, at low water, is between the island and the point of Traeth Telafen, little more than a quarter of a mile broad, and navigable for only very small vessels. The island is about a mile long, extremely lofty, and bounded by precipices, except on the side opposite to Penmon, and even there the ascent is very steep. The land slopes greatly from the summit to the edge of the precipices. During part of summer the whole swarms with birds of passage. The slope on the side is animated with the PUFFIN AUKS, Br. Zool. PUFFINS. i. N° 232, which incessantly squall round, alight, and disappear into their burrows; or come out, stand erect, gaze at you in a most grotesque manner, then take flight, and either perform their evolutions, or seek the sea in search of food.

THEY appear first about the fifth or tenth of April; but quit the place, almost to a bird, twice or thrice before they settle. Their first employ is the forming of burrows; which falls to the share of the males, who are so intent on the business as to suffer themselves at that time to be taken by the hand. Some few save themselves the trouble of forming holes, and will dispossess the rabbits, who, during the Puffin season, retire to the other side of the island.

THEY lay one white egg. Males, as well as females, perform the office of sitting, relieving each other when they go to feed. The young are hatched in the beginning of July. The parents have the strongest affection for them; and if layed hold of by the wings, will give themselves most cruel bites on any part of the body they can reach, as if actuated by despair: and when released, instead of flying away, will often hurry again into the burrow to their young. The noise they make when caught is horrible, and not unlike the efforts of a dumb person to speak. This affection ceases at the time of remigration, which is most exactly about the eleventh of August. They then go off, to a single bird, and leave behind the unfledged young of the later hatches a prey to the Peregrine Falcon, which watches the mouth of the holes for their appearance, compelled as they must soon be by hunger to come out.

FOOD.

THE food of these birds is sprats, or sea-weeds, which makes them excessively rank; yet the young are pickled, and preserved by spices, and by some people much admired.

It appears certain that the Puffins do not breed till their third year. The proof arises from the observations made by the reverend Hugh Davies on the different forms of the bills, among the thousands of this species which he saw wrecked, as I have already mentioned. He remarked them in their several periods of life. Those which he supposes to have been of the first year, were small, weak, destitute of any furrow, and of a dusky colour; those of the second year, were considerably larger and stronger, lighter colored, and with a faint vestige of the furrow at the base; those of more advanced years, were of vivid colors, and great strength. Among the myriads which annually resort to Priestholm, not an individual has ever been observed which had not its bill of an uniform growth. Perhaps the same remark may hold good in respect to the RAZOR-BILL, Br. Zool. i. N<sup>o</sup> 230, Mr. Davies having found multitudes with bills far inferior in strength to those which haunt the island; of an uniform black color, and without the characteristic white furrow, and black grooves.

THE channel between Priestholm and Anglesey has produced some very uncommon fish. The Beaumaris SHARK, Br. Zool. iii. N<sup>o</sup> 50; the MORRIS, N<sup>o</sup> 67; and the trifurcated HAKE, N<sup>o</sup> 84, are new species taken in this sea<sup>x</sup>. I was indebted to the late Mr. William Morris of Holyhead, for that on which I bestowed his name. The reverend Hugh Davies favored me with the two others. The new Mussel, called the umbilicated, Br. Zool. iv. N<sup>o</sup> 76, is also frequently dredged up in the neighborhood of this isle.

<sup>x</sup> The Trifurcated Hake has been classed by its first discoverer the Reverend Hugh Davies in the new genus Batrachoides, and thus defined. BAT. trifurcatus in foveola dorsali pinnæ primæ rudi-

PLANTS.

THE Smyrnum Olusatrum<sup>3</sup>, or Alexanders, almost covers the south-west end of the island, and is greedily eaten (boiled) by sailors who are just arrived from long voyages. The Iris Fœtidissima, or stinking Gladwin, is common about the square tower, and is frequently made into a poultice with oatmeal, and used by the country people with success in the quincy.

I RETURNED to Beaumaris, and from thence BARON-HILL. visited Baron-Hill, the seat of Lord Bulkeley, placed at the head of an extensive lawn sloping down to the town, backed and winged by woods, which are great embellishments to the country. The founder of Baron-Hill was Sir Richard Bulkeley, a most distinguished personage of the name<sup>2</sup>. He built it in 1618: before that time the residence of the family was at Court Mawr in the subjacent mento, serie verrucarum utrinque 8—10, cirro mentali. See Gentleman's Magazine for June 1809.—Extracts of letters from the same acute and most accurate naturalist, on the subject of the "Morris" and the "Beaumaris Shark" are given in the Appendix, No. XV. ED.

<sup>3</sup> Smith, Fl. Br. p. 328. ED.

<sup>2</sup> I will not here break in on my Tour with his history; but, as it may merit the reader's attention, I refer him to the Appendix, N<sup>o</sup> XVI.

town, and afterwards in another house, called Old Place. The present seat has of late been wholly altered, with excellent taste, by its noble owner, by the advice of that elegant architect Mr. Samuel Wyatt.

THE view from Baron-Hill is justly the boast of the island. The sea forms a most magnificent bay, the Menai opening into it with the grandeur of an American river. The limit of the water in front is a semicircular range of rocks and mountains, the chief of Snowdonia, with tops spiring to the clouds, and their bottoms richly cultivated, sloping gently to the water edge. The great promontory Penmaen Mawr, and the enormous mass of Llundudno, are rude but striking features, and strong contrasts to the softer parts of the scenery.

I PROCEEDED on my journey, and at Trefawr passed by a great and rude Cromlech, with the ruins of others adjacent. Reach Plás Gwyn, the seat of my friend* Paul Panton esq; in right of his first wife Jane, daughter of William Jones esq. The house was built by Mr. Jones, and may be reckoned among the best of the island. Here are CROMLECH.

PLAS GWYN.

* This friend of Mr. Peasant died in 1797, and was succeeded by his son of the same name, to whose merit and various good qualities the Editor is restrained from rendering justice, lest he might incur the imputation of flattery, or of obeying too fully the dictates of a warm and zealous friendship. Ed.

preserved two portraits, heads of two prelates, natives of Wales. Humphrey Humphreys, who died bishop of Hereford 1712, aged 63. He was painted by Mrs. Mary Beale, when he was bishop of Bangor; and is represented in lawn sleeves, with dark hair, and a good countenance. The other prelate is Robert Morgan, who died bishop of the same diocese in 1673, and is recorded to have been a considerable benefactor to his cathedral. He is dressed like the former; has short grey hair, a close black cap, and hard countenance.

REDWHARF. FROM Plás Gwyn I made an excursion to Traeth Coch, or Redwharf, a large bay covered with a firm sand; which, on the west side, has so large a mixture of shells, as to be used as a manure in all parts of the island within a reasonable distance. On the east side, about three miles from Plás Gwyn, near the shore, are two rounded mounts on each side of a deep gully leading towards Llanddona church. These seem to have been the work of the Danes, cast up to protect their vessels in their plundering excursions; a calamity to which it appears, from the writings of our poets, this island was much subject.

BWRDD
ARTHUR.

ABOVE Llanddona, is a high hill, called Bwrdd Arthur, or Arthur's round table: the true name was probably Din, or Dinas Sulwy; for a church immediately beneath bears that of Llanfihangel Din Sulwy. On the top of it is a great British post, surrounded by a double row of rude stones with their sharp points uppermost; and in some parts the ramparts are formed of small stones. In the area are vestiges of oval buildings: the largest is formed with two rows of flat stones set on end. These had been the temporary habitations of the possessors. It must have been a place of vast strength: for, besides the artificial defence, the hill slopes steeply on all sides, and the brink, next to the ramparts, is mostly precipitous. It is worth while to ascend this hill for the sake of the vast prospect; an intermixture of sea, rock, and alps, most savagely great.

ABOVE it, the reverend Hugh Davies pointed out to me the Hypericum montanum; and beneath, on the west side, the Cistus hirsutus.

I DESCENDED to the church of Llan-jestyn, remarkable for the tomb of its tutelar saint, St. Estyn, or Jestyn,<sup>(1)</sup> son of Geriant, a worthy knight of Arthur's round table, slain by the Saxons at the siege of London! The figure of the saint represents a man with a hood on his head, a great round beard, and whiskers on the upper and under lip. He has on a long cloak fastened by a broche: in

LLAN-JESTYN.

(1) A description of this effigy of St. Jestyn is given by Mr. Bloxam in the Arch. Camb. for 1874: and an engraving of it, which he pronounces to be very excellent, will be found in the Arch. Camb. for 1847. St. Jestyn is represented in the dress of a hermit, and Mr. Bloxam considers the effigy to be perfectly unique. T.P.

one hand is a staff with the head of some beast on the top; in the other is a scroll with an inscription: round his long cassock is a sash and long cord. This appears by the inscription to have been a votive offering. I shall give it as copied by my worthy and ingenious friend, the honorable DAINES BARRINGTON<sup>a</sup>. “Hic jacet Santtus Yestinus cui “Gwenllian, Filia Madoc et Gryffyt ap Gwilym, “optulit in oblacoem istam imaginem p. salute “animarum s.”<sup>(1)</sup> By the cord it is evident, that the pious Gwenllian thought St. Jestyn to have been a Franciscan; a piece of anachronism not at all uncommon in early times.

PENMYN-
NYDD.

ANOTHER excursion was to Penmynydd, about two miles south of Plás Gwyn, once the residence of the ancestors of Owen Tudor, second husband to Catherine of France, queen dowager of Henry V; “who beyng,” as honest Halle informs us, “young and lustye, folowyng more her owne ap“petyte than frendely consaill, and regardyng
“more her private affection then her open honour, “toke to husband privily (in 1428) a goodly
“gentylman, and a beautiful person, garniged “with manye godly gyftes both of nature and of “grace, called Owen Teuther, a mā brought furth

OWEN
TUDOR.

<sup>a</sup> Archæologia, v. 146.

(1) This offering should be compared with such inscriptions in South Wales, as the following: “Samson posuit hanc crucem pro anima eius.” J.R.

“ and come of the noble lignage and auncient lyne
 “ of Cadwalader, the laste kyng of the Briton- “ nes<sup>b</sup>.” The match, important in its consequences, restored the British race of princes to this kingdom,

No more our long-lost Arthur we bewail:
 All-hail, ye genuine kings; Britannia's issue, hail!

These reigned long, under the title of the house of Tudor; the mixed race having ceased on the accession of Henry VII. grandson to our illustrious countryman.

OWEN himself was unfortunate. He lost his royal consort in 1437, after she had brought him three sons and one daughter, Edmund, Jasper, and Owen; the last embraced a monastic life<sup>c</sup> in the abbey of Westminster, and died soon after; the daughter died in her infancy. It appears, that after the death of their mother, Edmund and Jasper were placed most respectably under the care of Catherine de la Pole, daughter of Michael de la Pole earl of Suffolk; and abbess of Berking. A petition from her, dated 1440, appears on record for the payment of certain money due to her on their account<sup>d</sup>. During the life of the queen, the marriage had been winked at, notwithstanding a law had been made after that event, enacting that no person under severe penalties, should marry<sup>a</sup> queen dowager of England, without the special licence of the king<sup>e</sup>. On the death of Catherine all respect ceased to her spouse: he was seized, and committed first to Newgate, from which he escaped by the assistance of his confessor and servant. On being retaken, he was delivered to the custody of the earl of Suffolk, constable of the castle of Wallingford<sup>f</sup>, and after some time was again committed to Newgate<sup>g</sup>. He made his escape a second time. The length of his second imprisonment does not appear. After a considerable period, high honors were conferred on his two eldest sons, half brothers to the king. In the year 1452, they were both created earls; Edmund was made earl of Richmond, and Jasper, earl of Pembroke. Henry, about this time, was disturbed by the open claim of the duke of York to the succession, and found it prudent to strengthen his interest by all possible means. The Welsh, flattered by the honors bestowed on their young countrymen, ever after faithfully adhered to the house of Lancaster.

<sup>b</sup> Halle's Chr. 41.

<sup>c</sup> Sandford's Geneal. 291.

<sup>d</sup> Rymer, x. 828.

OWEN had besides a natural son, called Dafydd, knighted by his nephew Henry VII. who also bestowed on him in marriage Mary, the daughter and heiress of John Bohun of Midhurst, in Sussex, and with her a great inheritance<sup>h</sup>. Owen was

<sup>e</sup> Drake's Parliam. Hist. ii. 211.

<sup>f</sup> Rymer, x. 685.

<sup>g</sup> The same.

<sup>h</sup> Cumden, i. 204. Dugdale Baron. i. 187.

taken no notice of till the year 1460, when, as a patent expresses it, in regard of his good services, he had a grant of the parks, and the agistment of the parks in the lordship of Denbigh, and the wodewardship of the same lordship<sup>i</sup>. The year following, he fought valiantly under the banners of his son Jasper, at the battle of Mortimer's Cross; would not quit the field, but was taken with several other Welsh gentlemen<sup>k</sup>, beheaded with them soon after at Hereford, and interred in the church of the Grey Friars in that city<sup>l</sup>.

NOTWITHSTANDING the birth of Owen was calumniated, he certainly was of very high descent.

Of a noble race was Shenkin, of the line of Owen Tudor.

Henry VII. early in his reign, issued a commission to Sir John Leiaf, priest Guttun Owen, and a number of others, to make enquiry into his paternal descent; and they, from our Welsh chronicles, proved incontestably, that "he was lineally descended by issue male, saving one woman, from Brutus grandson of Aeneas the Trojan, and that "he was son to Brute in fivescore degrees<sup>n</sup>." I shall drop a little short of this long descent. Owen Tudor was assuredly of high blood. He was seventh in descent from Ednyfed Fychan, counsellor, and leader of the armies of Llewelyn the Great, and a successful warrior against the English. His origin was from Marchudd, one of the fifteen tribes. Ednyfed's wife was Gwenllian, daughter of Rhys, prince of South Wales: so that he might boast of two royal descents, and deliver down a posterity not unworthy of the British empire.

<sup>i</sup> Rymer, xi. 439.      <sup>k</sup> Among whom were Dafydd Llwyd and Morgan ap Reuther. Holinshed, 660.

<sup>l</sup> Leland Itin. iv. 86, viii. 36.

<sup>n</sup> See the return of the commission, &c. in Wynn's Hist. Wales, 331, &c.

OWEN must have been the instrument of his own advancement, and have owed it entirely to his personal merit. His grandfather Tudor ap Gronw was a man of great valour, a favorite of Edward III. and received from him the honor of knighthood. He died and was buried September 19th, 1367, at the friery at Bangor. His fourth son Meredydd was in no higher station than Scutifer to the bishop of Bangor. Having committed a murder, he fled his country, and lived in exile; during which time his wife was delivered of Owen, the subject of these pages. By what means he introduced himself to the English court does not appear; most probably by military services, the usual road to honors in those days.

HOUSE OF PENMYN-
NYDD.

THE remains of the residence of the Tudors to be seen in the present farm-house, are the door of the gateway, and the great chimney-piece of the hall. Some coats of arms, and dates of the building, or time of repairs, are also preserved, with the initial letters of the names of the owners. The

Tudors, for a considerable time before the extinction of their race, assumed the name of Owen. Richard was the last male of the family, and was sheriff of the county in 1657. Margaret, heiress of the house married Coningsby Williams esq; of Glan y gors, in this island, who possessed it during his life. It was afterwards sold to Lord Bulkeley, in whose descendant it still continues.

IN the church of Penmynydd is a most magnificent monument of white alabaster, removed at the dissolution from the abbey of Llanfaes to this place; probably erected in memory of one of the house of Tudor<sup>(1)</sup> who had been interred there. On it is the figure of a man in complete armour, a conic helm, and mail-guard down to his breast. His lady is in a thick angular hood. Their feet rest on lions. Their heads are supported by angels.

CHURCH OF PENMYN-
NYDD.

ABOUT a mile farther I visited Tre-garnedd, a farm-house, in the parish of Llangefni, once the seat of the great Ednyfed Fychan, mentioned in a preceding page. His arms were originally a Saracen's head erased, proper, wreathed or; but after defeating the English army, who were invading our frontiers, and killing three of their chief captains, whose heads he brought to his master

TRE-GARN-EDD.

EDNYFED FYCHAN.

(1) A full account of the Tudors of Penmynydd is given in the Arch. Camb. for 1869. The monuments also are described in that volume, and more fully, in an earlier one, by Mr. Bloxam. T.P.

SIR GRYFF-YDD LLWYD.

Llewelyn the Great, the prince directed, as a reward, that in future he should bear gules, between three Englishmen's heads couped, a cheveron ermin. Directly descended from him were Henry VII. and VIII. Edward VI. Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, and every crowned head in England ever since, besides heroes not less illustrious in their degree. Among them was Sir Gryffydd Llwyd, son of Rhys ap Gryffydd ap Ednyfed Fychan. This gentleman received from Edward I. the honor of knighthood, on bringing him the news of the birth of his son Edward of Caernarvon. He did homage, for his lands in Wales, to the young prince at Chester; but, indignant at the sufferings of his countrymen under the English yoke, meditated a revolt. Between the years 1316 and 1318, he attempted to form an alliance with Edward Bruce, the short-lived king of Ireland. Letters passed between them, but without effect°. At length, from the greatness of his spirit, determined alone to endeavour to free his country from the slavery to which he himself had probably contributed, he took arms in 1322<sup>p</sup>, and for a while over-ran the country with resistless impetuosity. At length he was subdued, taken, and doubtlessly underwent the common fate of our gallant insurgents. I find that he had fortified his house at ° Wynn's Hist. Wales, 311.

<sup>p</sup> Powel, 383.

Tre-garnedd with a very strong foss and rampart, and made another strong hold about three quarters of a mile distant, in the morass of Malltraeth, called Ynys Cefenni; which he insulated, by bringing round it the waters of the river Cefni<sup>a</sup>: both are still remaining. The foss is nearly perfect, and near four yards deep and eight wide. His daughter Morfydd, one of his coheiresses<sup>r</sup>, conveyed by marriage this estate, being her portion, to Madog Gloddaeth; which followed the succession of that house till 1750, when it was alienated by the late Sir Thomas Mostyn to Mr. Owen Williams.

THE name of this place is taken from an immense Carnedd, or heap of stones, surrounded with great upright stones in an adjacent field. It seems to have beneath it passages formed on the sides and tops with flat stones, or flags. These were the repositories of the dead<sup>s</sup>. Not that bones or urns are always discovered in them; for the founders, like those of the pyramids of Egypt, appear often to be disappointed in their hopes of having their reliques lodged in those labored Mausoleums.

GREAT
CARNEDD.

A FEW years ago, beneath a carnedd similar to that at Tregarnedd, was discovered, on a farm called Bryn-celli-ddu, near the seat of Sir Nicholas Bayley, a passage three feet wide, four feet two or three inches high, and about nineteen feet and a half long, which led into a room, about nine feet in diameter, and seven in height. The form was an irregular hexagon, and the sides composed of six rude slabs, one of which measured in its diagonal eight feet nine inches. In the middle was an artless pillar of stone, four feet eight inches in circumference. This supported the roof, which consisted of one great stone, near ten feet in diameter. Along the sides of the room was, if I may be allowed the expression, a stone bench, on which were found human bones, which fell to dust almost at a touch: it is probable that the bodies were originally placed on the bench. There are proofs that it was customary with the Gauls to place their dead in that form in cells; and that they added to the head of each body a stone weapon, which served as a pillow†: but nothing of the kind was discovered in this sepulchre<sup>(1)</sup>. The diameter of the incumbent carnedd is from ninety to a hundred feet. This seems to be that which Mr. Rowland takes notice of in his Mona Antiqua<sup>u</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> Rowlands's MSS.

<sup>r</sup> Sebright MSS.

<sup>s</sup> See Borlase's Cornwall, p. 207, tab. xvii. fig. i. iii, and his Scilly Islands, 29, 30, tab. ii. at p. 19.

† La Religion de Gaulois, ii. 312, plate 42.

(1) This would be a Welsh râth, but whether it was originally meant to have been a râth for the dead (bedd-rawd), or a râth for the living in winter (gauaf-rawd), is not quite clear. J.R.

<sup>u</sup> P. 94, tab. vii.

I MUST not omit to mention the great patriarch of Tregaiian, a chapelry of this parish, who lived in the year 1580, and died at the age of 105; his name was William ap Howel ap Jerwerth. He had by his first wife twenty-two children, by his second, ten, by his third, four, and by his two concubines, seven; in all forty-three. His eldest son was eighty-four in 1581, and his eldest daughter seventy-two; and his youngest son then only two years and a half old; so that between his first child and last there was an interval of eighty-two years. Nor did there less than three hundred people descend from this stock in that interval, eighty of whom lived in this parish. He was small of stature, of a cheerful convivial temper; but spare in his diet, living mostly on milk. He passed his time in rural employments, and at his leisure in fishing and fowling; and preserved his memory and senses to the last.

PATRIARCH OF TRE-GAIAN.

* I RETURNED to Plás Gwyn, and from thence crossed Redwharf, to the western horn of the bay, called Castell-mawr, a small cape, flat at top, and joined to the land by a low isthmus. It is composed of lime-stone, which is carried to distant parts in coasting vessels, which lie in a small channel near the rock, and by their numbers frequently enliven the view. Roman coins have been found in this neighborhood; but no vestiges exist of there having been any station. Beyond Castell- mawr, on the shore, I saw vast blocks of black marble filled with shells, corolloids, and fungitæ.

CASTELL-
MAWR.

PROCEED near the shore. On the left are the woods of Llugwy, extensive for this island. This estate formerly belonged to the Llwyds; at present to lord Boston. Not far from the road, in the lands of Llugwy, is a most stupendous Cromlech, of a rhomboid form. The greatest diagonal is seventeen feet six inches, the lesser fifteen; the thickness three feet nine; its height from the ground only two feet: it was supported by several stones. The Welsh, who ascribe everything stupendous to our famous British king, called it Arthur's Quoit. In the woods are some druidical circles, nearly contiguous to each other.

CROSS Llugwy sands, and soon after ride over DULAS BAY. Dulas bay, likewise dry at low-water. It runs about a mile and a half into the country, and is frequented by small vessels, which take off the oats and butter of these parts. Off the mouth is Ynys Gadarn, a small island. Go by Llys Dulas, the seat of Mrs. Lewis; and soon after within sight of LLAN-ELIAN. the church of Llan-Eliau, seated on the rocks not far from the sea. It is handsomely built, and makes a considerable figure among the churches of this part of Wales. It is dedicated to St. Eliau, surnamed Gannaid, or the Bright. He was formerly a most popular saint, and had a great concourse of devotees, who implored his assistance to relieve them from a variety of disorders. To gain his favor they made considerable offerings, which were deposited in the church in Cyff Ælian, or St. Ælian's chest. These amounted to so large a sum, that the parishioners purchased with it three tenements, for the use of the church, which belong to the living to this day.

NEAR this place, Caswallon Law-hir<sup>(1)</sup>, or Caswallon Longimanus, kept his Llys, or court. He had made a grant of lands and several priveleges to this church, among which was that of a Nawddfa or sanctuary. This was one of the seven church-patron saints in Anglesey, which were entitled in capite to several tenures; one of the conditions of which seems to have been the preservation of these places of refuge<sup>x</sup>.

FROM hence I visited Tryschwyn mountain; on part of which, called Parys mountain (probably from a Robert Parys, who was chamberlain of North Wales<sup>y</sup> in the reign of Henry IV.) is the most considerable body of copper ore perhaps ever

PARYS MOUNTAIN.

(1) There is only one Caswallon in British history, and that was Cassivelaunus: the others have been fashioned by touching up the Welsh name Cadwallon. The one here meant would seem to have been Cadwallon, the father of Maelgwn Gwynedd, for he was called Cadwallon Law-hir. J.R.

<sup>x</sup> Rowlands' Mona Antiq. 133. 147. The other saints, or patron-churches, were St. Beuno, St. Kybi, St. Cadwaladr, St. Peirio, St Machutus or Mechel, and St. Cyngar.

<sup>y</sup> There was another of the same name in the reign of Edward III.

known. The external aspect of the hill, which rises into enormous rocks of coarse white quartz, is extremely rude. The ore is lodged in a bason, or hollow, and has on one side a small lake, on whose waters, distasteful as those of Avernus, no bird is known to alight. The whole of this tract has, by the mineral operations, assumed a most savage appearance. Suffocating fumes issue from the burning heaps of copper, and extend their baneful influence for miles around. In the adjacent parts vegetation is nearly destroyed; even the mosses and lichens of the rocks have perished: and nothing seems capable of resisting the fumes but the purple Melic grass<sup>z</sup>, which flourishes in abundance.

I HAVE little doubt but that this mine was worked in a very distant period. Vestiges of the antient operations appear in several parts, carried on by trenching, and heating the rocks intensely, then suddenly pouring on water, so as to cause them to crack or scale; thus awkwardly supplying the use of gunpowder<sup>a</sup>. Pieces of charcoal have also been found, which prove that wood was made use of for that purpose. As the Britons imported all works in brass, it is certain that the Romans were the undertakers of these mines; and it is very probable that they sent the ore to Cuer-hên to be smelted, the place where the famous cake of copper was discovered<sup>b</sup>. They might likewise have had a smelting hearth in this island; for a round cake of copper was discovered at Llan-fuethle, a few miles from this place. Its weight was fifty pounds, and it had on it a mark resembling an L.

<sup>z</sup> Melica Cerulea, Lightfoot, Fl. Scot. i. 96. Aira Cerulea, Hud. 50*n* Fl. Angl. i. 33.

<sup>a</sup> See vol. i. p. 71 of the present work.

IN the year 1762, one Alexander Frazier came into Anglesey in search of mines. He visited Parys mountain; called on Sir Nicholas Bayley, and gave him so flattering an account of the prospect, as induced him to make a trial, and sink shafts. Ore was discovered; but before any quantity could be gotten, the mines were overpowered with water. In about two years after, Messrs. Roe and Co. of Macclesfield applied to Sir Nicholas for a lease of Penrhyn du mine in Caernarvonshire; with which they were, much against their wills, compelled to take a lease of part of this mountain, and to carry on a level and make a fair trial. The trial was accordingly made: ore was discovered; but the expences overbalanced the profits. They continued working to great loss: and at length determined to give the affair up. They gave their agent orders for that purpose; but he, as a final attempt, divided his men into ten several companies, of three or four in a partnership, and let them sink shafts in various places, about eight hundred yards eastward of a place called the Golden Venture, on a presumption that a spring which issued from near the spot, must come from a body of mineral. His conjecture was right; for in less than two days they met with, at the depth of seven feet from the surface, the solid mineral, which proved to be that vast body which has since been worked to such advantage. The day that this discovery was made was March 2d, 1768; which has ever since been observed as a festival by the miners. Soon after this discovery, another adventure was begun by the reverend Edward Hughes, owner of part of the mountain, in right of his wife Mary Lewis of Llys Dulas: so that the whole of the treasure is the property of Sir Nicholas Bayley<sup>c</sup> and himself.

<sup>b</sup> Tour in Wales, vol. i. p. 83.

THE ORE. THE body of copper ore is of unknown extent. The thickness has been ascertained, in some places, by the driving of a level under it, several years ago, and it was found to be in some places twenty four yards. The ore is mostly of the kind called by Cronstedt, Pyrites cupri flavo viridescens; and contains vast quantities of sulphur. It varies in degrees of goodness; some of it is rich, but the greater part poor in quality.

THERE are other species of copper ore found here. Of late a vein of the Pyrites cupri griseus

<sup>c</sup> At present of the earl of Uxbridge. Ed.

of Cronstedt, about seven yards wide, has been discovered near the west end of the mountain: some is of an iron grey, some quite black; the first contains sixteen lb. of copper per cwt. the last, forty. An ore has been lately found, in form of loose earth, of a dark purplish color; and the best of it has produced better than eight in twenty. Some years ago, above thirty pounds of native copper was found in driving a level through a turbery; some was in form of moss, some in very thin leaves.

THE ore is quarried out of the bed in vast masses; is broken into small pieces; and the most pure part is sold raw, at the rate of about 3*l.* to 6*l.* per ton, or sent to the smelting-houses of the respective companies to be melted into metal. Mr. Hughes has great furnaces of his own at Ravenhead, near Liverpool, and at Swansea, in South Wales. An idea of the wealth of these mines may be formed, by considering that the Macclesfield company have had at once fourteen thousand tons of ore upon bank, and Mr. Hughes's, thirty thousand.

THE more impure ore is also broken to the size of about hen's eggs; but in order to clear it from the quantity of sulphur with which it abounds, as well as other adventitious matter, it must undergo the operation of burning. For that purpose it is placed between two parallel walls of vast length: some kilns are twenty, others forty, and fifty yards in length; some ten, others twenty feet wide, and above four feet in height. The space between is not only filled, but the ore is piled many feet higher, in a convex form, from end to end: the whole is then covered with flat stones, closely luted with clay; and above is placed a general integument of clay, and small rubbish of the work, in order to prevent any of the fumes from evaporating. Of late some kilns have been constructed with brick arches over the ore, which is found to be the best method of burning. Within these few years, attempts have been made to preserve the sulphur from escaping; and that is done by flues, made of brick, whose tops are in form of a Gothic arch, many scores of feet in length: one end of these opens into the beds of copper which are to be burnt. Those beds are set on fire by a very small quantity of coal, for all the rest is effected by its own phlogiston. The volatile part is confined, and directed to the flues; in its course the sulphureous particles strike against their roofs, and fall to the bottom in form of the finest brimstone; which is collected, and carried to adjacent houses, where it is melted into what is called in the shops stone brimstone.

BRIMSTONE.

THE beds of copper, thus piled for burning, are of vast extent. Some contain four hundred tons of ore, others two thousand. The first require four months to be completely burnt; the last, near ten. Thus burnt, it is carried to proper places to be dressed, or washed, and made merchantable. By this process the ore is reduced to a fourth part in quantity, but considerably improved in quality: and by this means the water is strongly or richly impregnated with copper, which is dissolved by the sulphuric acid; and is collected or precipitated again by iron in the above-described pits. The iron is all dissolved.

BUT a far richer produce of copper is obtained from the water lodged in the bottom of the bed of ore, which is highly saturated with the precious metal. This is drawn up, either by means of whimsies or windmills, to the surface, and then distributed into numbers of rectangular pits thirty-six feet long, some pits more some less, twelve to fifteen feet broad, and twenty inches deep. To speak in the language of the adept, Venus must make an assignation with Mars, or this solution will have no effect. In plain English, a quantity of iron must be immersed in the water. The kind of iron is of no moment: old pots, hoops, anchors, or any refuse will suffice; but of late, for the convenience of management, the adventurers procure new plates, four feet long, one and a half broad, and three quarters of an inch thick. These they immerse into the pits; the particles of copper instantly are precipitated by the iron, and the iron is gradually dissolved into a yellow ochre; great part of it floats off by the water, and sinks to the bottom. The plates, or the old iron (as it happens) are frequently taken out, and the copper scraped off; and this is repeated till the whole of the iron is consumed. The copper thus procured differs little from native copper, and is prized accordingly, and sold for prices of 25*l.* to 45*l.* a ton.

PRECIPITATED COPPER.

THIS mode of precipitation is not new; it has been practised long in the Wicklow mines in Ireland, and above a century in those of Hern-grundt, in Hungary, where the precipitate is called Ziment Copper<sup>a</sup>. The waters of the Hungarian mines are much more strongly impregnated with copper than those of Parys mountain. The first effects its operation in twelve or about twenty days; the last requires two months. Horse-shoes, iron made in shape of hearts, and other forms, are put into the foreign waters, and when apparently transmuted, are given as presents to curious strangers.

THE ore is not got in the common manner of mining, but is cut out of the bed in the same manner as stone is out of a quarry. A hollow is now formed in the solid ore open to the day, and extends about an hundred yards in length, about forty yards in breadth, and twenty-four yards in depth. The ends are at present undermined, but supported by vast pillars and magnificent arches, all metallic; and these caverns meander far under ground. These will soon disappear, and thousands of tons of ore be gotten from both the columns and roofs. The sides of this vast hollow are mostly perpendicular, and access to the bottom is only to be had by small steps cut in the ore; and the curious visitor must trust to them and a rope, till he reaches some ladders, which will conduct him the rest of the descent. On the edges of the chasms are wooden platforms, which project far; on them are windlasses, by which the workmen are lowered to transact their business on the face of the precipice. There suspended, they work in mid air, pick a small space for a footing, cut out the ore in vast masses, and tumble it to the bottom with great noise. In such situations they form caverns, and there appear safely lodged, till the rope is lowered to convey them up again. Much of the ore is blasted with gunpowder, eight tons of which, I am informed, is annually used for the purpose.

<sup>a</sup> Brown's Travels, 68. Keyser's Travels, iv. 70.

NATURE has been profuse in bestowing her mineral favors on this spot; for above the copper ore, and not more than three quarters of a yard beneath the common soil, is a bed of yellowish greasy clay, from one to four yards thick, containing lead ore, and yielding from six hundred to a thousand pounds weight of lead from one ton; and one ton of the metal yields not less than fifty-seven ounces of silver. Mixed with the earth, are frequently certain parts of the color of cinnabar:

whether these are symptomatic of the sulphurous arsenical silver ores, or of quicksilver, I will not pretend to decide. Something interferes with the successful smelting of this earth in the great: in-somuch that it has not yet been of that profit to the adventurers, which might reasonably be expected from the crucible assays of it; and they have at this time about eight thousand tons on bank undisposed of. This place has been worked for lead ore in very distant times. In the bottom of the pool was found an antient smelting hearth of grit-stone, and several bits of smelted lead, of about four inches in length, two in breadth, and half an inch thick.

THESE works have added greatly to the population of the island; for about fifteen hundred persons are employed, who, with their families, are supposed to make near eight thousand persons, getting their bread from these mines. The little village of Amlwch, the port of the place, is en-creasing fast, and the market grows considerable. At the season of the greatest work, Mr. Hughes's men alone receive, for many weeks, two hundred pounds in one week, and a hundred and fifty in another, merely for subsistence. The port is no more than a great chasm, between two rocks, running far into land, and dry at low-water; into which sloops run, and lie secure to receive their lading*.

* An ampler account of the present state of Parys mountain is

FROM Parys mountain I visited the north-west parts of the island, and passed over a sandy plain country, fertile in grain. See to the right, the Middle Mouse; and farther on is the third small isle of that name, called the West Mouse. Between these, on the coast of Anglesey, is Kemlyn bay, where there is safe anchorage for small vessels. Not far from hence I saw the noted quarry of marble, common to this place, some parts of Italy, and to Corsica, and known in the shops by the name of Verde di Corsica. Its colors are green, black, white, and dull purple irregularly disposed. In different blocks one or other of the colors are frequently wanting; but among the green parts are often found narrow veins of a most elegant and silky white asbestos. It is a compound species of marble; part is calcareous, and may be acted on by aqua fortis; the green parts are composed chiefly of magnesian earth: the whole constituting what is commonly called Serpentine. It is apt to be intersected by small cracks, or by asbestine veins, therefore incapable of taking a high polish. This quarry lies on the lands of Monachty, in the parish of Ilan-Fair-Ynghornwy; and it is found again in the isle of Skerries, off this parish<sup>f</sup>.

MARBLE
QUARRY.

given in the Appendix No. XVII. for which, and for other assistance in rendering this work more perfect, the Editor is indebted to his valued friend Paul Panton esq. of Plás gwyn. ED.

<sup>f</sup> The sum of one thousand pounds has recently been given for a quarry of a similar species of stone in the parish of Llanfechell, from

NEITHER the quarry nor the asbestos are at present in use. The antients set a high value on the last, a price equal to that of pearls. They wove napkins of it, and at great feasts diverted themselves (in order to clean them) to fling them into the fire, from which they returned unhurt, and with improved lustre. They likewise made of it shrouds for the bodies of great men, before they were placed on the funeral pile, and by that means preserved their ashes pure from those of the wood. The antients believed that it was found only in India, in places where showers never fell, and the residence of dire serpents<sup>g</sup>.

CARREG-
LWYD.

THE SKERRIES.

FROM hence I visited Carreg-Lwyd, then the residence of that worthy and convivial gentleman John Griffith esq. From thence I made an attempt to sail to the Skerries, called in Welsh, Ynys y Moel rhonicaid, or the isle of Seals, distant about a league from this place, and about half a league from the nearest part of Anglesey; a turbulent sea made us return with speed. The island is very rocky, but affords food for a few Sheep, Rabbits, and Puffins. The light-house, placed on it about the year 1730, is of great use to ships sailing be-whence are procured slabs of large size, and capable of receiving a good polish. ED. This note figures in the Errata, where we read—

The editor was misinformed; the slabs are merely coated with small pieces of serpentine, which are so skilfully united as to deceive the eye. J.R.

<sup>g</sup> Plinii Nat. Hist. lib. xix. c. 1.

tween Ireland and the ports of Chester and Liverpool. The produce from the tonnage, about the year 1759, was 1100*l.* a year; of which Ireland contributed 400*l.* British vessels paid 1*d.* per ton, aliens 2*d.* Fish sport about the rocky sides in most amazing multitudes, and appear even crowding their backs above water; these are chiefly the Cole-fish and Whiting Pollacks: Cod-fish lurk beneath in abundance, and the beautiful Wrasses, &c. are frequently caught.

THIS isle formerly belonged to the cathedral of Bangor, which claimed an exclusive right of fishing on its shores. The right of the prelates of that see had been, by some neglect, invaded; and the Griffiths of Penrhyn usurped the privilege, by having in the isle what was called a Wele, a bed or small possession<sup>h</sup>. About 1498, bishop Dean exerted himself, and in person resumed the fishery, and on the 8th of October took twenty-eight “fishis called Grapas.” when Sir William Griffith sent “his son and heire apparante, with dyvers men in harnes, wiche ryetowsely in the seid countie of Anglesey, within the seid bishope’s diocese, took the seid fishis from the servants of the seid bishope.” But the honest prelate caused him to make restitution, and established his right as lord of the fisheries of the island<sup>i</sup>. A successor of his,

<sup>h</sup> Record of Caernarvon, in the Bibliotheca Litteraria, 20.

<sup>i</sup> Willis’s Bangor, 245.

Nicholas Robinson, was not so tenacious; but, according to Mr. Willis<sup>k</sup>, alienated the isle to one of his sons. Between forty and fifty years ago, William Robinson esq; of Monach-ty in this county, and of Gwersillt, in Denbighshire, the last male descendant, perished in a storm in his return from this dreary spot, with about a dozen people who MONACH-TY. had unfortunately attended him. Monach-ty, or the house of the Monks, had been part of the possessions of the abbey of Conwy, and alienated by the same prelate to his son.

LET me record that a few years ago were found, on a farm called Ynys y Gwyddel, in the parish of Llanflewyn, four miles east of Carreg Lwyd, three golden bracelets, and a golden Bulla, in high preservation. Two of the former I purchased, and preserved as curious memorials of the residence of the Romans in antient Mona.

FROM Carreg-Lwyd I rode to Holyhead, about eleven or twelve miles distant. Passed by Llanfachreth and Llanynghenedl to Rhyd-Pont bridge, where a very small river-like channel insulates the great promontory. Cross Towyn y Capel, a low sandy common, bounded on one side by rocks, over which in high winds the sea breaks in a most awful and stupendous manner, and which are justly dreaded by mariners. In the middle of the common is an artificial mount, on which are the ruins of Capel St. Ffraid. I have no kind of doubt but that, prior to the chapel, it had been the site of a small fort; for I never saw artificial elevations given to any but works of a military kind. This common abounds with the shells called the FASCATED WREATH, Br. Zool. iv. N<sup>o</sup> 119, and the ZONED SNAIL, N<sup>o</sup> 133.

<sup>k</sup> The same. The bishop calls it Seynt Danyel's Isle.

LAND-SHELLS.

NOT far from hence, between Bodior and Rhyd-Pont, in Rhoscolyn parish, is a fossil not frequently found. A green amianthus, or brittle asbestos, is met with in great plenty, in a green serpentine, similar to that at Monach-ty; but by reason of the inflexible quality of its fibres, not applicable to the same uses.

AMIANTHUS.

WITHIN two miles of Towyn y Capel is the town of Holyhead; seated on a noted and safe harbour, guarded at its mouth from the winds by Ynys GYBI—the island of St. Gybi—surnamed Corineus, son of Solomon duke of Cornwal; who, after studying some years in Gaul, returned to Britain, and fixed his see at the place called now Caer Gybi, and Holyhead<sup>1</sup>. In honour of his instructor, St. Hilarius, bishop of Poitiers, he bestowed his name on one of the headlands; the same which goes also under that of St. Elian's.

HOLYHEAD.

THE town is small, but greatly resorted to by passengers to and from the kingdom of Ireland; and is the station of the packets, five of which are in constant employ; are stout vessels, and well manned.

TOWN.

<sup>1</sup> Cressy's Ch. Hist. 149.

CHURCH. THE church dedicated to St. Gybi, is an antient structure, embattled, with the inside of the porch, and the outside of part of the transept, rudely carved. On the outside of the last is a dragon, a man leading a bear with a rope, and other gross representations. St. Gybi is said to have founded a small monastery here, about the year 380<sup>m</sup>; and Maelgwyn Gwynedd, who began his reign about the year 580, a college<sup>n</sup>. This prince was styled Draco Insularis; perhaps the dragon engraven on the church may allude to him. Others assert, that the founder of this college was Hwfa ap Cynddelw, lord of Llys Llifon, in this island, and one of the fifteen tribes of North Wales, and cotemporary with Owen Gwynedd<sup>o</sup>. The head of the college was called Penclas or Pencolas and was one of the spiritual lords of Anglesey; the archdeacon of the isle was one; the abbot of Penmon the other. His Latin title was Rector, as appears by the antient seal, inscribed Sigillum Rectoris et capituli Ecclesia de CAER GYBI<sup>p</sup>. I am not acquainted with the number of prebendaries; but they were twelve at lest, that number being found on the pension list in 1553<sup>q</sup>, at 1*l.* each.

<sup>m</sup> Tanner, 699.

<sup>n</sup> Hist. Anglesey, 29.

<sup>o</sup> The same, 699.

<sup>p</sup> The same, 30.

<sup>q</sup> Willis's Abbies, i. 303.

HOLYHEAD CHURCH.

Before the dissolution, I find that the rector, or provost, for so he is also styled, had thirty-nine marks, one chaplain had eleven, and the other two the same between them<sup>r</sup>. The whole value, in the 26th of Henry VIII. was esteemed at 24*l.* The English monarch had the gift of the provostship. Edward III. bestowed what was called the provostship of his free chapel of Caer-Cube, on his chaplain Thomas de London; for which the king, in 1351, dispensed with his services to himself<sup>s</sup>. James I. granted this college to Francis Morris and Francis Philips. It became afterwards the property of Rice Gwynne esq; who bestowed on Jesus college, Oxford, the great tithes, for the maintenance of two fellows and as many scholars<sup>t</sup>; and since that time the parish is served by a curate nominated by the college.

NEAR the church stood, in old times, a chapel called Eglwys y Bedd, or the church of the Grave; and Capel Llan y Gwyddel, or the chapel of the Irishman. Sirigi,<sup>(1)</sup> a king of the Irish Picts, in-

EGLWYS Y
BEDD.

<sup>r</sup> Willis's Bangor, 201.

<sup>s</sup> Newcourt's Repertorium, i. 453.

<sup>t</sup> Tanner, 699, and Hist. Anglesey, 31.

(1) Sirigi, so far from being king of Irish Picts, was probably the leader of pirates consisting possibly of Danes from Dublin, and his name was most likely Sitric: Rowlands in his Mona Antiqua calls him Siric the Rover. He is not likely to have been canonized, but an Irish bishop Siric appears in the Martyrology of Donegal. The Cadwalon in question was not Cadwalon Law-hir, but a Cadwalon who lived in the 10th century. One cannot blame Pennant for not having gone more deeply into these matters, but the curious thing is that vaded this country, and was here slain by Caswallon Law Hir, or Caswallon the long handed, who reigned about the year 440<sup>n</sup>. Sirigi was canonized by his countrymen, and had in this chapel a shrine, in high repute for many miracles. This place had distinct revenues from the collegiate church. At length it fell to ruin, and was disused for ages. In removing the rubbish, not many years ago, a stone coffin was found with bones of a stupendous size; but we must not suppose these to have been the reliques of Sirigi; which had been carried away by some Irish rovers, and deposited in the cathedral of Christ Church in Dublin<sup>s</sup>.

ROMAN
FORT.

THE precinct of the church-yard clames a far higher antiquity than the church. It is a square of two hundred and twenty feet by a hundred and thirty. Three sides are enclosed with strong walls, seventeen feet high, and six feet thick; the fourth side is open to the precipitous rocks of the harbour, and never had been walled, being intended for ships to retire to, and receive the benefit of protection from this inclosure. At each corner of the wall is an oval tower. The masonry of the whole is evidently Roman: the mortar very hard, and mixed men still go on writing the account of the so-called expulsion of the Irish from Wales, by travestying the history of the incursions of the Danes and the Norsemen. J.R.

<sup>n</sup> Poicel, Pref. 15.

<sup>s</sup> Hist. Anglesey, 34, 35.

with much coarse pebble. Along the walls are two rows of round holes, about four inches in diameter; which penetrate them. They are in all respects like those at Segontium, and nicely plastered within.

THE use of this harbour to the Romans, in the passage from various places to the ports of Lancashire and that of Chester, is very evident. They could not find a better place to run into, in case of hard weather, than this, as it projected farthest into the Vergivian sea; so that they could make it with less danger of being embayed than in any other place. If (as is very probable) they had commerce with Ireland, no place was better adapted for it. The Romans, it is true, never made a settlement in that country, but they certainly traded with it, even in the time of Agricola, “when its ports and harbours were better known, “from the concourse of merchants for the purposes “of commerce.”

I TOOK a walk from the town to the top of The Head, in search of other antiquities. In my way, saw the ruins of Capel y Gorlles, one of several which are scattered about this holy promontory. On the side which I ascended, my course was interrupted by a huge dry wall, in many places regularly faced, and ten feet high in some of the most entire parts, and furnished with an entrance. On the Pen y Gaer Gybi, or the summit of the mountain, are foundations of a circular building, strongly cemented with the same sort of mortar as the fort in the town. It seems to have been a

† Tacitus, Vita Agricolaë.

A PHAROS. Pharos, a necessary director in these seas.

FROM the top of this mountain I had a distinct view of Holyhead: it being at that time high-water, and the channel filled on each side of Rhyd-Pont bridge. The isle is of unequal breadth, and greatly indented.

THE part of the Head fronting the sea, is either an immense precipice, or hollowed into most magnificent caves. Birds of various kinds breed in the rocks; among them are, Peregrine Falcons, Shags, Herons, Razor-bills, and Guillemots. Their eggs are sought after for food; and are gotten by means of a man, who is lowered down by a rope held by one or more persons. Within memory, the person let down, by his weight overpowered the other, and pulled him down; so that both perished miserably.

I RETURNED over Rhyd-Pont bridge, and along the great road (which is excellent) towards Bangor. A little on the left is Presaddfed, the seat of Mrs. Roberts, formerly belonging to the Owens. On the site stood the mansion of Ilfafu ap Cynddelw, before mentioned. He held his estate in fee by attendance at the prince's coronation, and bearing up the right side of the canopy over the prince's head at that solemnity. The bishop, who was first chaplain, also held some land by the office of crowning him.

NEAR the comfortable inn called the Gwindy, in the middle of the island, on the great road, is Bodychan, an antient building, once the seat of Rhys ap Llewelyn ap Hwlkyn, first sheriff of this county, and a potent man in the time of Henry VII. The family afterwards took the name of the place, and flourished for many generations. The founder, Rhys ap Llewelyn ap Hwlkin, went to Bosworth field to assist Henry VII. with a company of foot; in return, he was sworn sheriff of Anglesey for life, durante termino vitæ suæ. He made his house (now converted into a barn) the county jail, the dungeon whereof is still to be seen. In the last century it passed to the Sparrows of Red Hill, by the marriage of the heiress of this place.

BODYCHAN.

ON the right is the church of Llantrissant, remarkable for the monument of the Reverend Hugh Williams, D.D. an ancestor of the families of Wynnstay, and Bodllewyddan, and father to Sir William Williams, speaker of the house of commons, and solicitor general in 1687. He was<sup>z</sup> second son to

LLANTRIS-SANT.

<sup>z</sup> W. Williams's eldest son was ancestor of the Williams's of Ty-fry, who still possess Chwæu.

LLANTRISSANT CHURCH.

William Williams, of Chwaen, in this island, whom the heralds derive from Kadroed Hardd, a British cheiftain. He married Emma Dolben, of Caeau Gwynnion, near Denbigh. His epitaph tells us the rest of his history.

Heic Jacet

Hugo Williams de Nantanog
in comitatu Anglesey, Theologicæ

Doctor.

decessit 28 die Septembris

Anno Domini 1670

Anno Ætatis suæ 74

Respice finem.

ON a stone level with the ground beneath the monument is the following inscription.

Hugh Williams de Nantanog S. S. Theologiæ professor hujus Ecclesiæ et illius de Llanrhuddlud Rector. Prebendarius de Vaynol in dioces Asaphen. Comportionarius de Llanddinam in agro Mongomeriensi. 21 Septembris Ætatis anno 74. Dmi 1670, libentissime pro gregibus, fidei suæ commissis impendens et impensus 'p'claro certamine decertato cursum peregit.

Disce,

Boni Pastoris interest non tantum pervigilare, sed impendere et impendi pro gregibus.

BEFORE I leave the island, I beg leave to communicate a brief account of its population, in the manner I received it from Paul Panton esq; whose remarks on the same subject have before appeared in a far more respectable place<sup>z</sup>.

POPULATION OF ANGLE-SEY.

BY an account given on the 13th of August, 1563, there were 2010 households, or families, in Anglesey<sup>a</sup>: allowing five to a family, the whole number of inhabitants in that period was 10,050. In 1776, the number of houses in Anglesey was about 3956: allowing five persons to a family, the whole number of inhabitants was at that time 19,780; which wants only 340 of doubling the number of inhabitants in the intervening space<sup>b</sup>.

CAERNARVONSHIRE.

CONTINUE my journey from Porth-aethwy Ferry up a steep road, and soon descend another to BANGOR, a small town seated between two low hills, in a valley opening to the bay of Beaumaris. This is the episcopal seat. The prelate is very indifferently lodged<sup>c</sup>, in a palace near the cathedral;

BANGOR.

<sup>z</sup> Phil. Trans. lxxiii. Part i. p. 180.     <sup>a</sup> Willis's Bangor, 51.

<sup>b</sup> The population of Anglesey in 1795 was estimated at 28,611; in the census of 1801 it is stated to amount to 33,334, exclusive of that of four parishes which made no return, and which are supposed to contain about 1000 souls. ED.

<sup>c</sup> The episcopal residence was much improved by the right reverend John Warren during the time he held the see. ED.

which, from an inscription, appears to have been rebuilt by Bishop Skeffington, who died in 1533, at the abbey of Beaulieu, of which he had been abbot. He directed that his body should be interred there; his heart at Bangor, before the image of the patron saint, St. Daniel.

ST. DANIEL, son of Dynawd, abbot of Bangor ysCoed in Flintshire, first established here a college for the instruction of youth, and support of the clergy of those parts<sup>d</sup>. Cressy called it a monastery, and says it was filled with monks<sup>e</sup>; probably fugitives from the other Bangor, from which it might derive its name. About the year 550, Maelgwyn Gwynedd, one of those gentry, who, growing virtuous in their old-age, “make a sacrifice to God of the Devil’s leavings<sup>f</sup>,” converted the college into a bishoprick, and appointed Daniel to be first bishop. We know not the extent of his diocese. The present, comprehends all Anglesey; Caernarvonshire, except Llysfaen, Eglwys Rhôs, and Llan-gystenin, which belong to St. Asaph, and Llanbeblig to Chester. In Denbighshire it has fourteen parishes; in Montgomeryshire seven.

CATHEDRAL. THE cathedral was destroyed by the insurgent Saxons in the year 1071. It was afterwards rebuilt; for we find that in 1212<sup>g</sup> King John invaded

<sup>d</sup> Willis's Bangor, 53.

<sup>e</sup> Church Hist. 233.

<sup>f</sup> Swijt.

<sup>g</sup> Annal. Menev. in Goodwin, ii. 650.

BANGOR CATHEDRAL.

the country, forced the bishop, Robert of Shrewsbury, from before the altar, and obliged him to pay two hundred hawks for his ransom. In the year 1402 it was reduced again to ruin by the rage of Glyndwr, and remained in that state during ninety years, when the choir was restored by Bishop Dean, or Deny: the body and tower were built by that liberal prelate Thomas Skeffington, in 1532. The tower was to have been raised to double its present height, but the death of the bishop prevented the execution of the design<sup>h</sup>. The windows were made, or glazed, according to the custom of the times, by the piety of different persons, among whom may be reckoned Dean Kyffin, and some of the *Gryffydd*s of Penrhyn<sup>i</sup>.

THERE is nothing remarkable within, except a few tombs. That wise and valiant prince Owen Gwynedd lies beneath an arch, with a flowery cross cut on a flat stone. He died, regretted by his countrymen, and feared by his foes, in 1169. On the floor is a mutilated figure in brass, designed for Richard Kyffin, the active dean of this church in the reigns of Richard III. and Henry VII. He died the 13th of August 1502. The place of his interment still bears the name of Bedd y Deon du, or the grave of the Black Dean, I suppose from his complexion. Several of the bishops are buried here; but, excepted the headless busts of the prelates Rowlands and Vaughan, mutilated in the fanatical times, no remarkable memorials of any of them at present exist. Of the shrine on the left side of the great altar, beneath which, in 1137, was interred the brave and wise prince Gryffydd ap Cynan<sup>k</sup>, not a vestige is to be seen.

TOMBS.

<sup>h</sup> Willis, 21.<sup>i</sup> Willis, 17, 18.

IN antient times here was a parochial church dedicated to St. Mary, which stood behind the palace. It is said to have been founded by King Edgar, in the beginning of the reign of Howel ap Jevaf; who at the same time confirmed the privileges of the see, and endowed it liberally<sup>l</sup>.

FRIERY.

THE house of friers preachers stood a little way out of the town. It was founded as early as the year 1276: Bishop Tanner gives the honour of it to Tudor ap Gronw, lord of Pennynydd and Trecastell in Anglesey, who enlarged or rebuilt it in 1299, and was interred here in 1311. Edward VI. made a grant of the place to Thomas Brown and William Breton. Soon after, it was converted into a free school by Jeffry Glynn, LL.D. an advocate in Doctors Commons, and brother to Bishop Glynn. By his will, proved July 21st, 1557, he left the conduct of it to his brother, and to Maurice Gryffydd bishop of Rochester. They dying before the settlement could be completed, left their power to Sir William Petre, and others; who agreed on the statutes for the master and usher, with the concurrence of the bishop, dean, and chapter, and of Alexander Nowel, dean of St. Paul's, who is said to have composed them<sup>m</sup>. Over the chimney-piece is a fragment of an antient monument to one Gryffydd with a long sword carved on it. On the stair-case is another stone, with the words ap Tudor, probably part of the tomb of the founder Tudor ap Gronw ap Tudor<sup>n</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> Vita Gryffydd ap Cynan in the Sebright MSS.

<sup>l</sup> Willis, 46. 183. Wynn's Hist. Wales, 59.

HUGH LUPUS, in his barbarous inroad into Anglesey, founded a castle at Bangor, in order to carry on his ravages with greater security<sup>o</sup>. The site was wholly unknown, till it was pointed out to me by the reverend E. R. Owen, a gentleman to whom this part of my work is under frequent obligations. It lies nearly a quarter of a mile eastward of the town, on the ridge of hills which bound the south-east side of the vale, and nearly the same distance from the port. The castle stood on a rocky, and, in many parts, a precipitous hill. Three sides of the walls are easily to be traced: on the south-east side they extended a hundred and twenty yards; on the south-west, sixty-six, ending at a precipice; on the north-east they may be traced forty yards, and end in the same manner. On the fourth side, the natural strength of the place rendered a farther defence useless. Mounds of earth tending to a semicircular form, with rocks and precipices, connect the north-east and south-west walls. We know not the time of its demolition: probably as soon as the earl had effected his design, it was suffered to fall to ruin<sup>p</sup>.

CASTLE.

<sup>m</sup> Willis's Bangor, p. 47.    <sup>n</sup> Salisbury Pedigree, 126.

<sup>o</sup> Sebright MSS. in vita Gryffydd ap Cynan.

ON leaving Bangor I took the road towards Conwy. At a small distance from the former, ABER CEGID. crossed Aber Cegid, a small creek, fordable at low-water; from whence are annually exported many millions of slates. The quarries are about four miles distant, near the entrance into Nant Francon, at a small distance from the river Ogwen. They are the property of Lord Penrhyn, who has added greatly to the population of the country by the improvements he has made in the slate business. The quarries are become now the source of a prodigious commerce. When his lordship first came to the estate, not a thousand tons were exported: the country was scarcely passable: the roads not better than very bad horse-paths: the cottages wretched, the farmers so poor, that in all <sup>p</sup> In 1806 was found near Tycoch about two miles from Bangor, a grit-stone eighteen inches in length, and three feet four in circumference, bearing the following inscription. ED.

N-V M-N C -
IMP- CAESAR- M-
AVREL- ANTONINVS
PIVS. ' P' IX- AVC- ARAB

the tract they could not produce more than three miserable teams. At present a noble coach road is made, even beyond Nant Francon, and the terrors of the Benglog quite done away<sup>p</sup>; about a hundred and three broad wheeled carts are in constant employ in carrying the slates down to the port. In the year 1792, upwards of twelve thousand tons were exported; and it is expected that in a very short time the quantity will be increased to sixteen thousand. The port is going to be enlarged; it is always filled with vessels; I saw one of upwards of three hundred tons burden: they are served in rotation, but such are the improvements in our flourishing kingdom, that it is with difficulty the quarries can supply the demand. The slates are sent to Liverpool, and up the Mersey by means of the canal to all the internal parts of the kingdom, and to Hull; from whence is a second exportation: numbers are shipped for Ireland, for Flanders, and even the West Indies.

AT Port Penrhyn his Lordship has established a great manufacture of writing slates. Previously, we were entirely supplied from Switzerland: that trade has now ceased; the Swiss manufacturers are become bankrupt. The number of writing slates manufactured and exported from Port Penrhyn for the last twelve months, is 136,000; the consumption of timber in this very trifling article is upwards of 3000 feet in the year; and the number of workmen employed are from 25 to 30. I must recommend to the curious traveller a ride to the quarries: they will merit his attention, as well as the various improvements made of late years by his lordship. The whole neighborhood is occupied by the houses and cottages of the quarriers, built after the elegant design of Mr. Wyatt; and Ogwen bank is a beautiful lodge for the reception of lord Penrhyn, whenever he chooses to treat his friends with the sight of his laudable changes in the face of this once desolate country.

<sup>p</sup> See my description, p. 314, vol. ii.

PENRHYN. ON the summit of a hill not very remote from Port Penrhyn, commanding a most charming view, stands Penrhyn, an antient house, once beautifully embosomed with venerable oaks. The house is said to have been built on the site of a palace of Roderic Molwynog, prince of Wales, who began his reign in 720. It continued long in our princes. In 987 it was levelled to the ground by Meredydd ap Owen; who, in that year, invaded North Wales, and slew Cadwallon ap Jevaf, the reigning prince. In the time of Llewelyn the Great, it was bestowed, with the whole hundred of Llechweidd Ucha, on Yarddur ap Trahaiarn, a man of rank of that period. Eva, or as she is called by some Energys, one of his descendants, who had, by the customary division of the lands, Penrhyn to her share, bestowed it, with her person, on Gryffydd ap Heilin ap Sir Tudor ap Ednyfed Fychan, originally lord of Bryn Ffanigl. The family flourished for many generations. William Fychan, son of Gwilim ap Gryffydd, and Jonet, daughter of Sir William Stanley of Hooton, and relict of Judge Parys, chamberlain of North Wales and Chester, succeeded, in the 18th of Henry VI. to the estates of his father, and the Judge, and also succeeded the last in his important office of chamberlain of North Wales; an honor continued to several of his posterity, and at this time possessed by lord viscount Bulkeley.

It is remarkable, that in his time the severity of the laws against the Welsh were so rigidly enforced, that he was made denizen of England, on condition that he should not marry a Welsh woman; and accordingly he married a daughter of a Sir William, or Sir Richard Dalton.

IN the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Piers Gryffydd<sup>a</sup>, lord of the place, distinguished himself as a naval officer. He sailed from Beaumaris on the 20th of April 1588, and arrived at Plymouth on the 4th of May, where he was most honorably received by that gallant commander Sir Francis Drake. He shared with the other men of rank and gallantry in the honor of defeating the Spanish armada. After that distinguished victory, he joined with Sir Francis Drake and Sir Walter Raleigh in their different expeditions against the Spaniards in the West Indies; but in the reign of James I. continuing his depredations against the Spaniards after peace was proclaimed, he was called to account, and so harassed by persecution, that to defray the expences he was obliged to mortgage his estate; part to some citizens of London, and part to Jevan Llwyd esq; of Yale: the last of whom, in conjunction with Sir Richard Trevor, bought the whole in 1616, and sold it to the lord keeper Williams in 1622; and the archbishop bequeathed it to Gryffydd Williams, son of his eldest brother, created baronet June 17th 1661. His son Sir Robert, the last owner who inhabited Penrhyn, left three daughters; Frances, first married to Robert Lloyd of Eclusham near Wrexham, afterwards to Edward lord Russel, third son of the first duke of Bedford; Anne, married to Thomas Warburton of Winnington, Cheshire; and Gwen, to Sir Walter Yonge of Devonshire. Lord Russel having no issue, generously resigned his part of the estate to the surviving sisters. Sir George Yonge, grandson of the former, sold his moiety to the late John Pennant, esq; whose son Richard Pennant, lord Penrhyn, possesses the whole by virtue of his marriage with Anne

PIERS
GRYFFYDD.

<sup>a</sup> He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Mostyn, of Mostyn, knight, and had by her three sons, all of whom died young. It is said that he built, or repaired, his ships in Aber Cegid; where there was, till of late years, on the gable end of a house, his initials, P. G. and the date, 1598.

Susannah, daughter and sole heiress of the late General Warburton of Winnington.

THE present buildings stand round a court, and consist of a gateway, chapel, a tower, vast hall, and a few other apartments. By several ruins may be traced its former extent. The house was rebuilt, in the reign of Henry VI. by Guilim ap Gryffydd. The Stanley arms (those of his wife) empaled with his own, were to be seen in the hall windows till the year 1764: by the initials R. G. and date 1575, it appears that Sir Rhys Gryffydd repaired it in that year. It gives me great satisfaction to find, that the place will soon be restored to its former lustre, under the auspices of the present worthy owners, and on the plan of that able architect Mr. S. Wyatt.*

THE only furniture left to this house, which favored of antiquity, was the drinking horn of its hero Piers Gryffydd; out of which I have made libations, in the hospitable reign of the agent Mr. Richard Hughes. It was a large bugle, or horn of an ox, enriched with sculptured silver, and with a chain of the same metal. At one end are the initials of his own name, P. G. and those of his father and mother, R. G. K. or Rhys and Catherine

DRINKING-HORN.

* This plan has been carried into effect; but to particularize the various and wonderful improvements made by the late Lord Penrhyn, would require a much ampler and more detailed description than the editor has allowed himself in his short notes. ED.

Gryffydd. Such horns were in use with Danes, Saxons, Scots and Welsh. We had in old times three species in our royal court, which, by usage, were to be made of those of the ox. The first was Y corn ydd Yfo y BRENIN, or that allotted for the sole use of the king; the second was Corn Cyweithas, or the horn with which the domestics of the palace were to be called; and the third was Corn y Pencynydd, or the horn of the chief huntsman. Each of them was to be worth a pound<sup>a</sup>. To drink out of the royal cup, at great entertainments, was a privilege of the officers of the palace. Thus the governor was to receive a cup of metheglin by the hand of the high steward. The same officer was also dispenser of horns of drink to several others; among them, to the royal porter; who at certain seasons had, besides his horn from the king and queen, another from the master of the horse, which was styled Gwirawd i'r Ebysdyl, or the Waissail cup of the apostle<sup>b</sup>, whom they probably invoked at the time of drinking. This custom was in frequent use in old times. The Danes invoked the highest powers to assist the mighty draught: Help GOT unde MARIA<sup>c</sup>. And the Saxon Ulphus, when he conveyed certain lands to the church of York, quaffed off the horn, DEO et St. Petro<sup>x</sup>. On less serious occasions, on festive days,

<sup>a</sup> Leges Wallicæ, 311.

<sup>b</sup> Journey to London, 179.

<sup>c</sup> Ibid. 17. 47.

<sup>x</sup> Archæologia, iii. 8.

the horn was emptied at one tip, and then blown to show that there was no deceit. The jovial horn was a subject of poetry. Thus Owen Cyfeiliog, the princely Bard<sup>y</sup>, celebrates the Hirlas, or drinking-horn used at feasts in the palace. He writes in a more exalted strain, as the poem was composed immediately after a great victory over the English in Maelor. I lay a translation before my reader, by the same elegant pen to which I have been so frequently obliged.

HIRLAS OWAIN;

OR,

THE DRINKING-HORN OF OWEN.

1.

UPOSE the ruddy dawn of day;
 The armies met in dread array
     On Maelor Drefred's field:
 Loud the British clarions sound,
 The Saxons, gasping on the ground,
     The bloody contest yield.

2.

By Owen's arm the valiant bled;
 From Owen's arm the coward fled
     Aghast with wild affright:
 Let then their haughty lords beware
 How Owen's just revenge they dare,
     And tremble at his sight.

<sup>y</sup> He was prince of Powis, and flourished about the year 1160. See the reverend Ecan Ecan's Collections, p. 7.

HIRLAS OWAIN; OR, THE

3.

Fill the HIRLAS HORN, my boy,
 Nor let the tuneful lips be dry
     That warble Owen's praise;
 Whose walls with warlike spoils are hung,
 And open wide his gates are flung
     In Cambria's peaceful days.

4.

This hour we dedicate to joy;
 Then fill the HIRLAS HORN, my boy,
     That shineth like the sea;
 Whose azure handles, tip'd with gold,
 Invites the grasp of Britons bold,
     The sons of Liberty.

5.

Fill it higher still, and higher,
 Mead will noblest deeds inspire.
 Now the battle's lost and won,
 Give the horn to Gronwy's son;
 Put it into Gwgan's hand,
 Bulwark of his native land,
 Guardian of Sabrina's flood,
 Who oft has dy'd his spear in blood.
 When they hear their chieftain's voice,
 Then his gallant friends rejoice;
 But when to fight he goes, no more
 The festal shout resounds on Severn's winding shore.

6.

Fill the gold-tip'd horn with speed,
 (We must drink, it is decreed.)
 Badge of honour, badge of mirth,
 That calls the soul of music forth!
 As thou wilt thy life prolong,
 Fill it with Metheglin strong.
Gruffudd thirsts, to Gruffudd fill;
 Whose bloody lance is us'd to kill;

Matchless in the field of strife,
 His glory ends not with his life:
 Dragon-son of Cynwyn's race,
Owen's shield, Arwystli's grace:
 To purchase fame the warriors flew.
 Dire, and more dire, the conflict grew;
 When flush'd with Mead, they bravely fought,
 Like Belyn's warlike sons, that Edwin's downfall wrought.

7

Fill the horn with foaming liquor,
 Fill it up, my boy, be quicker;
 Hence away, despair and sorrow!
 Time enough to sigh to-morrow.
 Let the brimming goblet smile,
 And Ednyfed's cares beguile;
 Gallant youth, unus'd to fear,
 Master of the broken spear,
 And the arrow-pierced shield,
 Brought with honor from the field.
 Like an hurricane is He,
 Bursting on the troubled sea.
 See their spears distain'd with gore!
 Hear the din of battle roar!
 Bucklers, swords, together clashing,
 Sparkles from their helmets flashing!
 Hear ye not their loud alarms?
 Hark! they shout—to arms! to arms!
 Thus were Garthen's plains defended,
Maelor fight began and ended.
 There two princes fought, and there
 Was Moruch Vorran's feast exchange'd for rout and fear.

8

Fill the horn: 'tis my delight,
 When my friends return from fight,
 Champion's of their country's glory,
 To record each gallant story.
 To Fnyr's comely offspring fill,
 Foremost in the battle still;

HIRLAS OWAIN; OR, THE

Two blooming youths, in counsel sage,
 As heroes of maturer age;
 In peace, and war, alike renown'd,
 Be their brows with garlands crown'd;
 Deck'd with glory let them shine,
 The ornament and pride of Yngyr's antient line!

9

To Selyf fill, of Eagle-heart,
 Skill'd to hurl the fatal dart:
 With the Wolf's impetuous force
 He urgeth on his headlong course.
 To Tudor next, great Mudoc's son,
 They the race of honor run
 Together in the tented field,
 And both alike disdain to yield.
 Like a lion in the fray,
Tudor darts upon his prey.
 Rivals in the feats of war,
 Where danger call'd, they rush'd from far,
 Till shatter'd by some hostile stroke,
 With horrid clang their shields were broke;
 Loud as the foaming billows roar,
 Or fierce contending winds on Talgath's stormy shore.

10.

Fill the horn with rosy wine,
 Brave Morciddig claims it now,
 Chieftain of an antient line,
 Dauntless heart, and open brow.
 To the warrior it belongs,
 Prince of battles, theme of songs!
 Pride of Powys, Mochnant's boast!
 Guardian of his native coast!—
 But ah! his short-liv'd triumph's o'er,
 Brave Morciddig is no more!
 To his pensive ghost we'll give
 Due remembrance, while we live;
 And in fairy fiction dressed,
 Flowing hair, and sable vest,

The tragic Muse shall grace our songs,
While brave Moreiddig's name the mournful strain prolongs.

11.

Pour out the horn (though he desire it not)
And heave a sigh on Morgan's early grave;
Doom'd in his clay-cold tenement to rot,
While we revere the memory of the brave.

12.

Fill again the HIRLAS HORN.
On that ever-glorious morn,
The Britons and their foes between,
What prodigies of might were seen!
On Gwestyn's plain the fight began;
But Gronwy sure was more than man!
Him to resist, on Gwestyn's plain,
A hundred Saxons strove in vain.
To set the noble Meyric free,
And change his bonds to liberty,
The warriors vow'd. The God of day
Scarce darted his meridian ray,
When he beheld the conquerors steep'd in gore,
And Gwestyn's bloody fight, ere highest, noon was o'er.

13.

Now a due libation pour
To the spirits of the dead,
Who, that memorable hour,
Made the hostile plain their bed.
There the glitt'ring steel was seen,
There the twanging bow was heard,
There the mighty press'd the green,
Recorded by the faithful Bard.
Madoc there, and Meilir brave,
Sent many a Saxon to his grave.
Their drink was Mead; their hearts were true;
And to the head their shafts they drew:
But Owen's guards, in terrible array,
Resistless march along, and make the world give way.

DRINKING-HORN OF OWEN.

14.

Pour the sweet transparent Mead
 (The spear is red in time of need),
 And give to each departed spirit
 The honour and reward of merit.
 What cares surround the regal state,
 What anxious thoughts molest the great,
 None but a prince himself can know,
 And Heav'n, that ruleth kings, and lays the mighty low.

15.

For Daniel fill the horn so green,
 Of haughty brow, and angry mieu;
 While the less'ning tapers shine
 Fill it up with gen'rous wine.
 He nor quarter takes, nor gives,
 But by spoils and rapine lives.
 Comely is the youth and brave;
 But obdurate as the grave.
 Hadst thou seen, in Maelor fight,
 How we put the foe to flight!
 Hadst thou seen the chiefs in arms,
 When the foe rush'd on in swarms!
 Round about their prince they stood,
 And stain'd their swords with hostile blood.
 Glorious bulwarks! To their praise
 Their prince devotes his latest lays.
 Now, my boy, thy task is o'er;
 Thou shalt fill the horn no more.
 Long may the King of kings protect,
 And crown with bliss, my friends elect;
 Where Liberty and Truth reside,
 And Virtue, Truth's immortal bride!
 There may we all together meet,
 And former times renew in heav'nly converse sweet!

R. W.

THE Bards were very liberal of their incense to the great men of this house, especially to Sir Wil*liam Gryffydd*, chamberlain of North Wales. Howel ap Reinallt addressed to him a Cowydd on his being imprisoned by Richard III. along with Lord Strange, for his attachment to the earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. And Lewis Mon thus addresses Sir Gryffydd, on his leading a number of his countrymen to France in the following reign.

Nid â dy fath, odid fydd,
I dir Gien dragywydd.

‘Thy equal (perhaps) will never go to the land of Guienne.’

FROM Penrhyn I visited the church of Llan-degai, antiently called Corarian(<sup>1</sup>), about a mile distant from the house; finely situated on a lofty bank above the Ogwen, and commanding a beautiful view. It is a small but neat structure, in form of a cross, with the tower in the center, supported within by four arches. Here is preserved an alabaster monument of an armed man, and his lady, recumbent. They probably belonged to the neighboring house; but on the dissolution were removed from the friery of Llanfaes, where the persons represented had been interred. A mural monument, with the figure of archbishop John Wil-

LLANDEGAI.

(<sup>1</sup>) This is now Cororion or Corerion, where there is a pool with which a number of fairy tales are associated: see Welsh Fairy Tales in the Cymmrodor, iv. pp. 197—216. J.R.

ARCHBISHOP
WILLIAMS.

liams in his episcopal dress, kneeling at an altar, is placed above the remains of that great prelate. The sight of this monument gave occasion for a beautiful poem by the late reverend Sneyd Davies, preserved in the sixth volume of Dodley's collection. That great prelate was born at Conwy. His father Edmund was sixth son of the neighboring family of Cwchwillan, a branch of that of Penrhyn; his mother Mary, daughter of Owen ap John Owen<sup>a</sup>: the archbishop was their fifth son. In his childish years, with other play-fellows, he was diverting himself with leaping from part of the walls of Conwy down to the shore. The fall was on so critical a part, as ever to secure him from all reproaches of unchastity. I mention this merely to rescue him from the reflections flung on him by that satirical historian Sir Anthony Weldon<sup>b</sup>. At school, which was that of Ruthin, he was a compound of alternate truantry and industry<sup>c</sup>. His talents were soon taken notice of. He entered on public life as chaplain to lord chancellor Egerton; and preaching before the king, so pleased the royal ear, that in 1610 James made him dean of Salisbury; and on the farther discovery of his great abilities, in 1620, dean of Westminster. In 1621, he was appointed lord keeper, in the room of the illustrious Lord Bacon; and in less than a month, nominated to the see of Lincoln. Now placed above restraint, his character began to unfold. His spirit grew beyond the controul of ministers; for, with undaunted courage, he persisted in all that was right: and, being subject to the failings of his country (great passion, pride, and vanity,) sometimes in what was wrong. He discharged his office, foreign as it was to his profession, with distinguished credit nearly five years. Soon after the accession of Charles I. by the influence of the favorite Buckingham, he was suddenly dismissed<sup>d</sup>: for he always had resisted the unreasonable demands of that minion.

<sup>a</sup> Pedigree of the family, MS.

<sup>b</sup> Memoirs.

<sup>c</sup> While at Cambridge he became a Fellow of St. John's college: a letter from him at that period is inserted in the Appendix, No. XVIII.

IN two parts of his conduct I must consider him as a wise but not as a good man:—His advice to his distressed master, in the case of the earl of Strafford, had too great a share of duplicity to be vindicated; perhaps of resentment, for he hated the devoted minister. The spirit of Machiavel arose strong in him, when he spoke of a public and private conscience; and still more strongly when he advised Charles, in case the king could not gain Cromwell by promises of fair treatment, to catch him by some stratagem, and cut him short. He may appear in these instances a great minister, but a bad divine. The infirmity, the inequalities, which are to be met with in men even of first-rate abilities, may be exemplified in his attempt to defend himself from a frivolous accusation; for he fell into the disgraceful crime of subornation of perjury, was censured in the star-chamber, and suffered imprisonment from 1637 to 1640. On his release, irritated against the court, he for a time joined the popular leaders. Let me attribute this (and candor may admit the cause) to the natural violence of his temper; for on all trying occasions he shewed his zeal for the liberty of the subject, and his sincerity to his order. Soon after this, he was, according to an old promise, promoted to the see of York. He was a firm friend to the petition of right<sup>e</sup>, foreseeing that he served both king and people in the support of it. As a friend to the church, he was so successful an advocate, and shewed such eloquence and strength of reasoning, in the debate in May 1641, on taking away the votes of bishops in the house of lords<sup>f</sup>, as to cause the affair to be dropped for that session. In the latter end of the year, when popular fury ran high, he was attacked in Westminster abbey; and with great courage repelled the violence of the mob. This gave rise to the first satirical political print I know of. The prelate is represented in his episcopal dress, a musket on his shoulder, rest in his hand, helmet on his head, and mitre on the ground. The rage of the common people increased, even so far as to seize him in his way to the house of lords, and to tear his robes from his back. Incensed by this, he returned to Westminster abbey (the deanery of which he had been allowed to hold three years in commendam), and, in a fit of passion, induced eleven bishops to join him in a phrenetic protest against all acts that should be done in the house of lords during their forced absence<sup>g</sup>. This brought an impeachment of high treason against them, imprisonment of eighteen months, and in the end a release upon bail, in which the archbishop in particular was bound not to go into his diocese during the disturbances in the county of York<sup>h</sup>. He instantly disobeyed the injunction, followed the king into the city of York, was enthroned there on June 27th, 1642; but immediately driven away by the Hothams. He then retired to his native country, where he ended his life on his birth-day, March 25th, 1650, aged 68. He died at Gloddaeth, the seat of Sir Roger Mostyn, an eminent loyalist; whose lady warned him of the approach of death, the stroke of which he received with exemplary piety, courage, and resignation<sup>i</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> His letter to his countryman Sir John Wynn of Gwedir on this occasion, is given in the Appendix, No. XIX.

<sup>e</sup> Drake's Parliam. Hist. viii. 146.      <sup>f</sup> The same, ix. 334.

<sup>g</sup> Clarendon, ii. 350.

<sup>h</sup> Drake's Parliam. Hist. x. 483.

<sup>i</sup> Philip's Life of Archbishop Williams, 305. His chaplain Haskett, afterwards bishop of Lichfield, composed his epitaph.

CARNEDD
LLEWELYN.

FROM Llandegai I descended, and crossed the wooden bridge (now changed into a very handsome one of stone), over the furious torrent Ogwen, which, a little lower, discharges itself into the sea at Aber-ogwen; and near which is the ruin of the old chapel, Capel Ogwen, and certain entrenchments, defences of this part of the country. I soon quitted the great road to visit Carnedd Llewelyn and Carnedd Dafydd. In my way, near a field called Cae Gwilim Ddu, is an artificial cave, in which (tradition says) was interred William de Breos, executed by Llewelyn the Great, on suspicion of too great familiarity with his royal consort. From hence I began a steep ascent, leaving on the left the vast mountain Moelwynnion, and the strange serrated rocks Bere Mawr and Bere Fach. The Gern appeared on our right, and Trwsgwl in front. On the right, farther on, projected into the bottom the lofty peaked Moel yr Elain, or the naked hill of the Fawn, seeming like a buttress to Carnedd Llewelyn; and between it and Carnedd Dafydd lies the little vale of Cwm Penllafar, fertile in grass. We proceeded on the sloping sides of the Trwsgwl, and near Carnedd y Filiast and Carnedd y Lladron; and passing over Clogwyn yr Heliwr, or the rock of the Hunter, and ascending the steep and stoney side of Carnedd Llewelyn, reached the broad and flat summit, and quickly decided its height to be far inferior to that of its rival.

Yr Wyddfa. The view is amazingly great. At some distance are Yr Wyddfa, and its neighboring alps. The Glyders, Trevaen, and Carnedd y Fil-iaist, or rock of the Bitch Gre-hound, appear immediately beneath. The front of the last is an even slope of rock, smooth and uniform; and so slippery, that if the fox, in extreme danger, takes over it in wet weather, it falls down and perishes.

NANT FRANCON is a tremendous glen, or rather chasm, bounded by these and other lofty rocks. In the bottom is a narrow tract of meadow, watered by the Ogwen, which at the end tumbles out of Llyn Ogwen down the rude front of the Benglog. In one part it is called Sarn yr Afange, or the Beavers Dam, another proof of the former existence of those animals in our country. Over part of this vale impends Yr Oleu Wen, with its front torn into amazing gullies, through which torrents of stones were some time before carried into the Nant, by the single collision of a cloud which burst against it, discharging an ocean of water. The ruins of the hill looked like a stream of lava; which providentially divided above a house, and by that means gave safety to the inhabitants. Among the ruins were stones filled with innumerable small brassy cubic pyrite. I must not omit, that the passage through this dreary bottom was once defended by a fort, about a mile from the Benglog, called Ty'n y Twr, close to a bridge called Pont y Tŵr; but at present there is not a vestige to be seen.

NANT
FRANCON.

THE Menai, Anglesey, and the river Conwy, afforded a distinct and fine prospect. The high hills east of Nant Conwy appeared a mere undulated tract; a proof of our lofty situation. Our near view was very disagreeable, of dreary bottoms or moory hills, and of no waters of any consequence, except Llyn Llyffant, or the lake of the Frogs, distinguished only by a ridiculous tale. About the year 1542, says Dr. Powel, two vast stones, one of which a thousand yoke of oxen could not have moved, in a certain night marched out of the bottom of the lake, up part of the foot of Carnedd Llewelyn, the space of at least a bow-shot; from whence they have not stirred to this day. Henry VIII. doubting the truth, sent a person to enquire into it; but was fully satisfied of the fact by the mouth of his messenger<sup>k</sup>.

LLYN
Llyffant.

CARNEDD
Dafydd.

CARNEDD DAFYDD, the companion summit, is connected to Carnedd Llewelyn by a semilunar isthmus, which, on the side above Cwm Penllafar, is called Ysgolion Duon, or the black ladders; and forms the most horrid precipice that thought can conceive. The height of Carnedd Dafydd equals that of Llewelyn. We descended through Cwm Penllafar, which signifies the Vale of Melody; perhaps that of the hounds, when in full cry over the rock of the Hunter. A few peasants, who have sufficient strength of head, sometimes attempt to pass the tremendous isthmus, as the shortest way to Dyffryn Mymbyr and Llanrwst. A safer way<sup>1</sup>, through variety of bog and stoney tracts, may be found up the Benglog and along Nant y Benglog and Bwlch Oleuni, over which is a narrow path into Dyffryn Mymbyr.

<sup>k</sup> Powel's Notes on Girald. Cambr. Iter. Cambriæ, lib. ii. c. 9.

IN my return from this sublime ride, I called at Coytmor, or more properly Coed Mawr, seated in COYTMOR. the midst of lofty trees<sup>m</sup>, every now and then opening so as to admit a view of the exalted mountains and rocks soaring above with misty tops. This had long been the residence of a family of the same name; of late, by the marriage of the heiress, it became the property of the Pughs of Penrhyn in Creuddyn. In the house is a remarkable picture, PICTURE OF
GIBSON THE
PAINTER. by Sir Peter Lelij, of the diminutive painter, Richard Gibson, and his fairy wife, hand in hand; neither of them exceeded three feet ten inches in height. He was distinguished for his skill in water-colours; and was excellent in his copies of the portraits of Sir Peter Lely. He had the honor of being drawing-master to the princess of Orange, and her sister Queen Anne. He died in 1690, aged 75. His little widow survived him till 1709, when she quitted life at the great age of 89<sup>n</sup>. They had the honor of being married in the presence of Charles I. and his queen, and the still greater honor of having their epithalamium composed by Mr. Waller. It is so beautiful that I doubt not but the reader will excuse me for giving it at full length.

<sup>1</sup> See p. 313, of vol. ii. of this edition.

<sup>m</sup> Coytmor is at present in a state of sad dilapidation, the trees which surrounded and gave name to it, have been cut down, and the interesting portraits of Gibson and his wife destroyed in the general wreck. ED.

OF THE MARRIAGE OF THE DWARFS.

DESIGN, or chance, make others wive;
 But Nature did this match contrive.
Eve might as well have Adam fled,
 As she deny'd her little bed
 To him; for whom Heav'n seem'd to frame
 And measure out this only dame.
 Thrice happy is that humble pair,
 Beneath the level of all care!
 Over whose heads those arrows fly
 Of sad distrust and jealousy:
 Secured in as high extreme,
 As if the world held none but them.

To him the fairest nymphs do show
 Like moving mountains top'd with snow:
 And every man a POLYPHEME
 Does to his GALATEA seem:
 None may presume her faith to prove;
 He proffers death who proffers love.—

Ah CHLORIS! that kind Nature thus
 From all the world had sever'd us;
 Creating for ourselves us two,
 As love has me for only you!

<sup>n</sup> Mr. Walpole's Anecdotes of Painting, iii. 64.

CONTINUE my ride towards the shore, towards Aber, a small village with a church, in the gift of Lord Bulkeley; seated at the mouth of a deep glen, which runs straight a mile and a half between the mountains, and is bounded on one side by a magnificent rock, called Maes y Gaer. One part is hid with trees; on the other they only sprinkle its grey surface. At the extremity of this glen a mountain presents a concave front, in the center of which a vast cataract precipitates itself down a double fall. The lowest is of a very great height, and forms partly a broad white sheet, partly a snowy dew, not unlike the Staubbach, or dusty cascade, in Switzerland°.

ABER.

CASCADE.

AT the entrance of the glen, close to the village, is a very large artificial mount, flat at top, and near sixty feet in diameter, widening towards the base. It was once the site of a castle belonging to Llewelyn the Great. Some foundations are yet to be seen round the summit, and in digging, traces of buildings have been discovered. In this place was detected the intrigue of William de Breos (son of Reginald, a potent baron in the reign of Henry III.) with the wife of Llewelyn. It seems that William, by chance of war, had before fallen into the hands of our prince, at which time probably the familiarity with the princess commenced, but was not discovered till after he was released on a large ransom<sup>p</sup>. The vindictive Llewelyn, in the following year (1229), inveigled Breos into his power, by an invitation to celebrate the feast of Easter; when, after an elegant banquet, the prince reproached him with his crime, and caused him to be dragged from his presence<sup>q</sup>, and hung on an adjacent hill. The tradition of the country is, that a Bard of the palace accidentally meeting with the princess (who was ignorant of the fate of her lover) accosted her in the following manner; and on receiving her answer, shewed him to her, hanging on a tree.

° "On a salt marsh north east of that torrent, as it continues its course and is called Aber River," that excellent botanist the reverend Hugh Davies informs the editor, "he found in the summer of 1808 for the first time the true Festuca rubra." ED.

Diccyn doccyn, gwraig Llewelyn,
Beth y roit'i am weled Gwilim?

The princess answers,

Cymru, Lloiger, a Llewelyn
Y rown'i gyd, am weled Gwilim.

BARD.—Tell me, wife of Llewelyn, what would you give for a sight of your William?

PRINCESS.—Wales, England, and Llewelyn to boot,
I would give them all to see my William.

I CONTINUED my journey from Aber along the rich recess, enjoying a fine view of the entrance

<sup>p</sup> Dugdale Baron. i. 419.

<sup>q</sup> Knyghton in Hist. Angl. Script. ii. 1439. Camden in Brecknockshire, ii. 710.

into the Menai, with its wooded shores of Anglesey and Priestholm isle, and the great expanse of water between them and Llandudno, or Ormshead: the vast cape rising, like the rock of Gibraltar, high out of the waves. Before me soared the great promontory of PENMAEN MAWR, protruding itself into the sea, and exhibiting a fine contrast to the fertility which it interrupts, by a rude view of grey weather-beaten stone and precipice. I passed by Bryn y Neuodd, a house late the property of Humphrey Roberts esq; now of his daughter and sole heiress, relict of Robert Wynne esq; of Plásnewydd, near Denbigh. A little farther is the small village and church of Llanfair Vechan; from whence is a very short ride to the once tremendous road over this celebrated rock.

IN past times it was justly the terror of the traveller; extremely narrow, bad, and stoney; and what added to his fears, for a considerable way the danger encreased with his progress, by reason of the precipice gaining additional height. Generally it was without the protection of a wall to secure him in case of a false step; which might in the loftiest place precipitate him some scores of yards, either on sharp rocks or into the sea, according to the state of the tide. A vein of a crumbling stratum, in one part so contracted the road as to excite new horrors. The British parliament eased the fears of the travellers by a generous aid; which, by means of the judicious employment of JOHN SYLVESTER, about the year 1772, effected what was before thought beyond the reach of art to remedy. The road is now widened to a proper breadth, and near the verge of the precipice secured by a strong wall. The descent towards Penmaen Bach, or the Little Penmaen, which before was hardly practicable, is now destroyed; and the road is brought on a level for two or three miles, at a vast height above a return of rich slopes, and the deep bottom of Dwygyfylchi, till it arrives at the rude back of that lesser promontory; when the traveller labours up the steep ascent of Sychnant, with a horrible and almost precipitous mountain on one side, and hills, with tops broken into most singular crags, on the other. From the top of Sychnant, the road is continued about two miles on a perpetual descent to the town of Conwy.

PENMAEN
MAWR.

THE breach occasioned by the crumbling stratum, is now effectually repaired by a series of arches; a work the just admiration of travellers, and highly creditable to the ingenious contriver. One danger yet remains, which must for ever baffle the art of man: the side of this great rock, above the road, breaks into millions of vast masses, depending often on precarious tenures; which, loosened by the frequent torrents, sometimes (though rarely) descend in stoney streams.

ACCIDENTS
THERE.

Two or three accidents, which have happened on this road, will remain as miracles. An excise-man fell from the highest part, and escaped unhurt. The reverend Mr. Jones, who, in 1762, was rector of Llanellian, in the isle of Anglesey, fell with his horse, and a midwife behind him, down the steepest part. The sage femme perished, as did the nag. The divine, with great philosophy, unsaddled the steed, and marched off with the trappings, exulting at his preservation.

I HAVE often heard of another accident, attended with such romantic circumstances that I would not venture to mention it, had I not the strongest traditional authority, to this day in the mouth of every one in the parish of Llanfair Vechan, in which this promontory stands. Above a century ago, Siôn Humphries of this parish paid his addresses to Anne Thomas of Creyddyn, on the other side of Conwy river. They had made an appointment to meet at a fair in the town of Conwy. He in his way fell over Penmaen Mawr: she was over-set in the ferry-boat, and was the only person saved out of more than fourscore. They were married, and lived very long together in the parish of Llanfair. She was buried April 11th, 1744, aged 116. He survived her five years, and was buried December 10th, 1749, close by her in the parish church-yard, where their graves are familiarly shewn to this day.

I HAVE more than once visited the summit of this noted rock, to view the fortifications described by the editor of Camden, from some notes of that sensible old baronet Sir John Wynn of Gwedir, and have found his account very just<sup>r</sup>. The ascent is laborious. Soon after leaving the inn, I met with the ruins of St. Seiriol's chapel, or, as it is here called, his Gweli, or bed; and after passing a considerable way amidst small trees and brushwood, attained the bare and stoney part, or the Braich y Ddinas (i.e. the arm of the city), which rises in form of another hill out of this promontory. A Mr. Caswel, at the request of Mr. Flamsteed the great astronomer, measured the height, and found it to be from the sands 1545 feet.

ITS HEIGHT.

AN ANTIENT
FORTRESS.

AFTER climbing for some space among the loose stones, the fronts of three, if not four, walls presented themselves very distinctly one above the other. In most places the facings appeared very perfect; but all of dry work. I measured the height of one wall, which was at the time nine feet; the thickness seven feet and a half. Between these walls, in all parts were innumerable small buildings, mostly circular, and regularly faced within and without, but not disposed in any certain order. These had been much higher, as is evident from the fall of stones, which lie scattered at their bottoms; and probably had once the form of towers, as Sir John asserts. Their diameter in general is from twelve to eighteen feet; but some were far less, not exceeding five feet. The walls were in certain places intersected with others equally strong. On the north-west and south-east sides are the plain marks of two roads, of a zig-zag form, with the remains of walls on both sides, which lead to the summit. On the small area of the top had been a group of towers, or cells, like the former; one in the center, and five others surrounding it. Three are still distinct; of the two others are only faint vestiges. Near this had been, I believe, a similar group; but at present reduced to a shapeless heap of stones. Near one of these groups is a well cut in the live rock, and always filled with water, supplied by the rains, and kept full by the frequent impending vapours.

<sup>r</sup> Camden, ii. 804, & seq. Before Sir John Wynn, a Sir Thomas ap William, medicus, M.A. had described it; but his account never appeared in print. He was eighth son of one of the family of Cohwillan. Lived in the year 1594, and is said to have resided at Trefriw.

THIS strong hold of the Britons is exactly of the same kind with those on Carn Madryn, Carn Boduan, and Tre'r Caeri, described in the preceding volume of this work. This was most judiciously chosen, to cover the passage into Anglesey, and the remoter part of their country; and must, from its vast strength, have been invincible, except by famine; being inaccessible by its natural steepness towards the sea, and on the other parts fortified in the manner described†.

ARIA THEO-PHRASTI.

THE white beam, or Aria Theophrasti‡, is frequent on the sides of this rock, and in many similar places in Wales. No use is made of it in our country. The Swiss procure from the berries a good spirit. The wood is very hard, and excellent for flutes: and from its great solidity, was esteemed to make the best charcoal.

I DESCENDED from the summit into a hollow between the Penmaen and an adjacent mountain; got upon my horse and directed my course on a good sheep-walk towards Conwy. In my way observed, above Gwdhw Glás, in the parish of Dwygyfylchi, a long series of antiquities, some of which are mentioned in the account of Penmaen Mawr preserved in Camden. For a considerable length of way I saw circles of stones of various diameters, and great Carneddau. The principal circle consists at present of ten upright stones, at unequal distances from each other; the largest of which is eight feet three inches high: on the ground is another, eleven feet two. The circle is completed by a low bank of loose stones placed between the greater. The diameter of this circle is eighty feet.

CIRCLES AND CARNEDDAU.

‡ See a plan of the top and one side of this strong hold in the Archæologia, iii. plate xxix. p. 352.

† The Cratægus, or Pyrus Aria of modern botanists, Smith Fl. Br. p. 534. ED.

Near this are four other circles, far inferior in size. In the center of one is a flat stone, the remains of a Cromlech; probably the rest might have had those memorials before they were removed for walling, and other purposes. About a quarter of a mile from these is a large Carnedd, composed of small stones, and near it another of large stones; and not far from these, a circle composed of small ones<sup>a</sup>. Near the last is a great rude stone, standing upright, called Maen y Campiau, or Stone of the Games; and almost contiguous is a Carnedd, and a small circle of twelve stones. This tract had certainly been much inhabited; for all around are the foundations of small buildings made of rounded stones, suitable to the rudeness and simplicity of distant ages. Small upright stones, and numbers of small Carnedds, are scattered in various places; and the vestige of a formed road is to be seen pointing from hence towards the Conwy.

MAEN Y CAMPIAU.

WHATSOEVER purpose the lesser circles might have been designed for, there is great reason to suppose that the greater, especially that near to the Maen y Campiau, was the British circus for <sup>a</sup> An assemblage of antiquities of this nature may be seen in plate ii. book iii. of Mr. THOMAS WRIGHT'S Louthiana. That book is a small specimen of his great abilities. The vast treasures he possesses of drawings of Irish antiquities, in the highest degree merit publication, and elame the assistance of some distinguished patron, to enable a person of his merit to enrich the literary world with more of his labors.

THE AN-
TIEN T GAMES.

the exhibition of antient games; probably the Eisteddfods, or sessions for deciding the merits of rivals in our British Olympics, might have been originally held here, or in similar places. Of British games, we had twenty-four, Pedair CAMP ar hugain, whose names, as preserved by Dr. Davies in his Dictionary, I shall give, with their explanation, as far as in my power. Of these, ten were called GWROL-GAMPAU, or manly games; of these, six depended on bodily strength alone, and were styled Tadogion, i. e. Father games, because no instrument whatsoever was necessary to perform them: for they depended on the man, naked as he was born. The Greeks had their Pentathlon. We had one more. I. Strength to raise weights; II. Running; III. Leaping; IV. Swimming; v. Wrestling; VI. Riding. I imagine that the word Marchogaeth extends farther than the common acceptation, and that the game intended was a contest between charioteers; for no people were more skilled in the use of chariots in war than the Britons: it is therefore improbable that they would not, in time of peace, exert their art in mimic combat, or in competitions of speed in the festive field. And these six were undoubtedly original games of this island, and from the earliest of times: of others, some doubt may be entertained.

THE remaining four manly games were, O rym arfau, or what depended on skill in arms. I.

Archery; II. Playing with the sword and buckler; III. Playing with the Cleddyf Deuddwrn, or the two-handed sword, the antient weapon of the Britons, as exemplified in a statue of a soldier, found in digging among the ruins of London, after the great fire of 1666<sup>x</sup>; IV. Chwarau Ffon Ddwybig, or playing with the two-end staff; which seems to correspond with the more modern quarter-staff.

AFTER there were the ten Mabolgampau, or JUVENILE games. Among them three species of the chace: I. Coursing with the gre-hound; II. Fishing; III. Fowling. The remaining seven were of the domestic kind: I. Barddoniaeth, or poetical competitions, of which I have before spoken<sup>y</sup>; II. Playing upon the harp; III. Reading Welsh; IV. Singing a Cywydd with music; V. Singing a Cywydd between four with accents; VI. Drawing coats of arms; VII. Heraldry. These two seem so congenial, as to be unnecessarily separated.

AFTER these were four Go-gampiau, or Sub-games. I. Chwarau Gwydd-bwyll, a game like that of Draughts, played with men, and probably the game of Fox and Goose, Gŵydd signifying a goose, and Gwerin y Wyddbwyll the men of that game. II. CHWARAU Tawl Bwrdd, is probably

<sup>x</sup> Montfaucon's Antiq. iv. 16, tab. ix.

<sup>y</sup> In my account of the Eisteddfod, vol. ii. p. 79, of this work, some light is thrown on this and certain of the following articles.

Back gammon: words of British origin; bach little, and gammon a battle, the strife of gamesters: and Tawl bwrdd is literally the cast on the table.

III. CHWARAU Ffristial, or the games of the dice-box, of which we know no more than that dice had a concern in it. And 1vthly, Cyweiriaw Telyn, or the tuning of the harp.

AFTER leaving the antiquities of Gwddw Glás, I joined the turnpike road above Sychnant. On the left, was pointed out to me a lofty hill, impending over Conwy marsh. On its summit is Castell Caer Lleion, a British post, surrounded with ditches, and strong ramparts of stones; an additional defence to the country, besides that of Penmaen Mawr. The view of part of Conwy, and a large bend of the river, with its rich and wooded banks, are seen from the descent to them to great advantage.

CONWY.

I ENTERED CONWY at the upper gate. A more ragged town is scarcely to be seen, within; or a more beautiful one, without. The situation is on a steep slope to the verge of the river, here a mile broad at high-water. The form is nearly triangular, surrounded with lofty walls, guarded by twenty-four round towers. The lower face of the triangle borders on the river. A castle of matchless magnificence rises on a lofty rock, at one corner; and from near each end of the town-walls, fronting the Conwy, a curtain terminated with a round tower ran some way into the river, the more effectually to prevent the approach of an enemy from the water. Only one of these curtains exists; the other, with both the towers, have long since perished.

CONWY
Town and Castle

IN front is an extensive quay, from which is a delightful view up and down the river. The opposite side is hilly, varied with woods and gentlemen's seats, and the bifurcated hill of Diganwy, a fortress. The ground near the town called Arcadia, laid out by my worthy friend and old school-fellow<sup>z</sup> Owen Holland esq; and Plús-tirion, the house of the reverend Owen Jones, well merit a visit from the traveller.

THE castle was built by Edward I. in the year 1284<sup>(1)</sup>; who, I believe, employed the architect who built Caernarvon. All his skill seems to have been exerted here. A more beautiful fortress never arose. Its form is oblong, placed on all parts on the verge of the precipitous rock. One side is bounded by the river; another by a creek full of water at every tide, and most beautifully shaded by hanging woods. The other two sides face the town. Within are two courts; and on the outside project eight vast towers, each with a slender one of amazing elegance issuing from its top, within which had been a winding stair-case. In one of the great towers is a fine window, in form of an arched recess, or bow, ornamented with pillars. This, in antient times, was an elegant part of architecture, called the oriel, usual in the houses of people of rank; and appears, from a poem of the very age in which it was built, to have been the toilet of the ladies, and probably might have been that of Queen Elinor.

<sup>z</sup> Deceased. ED.

(1) Mr. Hartshorne has shewn that Conwy castle was commenced in 1283, a few months before Caernarvon; and that it was not completed for several years. See his paper in the Archeological Journal, vol. vii. p. 237. T.P.

In her ORYALL there she was,
 Closyd well with royal glas;
 Fulfullyd it was with ymagery,
 Every windowe by and by,
 On each side had ther a gynne
 Sperde with maunie a dyvers pynne.<sup>z</sup>

HALL.

THE great hall suited the magnificence of the founder. It is of a curved form, conformable to the bend of the outward walls, including one end with a large window, which seems to have been the private chapel. It extended a hundred and thirty feet in length, was thirty-two broad, and of a fine height. The roof once supported by eight noble arches, six of which still remain. A great fire placed at one end, and another on the side, warmed it: six windows to the country, and three to the court, gave light to this spacious apartment. Beneath were vast vaults, the magazines of all that contributed to the convivial mirth above.

<sup>z</sup> Part of the poem of the SQUIRE OF LOW DEGREE. See Mr. WARTON'S Hist. Poetry, i. 175.—The gynnes were the fastenings of the casements, which were often secured with pynnes of yvere.

PART OF THE INTERIOR OF CONWY CASTLE.

THERE were two entrances into this fortress, both contrived for security. The one from the Conwy, up a steep rock, once a winding narrow stairs, ending in a small advanced work before one of the gates of the castle, and protected by small round towers. At the other extremity is a similar work, from which had been a draw-bridge, occasionally dropped into the town, over a great foss.

ENTRANCES
TO THE
CASTLE.

THE town contains but few inhabitants, much of the ground within the walls being used for gardens. It has four entrances: the upper gate; the lower, or that next to the water; a portal between that and the castle; and another to the creek, called Porth y Felin, or the gate to the mill<sup>a</sup>.

TOWN.

EDWARD I. made Conwy a free borough, and ordered that the mayor, who was the constable of the castle for the time being, should preserve its privileges. William Sikun was appointed first to that honor. At present it is governed by one alderman, a recorder, coroner, water-bailiff, and two serjeants at mace, chosen annually. The privileges extended from Caernarvon to the river Clwyd: for none could be convicted of any crime, within that district, but by a jury collected within that tract. Such was the case with all the other English garrisons in North Wales.

<sup>a</sup> For an account of the export of Potatoes from Conwy, see Appendix, No. XX.

FERRY. THE ferry is at present the property of the owner of Marle. An order was issued by Edward II. for either the repairing the boat, or building a new one, for the use of which the inhabitants were to pay eight marks<sup>b</sup>. At low-water the river is not fifty yards broad, nor above eight feet deep. The spring-tides rise twelve feet; but the approach to this port is unsafe, on account of the sand-banks.

ABBAY. THERE are some remains of the Cistercian abbey, founded in 1185 by Llewelyn ap Iorwerth, prince of North Wales, in honor of the Blessed Virgin and All Saints<sup>c</sup>. A long vaulted room of good masonry, worked with clay, but plaistered with lime; and a Saxon door, are still to be seen. He endowed it with lands, to a vast extent, in Caernarvonshire and in Anglesey<sup>d</sup>, and with privileges of great value: among the lands are mentioned Caput Wedwa Vawr, and Caput Grybcoch, and Morfa Dinllin<sup>(1)</sup>. It was exempted not only from the maintenance of all men, horses, dogs, and hawks, but even of those of the prince. No one was to interfere in the elections, or affairs of the

<sup>b</sup> Sebright MSS.

<sup>c</sup> Dugdale's Monasticon, i. 918.

<sup>d</sup> The same, 918, 919.

(<sup>1</sup>) This is called Morfa Dinlle, and was formerly probably Morfa Dinlleu. J.R.

house. They were to enjoy all benefits of wrecks on the shores of their property, in the same manner as the prince did on his; no advantage was to be taken of similar misfortunes to the religious men, but all their goods, so wrecked, were to be restored. They and their servants were to be exempt, in all parts, from tolls, pontage, and the like; and their free passage over the Menai, Conwy, Barmouth (Abermaw) and Dyni (perhaps Dyfi) is particularly provided for. Numbers of other privileges are mentioned, the charter of which is dated from Aberconwy, and witnessed by Yorwerth Gam, Gwin ap Ednewein Ydon, the prince's chaplain, and by Madog ap Cador<sup>e</sup>. This shews that Conwy was a place of some note before the English conquest. It probably had some sort of fortress before the existence of the present, its antient name being Caer Gyffin, Gyffin being that of the stream that flows into the creek beneath the castle<sup>f</sup>. Camden, in vol. ii. p. 803, tells us that Hugh Lupus fortified this place, I suppose on his march into Anglesey in 1098.

EDWARD I. did not chuse to trust within his new walls religious of the principality, but immediately removed them to his new foundation at Maynan, a few miles higher up the river. He acted with tenderness towards the monks, and left

REMOVED TO MAYNAN.

<sup>e</sup> Dugdale's Monasticon, 920.

<sup>f</sup> MS. in possession of his grace the duke of Beaufort.

them all their lands and privileges, and preserved to them the presentation of their conventual church at Conwy, now made parochial, provided they found two able and worthy Englishmen as chaplains, and a third, a Welshman, for the benefit of those who did not understand English. One of the English was to be perpetual vicar, to be named by the convent on every vacancy, and presented by the diocesan<sup>h</sup>.

TOMBS.

AMONG the illustrious persons buried in the church, was Cynan ap Owen Gwynedd, who was interred in the year 1200, in a monk's cowl; because, says Powel, "it was then made to believe " by the moonks and friers, that that strange weed " was a sure defense betwixt their souls and hell, " howsoever they died<sup>i</sup>." Its great founder was also buried here; but on the dissolution his coffin was removed to Llanrwst, and is still to be seen.

A VERY rude figure, cut on stone, preserves the memory of Mary, mother to Archbishop Williams, who died in child-birth of twins, October 10, 1585; and a singular epitaph on a Mr. Hookes, proves the remarkable fecundity of the family. Here lyeth the body of NICHOLAS HOOKES of CONWAY, Gent. who was the 41st child of his father WILLIAM HOOKES esq; by ALICE his wife, and the father of twenty-seven children; who died the 20th day of MARCH 1637.

<sup>h</sup> Dugdale Monast. i. 921.<sup>i</sup> Powel's Hist. Wales, 252.

IN the street not far from the abbey, is a very old house, with a singular window, with several coats of arms sculptured beneath; some relative to the Stanleys. This house is called the College. As it is said that Edward I. took this abbey into his hands, he possibly might establish here a place for the instruction of youth.

COLLEGE.

THE Plas Mawr is a vast house built by Robert Wynne esq; of the house of Gwedir. Over the gateway is inscribed  $\text{ΑΥΕΧΘ, ΑΠΕΧΘ, }^{(1)}$  Sustine, abstine; and on the house, the pious letters I. H. S. X. P. S. and the date 1585. Within is a great quantity of rude stucco, with various arms of the founder's allies or patrons. Scattered over the walls and ceilings are swans, owls, cranes, ostriches, and bears and ragged staves; the last, the badges of Robert Dudley earl of Leicester; a piece of flattery paid to him by the founder of the house.

PLAS MAWR.

OVER the gateway, is the court chamber; a long room with a timber roof, and ornamented with coarse stucco.

FEW of the remarkable events which have befallen this place, are preserved in history. When Henry III. made his calamitous encampments under Diganwy, opposite to this town, he dispatched three hundred renegado Welshmen of the borders, with some other troops, to rescue a ship laden with provisions which had been stranded on this side. They succeeded; but, instigated by avarice, sacrilegiously plundered the abbey, and burnt several houses belonging to it. The loyal Welsh grew desperate, attacked the banditti laden with spoils, slew numbers, and hung or beheaded every prisoner whom they took<sup>k</sup>.

EVENTS.

(1) This is the great precept of Epicetus. T.P.

RICHARD II. before his return from Ireland, directed that the rendezvous of his forces, destined to oppose the usurping Bolingbroke, should be here. Forty thousand loyalists, out of Cheshire and Wales, had assembled under the banners of the earl of Salisbury. Wearied by the delays of their ill-fated prince, numbers disbanded themselves: yet sufficient remained animated against the usurper, and determined to follow their king through all his fortunes. Richard, seized with a panic, stole from Conwy in the night<sup>l</sup>, was betrayed by the earl of Northumberland, and soon after perished in the hands of his enemy<sup>m</sup>.

THE town was almost depopulated by the plague, in 1607, and numbers of people were buried in the streets. It was observed to break out within three weeks of the time it appeared in London, probably brought here by some fugitives.

AMONG the transactions in this place during the civil wars, the last active scene of the life of Archbishop Williams must be related, especially as it was a part for which he underwent the greatest, but perhaps unjust, calumny. As soon as he retired into Wales in 1642, he was resorted to by all the loyalists, being the person on whose prudence and spirit they could fully rely. He had received in charge from his majesty all North Wales, and in particular the castle of Conwy.<sup>a</sup> He began with fortifying his house at Penrhyn; and was at considerable expence in strengthening this fortress. In the perilous state of those times, multitudes of the country gentlemen requested the archbishop to receive into the castle their writings, plate, and most valuable moveables. He undertook the charge, and gave to every owner a receipt, by which he made himself liable to the loss; and put his nephew, William Hookes, in possession of the place, in January 1643-4°. His grace, from that time, was the protector of the country, not only from the violence of the enemy, but from the oppression of his own party. In May 1645, Prince Rupert unfortunately superseded the prelate in his command, and caused Sir John Owen to take possession of the castle. This he did with most blameable violence, and with a constant evasion of giving the archbishop any security for the valuables which he had in charge<sup>p</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> Powel, 311.

<sup>l</sup> Holinshed, 499.

<sup>m</sup> In the first volume of this work, p. 62, is the sequel of his story.

<sup>a</sup> Philips's Life of Archbishop Williams, 287.

<sup>o</sup> Philips, 289.      <sup>p</sup> The same, 295, 296.

AFFAIRS were in this state till June 1646; when Williams, foreseeing ruin to himself, irritated by injuries from those who had embarked in the same cause, and in the critical time (when the king's affairs were desperate) invited by General Mytton to put himself on the favor of parlement, accepted his offer, and assisted him in the reduction of the place<sup>a</sup>.

MYTTON, by the advice of the archbishop, took the town by storm on August 15th: the latter assisted personally, and was wounded in the neck<sup>r</sup>. With the severity usual at that time towards the Irish, Mytton seized on all that were found, and caused them to be tied back to back, and flung into the river<sup>s</sup>. The castle surrendered on the 10th of November; and Mytton, who is represented as a generous character, more haughty than covetous<sup>t</sup>, restored to every individual the property intrusted to Williams. For these services the parlement granted him a general pardon, and a release from all his sequestrations.

THE beauty and grandeur of this fortress seemed to have induced the governing powers to forbear offering any violence to its walls: that impiety was reserved for loyal hands. A grant had been made of it by the king to Edward Conway, earl of

<sup>a</sup> General Mytton's Letter, in Drake's Parl. Hist. xv. 3.

<sup>r</sup> Rushworth, iv. part i. 297.

<sup>s</sup> Whitelock, 219.

<sup>t</sup> Philips, 300.

Conwy. In 1665, the earl employed his servant, Milward, to take down the iron, timber, and lead, and to transport it to Ireland, under pretence of its being for his majesty's service<sup>u</sup>. Thomas Bulkely esq; Colonel Wynn, and several of the principal gentlemen of the country, opposed the design; but their remonstrance was over-ruled, and this noble pile reduced to nearly its present condition. At present it is held from the crown by Owen Holland esq.

SEVERAL years ago, the folly of some of the inhabitants, by getting stones from the rock beneath one of the great towers, brought down a vast segment. The ruins are the most awful I ever beheld; lying in stupendous fragments on the shore, some so unbroken as to preserve both the grand external rotundity and inward concavity: a hardened cement of stone and mortar eleven feet thick. The upper part of the tower remains entire, suspended at a vast height above our heads, exhibiting in the breach such a strength of walling as might have given to the architect the most reasonable hope that his work would have endured to the end of time. When I image to myself the gay appearance of this fortress, filled by the festive court of Edward, his beloved Eleanor, and all the train of gallant nobility, who passed a Christmas here, exulting at the conquest of my hardy countrymen; and when I survey its present ruins, my mind naturally falls into melancholy reflections, suitable to the scene around me. Let me only change the rock on Towy's flood for that of Conwy, and a favourite poet will express the ideas that must arise in the mind, of its past and present state.

<sup>u</sup> The earl's Letter in the Appendix, No. XXI.

Deep at its feet, in Conwy's flood,
 His sides are cloath'd with waving wood;
 And antient towers crown his brow,
 That cast an awful look below.
 Whose ragged walls the Ivy creeps,
 And with her arms from falling keeps:
 So both a safety from the wind
 On mutual dependence find.
 'Tis now the Raven's blank abode:
 'Tis now th' apartment of the Toad:
 And there the Fox securely feeds,
 And there the poisonous Adder breeds, }
 Conceal'd in ruins, moss, and weeds.
 While ever and anon there falls
 Huge heaps of hoary moulder'd walls.
 Yet time has seen, that lifts the low,
 And level lays the lofty brow,
 Has seen this broken pile compleat, }
 Big with the vanity of state;
 But transient is the smile of Fate! }
 A little rule, a little sway,
 A sun-beam in a winter's day,
 Is all the proud and mighty have,
 Betwixt the cradle and the grave.

DYER's Grongar Hill.

BATTLE OF CYMRID.

FROM Conwy I took the road towards Caer Hên, the Conovium of the Romans. In my way passed near Cymryd, a place noted for a bloody battle in 880, between Anarawd prince of Wales, and the Saxons under Edred duke of Mercia. The Britons were victorious, and drove the invaders back into their own country. Anarawd styled the battle Dial Rodri, or the Revenge of Roderic; for his father Roderic the Great had the year before been slain by the Saxons†.

PASSED by the ferry of Tal y Cafn. At a small distance from it is a large artificial mount, called Bryn y Castell; probably the site of a watch-tower belonging to Conovium, and judiciously placed in a very contracted part of the vale, to observe the approach of an enemy from this side.

CAER HEN, the old Conovium, lay in a low spot near the river. There are still to be seen remains of Roman bricks, and a sunk building divided into two parts, probably the remains of the hypocaust from which the hollow brick, or funnel, preserved at Gloddaeth, was taken. On one of the common bricks was inscribed LEG. X.—the Legio Antoniana—which served in these parts under Ostorius‡. Here also was found the cake of copper mentioned in the 17th page of my first volume. Near the church are some remains of walls, which are all that are left of this once noted place‡. The Itinerary places it twenty-four miles from Segontium, and nineteen from Varis.

† Camden, ii. 802, 3. Powel, 38. ‡ Camden.

‡ In 1801 the soil was removed from this antient building, when the foundation of a Roman villa was discovered, consisting of five rooms in front, including a sudatory. ED.

PEN CAER
HELEN.

I PROCEEDED a little farther, and turned up a very steep road, by the church of Llanbedr, to the summit of a very lofty hill, called Pen Caer Helen, to try to discover more of Helen's noted road; but my search was fruitless. Yet my pains were rewarded by the sight of a British post of great strength, and in some parts singularly guarded. It had the usual fosses, and vast ramparts of stones, with some remains of the facing of walls, and the foundations of three or four round buildings: but what struck me much, were two considerable spaces of ground thickly set with sharp-pointed stones, set upright in the earth, as if they had been to serve the use of chevaux de frise, to impede the approach of an enemy. From this hill is in one direction a wild and barren prospect of Carnedd Llewelyn, and of a long tract of rude hills and stoney bottoms; and in another is seen, the whole extent of the fertile Nant Conwy. Descended: returned the same road, and passed the river in the good ferry at Tal y Cafn.

FROM hence I continued my journey through the wooded parish of Llansaintffraid, beautifully sloped to the water's edge. The route I took was towards Llandudno, the grand boundary of the entrance of the Conwy. From the road, in many parts, are most august views of the vast expanse of the river, and the majestic towers of Conwy. Similar views, and old fortified towns, I have seen frequent on the Rhine, but in magnificence far inferior to these, our British glory. After a ride of about three miles, descend to a flat. Pass by Marle, a house of fine appearance, but now little more than a case, having suffered by fire about forty years ago. It is picturesquely seated under a lofty rock, almost covered with wood; and opposite to the town of Conwy. It was originally the property of the Hollands. It fell afterwards to Sir Hugh Williams, second son of Sir Gryffydd Williams, of Penrhyn; and on the death of his grandson, Sir Robert, devolved to Sir Thomas Prendergast of the kingdom of Ireland, in right of his lady, Anne, sister to Sir Robert.

HIGH above Marle, is Bodscallan, the property BODSCALLAN. of Sir Roger Mostyn, in right of his wife Margaret, daughter of the reverend Hugh Wynn. I find Richard Mostyn, second son of Thomas ap Richard ap Howel, in possession of it; and that he had one daughter, Margaret, married to Gryffydd Wynn, second son of John Wynn ap Meredydd of Gweddir, and who had his settlement at Berth Du near Llanrwst. It is a fine situation, environed with woods. From a neglected terrace is a most beautiful view, over the tops of trees, of Conwy, part of the river, and the vast mountains which form the back ground of the prospect. It is a place of great antiquity, being mentioned in the record of Caernarvon; but was inhabited in far earlier times, as appears by the ruins of a small castlet, now hid in woods, on the top of a small hill near the present house. Bodscallan signifies the dwelling-place of Scallan; in all probability a word corrupted from Caswallon<sup>(1)</sup>, the owner in some distant period. It was one of those townships called Tre' Welyog, not entirely free. The tenants were originally possessors of hereditary estates, which were divided and subdivided among their posterity to the fourth descent, after which they became possessed by branches independent of each other; every one of whom paid for their own land<sup>a</sup>. This possibly might have been one of the three Gwelis, or estates of children from a common stock, originally belonging to Gloddaeth<sup>b</sup>. In the present house is a good portrait of old Sir John Wynn of Gwedir. A small head, on board, of Robert Wynn, founder of the Plas Mawr in Conwy. He is painted in black, with a book in his hand, and with short grey hair and beard. But the most remarkable is that of Dr. Ellis Pryse, of Plas Yolin in Denbighshire, dated 1605; a creature of the earl of Leicester's, and devoted to all his bad designs. Pryse's dress is a white jacket, with a broad turnover; his hair yellow, and his beard thin, and of the same color; his visage very long, lank, and hypocritical. He was the greatest of our knaves in the period in which he lived; the most dreaded oppressor in his neighborhood; and a true sycophant; for a common address of his letters to his patron was, O LORD, in thee do I put my trust!

(1) See note p. 55. J.R.

<sup>a</sup> Record of Caernarvon, Bibl. Litt. 19.

<sup>b</sup> The same, 22.

FROM hence is a short walk to GLODDAETH, a GLODDAETH. seat of Sir Roger Mostyn's, placed on the slope of a very extensive hill, or lime-stone rock, clothed with flourishing plantations by Sir Roger, grandfather of the present possessor. Part of the plain below the house was planted, by the same gentleman, with forest-trees; and laid out, according to the taste of his time, in straight walks, intersecting each other, or radiating from a center, distinguished by a statue. The upper walks, having fortunately a steep and stubborn rock for their basis, checked the modish propensity to rectitude; so there was a necessity to deviate from it; but in no greater degree than the flexure of a zigzag would admit. Notwithstanding some blemishes, corrigible at an easy rate, these walks may be considered among those of the first rate of this island, for such beauties of view as nature can bestow; and, from those spots favored by the sight of Conwy, I may add the majestic ones of antient art. ITS WALKS. FINE VIEWS. Every flight of path presents new and grand objects; first, the great windings of the river towards Llanrwst, the lofty towers of Conwy, and the venerable walls of the town; and beyond is a long extent of alps, with Moel Siabod, the Drûm, and Carnedd Llewelyn and Dafydd, towering with distinguished height. From a little higher ascent is opened to us the discharge of the Conwy into the sea, sublimely bounded by the lesser Penmaen, and the immense Orm's Head, or Llandudno; between which appear, a fine bay, the vast promontory of Penmaen Mawr, the isle of Priestholm, and the long extent of Anglesey. After gaining the summit, beneath is seen a considerable flat, with the estuary of the river Conwy falling into the Irish sea on one side, and the beautiful half-moon bay of Llandudno on the other: one of whose horns is the great head of the same name; the other, the lofty rock of Rhivleden, or the little Orm's Head. A little farther progress brings us in sight of a great bay, sweeping semicircularly the shores; and beyond are the distant hills of Flintshire, and the entrances into the estuaries of the Mersey and Dee, frequently animated with shipping.

* Bodscallan has long been noted for its hospitality.—The bill of fare of a Christmas dinner is given in the Appendix, No. XXII. Ed.

BESIDES the adventitious trees and shrubs, these walks afford great amusement to the botanists, by their variety of rare plants, all within a very small compass. Among them, that able botanist, my fellow voyager through the Hebrides, the reverend

Mr. Lightfoot, enumerated the Veronica spicata, or spiked speedwell, Fl. Angl. i. 3; Geranium sanguineum, or bloody cranesbill, Fl. Angl. i. 305. Fl. Scot. i. 372; Cistus marifolius<sup>d</sup>, Sp. Pl. 741; Sm. Fl. Br. 572, or hoary thyme-leaved Cistus; Silene nutans, or Nottingham catchfly, Fl. Angl. i. 188; Rubia Tinctorum, or wild madder, Sp. Pl. i. 158; Scilla verna, or vernal hyacinth, Fl. Angl. 142; Potentilla verna, or vernal cinquefoil, Fl. Scot. 270. Fl. Angl. i.

<sup>d</sup> The reverend Mr. Evans in his Tour of Botanical Research, p. 272, faithfully transcribing an error of the former edition of this work, describes, the CISTUS marifolius, and the CISTUS hirsutus, long known to be the same plant, as distinct species—The same author asserts that he found the LYSIMACHIA thyrsoiflora near Gloddaeth, but he has mistaken its Habitat. Edward Llwyd is said to have observed it in Anglesey, but the place is not ascertained—"Before him," says the reverend Hugh Davies* "no person ever found the CRITHMUM maritimum growing on the sands; for it certainly has not changed its situation since Shakespeare described the "dreadful trade" of gathering it.

"Half way down,

"Hangs one that gathers SAMPHIRE; dreadful trade!"

This gross error has originated in his injudicious spirit of copying. Mr. Pennant says, "The fields about Porth Gwylan were covered "with Sampier y ddafal or marsh Samphire," the SALICORNIA herbacea of Smith, Fl. Br. p. 2, which Mr. L., following a mistake of Withering's, transforms into the CRITHMUM maritimum.

The editor would not have allotted so large a portion of his limited notes to Mr. Evans, had he not thought it a duty to expose the errors of one, who, in the course of his Tour sedulously seizes every opportunity of vilifying and depreciating Mr. Pennant, whose valuable pages he nevertheless condescends to copy without scruple, as without acknowledgement. ED.

* See his remarks on Mr. Evans's Tour, in an Appendix to Dr. Williams's Vindication of the Established Church.

224; Thalictrum minus, or lesser meadow rue, Fl. Scot. i. 285. Fl. Angl. i. 238; Arenaria verna, or vernal mountain chickweed, Fl. Angl. i. 191. Fl. Scot. i. 231; Scrophularia vernalis, or yellow figwort, Fl. Scot. i. 330. Fl. Angl. i. 275. And near the gate, in the lane leading to Conwy, the Polypodium vulgare var. Cambricum, or Welsh or jagged polypody, Fl. Angl. ii. 445. Fl. Scot. ii. 668.

GREAT part of the present house was built by Thomas Mostyn, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. On the dais of the great hall are painted the arms of that princess, those of the house, and of the profligate earl of Leicester; the last, a proof of the general flattery paid to his power.

HERE is, in a poor room, an excellent collection of books and manuscripts: among the last is a most beautiful copy of the first and second books of Froissart, a manuscript on vellum, with most elegant illuminations. The frontispiece represents the author on his knees, in a blue mantle, presenting his book to Edward III. A king of France, distinguished by the fleurs de lis on his robes, holds a queen by the hand, who, from the arms of England, the lions on her robe, seems to be Queen Philippa, to whom Froissart was clerk of the closet. She holds by the hand a little boy, whose robe is also marked with the lions: This must have been Richard of Bourdeaux, her grandson, afterwards Richard II. A lady, and several other figures, appear in the piece. This book was given by Lord Buckhurst to Sir William Cecil, and by him to his cotemporary of the house of Mostyn.

GLODDAETH came into possession of the family of Sir Roger Mostyn by the marriage of his ancestor Howel ap Evan Fychan, in 1460, with Margaret, daughter and heir of Gryffydd ap Rhys ap Gryffydd ap Madoc Gloddaeth ap Madoc ap Jerwerth Goch of Creiddyn, the hundred in which the house lies. The tenure of this place was perfectly free, and the tenants owed only suit and service to the county and hundred courts; and when they were to attend the prince in war, they went at his expence.

EGLWYS RHOS, the parish church, is in a flat, at a small distance from Gloddaeth, near a precipitous rock, cloathed with wood, called Bryn Maelgwyn. Painted in the east window is the figure of a man kneeling, dressed in a herald's mantle, with the arms of Englefield. From the maimed inscription I collect that he must have been Howel ap Tudor of Mostyn<sup>e</sup>, and that he had bestowed this window on the church.

EGLWYS
RHOS.

BUT this church is celebrated for the death of the prince Maelgwyn Gwynedd, who had taken • Salisbury Pedigree, 37.

shelter here to avoid the Vád.felen, or yellow pestilence, which at that time raged through Europe. The Britons, like the Romans, personified disease. In this instance, it was to assume either the form of a Basilisc, or the powers of one, under the form of a fair woman, who slew Maelgwyn with a glance, as he incautiously looked out of the window; according to the prophecy,

Pryf rhyfedd o Forfa Rhianedd
Hwnnw a fydd diwedd Maelgwyn Gwynedd.

“ Whenever a strange creature arrives on the “ marsh of Rhianedd, if Maelgwyn Gwynedd looks “ at it, he will die.”

DIGANWY.

THE small remains of Diganwy, or, as it is called by the English, Gannoc, are on two small hills, near the shore of the Conwy, at a small distance from Eglwys Rhos. The walls crossed the space between the hills, and ran up their sides; on the summit of one is the vestige of a round tower, and here and there a few foundations of walls on the accessible parts. Dr. Powel, from the authority of the Welsh historians†, says, there had been a city here, which, in 810, was destroyed by lightning; and Camden adds, that he believed it to have been the antient Dictum(<sup>1</sup>), from its having been the station of a party of Nervii Dictenses, under the late emperors. I cannot discover the founder of this fortress, on whose ruins I contemplate. Possibly it might have been Robert of Rhuddland. We are told this country was parcel of the possessions of the earls of Chester; and that Robert was in it when he came to his fate. On July the 3d, 1088, our brave prince Gryffydd ap Cynan, with three ships, entered the Conwy; and landing under the castle at high-water, left the ships on shore at the recess of the tide. He ravaged the neighboring country, and drove towards his vessels a great booty of men and cattle. Robert, indignant at this, descended from his fortress, attended by a single soldier, Osbern de Orger, and without any defensive armour except his shield. The Welsh attacked him with missile weapons, and, filling his shield so full of darts that it fell under their weight, the enemy rushed on him, cut off his head, and, fastening it to the mast, sailed off in savage triumph<sup>a</sup>. Llewelyn the Great destroyed this castle; but it was rebuilt, in 1210, by Randle Blondevil, earl of Chester<sup>b</sup>. King John lay for some time encamped under its walls, in the year 1211, and was reduced to great straits by the policy of Llewelyn; who got between him and England, and cut off his resources<sup>c</sup>. Henry III. fared even worse on the same spot, in 1245, at which time John de Grey of Wilton was constable. One of his courtiers most pathetically describes their miseries<sup>k</sup>. At length Diganwy was, in 1260, totally dismantled by our last prince Llewelyn ap Gryffydd.

† His notes on Giraldus Cambr. Itin. lib. ii. c. 10.

(<sup>1</sup>) Camden was very wide of the mark, and as Diganwy is the arx Decantorum of the Annales Cambriæ, so the people's name was Decanti, while the modern Deganwy points to another form, Decantovii, or the like. J. R.

<sup>a</sup> Ordericus Vitalis, lib. viii. p. 670.

<sup>b</sup> Powel, 262.

<sup>c</sup> The same.

ANTIEN
TOWER.

Not far from hence, on the top of a low hill near Bryniau, is an antient tower. Its form is circular; its height about twenty feet, the diameter twelve. Its walls compose only two thirds of a circle, the rest is open to the top; and the finishing of the walls complete, without any appearance of there ever having been a door; and this opening is to the land. Within are the marks of two floors. Round the inside are three rows of square holes, none of which pass through the building. Its walls are of great thickness, and the mortar appears very antient. I cannot offer any conjecture about its use; but describe it in order to exercise the talents of others.

GOGARTH.

CONTINUED my ride along the shore by the flat isthmus which connects the high land of Gloddaeth with the great promontory Llandudno. Ride along part of the last, on a narrow road above the sea, having on the right steep hills and precipices. Reach Gogarth, a long but narrow tract of great fertility. It was formerly an appendage to the abbey of Conwy, and part of a very strong building still remains.

<sup>k</sup> Powel, 311.

I ASCENDED by a very long and steep path to the top of Llandudno, a beautiful sheepwalk, consisting of a fine turf, except where the rock appears, extending near four miles in length, and one in breadth. It lies in the manor of Gogarth, belonging to the see of Bangor. The western extremity is a vast precipice, the haunt of various sea-fowls in the season of breeding. The Gulls possess the lowest part; above them the Razor-bills and Guillemots have their quarters; over them croak the Corvorants; and Herons occupy the highest regions; and scattered in different parts are a few Puffins, and black Guillemots. The Peregrine Falcon builds in these rocks. This kind was in the days of falconry so esteemed, that the great minister Burleigh sent a letter of thanks to an ancestor of Sir Roger Mostyn, for a present of a cast of Hawks from this place.

LLANDUDNO,
OR, ORM'S
HEAD.

SEA-FOWLS.

FALCONS.

FALCONRY was in high esteem among the Welsh. Our prince had his chief falconer, who occupied the fourth rank among the officers of his court. He held his lands free; had a double portion of provender for his horse; the prince supplied him with woollen cloaths, the princess with linen. He brought his cup with him into the hall; but was not allowed to drink more than would quench his thirst, lest he should get fuddled, and neglect his Hawks. He was allowed the hearts and lungs of all the animals in the royal kitchen, and sometimes a barren ewe to feed his birds. Whenever his Hawks killed any of the three most noble species of game, the Heron, the Bittern, or the Crane, he received from the prince three services; that of holding his stirrup when he descended from his horse, of holding his horse while he was taking the Hawks from the game, and of holding his stirrup again when he mounted his horse; and at night the prince honored him with serving him thrice at table with his own hands. In case the falconer took any of the royal birds in the prince's absence, he was to bring it into the hall, and shew it to him; on that the prince was to rise, or if he did not, he was to bestow on him the robe which he then wore. During the time that the Hawks were in their mew, the falconer was not bound to answer any suit. If he killed his horse in the exercise of his office, the prince was to find him another. The fine for an injury to the chief falconer was vi cows, and cxxvi pence. His slaughter was not to be atoned for less than cxxvi cows<sup>1</sup>. Let me conclude with saying, that there was a peculiar tax for the support of this office, called Cylch Hebog-yddion<sup>m</sup>, which fell on the vassals; for the prince contributed little or nothing to the expence of his amusements.

ANTIENT
FALCONRY.

<sup>1</sup> Leges Wallicæ, 23 to 26.

<sup>m</sup> Record of Caernarvon, in Bibliotheca Litteraria, 25.

THE northern side of this promontory is broken into precipices of various heights; and the base of both these sides is washed by a very deep water. It is well worth the labor of ascending to the highest point, to view the extensive and various prospects.

ON the same side are the remains of several rude walls without mortar, called Llety Fadog, or the house of Madoc, a supposed ancestor of Glodd-aeth: and not far from it is a strait narrow path, with stones on each side, probably the remains of two walls; a watch-place for Deer, as the name Gwylfa y Ceirw signifies.

ON a great eminence, called Dinas, is a large enclosure. The edge of the hill is surrounded with a rude wall; and within are multitudes of small circular hollows, about twelve feet in diameter, environed with walls; such as are found on Tre'r Caeri, and similar places, the rough habitations of our distant ancestors. Near this place is a Maen Sigl, rocking-stone, a great one, whose point of contact with the ground is so small as to make it moveable with the lest touch. The country people call it Crŷd Tudno, St. Tudno's Cradle. This is surrounded with a foss, and has a formed road to it. It is the conjecture of the learned, that the Druids made these stones an instrument of imposition on their votaries; and in case of any judicial determinations, pretended that none but their holy hands could move them: and probably they were surrounded with a foss, and had their prescribed road to keep off the vulgar, and give greater solemnity to the miraculous decision. The ingenious Bernier relates a superstition not very foreign from this. At Sendbrary, in the kingdom of Cachemire, the Bramins, the Druids of India, shewed him a stone which the strongest man could not lift, yet eleven of those holy men, with the tip of their finger, could effect it, on praying to their saint<sup>n</sup>.

LLANDUDNO
CHURCH.

FROM hence I passed by the church, on the bleakest of situations, above the sea, and remote from all dwellings. It is dedicated to St. Tudno of Maes Gwyddno, the country now overflowed by the sea, between Meirioneddshire and Llyn. In descending from this promontory I passed by several copper mines which at times are worked to advantage. The ride from hence along the side of Llandudno bay is extremely pleasant. I ascended to Gloddaeth near the foot of Rhiwledin, a vast rock, which swarms in the season with Razor-bills and Puffins; and with Rock Pigeons, abundance of which regularly breed here, in preference to the dove-houses, which they constantly quit at their laying-time.

I DESCENDED from Gloddaeth to the sea-side, about two miles distant. Saw, close to the shore, the singular little building called St. Trillo's Chapel. It is oblong; has a window on each side, and at the end; a small door; and a vaulted roof, paved with round stones, instead of being slated. Within is a well. The whole building is surrounded with a stone wall.

<sup>n</sup> Bernier's Voyage of Cachemire, 112.

ON a hill, about half a mile distant from this chapel, is the church of Llandrillo, dedicated to the same saint. Near it is a large ruined house, called Bryn Euryn; formerly called Llys Maelgwyn Gwynedd, who had a palace on this spot. About the twelfth century it was inhabited by the great Ednyfed Fychan; and some time in the last was possessed by a family of the name of Conwy, of Welsh descent, derived from Gryffydd Goch, lord of Rhos and Rhyfoniog.

KEEP along the shore, and pass by Rhos Fynach, or the Marsh of the Monks, having been the property of Conwy abbey. The church still shares in a considerable wear, which runs from this point; the bishop, and the vicar of Llandrillo, having the fish of every tenth tide between them. At times they have a good chance of a profitable capture; for in two successive tides forty pounds worth of mackerel have been taken.

FROM Rhos Fynach the land recedes inwards, and forms a pretty bay. The country slopes to the water edge, and is varied with woods and cultivation. Penmaen Rhos, a great lime-stone rock

LLANDRILLO.

RHOS
FYNACH.PENMAEN
RHOS.

juts into the sea at the end of the bay. In my memory the traveller went along a narrow path cut on its front, like the road on Penmaen Mawr, but infinitely more terrible and dangerous; a fine coach-road has of late years been formed far behind this precipice. From thence I descended to Llandulas, a small village and church. In one of the deep bottoms of this neighborhood was betrayed the unfortunate prince Richard II. who had been deceitfully enticed by the earl of Northumberland to go along with him from Conwy to meet Bolingbroke, to settle amicably the quarrel between them. Hereabouts he suddenly found himself surrounded by a large band of armed men, placed there by the treacherous earl, who, seizing on Richard, delivered him captive to the usurper in Flint castle°.

A LITTLE farther on the right hand, high above the road, is Cefn Ogo, a lofty precipice; white, unless where darkened by the ivy which spreads along the front. In the middle is the most magnificent entrance into a cave which Britain can boast. It seems like the portal of a noble cathedral, arched, and divided within by what has the appearance of a great column.

NEAR this place begins the rich arable flat, which extends over Rhuddlan Marsh, and beyond

° See the whole story, agreeably expressed by suitable prints from old illuminated MSS. in Mr. Strutt's Regal Antiquities.

Prestatyn in Flintshire. The small town of Abergeleu lies about a mile from Cefn Ogo near the clayey cliffs which impend over the sea. Tradition says, that in old times that element had overwhelmed a vast tract of inhabited country once extending at least two miles northward; a dateless, nameless, epitaph on the church-yard wall is called in as evidence. Yma mae'n gorwedd yn monwent Mihangel, gwr oedd ai annedd dair milltir i'r gogledd. "In this church-yard lies a man who "lived three miles to the north of it." But, as a better proof, I have observed, at low-water, far from the clayey banks, a long tract of hard loam, filled with the bodies of oak trees, tolerably entire; but so soft as to be cut with a knife as easily as wax.

THE wood is collected by the poorer people, and, after being brought to dry upon the beach, is carried home and used as fuel; but, in burning, it emits a very bad smell.

THE church is a long awkward pile with a high tower steeple.

OF this parish was Marchudd ap Cynan, contemporary with Roderic the Great, and one of the tribes of North Wales whose posterity gave princes to the British empire. His seat was Brynffeniogl, where likewise his descendant, the great Ednyfed Fychan, sometimes resided.

MARCHUDD
AP CYNAN.

ABERGELEU is bounded to the right by high lime-stone hills, at times productive of lead ore.

COPPA YR
WYLFA.

On one of them, projecting from the rest, called Coppa yr Wylfa, or the mount of the watch-tower, is a very strong British post. The front is a great precipice; out of its interstices grows the Aria Theophrasti; the accessible parts are defended by fosses of vast depth and mounds of stones along the inner sides, which give them considerable strength. In a glen beneath is a ditch, called Ffôs y Bleiddiaid, or the ditch of the Wolves; possibly from the frequency of those animals in these parts. Mr. Llwyd, in his Itinerary, speaks of a mount near Abergeleu divided in two, on which formerly stood a castle, called Pen y Pil, possibly a residence of the antient lords.

PEN Y PIL.

FROM Abergeleu I ascended to the neighboring parish of Cegidoc, or, as the English call it, St. George. It was formerly annexed to St. Asaph, and the parishioners were obliged to repair the street wall of the church-yard.

CAMP OF OWEN
GWYNEDD.

HIGH above this place, on the top of a hill called Pen y Parc, is a very strong post, said to have been occupied by Owen Gwynedd after his fine retreat before Henry II.; whom he kept here at bay, and politically secured his dominions from further invasion: for it was on this spot, not among the Snowdon hills, as lord Lyttelton<sup>p</sup> supposes, that our gallant prince made a most effectual stand, and stopped all further progress of the invader. On the accessible sides are double and treble ditches and ramparts, the others are sufficiently guarded by precipices. The area is near three quarters of a mile round, and, near the edge of the steep part, facing Rhuddlan, is smoothed into the form of a terrace.

<sup>p</sup> Hist. of Henry II. ii. 385, 3d ed. octavo.

ST. GEORGE had in this parish his Holy Well, at which the British Mars had his offering of horses; for the rich were wont to offer one, to secure his blessing on all the rest. He was the tutelary saint of those animals; all that were distempered were brought, sprinkled with the water, and this blessing bestowed: Rhad Duw a sant Sior arnat. "The blessing of God and St. George be " on thee."

SUPERSTI-TIONS.

THE well of St. Eliau, a parish not far from Llandrillo in Caernarvonshire, has been in great repute for the cures of all diseases, by means of the intercession of the saint; who was first invoked by earnest prayers in the neighboring church. He was also applied to on less worthy occasions, and made the instrument of discovering thieves, and of recovering stolen goods. Some repair to him to imprecate their neighbors, and to request the saint to afflict with sudden death, or with some great misfortune, any persons who may have offended them. The belief in this is still strong; for three years have not elapsed since I was threatened by a fellow (who imagined I had injured him) with the vengeance of St. Eliau, and a journey to his well to curse me with effect.

WELL OF ST. ELIAN.

RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS.

I SHALL here bring into one point of view the several religious customs<sup>(1)</sup> used among us in former times, which have been gradually dropped, in proportion as the age grew enlightened. Several were local, several extended through the whole country: perhaps some, which were expressive of their hatred of vice, or which had a charitable end, might as well have been retained, notwithstanding the smack of folly that was often to be perceived in them.

IN church, at the name of the Devil, an universal spitting seized the congregation, as if in contempt of that evil spirit; and whenever Judas was mentioned, they expressed their abhorrence of him by smiting their breasts.

IF there be a Efynnion Fair, the well of our Lady, or any other saint, the water for baptism was always brought from thence; and after the ceremony was over, old women were very fond of washing their eyes in the water of the font.

PREVIOUS to a funeral, it was customary, when the corpse was brought out of the house and laid upon the bier, for the next of kin, be it widow, mother, sister, or daughter (for it must be a female) to give, over the coffin, a quantity of white loaves, in a great dish, and sometimes a cheese, with a piece of money stuck in it, to certain poor persons. After that they presented, in the same manner, a cup of drink, and required the person to drink a little of it immediately. When that was done, they knelt down; and the minister, if present, said the Lord's Prayer: after which, they proceeded with the corpse; and at every cross-way, between the house and the church, they layed down the bier, knelt, and again repeated the Lord's Prayer; and did the same when they first entered the church-yard. It is also customary, in many places, to sing psalms on the way; by which the stillness of rural life is often broken into, in a manner finely productive of religious reflections.

(1) There is an article, by Mr. Barnwell, in the Arch. Camb. for 1872, "on some ancient Welsh Customs and Furniture," which may be referred to with advantage. T.V.

To this hour, the bier is carried by the next of kin; a custom considered as the highest respect that filial piety can pay to the deceased. This was a usage frequent among the Romans of high rank; and it was thought a great continuance of the good fortune which had attended Metellus Macedonicus through his whole being, that when he had, in the fulness of years, passed out of life by a gentle decay, amidst the kisses and embraces of his nearest connections, he was carried to the funeral pile on the shoulders of his four sons<sup>a</sup>; and, let me add, that each of them had enjoyed the greatest offices of the commonwealth<sup>r</sup>.

AMONG the Welsh it was reckoned fortunate for the deceased if it should rain while they were carrying him to church, that his bier might be wet with the dew of heaven.

IN some places it was customary for the friends of the dead to kneel, and say the Lord's Prayer over the grave, for several Sundays after the interment; and then to dress the grave with flowers.

Mauibus date lilia plenis.

Purpureos spargam flores; animamque nepotis
His saltè accumulem donis, et fungar inani Munere.

Bring fragrant flowers, the fairest lilies bring,
With all the purple beauties of the spring.
These gifts at least, these honors I'll bestow
On the dear youth, to please his shade below.

WARTON.

IT is still usual to stick, on the eve of St. John the Baptist, over the doors, sprigs of St. John's wort, or in lieu of it the common Mugwort. The intent was to purify the house from evil spirits; in the same manner as the Druids were wont to do with Vervaine, which still bears with the Welsh the significant title of Cas gan Gythrael, or the Dæmons' aversion.

<sup>a</sup> Valer. Max. lib. vii. c. i.      <sup>r</sup> Plinii, Hist. Nat. lib. vii. c. 74.

UPON Christmas day, about three o'clock in the morning, most of the parishioners assembled in church, and after prayers and a sermon, continued there singing psalms and hymns with great devotion till broad day; and if, through age or infirmity, any were disabled from attending, they never failed having prayers at home, and carols on our SAVIOUR'S nativity. The former part of the custom is still preserved; but too often perverted into intemperance. This act of devotion is called Plygan, or the Crowing of the Cock. It has been a general belief among the superstitious, that instantly, at his warning,

Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine.

But during the holy season, the Cock was supposed to exert his power throughout the night; from which, undoubtedly, originated the Welsh word Plygan, as applied to this custom. Accordingly, Shakespeare finely describes this old opinion:

Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our SAVIOUR'S birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then, they say, no spirit walks abroad:
The nights are wholesome: then no planets strike:
No fairy takes: no witch hath power to charm,
So hallowed and so gracious is the time.

Soon after leaving St. George, I passed by Kin-

KINMAEL. mael house and park, in a lofty situation on the left. This place had been, during four generations, the property of the Holland's, of a noble English descent, long settled in this part of Britain, and branched into several respectable families. The pedigrees derive them from a Sir Thomas Holland, who, tradition says, came, with another brother, into Wales, in troublesome times, I have reason to suppose them to have been William and Thomas, the two younger sons of John Holland, duke of Exeter; who died in 1446, and left to each of them an annuity of forty pounds<sup>s</sup>. They were of a most unpopular family, therefore probably retired to shun the miseries they might experience in that age of civil discord. Pierce Holland, eleventh in descent from Sir Thomas, made his settlement at Kinmael by his marriage with Catherine, daughter to Richard ap Evan ap Dafydd Fychan and Alice his wife, heiress of the place, daughter of Gryffydd Lloyd<sup>t</sup>. In the last century, one of his descendants had two daughters. Colonel Carter, an officer in the service of the parlement, made choice of Catherine, the youngest, and took the estate with her. A wag said, that he had chosen the best piece of Holland in the country. He left the eldest sister Mary to Colonel Price of Rhiwlas, a royalist. About fifty years ago, a descendant of his, John Carter esq; alienated the place to the late Sir George Wynne bart<sup>x</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> Dugdale's Baron. ii. 81.

<sup>t</sup> Ap Evan ap Rhys ap Gryffydd Lloyd ap Robyn ap Rhys ap Robert.

IN a very wet situation, beneath Kinmael, is Vaenol; one of the best old houses in the county of Flint. It was built in 1595, by John Lloyd, a younger son of Wyg Fair, and register of St. Asaph in the reign of Queen Elizabeth; a place extremely profitable, before the powers of the church were abridged. At this place, Brinpolin, and Wyg Fair, had been chapels of ease to St. Asaph, and three out of the four vicars did duty at them in turn. A fine stone coffin, from that of Vaenol, lies in the garden of this house.

IN my way from Kinmael, see Bodleyddan, the seat of John Williams esq<sup>y</sup>; a purchase of his grandfather, Sir William, speaker of the house of commons. Previous to that, it had been for many generations the property of the Humphries, descended from Rhys Goch, brother to Gwerydd ap Rhys, one of the fifteen tribes of North Wales, and cotemporary with Owen Gwynedd.

<sup>x</sup> Kinmael was sold by Sir George Wynne to David Roberts esq; from whom it was purchased by the reverend Edward Hughes. A handsome mansion has been erected in the park, after the design of Mr. Samuel Wyatt, at some distance from the old house. ED.

<sup>y</sup> His grandson Sir John Williams, the present worthy possessor of Bodleyddan, was created a Baronet in 1798; he has considerably enlarged the house, and improved the grounds. ED.

PENGWERN. DESCEND to Pengwern, the seat of Sir Edward Lloyd<sup>z</sup> bart.; an excellent new house built by him on the site of the old one, which had been built by Elen, sister to Archbishop Williams, for the son of her first husband, Evan Gryffydd, owner of the place. Her second husband was Sir Peter Mutton. The portrait of her brother, in a clergyman's dress, with the seals and arms of Lincoln, of which see he was possessed during the time he was lord keeper, is preserved here. Another of Sir Peter Mutton in his scarlet robes, a ruff, and great hat; and another of lady Mutton, a handsome woman, in a black gown, high hat, and with a feather fan, and great kerchief, æt. 45, 1631. From hence I passed through Rhuddlan and Newmarket to the comforts of my fire-side.

<sup>z</sup> "Sir Edward Lloyd finished," says Mr. Pennant, in the Hist. of Whiteford, "his long and useful life on May 26th, 1795:" he was succeeded by his great nephew Sir Edward Pryce Lloyd bart. ED.

END OF THE SECOND PART.

PART III.

---

DOWNING,

MEIFOD, CAER SWS,

MONTGOMERY,

POWYS CASTLE, SHREWSBURY,

CAER CARADOC.

THE TOUR IN NORTH WALES,

PART III.

---

ON Wednesday, July 4th, 1776, I left home: breakfasted with the reverend John Lloyd at Caerwys, and with him descended into the pretty little vale, which leads from Mold to Denbigh; and immediately on crossing it ascended the steep and lofty side of Bwlch Coed y Mynydd, a great hill, the last of the Clwydian chain, before it is broken by the streight of Bodfari. On the side of this hill, at Llys Coed y Mynydd, towards the left, lived Ednowain Bendew, or Ednowain the Strong-headed, lord of Tegengl in 1079, and one of the fifteen tribes of North Wales<sup>a</sup>.

THESE Llwythau, or tribes, were the nobility of North Wales. They commenced extremely early; and, at different times, were lords of distinct districts, and called to that honor by several princes. The latest were about the time of Dafydd ap Owen Gwynedd, who began his reign in 1169. We are left ignorant of the form by which they were called to this rank. All we know is, that

TRIBES OF
NORTH
WALES.

<sup>a</sup> Hist. of Whiteford, p. 308. Ed.

each of them enjoyed some office in the court of our princes, which seems to have been hereditary, and probably to be attendant on the honor.

AFTER reaching the summit of the hill, a rich and extensive view presented itself, of the fertile vale of Clwyd beneath, and the great range of our alpine country, at length jutting into the sea at the bold promontories of Llandudno and Penmaen Mawr. The descent into the vale is gradual, along a beautiful terrace, for a considerable space far above it. Fron-yw, the seat of John Madocks<sup>(1)</sup> esq; commands a delightful prospect. Its master<sup>b</sup> adds to the many illustrious proofs we have at this period, that the modern Welsh are as eminent in persuasive rhetoric as our Gaulish neighbors were in days of yore.

PASS by the small churches of Llan-Gwifan, Llan-Dyrnog, Llan-Gynhafal, and Llan-Rhychan, dedicated to the Saints Gwyfan, Tyrnog, Cynhafal, and Rhychan, all in the county of DENBIGH, and diocese of Bangor. Beneath the church of Llanbeder, reach nearly the bottom of the vale; and continue my journey through Ruthin, and along Nantchwyd, by a good old house of the same name.

(1) Mr. Madocks was a very eminent Chancery barrister, and M.P. for Westbury. T.P.

<sup>b</sup> Grandfather to the present possessor. ED

AFTER resting one night at Corwen, proceed as far as Llandrillo, on the road to Bala; and near that village turn to the left into a narrow glen, much wooded, watered by a rude torrent, and bounded by high hills. At this extremity, near a farm called Blaen y Cwm, begin to ascend Milltir Gerrig, or the Stoney Mile; a Bwlch, or pass amidst the Berwyn hills, about a mile in length, with the mountains, black with heath, soaring on each side to a stupendous height. It is the great pass in these parts from Meirioneddshire into

MILLTIR
GERRIG.

MONTGOMERYSHIRE,

and divides the counties: the latter is called by the Welsh, Sir Tre Faldwyn, or the shire of the town of Baldwin, lieutenant of the marches in the time of the Conqueror, who built the town; the name of which was afterwards changed to that of Montgomery, derived from Roger de Montgomery, the founder of the castle: which name it gave to the county when it was formed into one by Henry VIII. The first member who appears on record was Edward Leech esq; who sat in 1542. Humphry Llwyd justly celebrates the fertility of its vallies, the stature and beauty of its inhabitants; but stigmatises them with the character of idleness, and of being addicted to useless amusements<sup>c</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> Commentariolum, 92.

THE descent from this pass is very steep; but a fine road was then forming, with the great view of giving the Irish a shorter way into their country, through Oswestry, and over the Bwlch, through the county of Meirionedd. This is one of the vast designs of the present age, which will effect communications with places before almost inaccessible.

ON arriving at the bottom, I again found myself in narrow vales, loftily bounded. After about LLANGYNOG. three miles riding reached Llangynog, a small village in the parish of the same name, in the diocese of St. Asaph. The place was the source of short-lived wealth to the maternal relation of the present
 LEAD MINE. earl of Powys. A lead mine was discovered here in the year 1692, which was in most parts a vein of three yards and a half thick, and was worked to the depth of a hundred yards, when the water became too powerful. It continued in a flourishing state during a period of near forty years; yielded about four thousand tons annually; was sold at 7*l.* a ton, and smelted on the spot; and brought in a clear revenue to the family of twenty thousand pounds a year.

A SLATE quarry has been discovered of late years in the parish. About 904,000 were sold from November 1, 1775, to November 1, 1776; at the rate of from 6*s.* to 20*s.* a thousand; but the want of water carriage is a great loss to the work.

AT about two miles distant from Llangynog I turned up a small valley to the right, to pay my devotions to the shrines of St. Monacella, or, as the Welsh style her, Melangell. Her legend relates, that she was the daughter of an Irish monarch, who had determined to marry her to a nobleman of his court. The princess had vowed celibacy. She fled from her father's dominions, and took refuge in this place, where she lived fifteen years without seeing the face of man. Brochwel Ys-cythrog, prince of Powys, being one day a hare-hunting, pursued his game till he came to a great thicket; when he was amazed to find a virgin of surprising beauty, engaged in deep devotion, with the hare he had been pursuing under her robe, boldly facing the dogs who retired to a distance, howling, notwithstanding all the efforts of the sportsmen to make them sieze their prey. Even when the huntsman blew his horn, it stuck to his lips. Brochwel heard her story; and gave to God and her a parcel of lands, to be a sanctuary to all that fled there. He desired her to found an abbey on the spot. She did so, and died abbess, in a good old age. She was buried in the neighboring church, called Pennant, and from her distinguished by the addition of Melangell. Her hard bed is shewn in the cleft of a neighboring rock. Her tomb was in a little chapel, or oratory, adjoining to the church, and now used as a vestry-room.

ST. MONA-CELLA.

CHURCH OF PENNANT MELANGELL.

This room still is called Cell-y-bedd, or the Cell of the Grave; her reliques, as well as her image, have been long since removed: but I think the last is still to be seen in the church-yard. The legend is perpetuated by some rude wooden carvings of the saint, with numbers of hares scuttling to her for protection. She properly became their patroness. They were called Wyn Melangell—St. Monacella's Lambs. Till the last century, so strong a superstition prevailed, that no person would kill a hare in the parish; and even later, when a hare was pursued by dogs, it was firmly believed, that if any one cried “God and St. Monacella be with thee,” it was sure to escape<sup>d</sup>.

IN the church-yard is a stone with the figure of an armed man, which now serves as a common grave-stone, but once covered the remains of the eldest son of Owen Gwynedd, Jorwerth Drwyndwn, or Edward with the broken nose, who was put aside from the succession on account of this blemish<sup>e</sup>. Hither he had fled for refuge from the cruelty of his brother Dafydd ap Owen Gwynedd, this place having been one of our most celebrated sanctuaries. On his shield is inscribed Hic jacet Etwart. Tradition says, he was killed not far from hence, at a place called Bwlch Croes Jorwerth.

THIS valley is exceedingly picturesque: inclosed

<sup>d</sup> See her life.

<sup>e</sup> Powel's Hist. Wales, 227.

by hills on all sides, except its entrance; watered by the Tanat, which springs not far off. The upper end is bounded by two vast precipices, down which, at times, fall two great cataracts; between them juts out the great and rude promontory of Moel ddu Fawr, which almost divides the precipices into equal parts: and all together formed a fine and solemn retreat for devotees. On the side of this valley is the house of Llechweiddgarth, the property of Thomas Thomas esq. Continue my journey for some time along the valley, then ascend and descend a series of grassy hills of a moderate height, and observe in many parts the narrower passes crossed by entrenchments, in old times designed to interrupt the inroads of an invader. It is said, that a Roman road goes near this place towards Aberystwyth. Descend to Bodfach, the seat of Bel Lloyd esq; in right of his marriage with Miss Price, heiress of the place. This and several other estates, even as far as the borders of Shropshire, belonged to the Kyffins, so named from being Kyffinaiid, or borderers. They were descended from Eneon Evell, or Eneon the Twin, brother to Cynric Evell, illegitimate sons of Madoc ap Meredydd ap Bleddyn ap Cynfyn, prince of Powys; who gave Eneon his portion in this country, and Cynric his in Molesdale and its neighborhood. Owen Brogyntyn, eldest of his natural children, was settled in Edeirnion.

BODFACH.

THE valley about Bodfach expands, is admirably cultivated, watered by the Cain, and prettily bordered by low hills finely wooded. The town and church of Llanfyllin happily fill one angle, and vary the view.

LLWYD-IARTH.

FROM Bodfach I made an excursion to Llwydiarth, a large old house in the parish of Llanwddyn, seated in a hilly naked country. It was formerly the property of the great family of the Vaughans, descended from Aleth Hén, king of Dyfed, or Pembrokeshire. The estate was conveyed to Sir Watkin Williams Wynn<sup>t</sup>, by his first wife, daughter and heiress to the last owner. From one part of the ride had a view into Cardiganshire, and of the great naked mountain of Plynlimmon, covered with heath, or moory grass.

LLANRHAI-
ADR YN MOCHNANT.

I CANNOT omit in this place mention of an excursion formerly made to Llanrhaidr yn Mochnant, a neighboring parish, partly in this county, partly in Denbighshire. The church is seated in the last, dedicated to St. Dogvan, son of Brychan. Dr. William Morgan, who first translated the Bible into Welsh, was its vicar. He was rewarded by Queen Elizabeth with the bishoprick of Llandaff, in 1595, and was removed to that of St. Asaph in 1601, where he died September 10th, 1604, and was interred in the cathedral.

<sup>t</sup> Grandfather to the present Sir W. W. Wynn. ED.

THE facetious but learned preacher Dr. South, was the last rector of the parish. On his decease, the rectorial tithes were appropriated by act of parlement to the maintenance of the choir and repair of the cathedral church of St. Asaph.

I MUST speak with due respect of the memory of the late worthy vicar, Dr. Worthington; to whose hospitable house I was indebted for a seasonable reception, the wet evening which fortunately preceded my visit to Pistill Rhaiadr. This celebrated cataract terminates the precipitous end of a very narrow valley, and, as it were, divides a bold front of the Berwyn mountains. After sliding for some time along a small declivity, it darts down at once two-thirds of the precipice, and, falling on a ledge, has, in process of time, worn itself a passage through the rock, and makes a second cataract beneath a noble arch which it has formed; on the slippery summit of which, a daring shepherd will sometimes terrify you with standing. The second fall reaches the bottom, and assumes the name of the Rhaiadr, or the cascade. The defect of this noble fall, is the want of wood. When I visited it, the approach was very bad; but that is not only effectually remedied by the late benevolent vicar, but, as I am informed, he has besides erected a cottage, as a retreat to the traveller from the fury of the storm.

PISTILL
RHAIADR.

THE abundance of sheep, which enliven these hills, brought, at the time I visited the country, great wealth into it. The flannel manufacture, and that of a coarse cloth for the army, and for covering the poor negroes in the West Indies, is carried on in most parts of the county. It is sent and sold in the rough to Shrewsbury; a practice very contrary to the interest of the country.

LEAVE Bodfach; and, for the sake of a beautiful view, am led by Mr. Lloyd, a little out of my way to the top of a hill, from whence is a prospect of a rich expanded vale, with the church of Llanfechan in the midst. Part is bounded by low and fertile hills. The great rock of Llan y Mynach, the magazine of limestone for a vast tract of country, closes one side; beyond extends the great flat of Shropshire, with the Wrekin hill rising insulated in the distance. I returned through Llanfyllin, a small town, which had a charter bestowed on it by Llewelyn ap Gryffydd ap Gwynwynwyn, in the reign of Edward II. and confirmed by Edward de Charlton, lord of Powys. This gave the burgesses exemption from tolls, Theam throughout his territories, Gileam, and Hampsum. They could take, imprison, and try, any thieves or malefactors; and, should such escape, they had liberty of pursuing them for a league round the town. Any stranger residing in it, and paying scot and lot for a year, became free. It is governed by two bailiffs, chosen annually; who, among other privileges granted it by Charles II. were made justices of the peace within the corporation, during the time of their office<sup>s</sup>.

RIDE for some time on the Oswestry road. Ascend to the right; go near Bryn Gwyn, seat BRYN GWYN. of William Mostyn esq; above which is a circular British post. Numbers of these posts front the low country, on the hills which jut into it, as if guards to protect the internal parts from invasion. Across the road, in one place, I met the vestiges of a very strong rampart, to defend a pass into the vale of Meifod, which soon after appeared in view. VALE OF MEIFOD. The church and village are situated in the middle of the valley, which is quite flat; extends in length more than five miles, and is about half a mile broad. Three parts are bounded by low hills, prettily wooded; one end opens into the plain, and is finely terminated by the Freiddin hills, a vast mass, and conspicuous feature in this county, and part of Shropshire. The Vyrnyw, called by Dr. Powel, Marnovia, a beautiful river, winds along the middle of the vale. Its borders rich in wheat, rye, and grass.

THE church is dedicated to St. Tyssilio, a prince of Powys, the supporter of the British churches against Austin the Monk. In old times it belonged to the abbey of Strata Marcella, Ystrat Marchell, in this county. It is the mother church to Pool and Guildsfield; all which, in the 17th of Henry VII. the bishop of St. Asaph had licence to appropriate to himself<sup>h</sup>. The vicarage of Meifod is now appropriated to Christ-church, Oxford. It is a place of great ecclesiastical antiquity. There is reason to suppose, that it took its name from its having been, in the very early ages of Christianity, the residence of a hermit or recluse; for Meudwyfod implies a hermit's habitation, and Lan is frequently added to many Welsh words, to denote them to have been inclosed places; such as Gwinllan, a vineyard; Corlan, a sheepfold; Ydlan, a stackyard; so that Meudwylan would signify the precinct of the hermit, and by the assistance of a Roman termination, become Meudwylanium(<sup>l</sup>); and that, readily, more latinized into Mediolanum, the name we find it bears in the Itinerary<sup>i</sup>, where it is placed between Bovium, Bangor, and Rutunium, Rowton. We find it again in the Chorography of the Ravenna's, and in Ptolemy<sup>k</sup>. If those periods are supposed to have been too early for the institution of monastic life in this island, I must defend my opinion by that of the learned Tanner, who

• Camden, ii. 783.

<sup>h</sup> Notitia on St. Asaph diocese, MS.

(<sup>l</sup>) It is needless to say that this is impossible for several reasons. J.R.

<sup>i</sup> Iter Britanniarum.

<sup>k</sup> Horsely, 374. 492.

reasonably supposes it to have been nearly coeval with Christianity in Great Britain<sup>1</sup>.

THE Roman antiquity rests upon the authority of one of our older writers<sup>m</sup>; who mentions that in his time there were considerable remains of venerable antiquity; that several foundations, floors, and causeways, have been dug up; but whether any coins, arms, or inscriptions, have been met with, does not appear. Camden also mentions a field, called Erw'r Porth, or the field of the gate, where he concludes might have stood one of the Portæ, or gates<sup>n</sup>.

To revert to the Christian antiquities: Meifod is said to have been the archdeaconry of all Powysland, and to have had two churches besides the present. Whether the chapel, whose ruins were standing in no very remote period, and was called Eglwys Gwyddfarch, from a British saint of this country, might not have been one, I cannot say; the other was named Eglwys Fair, or the church of the Virgin, which was built in 1155<sup>o</sup>.

IN the chief church were interred the princes and great men of Powys; among whom may be enumerated Madoc ap Meredydd ap Bleddyn ap Cynfyn, prince of Powys, who died in 1160, at Winchester, and was conveyed here; and the noble

<sup>1</sup> Preface.

<sup>m</sup> Girald. Cambr. Itin. Dr. Powel's note, c. iv. lib. ii.

<sup>n</sup> Camden, ii. 781, 782.      ° Powel, 205.

Gryffydd Maelor, lord of Bromefield, who died in 1188<sup>p</sup>.

CHURCH-YARD.

THE present church-yard consists of not less than nine acres, and yields to the minister as many pounds, as a pasture.

NOT far above Meifod is an union of two rivers, both of the name of Vyrnyw, which diverge considerably, and take their rise remote from one another. The poetical topographer Drayton therefore very justly styles the river

FORKT Vurnway, bringing Tur and Tanot: growing rank,
She plies her towards the pool<sup>q</sup>.

MATHRAFAL.

Both are large streams, in many places black and deep. Soon beyond their junction the ground rises. On a steep bank, above one of the rivers, stood Mathrafal, once the seat of the princes Powys; the name at present preserved only by a farm-house. I could easily trace the site of the antient castle: it occupied the space of about two acres. One side was guarded by the steep over the river; the other three sides by a vast rampart of stone and earth, and a very deep foss; a high exploratory mount, on which perhaps had been a castelet, fills one corner; from which is a clear view of all that passes up and down the vale.

AFTER this place was deserted by its princes,

<sup>p</sup> Powel, 210. 242.

<sup>q</sup> Canto vi.

the castle was possessed, or, as Dr. Powel says, built by Robert de Vepont, a potent baron, high in favor with king John. It is most probable that he only restored, and strengthened it with new works. In 1112, Llewelyn ap Iorwerth laid siege to it; but the king coming with a potent army, obliged Llewelyn to retire, and after that caused the castle to be demolished<sup>r</sup>.

IN Gwern Ddu, a wood opposite to Mathrafal, beyond the river, is a circular entrenchment; and in a field, beyond the other branch, is a round mount; both which certainly had respect, in early times, to the fortress at Mathrafal. I must therefore agree with the learned Burton's conjecture, that this might have been the Mediolanum of the Romans; it having been customary with British as well as Saxon princes, to have their palaces where formerly Roman stations had their situation and being<sup>s</sup>. Let me add also, that this might have been the winter station; and the low Meifod, subject to overflowings from the river, the summer station.

THE country beyond Mathrafal grows hilly, clayey, and barren. Pass by the church of Llangyniw; to the left is Dolarddyn, where Henry VII. is said to have lodged a night.

LLANGYNIW.

A FEW miles farther I rode through the village of Castell Caereneon, seated on the Vyrnyw. A castle was built here in 1155, by Madoc ap Meredydd, prince of Powys<sup>t</sup>. I had not leisure to enquire whether there were any remains.

<sup>r</sup> Hist. Wales, 267.<sup>s</sup> Burton's Com. 132.

THE country for seven miles more continued hilly, and full of unpleasant commons. Reach CREGYNNOG. Cregynnog<sup>n</sup>, the seat of Arthur Blayney esq; whose hospitality I experienced for two or three days. Under his conduct I saw every thing in the neighborhood which merited attention. The very worthy owner is descended from Brochwel Ys-cythrog. The elder branch of the family has been ennobled in Ireland, since the year 1620, by the title of Lord Blayney of Monaghan; an honor well earned by the services of Sir Edward Blayney knight, in Ireland, in the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and her successor.

CASTELL
 DOLFORWYN.

ONE evening I was conducted to Castell Dolforwyn, a castle on a high ridge of a hill, very steep, and almost surrounded by a wooded dingle. At the bottom runs a small brook, which falls into the Severn about a mile distant. This fortress is very ruinous, being built with the small shattery stone of the country, and resembles much, in its masonry, Castell Dinas Bran. On the two more accessible sides are deep trenches, cut through the rock. It commands a fine view of the rich vale of

<sup>t</sup> Powel, 205.

<sup>n</sup> Cregynnog became the property of Charles Hanbury esq; by his marriage with Miss Tracy, niece to the late Arthur Blayney esq. ED.

Severn. According to Dugdale<sup>u</sup>, it was built by Dafydd ap Llewelyn, a prince who reigned from 1240 to 1246; but I prefer the authority of John Dafydd Rhys, quoted by the reverend Evan Evans<sup>x</sup>; which assures us it was founded by that worthy prince Bleddyn ap Cynfyn, between the years 1065 and 1073. Roger de Mortimer obtained a grant of it, together with the castles of Kedewen and Keri, from Edward I. in 1278, to hold to himself and his heirs, by the service of three knights fees<sup>y</sup>.

WHAT is the origin of the name of Dolforwyn, or the Meadow of the Maiden, I cannot with any certainty pronounce; but from some legendary tradition of the country, I suspect that it has allusion to the story of Sabra, or Sabrina, of which our poets have made so beautiful an use. She was (says Jeffry of Monmouth) daughter of Lochrine king of Britain, by Estrildis, one of the three captive virgins of matchless charms, which he took after he had defeated Humber king of the Huns, to whom they belonged. Lochrine had divorced his former queen Guendolen in her favor. On the death of the British monarch, Guendolen assumed the government, pursued Estrildis, and Sabra her daughter, with unrelenting cruelty, and

SABRINA, HER STORY.

<sup>u</sup> Monast. ii. 223.

<sup>x</sup> Dissertatio de Bardis, 92.

<sup>y</sup> Dugdale Baron. i. 142.

caused them to be drowned in the river; which, with a slight alteration, assumed the name of the innocent victim. Milton, in his brief and elegant description of our rivers, speaks of

The Severn swift, guilty of maiden's death.

But in his incomparable mask of Comus, he enters fully into her sad story, and makes her the goddess of Chastity, and calls her from the deep

To undo the charmed band
Of true virgin, here distrest,
Through the force, and through the wile
Of unblest inchanter vile.

No reader of taste will, I am sure, be displeas'd with me for relating the history of the goddess in the beautiful numbers of our poet.

SABRINA is her name, a virgin pure:
Whilome she was the daughter of Lochrine,
That had the sceptre from his father Brute.
She, guiltless damsel, flying the mad pursuit
Of her enraged stepdame Guendolen,
Commended her fair innocence to the flood,
That stay'd her flight with his cross-flowing course.
The water-nymphs, that in the bottom play'd,
Held up their pearled wrists, and took her in,
Bearing her straight to aged Nereus' hall;
Who piteous of her woes, rear'd her lank head,
And gave her to his daughters to imbathe
In nectar'd lavers, strow'd with asphodil;
And, through the porch and inlet of each sense, Dropt in ambrosial oils, till she reviv'd,
And underwent a quick immortal change,
Made Goddess of the river. Still she retains
Her maiden gentleness, and oft at eve

Visits the herds along the twilight meadows,
 Helping all urchin blasts, and ill-luck signs,
 That the shrewd meddling elf delights to make,
 Which she with precious vial'd liquors heals.
 For which the shepherds, at their festivals,
 Carol her goodness loud in rustic lays;
 And throw sweet garland wreaths into her stream
 Of pansies, pinks, and gaudy daffodils.
 And, as the old swain said, she can unlock
 The clasping charm, and thaw the numbing spell,
 If she be right invok'd in warbled song;
 For maidenhood she loves, and will be swift
 To aid a virgin, such as was herself,
 In hard besetting need.

NOT far from Dolforwyn is Aberfechan, an old house; which, after being owned by the Blayneys, the Prices, and the Lloyds, is now possessed by Sir Gervase Clifton baronet, by virtue of his marriage with the heiress of the place, daughter of Richard Lloyd esq.

ABER-
 FECHAN.

FROM hence we descended into the vale of the Severn, and crossed the river on a wooden bridge. It is the misfortune of this part of the county<sup>z</sup> to be destitute of several most necessary materials. The rich are obliged to burn wood instead of coal; and the poor, a wretched turf. Lime is extremely remote; and stone fit for masonry at a vast distance. From the head of the Severn, as low as Llandreini, there is not a stone bridge. Should it happen, <sup>z</sup> A beneficial communication into the heart of Montgomeryshire is now opened by means of a branch of the canal called "the Ellesmere," which connects the Dee and the Severn. ED.

in any remote period, that timber should fail, the better sort of people must probably be reduced to distress for want of fuel; and at times one part of the county becomes inaccessible to the other for want of bridges. The moral of this is, PLANT, and PRESERVE YOUR WOODS!

NEWTOWN.

VISIT Tre' Newydd, or Newtown, a neat small town with a good market, on the banks of the Severn. In a pretty park, near to the town, is the seat of the Pryses. The family derives itself from Elystan Glodrydd, one of the five royal tribes of Wales, prince of all the country between Wye and Severn, and earl of Hereford in right of his mother Rhiengar, daughter of Grono ap Tudor Trevor. It became possessed of this place about the time of Henry VI. The late owner, Sir John Pryse, was a gentleman of worth, but of strange singularities. He married three wives; and kept the two first who died, in his room, one on each side of his bed; his third declined the honor of his hand till her defunct rivals were committed to their proper place.

SIR JOHN
PRYSE.

DURING the season of miracles worked by Bridget Bostock of Cheshire, who healed all diseases by prayer, faith, and an embrocation of fasting-spittle, multitudes resorted to her from all parts, and kept her salival glands in full employ. Sir John, with a high spirit of enthusiasm, wrote to this wonderful woman to make him a visit at Newtown Hall, in order to restore to him his third and favorite wife. His letter will best tell the foundation on which he built his strange hope, and very uncommon request.

EURYDICES oro properata retexite fila.

Purport of Sir JOHN PRYCE'S Letter to Mrs. BRIDGET BOSTOCK. 1748.

“ MADAM,

“ HAVING received information by repeated “ advices, both public and private, that you have
 “ of late performed many wonderful cures, even “ where the best physicians have failed; and that “ the means used appear to be very inadequate to
 “ the effects produced; I cannot but look upon “ you as an extraordinary and highly favored per“ son. And why may not the same most merci“ ful God, who enables you to restore sight to the “ blind, hearing to the deaf, and strength to the “ lame, also enable you to raise the dead to life?
 “ Now, having lately lost a wife, whom I most ten“ derly loved, my children an excellent step-mother,
 “ and our acquaintances a very dear and valuable “ friend, you will lay us all under the highest ob“ ligations: and I earnestly entreat you, for God “ Almighty's sake, that you will put up your peti“ tions to the Throne of Grace on our behalf, that

“ the deceased may be restored to us, and the late “ Dame Eleanor Pryce<sup>a</sup> be raised from the dead.
 “ —If your personal attendance appears to you to “ be necessary, I will send my coach and six, with “ proper servants, to wait on you hither, whenever “ you please to appoint.—Recompence of any kind,
 “ that you could propose, would be made with the “ utmost gratitude; but I wish the bare mention
 “ of it is not offensive to both God and you.

“ I am, Madam,

“ Your most obedient, and very “ much afflicted humble servant,

“ JOHN PRYCE.”

ROMAN ROAD.

THE following day our ride was directed towards Caer Sws, a place of Roman antiquity.
 Our way lay over some high grassy lands. On Gwyn Fynydd was easily traced the Roman road, called Sarn Swsan. It runs from Caer Sws, points towards Meifod, and is distinctly traced as far as the banks of the Vyrnyw, near Ilyssin. I am not able to pursue it either to or from Meifod;
 but the late Dr. Worthington assured me, that it was met with in his parish, at Street Fawr, near Coed y Clawdd; that it crossed Rhôs y Brithdir to Pen y Street, and from thence to Llam-jwrch, to Caerfach, which is supposed to have been a small Roman camp. Dr. Worthington supposed, that this road tends to Chester.

<sup>a</sup> Widow of ——— Jones esq; of Buckland, Brecknockshire.

NOTWITHSTANDING it is rather out of its place, let me speak of another road in the same parish, and mentioned to me by the same gentleman. This seems to lead from Rutunium, Rowton in Shropshire. It crosses the Tanat at Gartheryr; from whence it passes through Street y Planirau to Maen-gwynedd, and winds up Bwlch Maen Gwynedd, and retains the name of Efordd Gam Elen, or the winding road of Helen<sup>b</sup>.

To return to Gwyn-fynydd. I observed on the side of the Roman road, a small sub-oval camp. The road conducts us to Caer Sws, a hamlet with a few houses, on the side of the Severn. The adjacent fields are divided, to this day, from each other by lanes, which intersect each other, as it were to point the very places which had formed the antient streets. On the north-west sides are hollows, which possibly were part of the fosses of the old precincts. Bricks have been found: one was presented to me, with letters that baffle my guess. As to coins, I have only heard of one being met with; and the owner could not ascertain the emperor. This station is unnoticed by every Roman writer.

CAER SWS.

OPPOSITE to it, at some distance from the

<sup>b</sup> Dr. Worthington's Letter, on his parish, addressed to me, Nov. 29th 1774.

RHOS DDI-ARBED.

river, is Rhos Ddiarbed, or the common where no quarter was given. The reason is now lost. In an adjacent field is a camp of a very uncommon form. At the south is a vast exploratory mount, of a conic shape, surrounded with a foss of a great depth. On the north part of the foss is an oblong area, about seventy yards wide in the greatest diameter; guarded by a very high rampart, and on the outside by a ditch. In the lower part is a porta, opening into a great rectangular camp, about two hundred yards long, and above one hundred broad. Opposite to the other porta is a second, placed at the extremity; but there are no others, as usual in Roman camps, which this certainly was, but an eccentric one, prout loci qualitas aut necessitas postulaverat. The whole is encompassed with a rampart and ditch. In a field opposite to Caer Sws are some trenches, perhaps appertaining to the camp. The former I suppose to have been the winter, this the summer station.

BATTLE OF CARNO.

FROM hence I returned into the road. On the right opens another vale, watered by the Carno. The mountains of Carno, like the mountains of Gilboa, were celebrated for the fall of the mighty. The fiercest battle in our annals happened, in 1077, amidst these hills; when Gryffydd ap Cynan, supported by Rhys ap Tudor, prince of South Wales, disputed the sovereignty of North Wales with Trahaern ap Caradoc, the reigning prince, followed by Caradoc ap Gryffydd and Meilir, sons of Rhywallon ap Gwyn, his cousin-germans. After a most bloody contest, victory declared itself in favor of the first; Trahaern and his kinsmen, disdaining flight, fell on the spot; and Gryffydd ap Cynan was put into possession of his rightful throne, which he filled during fifty-seven years with great dignity.

THE church of Carno belonged to the knights of CHURCH. St. John of Jerusalem, who are said to have had a house near it, As one part of their business was the protection of their fellow creatures from violence, it is very possible that they might have had a station in these parts, which were long filled with a lawless banditti.

IN view is Park, the residence of — Herbert esq. I have been informed that Queen Elizabeth kept here a stud of horses. Possibly the famous breed of Spanish horses, introduced into the country by Robert earl of Shrewsbury<sup>c</sup>, might render these parts distinguished for an excellent kind, even so late as the reign of that great princess.

REACH Llanddinam, a church prettily seated LLAN-DDINAM. on a little head-land jutting into the vale. This is a vicarage belonging to the chapter of Bangor; and the comportsions were vested in the dean and chapter in 1685, for repairing the cathedral, and augmenting the vicarages thereof<sup>d</sup>. Opposite to Llanddinam, on the summit of a high mountain, is a British post, called Y Gaer Fechan, or the Little Fortress, surrounded with a number of fosses, from one to five, according as the strength or weakness of the parts required.

<sup>c</sup> Girald. Itin. lib. ii. c. 12. Sir Richard Hoare's Ed. vol. ii., p. 173.

Y GAER
FECHAN.

BERTH-
LWYD.

My journey was continued along a most beautiful road. The vale grows narrow, is bounded by lofty hills, whose bottoms are in many places skirted with beautiful hanging woods; those of Berth-Lwyd are far the most considerable. The poor remains of the antient house of that name stand in the valley; its masters were the old family of the Llwyds, descended from Dyngad, second son of Tudor Trevor. Dafydd, seventeenth in descent from Dyngad, first took the name of Llwyd, and probably gave the additional title to the house. It continued in the family several generations after; and of late years passed, by purchase, to Sir Edward Lloyd baronet.

LLANIDLOS.

ABOUT a mile farther is Llanidlos, a small town, with a great market for yarn, which is manufactured into fine flannels; and sent weekly, by waggon-loads, to Welsh Pool. The church is dedicated to St. Idlos. Within are six arches: the columns surrounded with neat round pillars, ending in capitals of palm-leaves. The inhabitants assert, that they were brought from the abbey of Cwm Hir in Radnorshire. A date on the roof is 1542, which soon followed the period of monastic ruin in this kingdom.

<sup>d</sup> Willis's Bangor, 291.

THIS is a country of sheep-walks. The flocks, like those of Spain, are driven to them from distant parts to feed on the summer herbage. The farms in the vallies are only appendages, for winter habitations and provisions. A coarse slate is found in the neighboring hills; but there still remains, in many parts, the antient covering of the country, shingles, heart of oak split and cut into form of slates. These were introduced by the Saxons, as the word is derived from Schindel, which signifies the same thing.

SLATE.

A LITTLE beyond Ilanillos the vale closes. The Severn here dwindles into an inconsiderable stream. By wonderful instinct, Salmon force their way from the ocean, higher up even than this distant spot, for the sake of depositing their spawn. The other fish are Trouts, Samlets, Graylings, and Pike. The river runs in a hollow to its source, fifteen miles distant, in

Plynlimmonis ardua moles,

the vast hill of Plynlimmon. I was dissuaded from making it a visit, being informed that it was an uninteresting object: the base most extensive, the top boggy, and the view from it over a dreary and an almost uninhabited country. Part lies in the county of Montgomery, and part in Cardiganshire; besides the Severn, it gives rise to the Ridal<sup>(1)</sup>, which flows to the sea near Aberystwyth; and the Wye, which, precipitating from its fountains down some most romantic rocks, continues its course till it falls into the Severn below Chepstow°.

PLYNLIM-
MON.

AFTER a most pleasing ride, return to Cregynnog with my good host, the best shower of a country I ever had the good fortune of meeting.

BETTWS
CHURCH.

ON the morning I took leave of Cregynnog, and attended by Mr. Blayne<sup>(2)</sup>, skirted the hilly country. Our ride was chiefly through narrow lanes. Stopped to see the church of Bettws, seated in a bottom, dedicated to St. Beuno, and formerly belonging to the nunnery of Llanlucan, in this county. The steeple makes a figure in these parts. It was built by one of its ministers, whose figure, in priestly vestments, carved on a

(1) The river meant is the Rheidol, as it is there called: it reaches the sea at Aberystwyth, though the town takes its name from the Ystwyth which meets it. The latter is mentioned in Ptolemy's Geography, though that is not usually known, since it is there spelled Στουκκία, which has to be corrected into Στούκκτα or Στουκκία, τ and ι being frequently confounded in Greek manuscripts, Στουκκία could not become anything but Ystwyth in Welsh. J.R.

° I was told, that the road to it from Cregynnog was by Caer Sacs, Park, and Trefeglys; and that from the last it is necessary to procure a guide to conduct the traveller over the mountains.

(2) There is an interesting account of Mr. Blayne in an appendix to Yorke's Royal Tribes. T.P.

brass plate, is fastened to one of the walls. He thus relates his story:

orate pro anima

z Johannis ap Meredyth de Powisia

Quondam vicarii hujus ecclesiæ de Bettws I.

In cujus tempore ædificatum est campanile:

Ibidem sicut emptæ sunt tres campanæ,

Et facta sunt in dictâ ecclesiâ multa alia

Bona opera. Ipso vicario pro posse auxiliante.

Cujus animæ propitietur DEUS. Amen.

Dat ipso vivente, A.D. 1531.

This brass was originally fixed on a great slab of oak, still in its place on the floor, which also is covered with oak: so scarce was stone, so plentiful wood! The great chest is made of a single trunk of oak.

A LITTLE further, on the top of a hill on the left, is a great exploratory mount; and I was informed that on the same range is a post, called Pen y Gaer, surrounded by three trenches.

PEN Y GAER.

FROM a hill, called Cefn Uppol, is a most delightful view of the vale of Severn, the river; and beyond appear the long extent of Cerri hills, even on the top, Corndon hill, Longment, the Stiperstones, and the rugged mass of Freiddin.

ON the left is the house of Vaynor, once the property of the Prices; but, by the marriage of the heiress, in the last century, to George Devereux esq; was transferred to the Viscounts Hereford. But on the death of Price Devereux, tenth of that honor, was, by will, alienated to persons foreign to the name and blood.

VAYNOR.

ROMAN
CAMP.

DESCEND into the vale. Cross the Severn. Ride along the road through the midst of a Roman camp, called the Gaer, seated in the parish, or rather chapelry, of Fordin. It is of the usual rectangular form. A little beyond, near the house of Nantcribba, the seat of Lord Viscount Hereford, rises a great conoid rock. A few years ago, on taking away the top, were discovered the remains of a little fort; and on paring away the rubbish, it appeared to have been square, with a round tower probably at each corner: one is tolerably entire, and is only nine feet diameter within; the wall seven feet seven inches thick. There had been some small square rooms, with door-cases of good free-stone: the rest of the building is of rough stone, cemented with clay. This place was probably ruined by fire: for I observed some melted lead, mixed with charcoal, and several traces of vitrification. There is no history relative to it. It must be very antient, for on the top is the stool of a vast oak. The base of the rock is surrounded with a ditch, cut through it, leaving only a narrow pass to the fort. At a distance is another trench. Offa's ditch lies about two hundred yards from the rock. Enter a part of

Δ SMALL
FORT.

SHROPSHIRE,

at Walcot; and, keeping southerly, soon reach Chirbury, a church and village, which gave name to the hundred, and title to the celebrated flower of chivalry Edward lord Herbert, in whom madness and abilities kept equal pace. This hundred did, in old times, belong to the castle of Montgomery, which was then reputed to be in it. In the 7th of Edward VI. Chirbury hundred was given by the crown to Edward Herbert and his heirs; but Charles I. in the third year of his reign, permitted Sir Edward Herbert to alienate it to William Neve and Thomas Gardiner esqrs.

CHIRBURY.

NEAR this village stood a priory of Benedictines, founded in the reign of King John. The church was given to the priory, with all the lands along the road side, as far as Merebroc. By a composition between Prior Philip and the parson of Montgomery, the right of burials and christening was reserved to the church of Chirbury. The same year the Prior had a grant of the tithes of Montgomery wood, and the mill. Hubert de Burgh was a benefactor to this house. In 1280 the prior and convent removed to Suede, the place of their first constitution and abode, it being represented that Chirbury was not so proper a place for celebrating divine mysteries; but this removal was not to affect the souls of those buried at Chirbury, to whom they were bound to do the same services as before the removal, neither were the religious to lose any of their rights at Chirbury<sup>f</sup>.

PRIORY.

THIS house maintained a prior and five or six monks. Its revenues 66*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.* according to Dugdale; and 87*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.* according to Speed<sup>g</sup>. The last prior was Oliver Middleton (probably of the old family of Middleton Hall in this parish) who had a pension for life of 8*l.* per annum<sup>h</sup>.

MONTGOMERYSHIRE.

MONTGO-
MERY.

Two miles farther is Montgomery, a small neat town, partly built on the slope, partly on the summit of a hill, beneath the shadow of one much higher. It owes its foundation to Baldwyn, lieutenant of the marches to William the Conqueror, from whom the Welsh called it Tre Faldwyn. That he also built a castle here, or some kind of defence, is probable; for we are informed, that in the year 1092, Roger de Montgomery, earl of Shrewsbury, entered Powysland, and won the town and castle of Baldwyn; I suppose at that time possessed by the Welsh. Roger fortified the place, and called it after his own name Montgomery; but in 1094, the Welsh took the castle, put the garrison to the sword, and carried destruction through the neighboring parts. The king, William Rufus, assembled a vast army, and repossessed himself of the low parts of the country. The earl of Shrewsbury rebuilt the castle, which the Welsh had destroyed. It was again ruined; but we are not informed of the period: only we are told that Henry III. built a new castle there in 1221<sup>i</sup>. Henry granted it to his great justiciary Hubert de Burgh, with two hundred marks annually, and a greater salary in case of war<sup>k</sup>. During the time it was possessed by Hubert, it was besieged by the Welsh; but speedily relieved by the English. Many bloody skirmishes happened about this time in the neighborhood; in one of which was taken William de Breose, a potent baron, who was obliged to pay a considerable sum for his ransom. In 1231, Llewelyn assembled a great army, and so terrified Hubert that he evacuated the castle, which was seized and burnt by the exasperated prince<sup>l</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> Halston MSS.

<sup>g</sup> Tanner.

<sup>h</sup> Willis, ii. 190.

ON an inquisition taken on the reversal of the attainder of the famous Roger Mortimer, earl of March, in 1354<sup>m</sup>, he was found to have been possessed of it at his death, and also of the hundred of Chirbury; in which, at that time, the castle and manor of Montgomery were reputed to lie. It continued in the family at the time of the death of his grandson Roger; for it formed part of

<sup>i</sup> Powel, 280.

<sup>k</sup> Dugdale Baron. i. 695.

<sup>l</sup> Powel, 287.

<sup>m</sup> Dugdale Baron. i. 147.

the jointure of his widow<sup>a</sup>, and probably remained in his descendant Edmund, who died without issue.

A LONG interval elapses before I discover any thing more of this place. Lord Herbert speaks of it as the habitation of some of his ancestors<sup>o</sup>; I suppose, holding it from the crown, as steward of the castle, and of the hundred of Chirbury.

SIEGE IN
1644.

IN the civil wars in 1644 it was seized for the use of the parlement, by Sir Thomas Middleton; who, on the appearance of the king's army, was obliged to make a sudden retreat to Oswestry, and leave it ill provided both with garrison and provisions. The royal forces, under Lord Biron, laid siege to it; but Sir Thomas being joined by Sir William Brereton, Sir John Meldrum, and Sir William Fairfax, returned, under the command of Brereton, with about three thousand men, to its relief. The king's army was five thousand strong; which, on the approach of the enemy, took possession of the hill above the castle. The castle was relieved, and a most bloody battle ensued. The king's army descended from their post, and making a most vigorous attack on the forces of the parlement, at first gained considerable advantage; but the last, actuated by despair, made the most violent efforts, and at length obtained a most complete victory. The pursuit was continued

BATTLE, SEP-TEMBER 18th.

<sup>a</sup> Dugdale Baron. i. 147.

<sup>o</sup> His life, p. 5.

near twenty miles. About five hundred were slain, and fourteen hundred taken prisoners. The loss on the side of the parlement only forty slain, and about sixty wounded<sup>p</sup>. The castle met with the fate of all others, being dismantled by order of the commons.

THE remains impend over the town. They stand on a projecting ridge, of a great height and steepness, and, towards the end, quite precipitous. The reliques of this fortress are very small. It had been divided by four fosses cut in the rock; each perhaps had its draw-bridge. Between the end of the buildings and the precipice is a level spot, the yard or parade of the place.

CASTLE DESCRIBED.

AT the bottom of the hill, in the vale, is a small fortification, of the same kind with those used by the Saxons, and by the Welsh also, having in it a high mount.

ON a hill, not far from the castle, is a stupendous British post. The approach is guarded by four great ditches, with two or three entrances towards the main work; where a few fosses run across the hill, the end of which is sufficiently guarded by its steepness.

BRITISH POST.

THIS, and the preceding pieces of military antiquity, shew the importance of this place in early times: the first was probably in being when Bald-

<sup>p</sup> Drake's Parl. Hist. xiii. 285. Whitlock, 104.

wyn made himself master of this country, notwithstanding the original name has totally perished.

FROM the summit of the British post is a fine view of the vale of Montgomery, which is very extensive, and bounded by the hills of Shropshire.

TOWN.

THE town was once defended by walls, strengthened by towers. It had also four gates; Chirbury, Arthur's, Keri, and Kedewen gate<sup>a</sup>. There was a grant of Edward I. to Bogo de Knouill, constable of the castle, giving him leave to sell certain wood on Corndon forest, for repairing the walls and fosses round the town and castle; and another for the same purpose, from Edward III. permitting a toll for seven years on several articles which were brought there to be sold: among others, are enumerated Squirrel skins<sup>r</sup>.

HENRY III. granted by charter, that the borough of Montgomery should have the privilege of a free borough, with other liberties<sup>s</sup>. The first burgess that was summoned to parlement was in the 27th of Henry VIII. The first who appears to have sat was William Herbert, in the year 1542. The town is governed by two bailiffs, and twelve burgesses, or common-council men. The member is elected by the burgesses, and returned by the bailiffs. The electors are about eighty<sup>t</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> Leland Itin. vii. 16.    <sup>r</sup> Sebright MSS.    <sup>s</sup> Camden, ii. 780.

<sup>t</sup> Willis, Notitia Parl. iii. 78, and part ii. 9.

Llanidlos, Welsh Pool, and Llanfyllin, were contributory; but are now excluded from any share in the election.

WHETHER, in old times, this town abounded, more than is usual, with ladies of free lives and conversation, I do not pretend to say: but very early the free burgesses had the privileges of the Gogingstoole, Cuckingstool, or Cokestool, or what the Saxons, called the Scalfing-stole. Quia, says my authority, per objurgatrices et meretrices multa mala in villa oriuntur: and these were to have the judgment de la Goginstoole; and therein to be placed, with naked feet and disheveled hair, as an example to all beholders". Probably this was not found to answer the end intended; therefore immersion, or ducking, was in after times added, as an improvement, and to effect a radical cure.

GOGING-STOOLE.

THE church dedicated to St. Nicholas, is in the diocese of Hereford, in the gift of the king; and was formerly a chapel to Chirbury. Within is a handsome monument of Richard Herbert esq; father to the famous lord Herbert. He is represented in armour; and by him lies his lady, Magdalene, daughter of Sir Richard Newport of High Arcol. In front are their numerous progeny. He died in 1597. The monument was erected by his lady, who survived him several years; and, after discharging, with exemplary care, her duty to their children, married, at the end of twelve years, Sir John Danvers, brother to Henry earl of Danby; and died in 1627.

CHURCH.

▪ Blount's Tenures, 282.

BLACKHALL. THE house called Blackhall, once the hospitable residence of the family, stood at the bottom: a foss marks the spot; for it was consumed by fire. The lodge in Limore Park, at a small distance from the town, was enlarged on this occasion; is still kept up, and shews a venerable wooden front.

MYNYDD
DIGOLL.

BATTLE.

ON leaving Montgomery, I took, for four or five miles, nearly the same road as I did in coming to it. Passed under Mynydd Digoll. On this mountain may be said to have expired the liberties of Wales; for here was the last contest against the power of our conqueror. After the death of Llewelyn, the northern Welshmen set up Madoc, cousin to our slain prince; who assembled a great army, and, after several eminent victories, at Caernarvon, near Denbigh, Knockin, and again on the marches, was here overthrown, in 1294, by the collected power of the lord marchers, after a well-fought and long-contested engagement<sup>x</sup>.

I MUST add, that on this mountain Henry VII. mustered the friends who promised to join him from North Wales and Shropshire, and did not find one who had failed of his appointment. On which account the Welsh call it Digoll, or Without Loss; the English name it the Long Mountain.

<sup>x</sup> Powel, 380, 381.

POWYS CASTLE.

CROSS the Severn, near Llanlafryn, the seat of Pŵice Jones esq. Soon after gaining this side of the river, I turned a little out of the road to POWYS CASTLE, the seat of the earl of Powys, placed on the ridge of a rock, having scarcely any area; which, in common with most mansions sprung from castellated origin, are far from desirable situations. This retains a mixture of castle and mansion. The entrance is between two rounders: there are also remains of round towers in other parts. Near the castle is a long gallery<sup>y</sup>, a hundred and seventeen feet by twenty. It was once a hundred and sixty-seven feet; but an apartment has been taken out of one end. This is of a later date than the other building, and was detached from it by a fire, about fifty years ago.

POWYS
CASTLE.

IN the parlour within the dwelling-house, is a full-length of Roger Palmer, earl of Castlemain; who owed his peerage to his wife, a royal mistress, and afterwards dutchess of Cleveland. He is represented dictating to a secretary, and dressed in a black wig, a cravat, and red mantle. James II. sent him on an embassy to the Pope, to reconcile the church of these kingdoms to the holy see,

PORTRAIT OF
EARL OF CASTLEMAIN.

<sup>y</sup> In this gallery are several pictures of considerable merit, collected by the late lord Powis. ED.

after their long lapse to heresy. The politic pope saw the folly of the design, and never received the ambassador without being seized with a most seasonable fit of coughing, which always interrupted the subject of his errand. At length, wearied with delay, he was advised to take pet, and threaten to leave Rome. His holiness, with great sang froid, told him, that since such was his resolution, he affectionately recommended him to travel early in the morning, and to rest at noon, lest he should endanger his health: and so ended this ridiculous business<sup>7</sup>.

THE great staircase is adorned with paintings, by Lanscroom, complimentary to Queen Anne.

THERE are two large rooms, above stairs, hung with old tapestry. The ceiling of one is stuccoed with most ridiculous paintings of the zodiac.

NEXT is a long narrow gallery, filled with bad portraits. The (titular) duke of Powys, a post-abdication creation, is represented in his great wig and robes. He followed the fortune of James II. and died at St. Germain's in 1696. His wife, Elizabeth, daughter to the marquis of Worcester, is painted in blue and ermine.

IN one ceiling is much incense to the ladies of the family, daughters to William, second marquis of Powys. One is represented as TRUTH; Lady <sup>7</sup> A full account is given by Misson, iii. p. 176 to 207.

Throgmorton appears as another Virtue; Lady Mary as Minerva; and Justice is seen driving away Envy, Malice, and other Vices. Few ladies have made so conspicuous a figure as Lady Mary. She was engaged deeply in the Mississippi scheme, and dreamt of millions; aimed at being royal consort to the late Pretender: failed in her plans, and, with another noble adventurer, retired to Spain, in search of the gold in the mines of Asturias.

The crown of Poland, venal twice an age,
 To just three millions stinted modest Gage:
 But nobler scenes Maria's dreams unfold;
 Hereditary realms, and worlds of gold.
 Congenial souls! whose life one av'rice joins,
 And one fate buries in th' Asturian mines.

THE views from this height, of Welsh Pool, the vale, and Freiddin hills, are very fine; but, from the situation, the horrible vicissitudes of cold and heat are experienced. The gardens are to be descended to by terraces below terraces, a laborious series of flights of steps, covering rock, which one De Valle had blasted away in former days. The gardens were filled with waterworks: the whole in imitation of the wretched taste of St. Germain en Laye, which the late family had a most unfortunate opportunity of copying.

GARDENS.

THE first notice I find of this place is about the year 1110; when the renowned Briton, Cadwgan

ap Bleddyn ap Cynfyn, sought here an asylum from the persecution of his kindred, and began a castle. At that time it was called Y Trelawng. While he was intent on the business, his nephew Madoc came on him unawares and slew him<sup>z</sup>. The building was continued, perhaps by Gwenwynwyn; for in 1191 it was besieged by Hubert archbishop of Canterbury: who met at first with a most vigorous resistance. At length, the prelate sent for a company of miners, and proceeded so successfully, that the besiegers, seeing the walls undermined, and the enemy three to one, surrendered on the most honorable terms. The archbishop fortified it more strongly, and placed a strong garrison in it; but soon after Gwenwynwyn attacked it in his turn, and had the good fortune to reduce it on the very terms which his own garrison had received. At this time it was called the castle of Gwenwynwyn at the Pool<sup>a</sup>.

SIEGES IN,
1191.

SUCCESSION. HIS son Gryffydd probably took part with the English; for in 1233 Llewelyn ap Jorwerth overthrew this fortress; which now assumed the name of Castell Goch, or Red Castle, from the color of the stones<sup>b</sup>.

HIS grandson, Owen ap Gryffydd ap Gwenwynwyn, remained in possession of the place. He left a daughter, called Hawys Gadarn, or Hawys

<sup>z</sup> Powel, 170.

<sup>a</sup> The same, 248.

<sup>b</sup> The same, 288.

the hardy<sup>c</sup>. Four of her uncles disputed her title to her father's land, alleging, that a female was incapable of inheriting. Hawys wisely made a friend of Edward II; who married her to John de Charlton, born near Wellington in Shropshire, in 1268, and styled Valectus Domini Regis<sup>d</sup>. It continued in their posterity several generations. The barony and title were afterwards conveyed to Sir John Grey of Northumberland, by his marriage with Jane, eldest daughter of Edward lord Powys<sup>e</sup>. It remained in their descendants till the reign of Henry VIII; the title became then extinct by the death of Edward Grey. I cannot trace the succession of the estate, till I find it in possession of Sir William Herbert, second son of the earl of Pembroke; who got it by purchase in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He was created lord Powys, and was ancestor to the marquisses of Powys. In 1644, in the time of Piercy lord Powys, the castle was taken by Sir Thomas Middleton, his lordship made prisoner, and the place pillaged<sup>f</sup>. George earl of Powys<sup>g</sup> is the present owner, in right of his mother, Barbara, daughter and sole heiress of lord Edward Herbert, brother of the

<sup>c</sup> Powel, 215.

<sup>d</sup> The same, 217.

<sup>e</sup> Dugdale Baron. ii. p. 283.

<sup>f</sup> Whitelock, 106.

<sup>g</sup> On the death of lord Powys in 1800 the title became extinct. It was revived in 1804 in the person of his brother-in-law Edward lord Clive, whose son is now owner of Powys castle. ED.

last marquis of Powys. Seventeen manors are still dependent in the county on this castle.

WELSH
POOL.

WELSH POOL, a good town, is seated in the bottom, not far from the castle. Great quantities of flannel, brought from the upper country, are sent from hence to Shrewsbury. The Severn begins to be navigable at the Poole stake, about three quarters of a mile from the town. This place owned the same lord as the castle. Gryffydd did homage for the lordship of Powys at Chester, in 1355, to Edward prince of Wales, by the title of Lord of Poole<sup>b</sup>: his title was also frenchified into de la Pole<sup>i</sup>.

GOLDEN CHALICE.

BELONGING to the church is a very fine chalice of pure gold, containing a wine quart. The following inscription on this rich donation, fully confutes the vulgar story of its having been the penitential gift of a successful transport, and sets the relation in the true light.

THO<sup>s</sup> DAVIES Anglorum in Africa plagâ
Occidentali procurator generalis
Ob vitam multifariâ DEI misericordiâ ibidem conservatam
Calicem hunc è purissimo auro Guiniano conflatum
C.LX.VIII. minis valentem, DEI honori et ecclesiæ de Welsh Pool ministerio, perpetuò sacrum voluit.
A quo usu S. S. si quis facinorosus eundem calicem
In posterum alienaret (quod avertat DEUS) DEI vindicis
Supremo tribunali pœnas luat.
Cal. Ap<sup>r</sup> ix. M.DC.LXII.

ALMOST opposite to Pool, on the other side of the Severn, is Buttington, the Butdigingtune of the Saxons; where, in 894, the Danes, under Hesten, after traversing great part of England, took their station. The generals of king Alfred instantly blocked them up, and that so closely, that the Pagans were obliged to eat their horses for want of subsistence. At length, actuated by despair and famine, attempting to force their way through the Saxon army, they were defeated with such slaughter, that a very few escaped to their own country<sup>k</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> Powel, 332.

<sup>i</sup> Ayloffe's Calendar, 102.

BUTTING-
TON.

THE country from Pool towards Llanymynach is most beautifully broken into gentle and well wooded risings. Gilesfield church and village are prettily situated under the hills. The church is dedicated to St. Giles; formerly it belonged to the Cistercian abbey of Ystrat Marchell, or Strata Marcella, Alba domus de Marcella, vall. crucis, or Pola, seated between this place and Pool. There is no doubt but it was founded by Owen Cyfeiliog, and, as Tanner says, in 1170<sup>l</sup>. His son Gwenwynwyn, in 1201, gave to God, the glorious Virgin his mother, and the monks of Strathmarchel, for the repose of his soul, all the pasturage in the province of Cyfeiliog<sup>m</sup>. Tanner suspects that Madoc ap Gryffydd Maelor refounded this monastery;

GILESFIELD.

ABBAY OF STRATA
MARCELLA.<sup>k</sup> Sax. Chr. 94, 95.<sup>l</sup> Tannsr. 716.<sup>m</sup> A copy of the charter is in my possession. As it escaped Sir W. Dugdale, I print it in the Appendix.

but by his charter it should seem, that he only gave to it a piece of land, on which to found a cell, or some appendage to it: and this, he says, was done at the request of four abbots; among whom is mentioned Philip himself, actual abbot of Strathmarchel<sup>n</sup>; a proof that the house was then existent. In the beginning of the reign of Edward III. the Welsh monks were removed to English abbies, and replaced by English monks; and this monastery made subject to the visitation of that of Buildwas, in Shropshire. Its revenues at the dissolution, according to Dugdale, were 64*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*; to Speed, 73*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* Queen Elizabeth granted it to Rowland Hayward and Thomas Dixon.

LLAN-DYSILIO.

PASS by Garth, the seat of Devereux Mytton esq. Go by the small church of Llandysilio, a chapel in Llandrinio parish; and soon after ford the Vyrnyw, and deviate a little from my intended route along the banks of the Severn, to visit the public-spirited Mr. Evans, of Llwyn y Groes, near Llanymynach, who, in a most disinterested manner, at his own hazard, is undertaking a beautiful map of North Wales<sup>o</sup>. Continue at his house till morning, and in his company, visit Llanymynach. The church and village stand in a pretty situation, on a bank above the Vyrnyw; and very advantageously for trade. It lies at the opening

LLANY-
MYNACH.

<sup>n</sup> Dugdale Monast. i. 396.

<sup>o</sup> This map was published in 1795. ED.

of three vallies, at the intersection of two great public roads, and on a river navigable into the Severn (which runs only three miles from the place,) for some months in the year, for barges of fifty tons. Great quantities of slates are sent from hence to Bristol; and, of late years, up the Stourport canal, to Birmingham, and other places.

ASCEND Llanymynach hill, a vast rock, with the surface covered with a verdant turf; beneath which is a pearl-colored marble, beautifully veined with red, and streaked with white, and capable of a good polish. This is the limestone of the place. The quantity burnt on this hill is inconceivable, and the increase is ten times greater since the improvement of the Montgomeryshire roads; for it is carried even for manure thirty miles into that county. The season of carriage begins in March, and ends in October. The hill is of a considerable length and breadth: slopes upwards from the side next to the village, and on the upper part ends in a vast and long precipice. Its bowels are probably replete with minerals. Copper, lead, ore, and calamine, have been found there of late years; and there are undeniable proofs of its having been worked by the Romans. In a great artificial cave, formed into several meanders in search of the ores, have been discovered Roman coins; among them, an Antoninus and a Faustina. Near the coins were found the skeleton of a man at full length:

HILL.

GREAT
LIME-WORKS.

MINERALS.

WORKED BY THE ROMANS.

on his left arm a bracelet, and by his side a battle-ax. Burnt bones and ashes are often found on the hill; and near the north-west part of the precipice are numbers of large pits, in form of inverted cones, supposed to have been the work of the Romans.

ANTIEN T
DIKES AND FOSSES.

ON the slope of the hill, in the more accessible part, runs, from top to bottom, a stupendous rampart of loose stones, with a foss at the foot of it; and at certain distances beyond are two other parallel fosses, in many places cut through the rock with vast labor. It has been thought that the Romans were the people who made these works: but I rather think them to have been British, as they are so similar to those which constitute the strength of the British post. Offa's dike may be traced on this hill; but it is plainly different from the others. The wall of the church-yard is placed on the former.

FROM the summit of the hill is a most delightful view, in one direction, of the vast flat of Shropshire, with its various rising boundaries. The Freiddin hills form a noble group opposite to this eminence; which together rise most magnificently, like two great capes, at the entrance into the vale of Severn; which, from hence to Llanidlos, is between thirty and forty miles in length.

THE view to the south is into Montgomeryshire; and is a series of little vales, lodged between small wooded risings. A plain lies immediately beneath the precipice of the hill, finely watered by the Tanat and the Vyrnyw, there uniting. Immediately beneath the rock is Blodwell Hall, a deserted seat, once the property of the Tanats; conveyed to the Matthews by the marriage of Jane, daughter and heiress of Maurice Tanat. The property was again transferred, by the marriage of Ursula, daughter and heiress of Roger Matthew, to Sir John Bridgeman baronet, grandfather to the present owner.

BLODWELL
HALL.

Not far from hence stood the castle of Carreg Hwva, a place of which I know nothing more, than that it was taken and pillaged, in 1162, by Owen Cyfeiliog and Owen ap Madoc ap Meredydd<sup>p</sup>. It was soon restored; for in the year 1187, the last was slain here in the night, by Gwenwynwyn and Cadwallon, the sons of his former colleague<sup>q</sup>.

CARREG
HWVA
CASTLE.

FROM Llanymynach I rode to the New Bridge, a bridge of seven arches, over the Vyrnyw, about three miles above the ford. The river is confined by a dam, for the sake of a mill, and forms a fine reach. The overflowing makes a pretty cascade; and the views upwards, of small vallies and hanging woods, are exceedingly beautiful.

NEW BRIDGE.

THE river merits the title of Piscosus Amnis, as

<sup>p</sup> Poael, 219.

<sup>q</sup> The same, 241.

FISH OF THE VYRNYW AND TANAT. much as any I know. The number of fish which inhabit it, animate the waters, and add greatly to its beauty. Ausonius does not neglect that remark, in his elegant poem on the Moselle.

Intentos tamen usque oculos errore fatigant
Interludentes examina lubrica pisces.

I have not examined whether the Moselle affords more than is contained in the following list.

Fish.	When in season.
Salmon,	Christmas to July.
* Trout,	March to September.
* Samlet,	Ditto.
Grayling,	March to November.
* Minnow,	April to September.
Perch,	May to end of September.
Ruffe, or Pope,	April to September.
Carp,	April to July.
Tench,
Roach,	April to September.
* Dace,	Ditto.
Gudgeon,	Ditto.
Bleak,	June, July, August.
* Chub,	April to June.
* Loche,	March to September.
Bullhead, or Miller's Thumb,	} April to September.
Shad,	March and April.
* Eel,	June, July, August.
Lamprey,
Flounder,	May to September.

OF these, only the species marked * frequent the Tanat, which falls into the Vyrnyw near the spot where this enumeration was made: such preference do fish give to certain waters.

°PASS again by Llandysilio. Go over Dongay DONGAY. common; and, near the seat of Francis Lloyd esq; ride through the village of Llandrinio, and by the church of the same name. Cross Llandrinio bridge, of three arches, a new and handsome structure. Near it is the seat of Clopton Price<sup>a</sup> esq; an useful and active promoter of all public designs within his sphere.

AFTER crossing the Severn, my road lay at the foot of that great mass of rocky mountains, distinguished by the names of Freiddin, Moel y Gollfa, and Cefn y Castell. Their bases are prettily skirted with woods; above which the mountains suddenly present a most tremendous and precipitous front. On Crew green, far to the left, starts up Belin Mount, a round insulated rock, remote from its congenial hills. See beneath me a vast extent of flat and wet country, the great plain of part of Shropshire. The village and parish of Melverly lie on the opposite side of the Severn, near the place where the Vyrnyw is discharged into it. The spot is called, from that circumstance Cymmerau, or the Conflux.

<sup>a</sup> Deceased; his daughter and sole heiress married the reverend Mr. Wingfield, vicar of Rhivabon. ED.

WITHIN sight of the vast mountains I have just mentioned, Gwalchmai, the son of Meilir, composed a most beautiful poem. His genius was equally formed for poetry and war. After being under arms the whole night, charmed with the approach of day, and the beauty of the surrounding prospect, the melody of birds, and the murmurs of the waters, he forgets all care, and, despising the danger of the imminent foe, thus bursts out into the ode called Gorhoffed GWALCHMAI, or the Favorite of GWALCHMAI; beginning

Mochddwyreawg huan dyffestist
Maws, &c<sup>r</sup>.

Rise, Orb of Day! the eastern gates unfold,
And shew thy crimson mantle fring'd with gold.
Contending birds sing sweet on ev'ry spray;
The skies are bright:—arise, thou Orb of Day!
I, Gwalchmai, call: in song, in war renown'd,
Who, Lion-like, confusion spread around.
The live-long night, the Hero and the Bard
Near Freiddin's rocks have kept a constant guard;
Where cool transparent streams in murmurs glide,
And springing grass adorns the mountain's side:
Where snow-white Sea-mews in the current play,
Spread their gay plumes, and frolic through the day.
R.W.

RAINALDUS Warin Comes held Meverlei in the manner in which every thing was held in these parts, from the lord paramount, Roger earl of

<sup>r</sup> A fragment preserved in the reverend Mr. Evan Evans's ingenious Dissertatio de Bardis, p. 83. The hero was of the house of Tre-jeilir in Anglesey.

Shrewsbury. In the time of the Confessor it was held by one Edric. Soon after the conquest it was possessed by the Fitz-alans, till the 9th of Queen Elizabeth; when it was alienated, by Henry earl of Arundel, to Thomas Younge, archbishop of York; who sold it to — Willaston<sup>s</sup>.

NEAR a small brook, quit Montgomeryshire, and enter the county of

SALOP, OR SHROPSHIRE.

Visit, a little to the right, Wattleburg castle, an WATTLE-
BURG CASTLE. old house with a square tower of far more antient date. It lies on the Roman road from Llanrhaiaadr yn Mochnant<sup>t</sup>. Mr. William Mytton conjectures that the site might have been a station of a party of the Vandals, sent into Britain by the emperor Probus; and that the word is corrupted from Vandlesburgh, a name given it by the Saxons; there being a rampart of that name in Lincolnshire, and derived, as is supposed, from the same cause. At the time of the conquest, Edric possessed it. Roger Corbet, son of Corbet a noble Norman, succeeded him. Afterwards it was given to a younger son of the Corbets of Caux castle. It continued long in that family. At length fell into the line of Gwenwynwyn, lord of Powys, and his descendant, called Fulk Mowddwy, died in possession of it, but without children, in the second of Henry V. Sir Hugh de Burgh succeeded by virtue of his marriage with Elizabeth, sister to Fulk. By the marriage of Angharad, one of de Burgh's four grand-daughters, it devolved to the Leightons; and is now the property of their descendant, Sir Charlton Leighton<sup>u</sup> baronet.

<sup>s</sup> Halston MSS. The Warin here mentioned, was of a different race from the family of the Fitz-warrens.

<sup>t</sup> See page 166 of the present volume.

LOTON HALL. A LITTLE farther is Loton, the seat of the family; which is of Saxon origin, and takes its name from Leighton, a parish in this county. Not far from the house are the remains of the antient man-

ALBERBURY. sion or castle of Alberbury; small, but very strong: a square tower, and some walls, yet exist. Leland says, it was the castle of Fulk Fitzwarine (on whose father, Guarine de Metz, a noble Lorainer, William the Conqueror had bestowed this manor), ABBHEY. founder of the abbey of Alberbury, which stood at a small distance from hence, on the banks of the Severn. It was founded in the time of Henry I. and was a cell of the Benedictines of Grammont in France. Being an alien priory, Henry Chicheley, archbishop of Canterbury, begged it of Henry VI. towards the endowment of his new college of All Souls<sup>x</sup>; to which it has ever since belonged, together with the presentation to the vicarage. This religious house was also called Album Monasterium<sup>y</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> At present (1809) of Sir Robert Leighton. ED.

<sup>x</sup> Godwin Præsul. Angl. 181.

A LITTLE to the east of Alberbury is Routon, ROUTON. the seat of the Listers, a family long resident here. Prior to their possession, it belonged to the lords Strange of Knockin, who had here a castle; which was demolished in 1266, by Prince Llewelyn ap Gryffydd; but was rebuilt very soon after by John lord Strange<sup>z</sup>. Near this spot is supposed to have stood the Roman Rutunium: but not a trace of it is to be seen. The modern name preserves part of the antient.

FROM hence I turned towards the Severn; and on a lofty bank above the river, at Little Shrawardine, saw a vast artificial mount, the former site of some castelet. From this place I descended to the Severn, and, crossing the river, at this time fordable, I visited this castle and village of Great Shrawardine, seated on the opposite bank. SHRAWARDINE. Rainaldus held it at the conquest. It fell afterwards to the Fitzalans, and continued many centuries in their family; excepting for a short time, on the attainder of Edmund earl of Arundel, in the reign of Richard II. when it was given to Roger de Mortimer earl of March; and again, in the same reign, when it was bestowed on William earl of Wilt- shire, after the cruel execution of Richard earl of Arundel. But in the next reign his attainder was reversed, and his fortunes restored to his son. Henry, last earl of the family, sold it to Sir Thomas Bromley, lord chancellor of England; who, in 1582, with the queen's licence, settled it on Sir George Bromley knight, and his heirs. He was of an antient family in this county. John, an ancestor of his, had the hospital of Molay Bacon, in the county of Bayeux, in France, bestowed on him by Henry V. on what was called the rebellion of Alan de Beaumont, the prior possessor. John, and his lawful descendants, were to hold it of the crown by the tenure of doing homage, and presenting to the king and his successors a girdle, in the castle of Bayeux, annually, on the feast of St. John the Baptist<sup>a</sup>. By another grant of his kinsman Hugh de Stafford, Dominus de Bourghchier, he had forty pounds a year, during life, charged on his lands in Staffordshire and Warwickshire, for his gallant behaviour in a skirmish near Corbie, in Normandy, where he rescued the royal standard of Guienne<sup>b</sup>, which had been committed to the care of Hugh de Stafford. The grant is dated from Madely, on March 10th, in the fourth year of Henry V.

<sup>y</sup> Leland Itin. v. 89.

<sup>z</sup> Dugdale Baron. i. 665.

CASTLE. ONLY three or four fragments of the castle remain. It had never been considerable; was placed on a low mount, and destitute of outworks. The property of the castle, and the estates belonging to it, were of late years sold to Lord Clive.

<sup>a</sup> Herald's Visitation of Shropshire, 1584, &c. in HALSTON library, p. 44.

<sup>b</sup> The same.

THE river, from the neighborhood of Shrawardine, begins to grow very beautiful. The banks are elevated, and often cloathed with hanging woods. In places, they recede from the verge of the channel, and leave a verdant space of intervening meadow.

REPASS the river, and go through the village of Forde. Leave on the right, Dintle, the property of Leighton Delamore Griffith esq; and Onslow, the property of Rowland Wingfield esq. The last gave name to the noble family of Onslow, which was settled here as early as the time of Henry III. On the north side of the river, on a delightful bank, are situated the church and village of Montford; which gave title, in 1741, to Henry Bromley esq. A little farther is Montford bridge, consisting of four arches. There had been one at this place before the year 1291; for at that time the sheriff of the county summoned the executors of John de Hegerwas to appear at the assizes, to give an account of what materials had been gotten, and what money was in the testator's hands, who had died before it was finished. In 1374, or the 48th of Edward III. it was found to be out of repair; which induced the king to grant it pontage, ONSLow.

MONTFORD.

BRIDGE.

or a toll for three years<sup>c</sup>, to effect the reparation.

MITTON.

THE ISLE.

SHREWSBURY is four miles, in almost a direct line, from this place; but I preferred following the course of the river, tempted by the extreme beauty of the ride. I crossed Montford bridge, turned to the right, and went over the Perry, not far above its junction with the Severn. The hamlet of Mitton, i. e. Middle Town, lies in the midst of the narrow neck of land between the two rivers. The Severn here makes a great bend, and forms, on the opposite side, a peninsula, with so very narrow an isthmus, as to occasion it to be called the Isle of Up Rossal; being encompassed by the river for the space of five miles, except at the entrance, which forms a neck of only three hundred and eighty yards in breadth. The isle is a most compact estate of Humphrey Sandford esq; and lies in the parish of St. Chad. This place formerly belonged to Sir Francis Englefield, knight, a gentleman zealous for the old religion at the time of the Reformation, and a principal officer about the person of the Princess Mary, afterwards queen. At the accession of Edward VI. he was sent for (with others of her household), by the Protector and council, to forbid them hearing mass in the princess's house. They refused obedience, and, in consequence, were imprisoned for several months. On the accession of Mary, he received the strongest proofs of her gratitude for his fidelity. In the very first year of the following reign, he quitted the kingdom, with many other zealots, and was indefatigable in promoting the interests of Mary queen of Scots. He was attainted in the year 1585, and all his estates confiscated; but some legal difficulties arising, in 1593 a new act was passed, which fully confirmed the former<sup>d</sup>. Sir Francis died in 1592, at Valladolid, and his body was interred there in the English college. This estate of his was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Richard Sandford esq; an officer of the crown, and ancestor to the present owner; a family long before possessed of other estates in the neighborhood.

<sup>c</sup> Parochial antiquities of Shropshire, by Mr. William Mytton, MS. in folio.—I beg here to give some account of my worthy uncle, to whose labors I am so much indebted. He was a younger brother of the house of Halston, see vol. i. p. 302, of this Tour. He was designed for the church; but, by reason of certain political scruples, declined the pursuit of the profession. He then totally gave himself up to the study of antiquity, chiefly that of his own county; consulted all the records he could get access to; and, with vast pains and accuracy, formed the volume I refer to. But his designs extended to the giving a most complete history of Shropshire: for which purpose he had made immense collections, which he left behind undigested; besides a numerous and elegant collection of drawings of monuments, &c. done by an artist he kept for that purpose. Death prevented the execution of his plans. He died on the 8th of September 1746, aged 51, at Habberly, an antient estate of his elder brother's, where he had retired for some years, to enjoy, at leisure, the pursuit of his favorite studies.

FITTES, the parish church of Mitton, is seated

FITTES.

<sup>d</sup> Rafhead's Statutes at Large, ii. 653. 676.

at a small distance, on an eminence, with a large exploratory mount not remote from it. From a field, not far from the church-yard, is a most beautiful view of the Severn, which lies far beneath, at the foot of the steep banks, cloathed with hanging woods, or darkened with yews of enormous size. The river is seen winding round the isle; and the isle itself, a tract of rich land mixed with trees, slopes gracefully to the margin of the water. A long and narrow wooded island diversifies the view, by dividing the river into two channels; which reunite, and run under Leighton shelf, a high cliff, which forms a noble finishing on that part. Above the fore-ground of this rich prospect are numberless mountains of different forms; all together forming the finest view this country can boast.

IN the course of my ride, pass by the upper and lower Berwick; one the seat of — Betton esq; the other of Thomas Powis esq; both commanding most delicious views of the river and town of SHREWSBURY. They are both in the parish of St. Mary, Shrewsbury. My entrance into the town was through the North Gate; which, for greater security, in reality consists of two gates, at a small distance from one another, with a round tower on each side.

SHREWS-
BURY.

CASTLE.

THE castle stands on an eminence on the left. Only one part with two rounders remain, and the walls of the north and eastern sides. The keep was on a large artificial mount; which shews this fortress to have been of Saxon or British origin, notwithstanding the foundation is ascribed to the great earl of Shrewsbury, Roger de Montgomery. The inside is cleared from buildings, excepting one house. The whole castle-yard is a garden; and the mount is at present admirable only for its beautiful view.

THE town of Shrewsbury is seated within a peninsula, with the ground finely sloping, in most parts, to the river. The castle was judiciously placed on a narrow isthmus, two hundred yards wide, which connects it with the main land. Roger de Montgomery, on whom almost the whole county was bestowed by the Conqueror, besides a hundred and fifty eight manors in other parts of the kingdom, made this his principal seat. In order to extend his fortifications, he demolished forty-one houses; for this part of the town, at that period, was very populous. These houses paid taxes; yet no remittance was made to the owners, notwithstanding the greatness of their loss. The first constable was Warine de Bald, a man of small stature, but great courage. This place continued in the possession of the two sons of Roger de Montgomery: Hugh, who was slain in Anglesey, and that monster of cruelty<sup>c</sup> Robert surnamed de Belesme; who, after various struggles, was at length

FOUNDED BY ROGER DE
MONTGO-
MERY.

<sup>c</sup> See Dugdale Baron. i. 31.

obliged to surrender this place, his honors, and all his mighty possessions, into the hands of his sovereign, Henry I. As soon as it became a royal fortress, the lands and demesnes, which followed it, were parcelled out into serjeanties for its defence. Thus Robert, the son of Adam de Leyton, was obliged by his tenure to continue in this castle fifteen days, cum una balista, with one cross-bow; and William de Wichard held the manor of Cold Hatton, to keep ward in this castle, at his own expence, twenty-days, in time of war, cum uno equo, lorica, cappello ferreo, et lancea. The constables were usually men of the first note; and very often it was committed to the care of the sheriff of the county. After it had been dismantled in the civil wars, it was granted by Charles II. to Francis lord viscount Newport, afterwards earl of Bradford. In our times it got into the hands of Pulteney earl of Bath, and is now in those of William Pulteney esq<sup>l</sup>.

WALLS.

THE first attempt towards erecting the walls of this town, was made by Robert de Belesme; who, to defend it against the king's forces, then marching against him, drew a wall from each side of the castle across the isthmus to the water-side. One is still remaining, and, as I have been informed, terminated with a square tower: both these walls are preserved in Speed's plan of the place. The town was not defended by walls till the year 1219; when Henry III. strongly urged the inhabitants to consider of some means of defence against an enemy. At first he made them a grant of various small tolls; but at length, finding those insufficient, was obliged to assist them: but the works went on so slowly, that they were not completed in less than thirty-two years. The town was paved in the next reign, by the assistance of certain customs granted for that purpose.

<sup>l</sup> Created a Baronet: on the decease of his sole daughter and heir-ess Laura countess of Bath in 1808, the great property in Shrewsbury devolved on the earl of Darlington. ED.

IN almost every part, the original walls were at a distance from the river. Those on the south-east side of the town are kept in good repair, and form pleasant but interrupted walks, by reason of flights of steps. Those on the north-west side are entirely covered with houses. Beneath them is a narrow field, extending from the School to the Welsh Bridge; along the verge of which, close to the river, in 1645, was built another wall, called Rowshill wall: the materials of which are said to have been brought from Shrawardine castle.

ROWSHILL
WALL.

THERE are many historical evidences of the antiquity of the town. It had been, for many ages, the capital of Powys-land, and the seat of the princes. Brochwel Yscithrog, who lived about the year 607, is said to have had his palace on the spot where St. Chad's church now stands<sup>g</sup>. The Welsh called it Pen-Gwern, or the Head of the Alder-groves; and Ymwithig, or the Delight, I suppose of our princes. The period in which the town arose, is not certainly known; but it is supposed to have been on the ruin of the Roman Uriconium, the Vreken Ceaster of the Saxons, and the modern Wroxeter, a small village, about four miles from hence, upon the Severn; where may be still seen a large fragment of the antient wall.

TOWN.

IN SAXON
TIMES.

IN the time of Edward the Confessor, Scrobbes Byrig, as the Saxons called it, was a considerable place. At that period there were two hundred and fifty-two houses, and the burgesses paid yearly 7*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* in excise. Whenever the king lay in the town, twelve of the chief inhabitants kept watch about his person; and if he came there to hunt, the better sort of burgesses, who kept horses, rode armed as his guard, and the sheriff sent thirty-six footmen for their support, while the king was resident among them. When the king left the town, the sheriff sent twenty-four horses to Lentourde, to conduct him to the first stage in Staffordshire.

WHEN the sheriff went against the Welsh, which he had frequent occasion of doing, it was customary to summon thirty-six men at Marsetely park, to give their service for eight days. Those who neglected to go, forfeited forty shillings.

<sup>g</sup> Powel, 22.

THE king had here three masters of the mint, who, like the other coiners of the county, were obliged to pay him twenty shillings at the end of fifteen days, while the money was out of the mint, and while it was current. The town paid in all twenty pounds yearly: the king had two thirds, the sheriff one. As soon as the Norman reign commenced, it paid to its new earl forty pounds.

THE first charter extant (for that of Henry I. is lost) was one in 1189, from Richard I. It confirms all its antient customs and privileges; for which the town was to pay forty marks in silver, including ten for the purpose of providing a brace of hunters for the royal personage. It likewise grants to the burgesses the town and all its appurtenances, which had been seized by Henry I. on the forfeiture of Earl Robert. King John, in 1199, enlarged their charter, permitting the citizens to elect two substantial discreet persons of their body as bailiffs for the government of the town; and the common-council might chuse four others, to determine all pleas of the crown in the corporation, and to be a check on the bailiffs themselves. Various other charters, with additional privileges, were granted by succeeding princes, till Queen Elizabeth made it a body corporate; and Charles I. confirmed and enlarged her royal charter. It now consists of a mayor, twenty-four aldermen, and forty-eight assistants, who are called the common-council. They have also a recorder; two chamberlains, annually chosen by the mayor, aldermen, and assistants; a steward, a sword-bearer, and three sergeants at mace.

CHARTERS.

THIS town sent members from the beginning. The right of voting rests in burgesses living in the town, and paying to church and poor, according to a resolution of the house in 1709; but in 1714, it was resolved that foreign burgesses had a right to vote.

THERE is in this town no manufacture considerable enough to merit mention; but it draws very great profit from those of Montgomeryshire. This place is the chief mart for them. About 700,000 yards of Welsh webbs, a coarse kind of woollen cloth, are brought here annually, to the Thursday market; and bought up and dressed, that is, the wool is raised on one side, by a set of people called Shearmen. At this time only forty are employed; but in the time of Queen Elizabeth the trade was so great, that no fewer than six hundred<sup>h</sup> maintained themselves by this occupation. The cloth is sent chiefly to America, to clothe the Negroes; or to Flanders, where it is used by the peasants.

FLANNELS, both coarse and fine, are brought

<sup>h</sup> Anderson's Dict. i. 405.

every other Monday (except when fairs intervene) to Welsh Pool; and are chiefly consumed in England, to the amount of about 7 or 800,000 yards. The Shrewsbury drapers go every market to Welsh Pool, for the sake of this commerce.

The disposition of the streets in Shrewsbury is extremely irregular, as is the case with all ancient towns not of Roman origin. Many of the buildings are old; but the modern buildings are in general scattered in various places.

THE free-school stands near the castle, in a broad handsome street. It was founded by Edward VI. in 1552; who endowed it with tithes, at that time amounting to 20*l.* 8*s.* and empowered the bailiffs, burgesses, and their successors, to appoint one schoolmaster, and one under-schoolmaster; and, with the consent of the bishop of Lichfield, to frame statutes for its government. Queen Elizabeth added considerably to the endowments, so that at present the revenues are very large. The building was originally of wood; but in 1595, a beautiful and extensive edifice of stone arose in its place, which contains the school, houses for the masters, and a library filled with a valuable collection of books, and several curiosities; among them are three large sepulchral stones, discovered by ploughing at Wroxeter.

THE first has on its summit a pine-cone between two lions, and beneath the pediment, a rose.

The first is taken from the Picea, what Pliny calls Feralis Arbor<sup>i</sup>, expressive of the melancholy subject, and not infrequent on memorials of this kind. Such was the great brass cone, five yards high, which stood on the top of the mausoleum of Adrian, now the castle of St. Angelo, and is still preserved in the garden of the Belvedere<sup>k</sup>. The inscription denotes the death of C. MANNIVS SECUNDUS, of the town of Pollentia, a Beneficiarius or veteran in the xxth legion, who had served his time, and was called again into service by the entreaties of a chief legate.

THE second stone has on the upper part a human face, two dolphins, and two serpents. Beneath are three pannels. In the first is commemorated, by her husband, Placida, aged fifty-five, and thirty years his wife. In the next is an inscription to Deuccus, a boy fifteen years old, son to the same person: Curam agente patre. The third pannel is a blank; so it is probable (as was hinted to me by a most ingenious friend) that the man, who had erected this monument, designed to have been buried in the same place with his wife and son; but dying elsewhere, this pannel remains unfilled.

<sup>i</sup> Picea—Feralis Arbor, et funebri indicio ad fores posita, ac rogis virens. Hist. Nat. lib. xvi. c. 10.

<sup>k</sup> Flaminius Vacca, in Montfaucon's Travels, Engl. ed. 223.
Wright's Travels, i. 273.

THE third stone is inscribed to M. Petronius, signifer, or standard-bearer to the Legio quatuordecima gemina, or the fourteenth double legion; or a legion in which two had been converted into one. As this legion never was in Britain, the learned Dr. Ward<sup>1</sup> guesses, that Petronius only came for his health, and died here.

A PRETTY wooden model of a hypocaust, discovered at the same place with the stones, is also preserved here.

THE public buildings of this town are not of note sufficient to be mentioned. Among the hotels of the great men of past time, Charlton-house, now the theatre, was the residence of the Charltons, lords of Powys. This was probably founded by John de Charlton in 1326, when he fortified it by the permission of Edward II<sup>m</sup>. Vaughan Place is another antient house, the property of John Mytton of Halston esq; derived from the marriage of his ancestor Reginald Mytton, about the year 1376, with Elinor, sole heiress of Haymon, son of Sir Thomas Vaughan<sup>n</sup> of this town.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

THE infirmary was, within my memory, a private house. It was opened on April 25th, 1747. Since that time, to June 24th, 1782, have been admitted

INFIRMARY.

<sup>1</sup> See his account of these three stones in the Ph. Tr. xlix. part i. 196.

<sup>m</sup> Philips, 145.

<sup>n</sup> Mytton Pedigree.

14,040 in-patients; of which
 8,453 were cured,
 1,459 relieved.
 17,693 out-patients; of which
 13,234 were cured,
 864 relieved.

The annual subscription of the last year amounted to £909°.

WELSH
 BRIDGE.

Two bridges connect this peninsula with the country. The Welsh Bridge is a very antient structure of six arches; with a very handsome embattled gateway<sup>p</sup> at one end. On each side is a round tower, and over the entrance a statue of a prince in armour, generally supposed to be intended for Richard duke of York; for beneath his feet is a rose-sprig, a device usual on the seals of that great prince<sup>q</sup>. This probably was a favorite town of the Plantagenets: for Elizabeth, queen to Edward IV. found an asylum here during her husband's

° From 1747 to Midsummer 1804 have been admitted,
24,363 in-patients; of which	29,694 out-patients; of which
13,559 were cured,	21,697 were cured,
2,665 relieved.	2,606 relieved.

The income for the year 1804 was 1683*l.* 0*s.* 2½*d.\ ED.

<sup>p</sup> "This beautiful and curious gate was," says the author of the Account of the state of Shrewsbury, p. 83, "demolished by order of the corporation in 1791, to the regret of every person of taste. The destruction of the bridge itself soon followed." The new Welsh Bridge which consists of five arches, was completed in 1795. ED.

<sup>q</sup> Sandford's Geneal. p. 386, tab. 374.

* Account of Shrewsbury, p. 331.

OLD WELCH BRIDGE AT SHREWSBURY.

contests for the crown; and here was delivered of her second son, Richard duke of York, and her third, George duke of Bedford†. This was not the original site of the statue; it having been fixed here after it had been removed from another place in 1695<sup>a</sup>. At the Welsh end of the bridge formerly stood another tower of great strength, calculated to repel the inroads of my countrymen.

ON an eminence above Frankwel, a suburb beyond the bridge, stands Millington's hospital, a handsome brick building, founded in 1734, by the will of Mr. James Millington of this town, Drapier. It maintains twelve poor housekeepers of Frankwel (single persons), and a charity-school for twenty boys and twenty girls of the same district, if to be found there; and if not, to be taken out of the nearest part of the parish of St. Chad: there to be instructed, and fitted for trades suitable to their stations; to have prayers constantly read, morning and evening, on school-days (for which the chaplain is to have twenty pounds a year); and finally, they are to be decently cloathed twice a year. The poor housekeepers are to receive 3*l.* 10*s.* a year apiece, a load of coal, and a new coat, or gown, annually. These poor people are to be, on vacancy, elected out of ten others, properly qualified; who, till their election, are to receive like-

MILLING-
TON'S HOS-PITAL.

† Sandford's Geneal. pp. 415, 417.

▪ Philips, 148.

wise, annually, a new coat, or gown, apiece. Mr. Millington, besides, founded in Magdalen college, Cambridge, two exhibitions of forty pounds a year for two scholars, to be elected from his grammar-school; and when in orders, one of them is to be elected chaplain of the school, in the room of the clergyman who happens not to be so qualified, and who must, in that case, resign. The founder was a true churchman; for all dissenters, and all persons not truly orthodox, are to be excluded.

NEW BRIDGE. THE new bridge is on the east side of the town, and is a very handsome building, of seven arches. It was began, in 1769, and built by subscription, under the direction of Mr. Gwyn, architect, a native of Shrewsbury. This succeeded a very antient and incommodious narrow bridge, with the usual obstruction, a gateway. It consisted, in the time of Leland, of four arches, besides the draw-bridge†. It formerly was called the East bridge, and the Stone bridge.

ABBAY. Not far from hence, on the side of the river, stood the great mitred abbey of St. Peter and St. Paul, founded in 1083 by Roger earl of Shrewsbury, and his countess Adelissa. It was built on the site of a timber church, erected by Siward; who exchanged it, and probably the ground about it, with the earl for the village of Langafielda; which Siward, at his death, bequeathed to the new foundation. It was peopled with Benedictine monks from Seez, in Normandy, who arrived hungry and naked. Roger himself, with the permission of his lady, was shorn, and became a monk of his own abbey, and enriched it with the coat of St. Hugh, of the monastery of Cluni; which he sometimes wore himself as a most precious relique. He endowed the house largely, and encouraged every body who held under him to do the same. Among the after endowments, I smile at these good men receiving from earl Hugh the tithe of all the venison in Shropshire, except such which ranged in the woods of Wenlock. The founder died in 1094, and was interred here, as was his son Hugh, slain in Anglesey. Fulcheredus, a man of great eloquence, was first abbot. Robert, the fourth abbot, whom Mr. William Mytton names Pennant, procured with infinite difficulty, and, as I have already related, enriched the abbey with the reliques of St. Wenefrede, and enshrined them, much to the emolument of his house. William Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, by will dated August 8, 1437, ordered "foure images of gold, everich of " them of the weight of twenty pounds of gold, to " be made after my similitude, with myn arms,

† Leland, Itin. iv. 99.

 " holding an ancre between his hands," to be presented to the shrines of four different churches; one of which was to be that of St. Wenefrede in Shrewsbury<sup>x</sup>. I have, in vol. i. p. 47, of my Tour, given an account of the fraternity established here in honor of the saint, about the year 1396. Thomas Butler was last abbot. At the dissolution, Dr. Lee, and Master Henly, were sent down. They convened the abbot and monks to the chapter-house; caused some deeds to be signed with the common seal of the house, then ordered an officer to break it, and declared the convent to be dissolved<sup>y</sup>. Butler was allowed a pension of eighty pounds a year, and lesser sums were given to the monks<sup>z</sup>. The revenues at the dissolution are reckoned by Dugdale at only 132*l.* 4*s.* 10*d.* Speed, with more probability, says they were 515*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.* The site was granted by Henry VIII. to Edward Watson, and Henry Herdson<sup>a</sup>. Queen Elizabeth made the church parochial. This church was called St. Crux, or the Holy Cross, in the abbey of Shrewsbury, and still retains the name.

<sup>a</sup> Vol. ii. p. 174.

IN such a length of time the church underwent great alterations. Some of the round arches are to be seen within, and some of the doors are of the same species of architecture; most of the other parts are more modern<sup>b</sup>. The west window is an

<sup>x</sup> Hearné's Collections. The Earl's Will.

<sup>y</sup> Mr. W. Mylton.    <sup>z</sup> Willis, i. 171.    <sup>a</sup> Tanner, 445.

<sup>b</sup> The church has recently been ornamented by a handsome east

ORATORY AT SHERWSBURY.

elegant piece of sharp-pointed Gothic, and above is a statue. The tomb of the founder is preserved in the church; on which is represented his figure in mail and a mantle, and in the attitude of drawing his sword.

IN the garden is a most beautiful stone pulpit, open on all sides. I refer the reader to the print as the best description.

THE Grey Friars, or Franciscans, had a house a little to the south of the new bridge, not far from the town-walls. It was founded on the motion of Hawyse, daughter of Owen ap Gryffydd, prince of Powys, and wife to John Charleton, lord of Powys. Charleton died in the year 1353; Hawyse before him, and was interred in this convent. At the dissolution it was granted to Richard Andrews and Nicholas Temple. The remains are fitted up into a private house.

FRANCIS-
CANS.

A LITTLE farther is that beautiful walk the Quarry, bordering on the river, and planted with rows of trees. It is the property of the corporation, and the pasturage part let to the inhabitants, and the profits distributed to the burgesses. In 1569 this ground was let to three persons for ten years, for the annual acknowledgement of a red rose, on condition they brought water in leaden window of painted glass, the gift of lord Berwick.—An organ, and rich gothic screen, have also been erected, and the interior of the building much improved. ED. <sup>c</sup> Leland Itin.

QUARRY.

pipes, as high as it would run, for the use of the town, from Brodwel, near Crow Meole; which was effected in 1579.

ORPHAN-HOUSE.

ON a lofty bank, opposite to these walks, is seated the Orphan-house<sup>d</sup>, a fine brick building, with thirteen windows in front, and two small wings. It was begun in 1670, and designed to receive part of the foundlings from the great hospital in London. They were first to have been put out to nurse in the neighborhood, and at a proper age to have been brought into the house, and under proper masters and mistresses to be taught such arts as would make them useful members of society. On the decline of the capital hospital, this great building became useless; and is at present no more than a place of confinement for prisoners of war.

AUGUSTINE.

BEYOND the quarry, close to the river, stood the house of Augustine friers. Leland<sup>o</sup> says, it was founded by one of the Staffords; and that several persons of note, slain in the battle of Shrewsbury, were interred here, and in the church of the Black friers. The friers of this house lay under a very bad fame; it is even said, that a neighboring lane took its name from their nocturnal amours. Dr. Powel seems to think, that the celebrated In- cubi were nothing more than mendicant friers; who might encourage the notion, in order to remove scandal from themselves, and their religious paramours. Hi, says the zealous annotator, Incubi dæmones ita religiosas virgines illis diebus opprimebant, ut nulla eos crucis signatio, nec aqua benedicta, nec ipsum corporis CHRISTI sacramentum, abigere valeret<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> In 1784 this building was converted into a House of Industry, for the reception of the poor of Shrewsbury, and of the adjacent parish of Meole Brace. ED.

<sup>o</sup> Itin. iv. 100.

THE house of the Black friers, or Dominicans, DOMINICANS. stood near St. Mary's, Water Lane. It is said that Richard, a burges of this town, by the king's licence, built them a church in 1264; but the foundation of the friery is ascribed to Maud lady Genevil, wife of Jeffry, lord Genevil, who lived in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I. They had confirmation of what they held here from Edward III. and likewise were permitted to make an aqueduct in the ground belonging to their house.

Most of the parochial churches are of great antiquity. That of St. Chad<sup>2</sup> was probably founded by the Saxons soon after the expulsion of the Welsh. At the conquest it was found to be collegiate, and to have a dean and ten prebendaries. CHURCHES

<sup>1</sup> Girald. Cambr. Itin. lib. ii. c. 8.

<sup>2</sup> The tower of St. Chad's fell down in 1788, and destroyed the body of the church; when a beautiful situation near the Quarry was selected for the new place of worship, which was erected after the design of Mr. Stewart:—its architecture has been much and perhaps not undeservedly criticised. ED.

In 1393 the old church was burnt down by the carelessness of a workman. The fellow seeing the mischief he had done, ran home, put some money in his pocket, and attempting to escape, was drowned in fording the river, near the stone bridge. In this church is the monument of Richard Onslow, and his wife, with their figures recumbent: he dressed in a bonnet and gown. This gentleman was of the law; was twice member for Steyning in Sussex, and was ancestor to the honorable Arthur Onslow, speaker of the house of commons, and the present lord Onslow. The former, in 1742, paid such respect to his memory as to cause this memorial of him to be repaired. Richard Onslow died of a pestilential fever in 1571.

ST. MARY'S, and St. Almund's<sup>b</sup>, are remarkable for their handsome spire steeples. The first is said to have been founded by King Edgar<sup>i</sup>; the last, by the heroine Elfyeda<sup>k</sup>: each of them had been collegiate. But the church which is said to be the most antient, is that of St. Giles, seated at the skirt of the suburbs, beyond the abbey. It is small, and only remarkable for the vast size of one side of the roof. It had the honor of receiving the bones of St. Wenefrede before they were deposited in the shrine in the abbey. It is called in Doomsday book, the parish of the city<sup>1</sup>; which gives it stronger clame to antiquity than any of the others. It is now annexed to the church of the Holy Cross, or the abbey.

<sup>b</sup> The body of this church has been taken down, and a new one erected of far inferior beauty. ED.

<sup>i</sup> Philips, 90.

<sup>k</sup> Tanner, 445.

°AMONG the more remarkable civil transactions may be reckoned the parlements held in this town. By the first writ, the lords were formally summoned to appear on September 13th, 1283; the second writ was directed to the commonalty of every county to chuse two knights; the third, to the cities and boroughs; the fourth, to the judges. At this august assembly was tried and condemned David, brother to Llewelyn, last prince of Wales: his perfidy to Edward, and his treasons to his country, before his reconciliation with his brother, rendered him an object of detestation. Eleven earls, and an hundred barons, were commissioned to try him<sup>m</sup>, as a subject of England; for he had received from Edward a barony, and a considerable pension. He was the first who suffered the death of a traitor, in the form of the sentence now in use, which he underwent in its full extent.

ANOTHER parlement was held here in 1397; it was called the Great Parlement, on account of the number of people assembled in it. Here the unfortunate Richard, from this obsequious senate, obtained a stretch of authority unknown before; and, by a strange concession, obtained that the whole power of the nation should devolve on the king, twelve peers, and six commoners. The Pope's bull was thought necessary to confirm so irregular a proceeding<sup>n</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Philips, 84.

<sup>m</sup> Drake's Parl. Hist. i. 89.

BATTLE OF SHREWS-
BURY.

THE military transactions relative to this place have been numerous; but so brief, and so rapid, that I shun mention of all, except three. The first was the important battle on St. Magdalen's eve, July 22d, 1403, which is best known by the name of that of Shrewsbury, between Henry IV. and the brave Henry Percy, surnamed Hotspur. It was the design of the northern insurgents to make themselves masters of this town, and here to strengthen their forces by a junction with the great Glyndwr and his countrymen. They made rapid marches through Lichfield and Stafford; but the active Henry, stimulated by the advice of the earl of Dunbar, a Scotch nobleman, then in his army, advanced with a speed which saved his crown, and proved the destruction of his enemies. He flung himself into Shrewsbury as some assert<sup>o</sup>, at the instant that the insurgents were going to scale the walls. He immediately quitted the town, and encamped before the gates. The high spirit of Percy would not suffer him to wait till the arrival of Glyndwr, who was no farther distant than Oswes-

<sup>n</sup> Rapin, i. 469.

<sup>o</sup> Stow, 329.

try: so that only four thousand of the Welsh were able to join the northern forces. Percy sent that night Thomas Kaiton and Thomas Sulvaigne, two of his esquires, with a most reproachful manifesto, concluding, in the romantic manner of the times, with hurling defiance in his teeth. “WE defy DEFIANCE.
 “ thee, thy fautoures and compliers, as common “ traytours, and destroyers of the realme, and the “ invadours, oppressours, and confounders of the “ verie true and right heyres to the crowne of En-
 “ glande; which thing we entende with our handes
 “ to prove this daie, Almyghty GOD helpyng us.””

THE fight began early in the morning, and very near to the town; for the spirited Percy had made his advances much sooner and nearer than the king expected. The onset was made in Oldfield, or Bulfield, at a small distance beyond a little brook, north of the north-gate; and the battle raged towards Berwick<sup>a</sup>, and as far as what is now called Battlefield. Let the old historians paint the conflict in their plain but animated language.

“ THE kyng perceivyng that the battayll was “ nerer than he either thoughte or looked for,
 “ leaste that long tarryinge mighte be a minishyng
 “ of his strength, set his battayles in good ordre;
 “ likewyse did his enemies, whiche bothe in puiss“ aunce and courage were nothing to hym inferior.

<sup>p</sup> Halle, fol. xxii.

<sup>a</sup> Curte, ii. 659.

“ Then sodaynly the trumpets blewe; the kynges “ parte cried St. George upon them; the adversa“ ries cried Esperaunce Percie; and so furiously
 “ the armies joined. The Scottes, whiche had the “ forward on the lordes side, intending to bee re“ venged of their old displeasures done to them by “ the Englishe nation, set so fiersely on the kynges “ forward, that they made them drawe backe, and “ had almoste broken their arraie. The Welsh-
 “ men also, whiche sithe the kynges departure out
 “ of Wales, had lurked and lien in wooddes, “ mountaignes, and marshes, heringe of this bat-
 “ tayl towarde, came to the aid of the earles,
 “ and refreshed the very people with new suc-
 “ cours. When a fearful messenger had declared
 “ to the kinge that his people were beaten doune
 “ on every side, it was no nede to bid him stirre;
 “ for sodaynly he approched with his freshe bat“ taill, and comforted, hartened, and encouraged
 “ his part so, that they toke their hartes to them,
 “ and manly fought with their enemies. The “ Prince Henry that daie holpe mucche his father;
 “ for thoughe he were sore wounded in the face
 “ with an arowe, yet he never ceased, either to “ fyghte where the battaill was moste strongest, or “ to courage his men where their hartes was most “ danted. This greate battaill continued thre “ longe houres with indifferent fortune on bothe
 “ partes. That at last the kyng, crying SAINCT

“ GEORGE, VICTORY! brake the arraie, and entered into the battaill of his enemies; and fought fierſely, and adventured ſo farre into the battaill, that the Earl Douglas ſtrake him downe, and ſlewe Sir Walter Blonte, and three other, appeared in the kynges ſuite and clothyng, ſaying, I marvail to ſee ſo many kynges ſo ſodainly ariſe again. Others ſay, that the earl of Dunbar withdrew the kyng from the place that hee ſtood in; which was a good turne for him; for the afoſeaid Henry Percy, and E. Douglas (then whom was never man more ſtout) raged ſo that the K. ſtandert was overthrowne, and thoſe about it ſlaine; among whom was ſlaine Edmund E. of Stafford, Sir Walter Blunt, the K. ſtandert-bearer, Sir Nicholas Langford, Sir John Cokayne, Sir John Calverley, Sir John Maſſy, baron of Podington, with manie other knights and gentlemen<sup>r</sup>.” According to Halle’s account, the kyng himſelf ſlewe with his hande, that day, xxxvii perſones of his enemies. “ The other of his parte, encouraged by his doyngeſ, foughte valiauntly, and ſlewe the Lord Percie, called Sir Henry Hotſpurre, the beſt capetaim on the parte adverſe. When his death was knowen, the Scottes fled, the Welſhmen rann, the traitours were overcome. Then neither woodes letted, nor hilles ſtopped the fearfull hartes of

<sup>r</sup> Stow, 329.

“ them that were vanquished to flie; and in that “ flighte the Erle Douglas, which for hast falling “ from the cragge of a mountaigne (Haghmond “ Hill) was taken; and, for his valiauntness, of
 “ the kynge frely and frankely delivered. On the “ kynges part were slain xvi c. persones, and above
 “ v thousand on the other; and as to the Scottes,
 “ few or none escaped alive<sup>s</sup>.”

THE body of the gallant Percy was found among the slain, and delivered to Thomas Nevil, lord Furnival, to be interred; but the next day the king ungenerously ordered it to be taken up, placed between two mill-stones in Shrewsbury, and guarded by armed men; after which he caused it to be beheaded and quartered, and hung in different parts of the kingdom<sup>t</sup>.

HENRY, after slaughtering five thousand people in his bad cause, most piously returned thanks to the Giver of all victories; and erected, or permitted to be erected, on the spot probably stained with most blood, the collegiate church of Battlefield, in the parish of Albrighton, about three miles from Shrewsbury. The royal licence permits Roger Ive, rector of the chapel of Albright-Husee, to erect on a piece of ground he had obtained from Richard Husee, a chapel, to be dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene; of which the said Ive and his heirs were to be master. There were

BATTLEFIELD
 CHURCH.

<sup>s</sup> Halle, fol. xxii.

<sup>t</sup> Stow, 329.

also to be five chaplains, who were to pray for the good state of the king while he lived, and after death, for his soul, and those of Richard Husee and Isolda his wife, and those of their heirs, and finally, for the souls of all that fell in battle on that fatal spot<sup>u</sup>. Its clear revenues at the dissolution were 54*l.* 1*s.* 10*d*<sup>x</sup>.

THE church had been a small but handsome building of stone, with a tower steeple. The west part is unroofed; but the chancel is neatly fitted up, and serves as a chapel to the parish of Albrighton. Over the outside of the east window is the statue of Henry IV. armed, and crowned. In the windows is some painted glass with several arms, chiefly of the Corbets, to whom the place belongs; among them are those of Richard Corbet, who died bishop of Norwich in 1635. It appears by the arms of the see of Oxford joined with his own, that he enjoyed that see when they were painted. He was a celebrated poet<sup>y</sup>, as well as an eloquent preacher; which recommended him so greatly to James I. that he made him one of his chaplains, and in 1620 bestowed on him the deanery of Christ-church.

IN August 1485 the town made some shew of resisting the passage of the earl of Richmond, af-

<sup>u</sup> Dugdale Monast. iii. pars ii. 185.

<sup>x</sup> Tanner, 456.

<sup>y</sup> Two editions of his poems were published after his death. See his life in the British Biography, ii. 1472.

EARL OF RICHMOND'S PASSAGE THROUGH
IN 1485.

terwards Henry VII. in his way to meet Richard III. and give him battle. My authority says, that “ The head bailey, Maister Myttoon, being stoute “ royste gentilman, on demand being made of en“ trance, answered, sayinge, that he knew no
 “ kynge but only Kynge Richard, whose lyffete-“ nants he and hys fellows were; and before he “ should entir there, he should go over hys belly, “ meaninge thereby, that he would be slayne to
 “ the ground, and that he protested vehementlye
 “ on the othe he had tacken; but on better advice, “ Maister Myttoon permitted the kynge to pass;
 “ but to save hys othe, the sayd Myttoon lay “ alonge the grounde, and hys belly upwardes, and “ soe the sayd erle stepped over hym, and saved
 “ his othe<sup>z</sup>.”

BRINGS THE SWEATING SICKNESS.

It is affirmed that Henry brought with the army which landed in Wales, that dreadful pestilence, the sweating sickness, or Sudor Anglicanus, which for above sixty years after infested this kingdom, at different periods. In many places it swept away a third of the people. It began with a sweat which never left the patient till it destroyed him, or till he recovered. It had many of the symptoms of the plague; restlessness, anxiety, sickness, ravings, drowsiness, faintness, palpitations; but it never was attended with eruptive spots, buboes, or carbuncles, attendant on the other scourge of heaven. It always began with the affection of one part, the sense of a hot vapour running through the whole limb. The crisis never exceeded twenty-four hours (Dr. Caius, on that account, calls it Ephmera Britannica), but oftener death ensued in three or ten. There were places in which scarce one in a hundred escaped infection. Towards the latter end of the visitation the malignancy abated: for in 1528, out of forty thousand who were seized in London, only two thousand died. The patient was to wait the event, just as he happened to be seized, whether in bed or in his cloaths. It is a mistake to suppose, as many have done, that it was a disease peculiar to England, and that Englishmen only, let them have been where they would, were seized with it. It certainly originated neither in England, nor among Englishmen; but among the foreign levies of the duke of Richmond, raked out of hospitals and jails, and buried in filth, and crowded on board the transports, so as naturally to generate a distemper among subjects so admirably pre-disposed<sup>a</sup>. Let me add, that it ended in this town in 1551; but not with that mildness which was observed in the later visitations in other places; for not fewer than nine hundred and ninety died in a few days<sup>b</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> Philips, 41.

<sup>a</sup> See the ingenious and pleasing Biographical Memoirs of Medicine in Great Britain, by Mr. John Aikin of Warrington, p. 119 to 127.

<sup>b</sup> The same.

TOWN
TAKEN IN 1644, BY GENERAL
MYTTON.

IN the civil wars of the last century Shrewsbury was garrisoned by the king, many of the works greatly strengthened, and a strong fort erected above Frankwell, to prevent the town being commanded from the adjacent heights. Sir Michael Earnly was left governor, and Captain Crowe lieutenant of the castle. General Mytton, who lay with a small garrison at Wem, and was representative for this town, determined to surprise it. He made two unsuccessful attempts; but on February 21st, 1644, with such forces as he could collect, he renewed his enterprize. He sent the foot along the Severn side, and by the help of some carpenters, who cut down the palisades between the castle and the river, formed an entrance. Forty dismounted troopers scaled the walls in a low part near the council-house, supported by the musqueteers, and three hundred and fifty foot surprised the main-guard in the market place, and killed the captain. The castle fore-gate was next secured, and the draw-bridge let down for the admittance of the horse. At one in the afternoon the castle was surrendered, on condition that the Irish should be given up, and the English march to Ludlow. Crowe was soon after hanged for his treachery or cowardice. The governor, and great numbers of people of rank in the county, were taken prisoners; and the town was plundered, notwithstanding the general had offered his soldiers a great bounty to forbear all acts of violence. Much booty was found, a considerable magazine, and the baggage belonging to Prince Maurice. Mytton was made governor, and received the thanks of the house for his good services.

I DETERMINED to conclude my tour by a journey to Caer Caradoc, a post of the celebrated British hero Caractacus. I went over the new bridge; passed by Condover, a remarkably handsome and commodious house for its time, built by Sir Thomas Owens, who died in 1598, one of the judges in the King's bench.<sup>c</sup> It is seated at the edge of a fine park; from which are variety of beautiful views. This place passed to my eldest maternal uncle, Richard Mytton of Halston esq; by virtue of his marriage with Miss Owen, heiress of the place. The eldest of the two daughters of that match conveyed it by marriage to the late Sir Charlton Leighton; and it is now possessed by Nicholas Smythe esq; in right of his wife<sup>d</sup>, Anna Maria, daughter to Sir Charlton.

CONDOVER.

NOT far from Condover is Pitchford<sup>e</sup> the seat of Adam Otley esq; an antient and venerable timber house, with a hall suitably furnished with

PITCHFORD.

<sup>c</sup> Herald's Visitation of Shropshire.

<sup>d</sup> An only son, the offspring of this marriage, is dead; the property now belongs to his nephew. ED.

<sup>e</sup> On the decease of Adam Otley esq; Pitchford became the property of the honorable Charles Jenkinson. ED.

helmets, cuirasses, and broad swords. Here is preserved a portrait of my respected predecessor in the line of natural history, FRANCIS WILLUGHBY esq; painted in 1659, at the early age of thirteen, when he was a member of Trinity college, Cambridge. His complexion is very fair, his hair very long and flaxen; he has a book in his hand; is dressed in the academic habit, and has on a very large turnover. He was heir to the magnificent house of Wollaton near Nottingham. After passing his short but amiable life in instructive travels, and the study of nature, and at the time of meditating a voyage to explore the productions of the new world, he was attacked, in 1672, at the age of thirty-seven, by a fatal pleurisy.

NEAR the house is a most remarkable pond, which flings up in hot weather a vast quantity of strong bitumen, greatly resembling pitch, which gives name to the place. It serves all the uses of that commodity; and an oil, most efficacious in many disorders, has been for a considerable time past extracted from it.

LONGNOR. NEAR the eight mile-stone from Shrewsbury, I reached Longnor, the house of my respected old friend Joseph Plymley esq. Near it is Longnor Hall, the seat of Robert Corbett<sup>e</sup> esq; bequeathed to him by his relation, the late Sir Richard Corbett bart. It is a good brick house, built in 1670 by Sir Richard, a predecessor of the late owner. It is seated in a pretty vale, and commands a fine view of Caer Caradoc, and Lawly Hill. The portrait of the founder is in the house. He had been chairman of the committee of elections in the reign of Charles II. and died aged 43, in 1683.

* Longnor Hall, on the decease of Mr. Corbett, came into the possession of the reverend Archdeacon Plymley, son of Joseph Plymley esq. He has assumed the name of Corbett. ED.

HERE is an admirable portrait of Margaret, widow of James earl of Salisbury, and daughter of John earl of Rutland; the countenance dejected, but extremely beautiful. She is dressed in very picturesque weeds; a three-quarters, by Sir Godfrey Kneller.

HER daughter, Lady Margaret, first married to Lord Stawel, afterwards to Lord Ranelagh: extremely beautiful; an half-length, by the same hand. A portrait of this lady is among the beauties at Hampton Court: a picture of her husband is in this house.

LADY Mildred, youngest daughter of Margaret countess of Salisbury, and wife to Sir Uvedale Corbett, son of Sir Richard, is painted in half-length; a fine spirited figure. Here is also a very pleasing picture of her daughter Elizabeth, painted in France, by Le Garde. She died unmarried, of a cancer in her breast, in 1724, and was buried in St. Margaret's, Westminster; and had the honor of an epitaph by Mr. Pope inscribed on her tomb.

AMONG other pictures, is a most exquisite one, by an unknown hand, of our SAVIOUR raising Lazarus. Two persons support the body; one is exerting all his strength, the other seems at the moment sensible of the returning life of the object of the miracle. Amazement appears in various forms in the spectators: in some is a fullness of conviction mixed with wonder and thanksgiving; in others, surprise unmixed with any other passion; but in a high-priest appears a high degree of vexation. The body is a fine composition, of the re-animation of putridity.

A LARGE picture of St. Peter denying our Lord, is a fine performance, by Gerard Honthurst: confusion of face, fear, and consciousness of falsehood, are strongly expressed in the visage of the frail apostle; which seems perceived by a girl, who is (with a candle in her hand) questioning him, and in whose countenance are the strongest marks of her being convinced of the falseness of his asseverations.

ACTON BURNEL.

FROM this vale I formerly visited Acton Burnel, about three miles distant, the seat of its respectable owner Sir Edward Smythe baronet; whose family came possessed of it in the 1st of Charles II. Not far from the house is the castle; a square building, with a square tower at each corner. Its founder, or perhaps restorer, was Robert Burnel<sup>t</sup>, bishop of Bath and Wells, treasurer, and afterwards chancellor of England; who in 1292 was sent to the marches of Scotland, where he was employed on no less an affair than to demand of the Scots, what they had to object to the clame of his master to the right and exercise of the superiority and direct dominion over their kingdom<sup>g</sup>. In this office he died, and was carried to be interred in his cathedral at Wells. He was of a very antient family, dignified with barons, or knights, from the time of the Conquest; but he had acquired great wealth, which he laid out with true munificence. By certain monuments with the arms of the family, in the church of Burnel in Normandy, it is supposed that they came originally from that country. The castle was honored by a session of parlement in 1284: the lords sate in the fortress, the commons in a great barn, the gable ends of which are still to be seen. The Statutum de Mercatoribus, enacted here, is, from the place, known by the name of the statute of Acton Burnel. It is probable that it was by the influence of the prelate, that his habitation was so distinguished.

CASTLE.

HIS successor in the castle was Sir Edward Burnel, who served in many actions in Scotland, under Edward I. and appeared with great splen-

<sup>t</sup> Leland's Itin. viii. 107. Fuller's Br. Worthies, Shropshire, 4.

<sup>g</sup> Drake's Parl. Hist. i. 100, 101.

dor. He was always attended with a chariot decked with banners; on which, as well as on the trappings of his horses, were depicted his arms. He married Alice, daughter of lord Despenser, by whom he had no issue. On his decease, in 1315, his sister Maud became sole heir. She married first John lord Love of Tichemersh, surnamed The Rich; he died in 1335. Her second husband was John de Handlow, who died in 1346, and left by her one son, named Nicholas lord Burnel, the subject of much contest in the court of chivalry with a Robert de Morley, on account of the arms which Nicholas bore, in right of certain lands of the barony of Burnel, bestowed on him by his mother. These arms de Morley had assumed without any just pretence; but because, as he declared, "it was his will and pleasure so to do, and that he would defend his so doing." Probably he had no arms of his own, having been the first of his family who had appeared in a military capacity. He had served as esquire to Sir Edward Burnel, without any other domestic than one boy; and ever since the death of his master bore the arms in dispute. It happened that they both were at the siege of Calais, under Edward III. in 1346, arrayed in the same arms. Nicholas lord Burnel, challenged the arms as belonging to the Burnels only, he having at that time under his command a hundred men, on whose banners where his proper

CURIOUS
TRIAL ABOUT A COAT OF ARMS.

arms. Sir Peter Corbet, then in his retinue, offered to combat with Robert de Morley in support of the right which his master had to the arms; but the duel never took place, probably because the king denied his assent. The suit was then referred to the court of chivalry, held on the sands near Calais, before William Bohun, earl of Northampton, high constable of England, and Thomas Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, earl marshal. The trial lasted several days; when Robert, apprehending that the cause would go against him, took an opportunity, in presence of the king, to swear by God's flesh, that if the arms in question were adjudged from him, he never more would arm himself in the king's service. On this the king, out of personal regard for the signal services he had performed in those arms, and considering the right of Nicholas lord Burnel, was desirous to put an end to the contest with as little offence as possible. He therefore sent the earl of Lancaster, and other lords, to Nicholas, to request that he would permit Robert de Morley to bear the arms in dispute for the term of his life only: which Nicholas, out of respect to the king, assented to. The king then directed the high constable, and earl marshal, to give judgement accordingly. This they performed in the church of St. Peter, near Calais; and their sentence was immediately proclaimed by a herald, in the presence of the whole army there assembled.

ROBERT de Morley was seized with his last illness in Burgundy, in the year 1360, when the English army was on its return from the blockade of Paris. Feeling the approach of death, he directed that his banner, with the arms of Burnel, should, upon his decease, be delivered to Nicholas lord Burnel, in persuance of the judgment before passed in the court of chivalry; and accordingly his banner-bearer, having in his hands the banner rolled up, delivered it to lord Burnel, in presence of numbers of the nobility, convened as witnesses of the ceremony. Lord Burnel died in the year 1382, and was interred in Acton Burnel church, under an altar tomb, with a brass inlaid in it of the figure of an armed man, and a brass label, inscribed, Hic jacet Dominus Nich<sup>s</sup> Burnel, miles, dominus de Holgot, qui ob. 12<sup>o</sup> die Jan. A. D. 1382. Cujus animæ propitietur Deus. Amen.

AMONG the witnesses in this cause were several lord and knights, and many very antient people, some of them above a hundred years of age; one of a hundred and forty, and one of a hundred and twenty, probably of Shropshire, as may be collected from their names, and the testimony they gave relative to the descents of the Burnels, and several private affairs of the family, which were likely to be best known in the neighborhood of their residence<sup>b</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> This account is from a curious MS. I had the pleasure of receiving from Sir Edward Smythe.

FROM Longnor I visited Caer Caradoc. After a ride of about three miles, I fell accidentally on the steepest ascent, and, after a laborious clamber up a green and smooth ascent, now and then mixed with small fragments of a porous stone<sup>i</sup> (1), I reached the summit, impeded a little by the first ditch and rampart, in a place where, from the exceeding steepness, they seemed totally unnecessary. A little higher is the second ditch, with a vast agger of stones, now sodded over. The area is irregular, of pretty considerable extent. On the more accessible side are three fosses and ramparts. The entrance and approach are very conspicuous, and may even at present be easily travelled on horseback. The area slopes upwards, and ends in a peak.

<sup>i</sup> The Editor, in this as in two other instances, has taken the liberty of substituting "a porous stone," for "lava," there being good ground to believe that no traces of the effect of volcanic fire are to be found either in the mountains of North Wales, or of the adjacent English counties. In the vast circle of knowledge which Mr. Pennant possessed, an acquaintance with the modern improvements in mineralogy and geology was not included. A dark colored stone, rendered cellular by the decomposition of feltopath, frequently resembles, and might easily be mistaken for a substance acted upon by subterraneous heat.—Into this error the admirable author of the Tour in Wales appears occasionally to have fallen—a venial error which disappears amidst the mass of varied and amusing information which renders these pages so truly valuable. ED.

(1) The text of Pennant was altered from "lava" to "porous stone" in the edition of 1810. Pennant's expression was perfectly correct, and is abundantly justified by the observations of modern geologists. The note of the editor is instructive, as it shews the ignorance of geology which existed in the early part of the present century, and as it furnishes a striking illustration of the danger of meddling with an author's text. T.P.

NOTWITHSTANDING this place is styled Caer Caradoc, it certainly was not that which was attacked by Ostorius, and so admirably described by Tacitus. It agrees only in this part of the description, which is common to most British posts, Hinc montibus arduis, & si qua clementer accedi poterunt modum valli saxa præstruit; but it wants the following, Et præfluebat amnis vado incerto. The learned editor of Camden<sup>k</sup> places it at Gair Ditches, about three miles south of Clun, on the left of the road to Knighton; and gives, as I am informed, a faithful description of the trenches and ramparts. I never saw the place, therefore am uncertain on what river it stood, the fords of which were so difficult. No such river is to be seen near the post I ascended; it therefore could not have been the spot on which our hero was defeated: yet it is highly probable that it had been a post occupied by him, and that it was named from that circumstance. It has from very remote times been traditionally considered as a strong hold of his; and, within no great number of years, a society of gentlemen, struck with admiration of his virtue, met annually on the hill to celebrate his name in prose or verse. In one year a gentleman<sup>1</sup>, distinguished as much by his modesty as his great ingenuity, inspired with the subject, almost instantly delivered the most brilliant part of the history of Caractacus<sup>m</sup> in the following lines; which, I flatter myself, will relieve my long-suffering readers after the satiety of my Welsh pen, now hung up for ever.

<sup>k</sup> Camden, i. 646, 647. In Rocque's map of Shropshire it is called Caer Caradoc.

ALL ROME was still, and nations stood at gaze;
 Forth came the mighty Chief august in chains,
 Unbroken, unsubdued; his dauntless brow
 Lost not its conscious grandeur: round he look'd
 With steady glare, a lion in the toils;
 Yet, mindful of his fate, to Cæsar's throne
 He bow'd majestic, and thus calmly spake:
 " Had moderation sway'd my prosperous days,
 " Rome had beheld me Cæsar's guest and friend,
 " Nor blush'd; descended from a scepter'd race
 " That rul'd Britannia's independent isle
 " Beyond all annals of recording fame.
 " If Rome commands, must vassal worlds obey?
 " What, not resist! Who not defend their rights
 " Deserve not. Cowards only should be slaves.
 " Yes, I had arms, and wealth, and friends, and fame.
 " What tamely give them up? Disgrace indeed!
 " That I so long withstood your baffled pow'rs,
 " Forgive me, Roman Virtue, that offence.
 " Had I a cheap and easy conquest prov'd,
 " My ruin and your glory had been less.

<sup>1</sup> The reverend SNEYD DAVIES.

<sup>m</sup> Taciti Annal. lib. xii.

"Oblivion soon had veil'd my dastard name,
 "Unworthy Cæsar's pity. Death or life
 "Are at his dread disposal. That, or This,
 "I neither fear to meet, nor scorn to ask."

"Yes, noble Captive," said the lord of Rome,
 "Thy life is sacred, and thy freedom seal'd.
 "My sole ambition, soaring high requires,
 "Amid my banners and triumphal cars,
 "To bear thy valiant country's glorious name."
 He spake, loud thund'ring acclamations rung,
 And shouts that tore the Capitol, proclam'd
 Imperial mercy to the gallant foe.
 All eyes are fixed in wonder! Some admire
 His front erect, broad limbs, and martial port;
 All praise the unwearied valour that durst cope
 With Roman prowess, and well-nigh prevail'd.
 Not bold Jugurtha, nor the Syrian king,
 Nor Persius reft of Alexander's crown,
 Attracted more regard and gazing awe.
 E'en Claudius, in his radiant seat sublime,
 The world's great master, with his legions fierce,
 His glitt'ring eagles, all his trophied pomp
 And pride begirt, look'd little on his throne.

Brave CARADOC, applauded by thy foes,
 What shall thy friends, thy grateful Britons say?
 What columns, and what altars rear of fame?
 Thrice told five hundred courses of the sun,
 Thy age is green, thy laurels freshly bloom.
 Yet on thy well-fought hill, whose stony brow
 O'erlooks the subject plains, the gen'rous youth
 Gladsome repair with annual flow'rs and song,
 And festal music, to record thy praise.
 O for more sparks of thy heroic fire!

If aught regarding this dull orb of earth,
 Boils not thy rage, and thy great spirit chafes,
 To see the rivals of all-conquering Rome,
 Thy hardy Britons, foil'd by tinsel France?
 Imagination, frowning, pictures thee
 With featur'd variations, scorn and shame.
Henries and Edwards, thunderbolts of war,
 Where is the lion-heart, the sweeping sword,
 That purpled Agincourt's and Cressy's fields?
 Assist, inspire our host! But chiefly thou,
 The champion, guardian-genius of this isle,
 Hover around our tents; thy airy lance
 Direct, and spread thy visionary shield!
 Call, rouse thy countrymen! To arms, To arms.
 Ye antient Bards, ye mystic Druids, hail!
 Prophetic transport seizes me; I see,
 Tho' dim the prospect, from this craggy height
 Unrolling clouds that ope a beauteous scene
 Of joy and triumph. Hark! they shout. I see
Britannia's Lion Gallia's ensign seize;
Britannia's Trident vindicate the main,
 Her colours waving in Columbian skies
 Victorious. Peace returns, and Albion smiles.
 Proceed, ye Britons; lo! the kindled fire
 In this unwarlike breast! My veteran Muse
 Shall march along; in spirit-breathing strains
 Sound her Pierian trumpet, to awake
 Her sleeping country; in her laurel'd hand
 A chaplet bear to grace the victor's brow.

APPENDIX.

APPENDIX.

N<sup>o</sup> I.

BASINGWERK ABBY, Vol. i. p. 35.

IN an out-house is lodged a stone with the following inscription:

IESUS *

* MARIA.

HERE . LYETH . TH . Y . BODY . OF . GEORGE . PE=
 TRE . LATE . OF . GREENFIELD . IN . FLINT
 SHIRE, Esq. SONE TO . W . LORD . PETRE
 BARON . OF . INGLESTON . IN . ESSEX . &
 MARRIED ANE .  $\frac{E}{Y}$  . RELICT . OF . IOHN
 MOSTOIN . Esq. . BEING .  $\frac{E}{Y}$  DAUGHTER
 OF . HENRY . FOX . Esq. . WHO . FOR .  $\frac{E}{Y}$  . RO=
 MANE . CATHOLIQUE . FAITH . & . LOYAL=
 TY . TO . HIS . <sup>THE</sup> MA . LEFT HIS . COUNTRY .
 & . SPENDING HIS . TIME .  $\frac{T}{W}$  . GREAT .
 EDIFICATION . OF . HIS . NEIGHBOVRS .
 DIED . AT . WEXFORD  $\frac{E}{Y}$  26 DAY OF SEP.
 AN . D<sup>O</sup> 1647 AGED 34.

N<sup>o</sup> II.(<sup>1</sup>)

TABLE OF THE EXPORTS AND IMPORTS OF CHESTER.

Vol. i. p. 248.

	1771	1776	1786	1796	1806
Coasting vessels entered inwards .....	297	208	241	206	149
Ditto .....outwards .....	526	619	454	402	350
Ireland .....	95	140	48	32	195
...inwards .....
Ditto .....	216	104	103	51	329
...outwards .....
America .....	71	2
...inwards .....
Ditto .....	5	2
...outwards .....
Isle of Man.....	4	13	1	9
...outwards .....
Ditto .....	3	23	15	1
...inwards .....

EXPORTED TO FOREIGN PARTS.

Chaldron s of coals .....	6000	2877	2616	272	16519
Tons of lead.....	1000	1184	1410	160	11
Ore .....	300	168	245
Bark .....	300	18	370	695	16

EXPORTED COASTWISE.

Lead .....	3470	2813	1058	1163	2200
Lead Ore .....	431	432	309	376	490
Number of ships in foreign trade.....	22	30	8	6	13
Ditto in coasting trade .....	13	16	5	17	14

(<sup>1</sup>) This is not in Pennant's own editions, but was probably drawn up for the octavo one of 1810. J.R.

NUMBER OF VESSELS ENTERED AT THE PORT OF CHESTER FROM FOREIGN PORTS, EXCLUSIVE OF AMERICA, IRELAND, AND THE ISLE OF MAN.

Years.	No. of Ships.	From whence.	Cargoes.
1786	5	Portugal .....	Wines.
	3	Prussia.....	Timber, hemp, &c.
	3	Norway.....
	3	Livonia .....
	2	Italy.....	Skins.
	3	Russia.....	Hemp and flax.
1796	3	Portugal.....	Wines.
	1	Spain.....	Fruit.
	3	Livonia .....	Hemp, flax.
	2	Norway .....	Timber.
	3	Italy.....	Dye-woods, fruit, and wines.
	1	Prussia.....	Hemp, flax.
	1	Narva.....	Ditto.
2	Russia.....	Ditto.
1806	1	Prussia.....	Ditto.
	5	Portugal.....	Wines.
	4	Russia.....	Hemp, flax, timber.

OUTWARDS.

Years.	No. of Ships.	Whither bound.	Cargoes.
1786	12	France.....	Lead, lead ore, litharge, copper, &c.
	1	Russia .....	Lead.
	3	Italy.....	Ditto, litharge.
1796	1	Italy.....	Lead, litharge.
1806	1	Portugal.....	Coals, &c.

From 1777 to Christmas 1806 inclusive, the following have been entered at the custom-house, Chester, foreign and coastwise.

	tons.
Lead.....	152,643.
Ore.....	33,879.
Litharge.....	4,685.

ED.

N° III.

EXTRACTS OUT OF A MANUSCRIPT TREATISE OF THE LORDSHIPS MARCHERS IN WALES, TAKEN AUGUST 1740.
VOL. i. p. 315.

[The Treatise was borrowed of Thomas Lloyd of Overton, Esq.]

THE treatise shews,

1. How, why, and when, the lordships marchers were first erected.
2. How, why, and when, they were suppressed. And,
3. How they may be known, and tried, at this day, from other lordships, that were not lordships marchers.

For the true knowledge and perfect understanding of the state of lordships marchers in Wales, the following questions are fit to be moved:

1. When lordships marchers began in Wales?
2. How long the creating lordships marchers in Wales continued?
3. When the same was given over, and why?
4. Why they were at first ordained, and to what end they served?
5. How they became lordships marchers, and to have regal authority?
6. How long they continued their force and authority from their first erection?
7. When they were spoiled of their liberty, and the same was resumed into the king's hands?
8. Why they were deprived of their regal power?
9. How they are to be known at this day?

10. Why they were at first, and are now, called lordships marchers; and how they first took the name?

11. What difference is at this day between them and other lordships?

WALES was the refuge to the antient Britons, when they were driven by the Saxons out of England; and there they preserved the antient blood royal of their kings, their laws, and antient language, from the fury of the Saxons.

There continued an implacable hatred and wars between the two nations. And though the heptarchy was reduced to a monarchy by Egbert king of the West-Saxons (who first called that part England), yet he and his successors received no obedience or subjection from the kings or princes of Wales; but they held Wales as absolute monarchs, and acknowledged no superior under God.

Here Cadwallader (the last king of Britain of the British line) and his descendants, did govern the people, as their lawful kings and princes, all the time of the Saxon government.

When William the Conqueror subdued England, he dispossessed the Saxon issue of the crown; he rooted out most of their nobility, and brought in his own people, the Normans: and when he was in quiet possession of the kingdom, the Welsh took no notice of his Conquest over the Saxons; but accounted of it only as a war between two strange nations.

Long before the Conquest, all Wales fell to Roderick the Great; who divided it between his three sons: to Cadell he gave South Wales, containing 25 cantreds; to Anarawd, North Wales, of 15 cantreds; and to Merfyn Powys, of 14 cantreds.

The issue of these three sons possessed Wales, according to the said division, in the Conqueror's time; viz. Rice, son of Theodore, ruled South Wales; Griffith ap Conan, North Wales; and Blethyn ap Confyn, Powys. These three princes would never acknowledge that the Conqueror had any superiority over Wales; and for this reason there arose cruel wars between them, and they made daily incursions on each other.

The kings of England often invaded the borders of Wales, and forced the inhabitants to fly to the mountains; and the Welsh, at other times, made divers inroads over Severn, and carried great spoils out of England. This so provoked them, that they resolved to make a conquest of Wales; but the roughness of the country, the hills, woods, and bogs, was such a protection, that a great army could hardly be brought to annoy them; but were often forced to return home with loss, as William Rufus, and Henry II. who entered Wales three times with royal armies. King John made war upon Llewelyn ap Jorwerth, prince of North Wales, and Henry III. upon Llewelyn ap Griffith; which brought great loss to themselves, as well as damage to the Welsh.

The kings of England, seeing it difficult to make a conquest of Wales by a great army, gave to the lords, and other great men of England, such countries in Wales as they could win from the Welshmen. These are the words of divers of their grants.

By these means many were drawn to bring great armies of Englishmen and Normans into Wales; who conquered many great lordships; which they held to them and their heirs for ever, of the kings of England, as lands purchased by conquest.

The kings of England having built divers strong towns of garrison on the frontiers of Wales, after the Conquest; such as Bristow, Gloucester, Worcester, Salop, and Chester; as places ready to chastise the Welshmen upon all attempts, the great men began to invade the countries next to those towns; as namely, Peter Corbet, for Cause; Mortimer, for Wigmore; Fitz-alan for Clun and Oswestry; Walter Lacy, for Ewyas-Lacy; Dru de Baladan for Abergaveny; Monthault for Hawarden; Gilbert lord of Monmouth for Monmouth; Fulk Fitz-warren for Whittington; Roger le Strange for Elesmere: and shortly after came Robert Fitz-hamon, with his twelve knights, into Glamorgan; Bernard Newmarch into Brecknock; Strongbow to Dyfed or Pembrokeshire; Martin to Kemes; Morris de Londres to Cydwelŷ and Cornwallon; Lacy earl of Lincoln to Rhôs and Rhyfoniog, now the lordship of Denbigh; Brewis to Gower, Buel, Radnor, Melenith, and Elvel; and to Roger Mortimer the country now called Chirk; then called Mochnant, and to Cynlleth and Nantheudwŷ; and others to other lordships.

That the lords might the better govern the people when subdued, they were suffered to take upon them such prerogative and authority, as were fit for the quiet government of the country.

The antient historiographer Lampridius, saith, that the kings of England did then use the same policy with lands on the borders of Scotland.

No record is to be found in the Tower of London, or elsewhere, of any grant to be a lordship marcher in Wales. The king's writs, out of the courts at Westminster, did not run into Wales, except Pembrokeshire; which was counted part of England, and called Little England beyond Wales. Nor were there any sheriffs to execute such writs: but the lords did execute laws themselves over the people which they subdued; which the kings permitted for a time.

No charters of these liberties could conveniently be granted, for three reasons.

1. The kings of England did not know beforehand what lands a lord should conquer, or whether he should conquer any; and therefore could not grant any liberties within a certain precinct or territory.

2. The lords after their conquest of any country, were not over-hasty to purchase any charter; because they were not sure but that those lands might be restored, by composition between the kings of England and the princes of Wales, as they sometimes were: or they might be recovered by force, and the lords expelled. But,

3. The learned say, that the lords marchers had no charters of such liberties, because the liberties were of so high a nature, so royal, and so united to the crown, that, by the law, it was not in the king's power to grant them from the crown.

The government by lords marchers continued in Wales till the time of Henry VIII; who perceiving the Welsh to live in quietness and subjection, thought they might be governed by civil laws, as the English were. And therefore, anno 27, c. 24, he resumed most of those jurisdictions into his own hands, and appointed justices of peace, sheriffs, and other officers; and divided the country into shires. He governed them by the laws of England; and left little or no authority to the lords marchers.

The lords, at their conquest of the country, built castles for themselves, and towns for their followers, in the most fertile part: and by this means the towns and castles in Wales were built, as may be seen in the antient charters of those towns.

Pembroke Tenby, and Haverfordwest, by Strongbow; William de Valence, and the Hastings, being his posterity; Newport, by Martin lord of Kemes; Cydwely by Londres; and augmented afterwards by the duke of Lancaster, to whom it came by marriage.

Swansey, Oystermouth, Loghor, Radnor, Buelt, Raiadr, and others, by the Brewises; from whom they came to the Mortimers and Beauchamps, by a female issue of Brewis; Brecknock, by Bernard Newmarch.

Blaen-Llyfney, by Herbert: Caerdiff and Cowbridge by Fitz-hamon, and the earls of Gloucester: Neath, by Greenfield: Abergaveny, by Dru de Baladan, Miles earl of Hereford, and others, his posterity: Ruthin, by Lord Grey: Denbigh, by Lacy earl of Lincoln.

Some of these were towns before the Conquest; but, being destroyed in the winning of them, they were rebuilt by the lords.

The lords held their lordships of the kings of England in chief, as of the crown immediate, by serving the king in his wars with certain numbers of men; and they were bound to keep their castles with sufficient men and munition, for the keeping of the king's enemies in subjection.

They executed the English laws, for the most part, within their lordships; and brought them to be of English tenure; and to pass the same according to the laws of England, by fine, recovery, feoffment, and livery of seisin. But such parts as they left to the antient inhabitants to possess, were by some lords suffered to be held after the old Welsh custom, the laws of Howel Dda; which was, to pass the same by surrender in court (which they called Côf Lÿs, and Ystÿn Wialen, whereof the word Ystynnol was derived): and where that custom was permitted, there is no deed to be found of any lands before the 27th Henry VIII. when Wales was made shire-ground; but, for such lands as were turned to English tenures, you may find deeds of two, three, or four hundred years past, written in Latin, or French, as was used in England in those days.

The laws of England were brought in by the lord marchers, because the laws of the land were unknown to the English: but they suffered the antient tenants to retain some part of the old Welsh laws; such as the use of gavelkind, for parting lands between the brothers, and the passing of lands by surrender in court. And for this, in many lordships, there is a Welsh court for the Welshmen, called Welchrie; and another for the English, called Englishrie. In some lordships the lands were divided by gavelkind, but passed by feoffments; from whence comes English tenure, and Welsh dole: in Welsh, Cyfraith Saes-nig, a Rhan-Cymraig. And the lords had the wardship of all the brethren, as if they had been sisters.

The lords marchers increased in number, till Llewelin ap Griffith, the last prince of Wales, was slain, anno 11 Ed. I; who then took the principality of Wales into his hands, and gave it to Edward II. his son, and made him prince of Wales. Since which time no more lordships marchers could be erected; for the Welsh in general submitted themselves to the kings of England.

Since the principality came to the kings of England, no lord marcher could claim any liberty or prerogative, more than they had before, without a grant.

Edward I. immediately held a parliament at Ruthlan castle; and there ordained laws and officers, to govern Wales after the English manner.

The lordship of Powys had not its original from conquest, as the lordships marchers had; but in this manner:

Griffith, son of Meredith ap Blethyn, lord of Powŷs, seeing the king of England, and English lords, preparing themselves to conquer Wales, did, in discretion and policy, submit himself to Henry I. and yielded to hold his lordship of the king of England in chief, as the lords marchers did, and to do the king the like service; and thereupon was suffered to hold the same to him and his heirs; and was created lord Powŷs by the said Henry I. and made baron of the parliament of England.

His descendant, Hawŷs Gadarn, fell to be the king of England's ward, by reason of the alteration of the tenure in capite; who gave her in marriage to a valiant gentleman of his, named John Charlton. And so the lordship of Powŷs came to the possession of the English lords. (Mowthwy, and others, did the same.) These (with the lords marchers) held their lordships of the kings in chief, and not of the princes of Wales.

The lord of Powŷs thus submitting himself to the king of England, the comots in that lordship continue whole and entire to this day; and there is a court baron in every one of them. But the lords marchers, to reward those that assisted them in their conquests, gave them divers manors; and so divided the comots into several parts, and erected a court-baron in each. The comots were six; Careinion, Mechan uwch-Coed, Mechan is-Coed, Mochnant, Llannerch hâdol, and Ystrad-marchell.

The like may be found in the counties of Anglesey, Caernarvon, Merioneth, Flint, Carmarthen, and Cardi- gan; where the antient comots remain entire, without alteration; and retain their antient names and bounds, and keep the same courts. The reason is, because they were not conquered by the lords marchers, but continued in the hands of the princes of Wales, till Llewelin, the last prince, was slain by Edward I.

It appears by antient record that the lordship of Bromefield and Yale, antiently called Dinas Brân, being the chief castle of the lordship, came to the possession of English lords, as follows:

Emma, daughter to lord Audley, and widow to Griffith ap Madog, lord of Bromefield and Yale, Chirk, Nantheudwy, Maelor, and other lands, parcel of antient Powys, having four sons, between whom their father's inheritance was divided; strife grew between her and her husband's kindred about the custody of her sons: they fearing, that if the sons should be brought up by the mother in England, they would become English; and rather incline to the king of England, than to the princes of Wales. But the mother getting into her possession the two eldest, Madog and Llewelin; the first having to his part Bromefield and Yale, and the other, Chirk and Nantheudwy; and not being able to keep them to herself, nor to remain in quiet upon her jointure, she delivered her sons to Edward I. shewing that by right they were his wards, because their ancestors had formerly made their submission to the kings of England. The king took them to his ward; and committed Madog, the eldest, to the care of John earl

Warren; and Llewelin to Roger Mortimer, third son to Ralph lord Mortimer, of Wigmore. The two guardians having the sons and their lands in their custody, earl Warren built the castle of Holt in Bromefield, and Roger Mortimer the castle of Chirk, and placed garrisons of English in each, to defend the country from the Welsh. And the wards<sup>a</sup> dying shortly after, without issue, the said guardians still kept the lands, and obtained grants of the king to hold the same, 10th of Edward I.; only the castle of Hope, and lands thereto belonging, were reserved to the king in earl Warren's grant. The antient rent of Bromefield and Yale was 730*l.* a year.

Emma being molested in her jointure, because she had delivered her sons to the king, and so procured the coming of those lords to build the castles Bromefield and Chirk, she desired the king to take Maelor, her jointure, and to give her lands in England for it; which the king did, and so got into possession of Maelor Saesnaeg, and held the same ever after; not suffering any of the heirs to have it, pretending that they were rebels against him.

No lord marcher was without a castle, and a sufficient garison to suppress such of the Welsh as should annoy the king's subjects; and therefore all castles had towns close to them, inhabited by the English. And, by 4 Henry IV. c. 32, it is enacted, that castles and walled towns in Wales should be possessed by valiant Englishmen, strangers to the seigniories.

<sup>a</sup> The melancholy fate of these infants is described in vol. i. p. 267, of this work. Ed.

The charters of those towns give great liberty to the English; but no Welshman might be a burghess, or purchase any land therein; see 2 Henry IV. c. 12. and 20. It was also enacted, that no Welshman should have any castle or fortress, saving such as was in the time of Edward I. except bishops and temporal lords.

The more to encourage the English to conquer Wales, the kings of England created them peers of the realm, by the name of lords baron of the places they conquered. Their number once was twenty-one; but now are reduced to one, viz. Abergaveny, who is the first lord baron of England. The rest lost their name and place, by coming either to the crown, or to lords who had other places and titles in parliament. The castles in Wales were about 143.

The Welsh submitted to Henry VII. because he was paternally descended from their princes: and his son, Henry VIII. made several statutes for the future government of them, anno 27.

Lords marchers seized on the goods of their tenants who died intestate.

All the lordships marchers have lost their antient jurisdictions and authorities, which were the common signs whereby they were known; so that it is now a doubt which were such lordships. But they may be still known by several tokens.

1. There can be no lordship marcher but such as was subdued before the death of Prince Llewelin.

2. Such lordship must be held of the king in chief, and not of the principality of Wales.

3. It must have been in antient time the inheritance of some English lord.

4. If any suit arose about the title, it was to be pleaded at common law, in Westminster-Hall; and there were fines levied of those lordships, and none other in Wales.

5. The escheator of the marches of Wales did in antient time enquire of the tenure, and find office post mortem of the lord; and that by writ out of the chancery of England. And as those lordships were not in any shire in England, and the king had no escheators to enquire of the tenure of them, the same was laid on the escheator of the next English shire. And such escheator had the charge, care, and survey of all lordships marches that were holden of the king. And such escheators was to go into any lordship marcher in Wales, and swear an inquest, and find an office after the death of the lord, and enquire of the tenure and value of the lordship.—N.B. All offices of other manors, that were holden of the king, as of his principality, were found, by virtue of writs out of the king's exchequer, of Caernarvon, or Chester, for North Wales; and Carmarthen, or Cardigan, for South Wales; and out of Pembroke, for lands in that earldom.

6. These lords, by stat. 24 Henry VIII. c. 9, have the penalty for killing of wainlings, and for non-appearance at their courts; and, by stat. 26 Henry VIII. c. 4, and 27, c. 26, they have the forfeiture of common mainprize, recognizances, mizes; power to keep court-barons and court-leets; and to have waifs, strays, infangthefe, outfangthefe, treasure-trove, deodands, goods and chattels of felons, persons condemned, and outlawed; and also wreck de mere, wharfage, and custom of strangers.

From the river Tifi, in South Wales, to the river Conwy, in North Wales, there was no lordship marcher; but all the country remained wholly to the princes of Wales, until the principality came to the crown by Prince Llewelin's death.

As the river Severn was the antient limit between Wales and England, a doubt hath arisen, why all the land that is over that river, viz. all Herefordshire, and so much as is part of Gloucestershire, Worcestershire, and Shropshire, had not been lordships marchers, as the rest of Wales was, that was won since the Conquest.

The reason is this. All Herefordshire, and those parts of the other counties, were won from the Welsh in, or shortly after, the time of Offa king of Mercia. The Welsh were expelled thence, the country was new planted with Englishmen; and this was long before the dividing of England into shires. The same was annexed to the kingdom of Mercia; and so, as part of that kingdom, it came to the hands of king Alfred, who first divided England into shires. He finding those countries subdued, and the Welsh expelled, divided them with the rest on the other side Severn. He added part to Gloucestershire, part to Worcestershire, and part to Shropshire: and made Herefordshire a shire of itself.

Here lies the difference between conquering of Wales by the Saxons and the Normans.

So much of Wales as the Saxon kings won, they did it at their own charge, and for their own use; and did not suffer their subjects to deal therein. But the Norman conqueror, contenting himself with the realm of England, did not bend his forces against Wales more than he was forced to do, by their invading of his people and country; and he, and his successors, thought it better policy to give to the nobility such parts of Wales as they could conquer.

That Herefordshire was not won since the Conquest, appears from the lordship of Urchinfield; which is antient demesne-lands; such as is not to be found in England, but what is in the possession of its kings before the Conquest. See Silas Taylor, of Urchinfield, in his history of Gavelkind, p. 106: and Humphrey Llwyd, in his Fragment of the Description of Wales; his Latin book, p. 52, first edition; English translation, p. 63: whose words, as Bryan Twyne, translates, are Gwyr Reunwe makes one of the six states, that met at the mouth of the river Dyvi, to chuse Maelgwyn Gwynedd king, about the year 560. P. 74, of his Breviary of Britain.

Not far from thence, viz. Lamstre, or Llanlieni, is the antient city Henfford, standing upon Wye, or more truly Gwy; in old time called Ferleg, now Hereford.

Towards Severn are Malvern hills; and in the corner between Severn and Wye, not far from the town of Ross, is that renowned wood, which from the Danes, is called the forest of Dean.

These regions, with all Herefordshire beyond Wye, before they were possessed by the English, were termed, in British, Euryenwe; and the inhabitants, Eurnwyr: of which there remains somewhat in the word Urchinfield. The Welsh called it Erynig, and afterwards Ergenel; and no marvel, since the lest portion thereof retains now the name of Powys.

It appears by some records in the Tower,

1. That King Edward I. anno 11, (when he slew Prince Llewelin, and thereby got possession of the principality of Wales) being at Aberconwy, and fearing that there would be a scarcity of victuals, wrote to the officers of all the good towns and countries in South Wales (that were subdued by the lords marchers,) that they should cause victuals to be brought out of those parts to Montgomery, in Quindena Paschæ next following, to furnish the king's army. In this manner:

Ballivis mercatoribus et probis hominibus de - Swansea.

This is the chief town of the lordship of Gower.

Majori, ballivis, probis hominibus, et mercatoribus de - - - - - Bristol.

Ballivis, &c. de - - - - - Cardiff.

The chief town of Glamorgan.

Ballivis, &c. de - - - - - Strongoule.

The chief town of Netherwent in Monmouthshire.

Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Haverford.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Pembroke.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Thalgarn.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	S<sup>to</sup> Claro.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Kemys.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Kilgaran.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Caerleon.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Caermardŷn.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Cardigan.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Brecknock.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Kydwely.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Uske.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Lanstephan.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Austedŷn.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Monmouth.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Bergavenŷ.
Ballivis, &amp;c. de	-	-	-	-	-	Blenllewyny.

Ranulph, monk of Chester, saith (l. 7. c. 38. fol. 379.) that Prince Llewelin was slain about the feast of St. Lucy.

2. That King Edward II. in his wars against Robert de Bruce, king of Scotland, wrote to these lord marchers, to send to his aid a certain number of men, there mentioned, out of their several lordships. His letters patent are dated June 18, anno 3 Edward II.

The same king, in the same year, writes to those lords, to abate a certain number of their men; because he did not want them.

King Edward III. fearing the invasion of the Scots, writes to the lords marchers, to have the sea-coast watched, the men of the country armed, their castles strengthened and furnished, and themselves to act as lieutenants in their several lordships. Dat. apud Berewicum super Twedam, Jun. 24, anno regni 10.

And he appoints William de la Zouch de Mort. Mari, and Gilbert Talbot (his justices of South Wales) to be captains and leaders of the said lords and their people against the Scots, if they should invade those parts.

N.B. The king did not write to any part of the six shires which were the principality of Wales; but only to such parts as were subdued by the lords marchers; who held their lordships immediately of the king. The king had men out of the principality-lands, to serve him in those wars; but the commissions are not to be found among the King's records in the Tower. For the prince of Wales (who then held the principality) wrote for men out of the principality, to serve his father in his wars.

The records of this remain among the prince's records; and are not to be found among the records in the Tower.

N<sup>o</sup>. IV.

ACCOUNT OF SIR JEFFERY SHAKERLEY.

Vol. i. p. 392.

“ THE heath upon which Sir Marmaduke Langdale was drawn up, carries the name of Rowton Heath; a mile beyond which, in the London road from Chester, is another heath, called Hatton Heath. The order which Sir Marmaduke had received from the king, was only to beat Poyntz back. Sir Marmaduke performed the same effectually; for having marched his men over Holt Bridge undiscovered by the enemy, who had taken the out-works and suburbs of the city on the east side thereof, and Poyntz coming in a marching posture along the narrow lane between Hatton Heath and Rowton Heath, Sir Marmaduke having lined the hedges, fell upon him, and killed a great many of his men; and having so done, ordered colonel Shakerley, who was best acquainted with that country, to get the next way he could to the king (who lodged then at Sir Francis Gamull's house, in Chester) and acquaint him, that he had obeyed his orders in beating Poyntz back, and to know his majesty's further pleasure. The colonel executed his orders with better speed than could be expected; for he galloped directly to the river Dec, under Huntingdon House, got a wooden tub (used for slaughtering of swine) and a batting-staff (used for batting of coarse linen) for an oar, put a servant into the tub with him, and in this desperate manner swam over the river, his horse swimming by him (for the banks were very steep, and the river very deep) ordered his servant to stay there with the tub for his return, and was with the king in little more than a quarter of an hour after he had left Sir Marmaduke, and acquainted the king, that if his Majesty pleased to command further orders to Sir Marmaduke, he would engage to deliver them in a quarter of an hour; and told the king of the expeditious method he had taken, which saved him the going nine or ten miles about, by Holt Bridge (for the boats at Eaton were then made useless); but such delays were used by some about the king, that no orders were sent, nor any sally made out of the city by the king's party, till past three o'clock afternoon, which was full six hours after Poyntz had been beaten back; and so Poyntz having all that time for his men to recover the fright they had been put into in the morning, Poyntz rallied his forces, and with the help of the parlement forces who came out of the suburbs of the city to his assistance (upon whom the king's party in the city might then successfully have fallen) put all those of the king's to the rout, which was the loss of the king's horse, and of his design to join Montross in Scotland, who was then understood to be in a good condition.

“ This is what my father, the said colonel Shakerley (afterwards Sir Geffrey Shakerley) hath often declared in my hearing; and since no mention is made of him in all this history* (though he faithfully served the king in all the wars, was personally engaged in almost all the field battles for the king, sold part of his estate to support that service, and was for many years sequestered of all the rest), I thought it my duty, as his eldest son and heir, to do that justice to his memory, to insert this here, under my hand, that it may be remembered to posterity.

“ PETER SHAKERLEY.”

* Meaning Clarendon's History of the Rebellion; this account being written by Peter Shakerley esq. in one of the blank leaves.

N° V.

EPITAPH ON COLONEL ROBINSON IN GRESFORD CHURCH.

Vol. i. p. 392.

H. S. J.

JOHANNIS ROBINSON

Qui,

Tribunus CAROLI MARTYRIS, fortunas ejus (hoc est Ecclesiam Monarchiamque) sustinebat strenuè.

Rege cadente

CAROLUM exulem non deseruit exul, cum reduce redux.

Apud GWERSYLT,

Ubi omnia sua a rebelli manu direpta reliquerat,
Ædificijs ab eadem eleganter constructis gavisus est.

Ab uxore MARGARITA, Filia EDWARDI NORRIS
de SPEAK in Com. Pal. LANCAST. Arm.

GULIELMUM, JOHANNEM, MARGARITAM, & JANAM, suscepit prolem.

Corpus e meliori licet luto compositum, vulneribus tamen pronis

fractum pariter ac honestatum,

Animam ad Cœlum aspirantem,

ultra Annum ætat. 65, retinere non valens,

Martij 15<sup>o</sup> reddidit. Æræ Christianæ MDCLXXX.

N° VI.

IMPRECATION OF EDWARD BROUGHTON, ESQ.

Vol. i. p. 393.

“ I EDWARD BROUGHTON, for love, in y<sup>e</sup> presence of y<sup>e</sup>
great God of heaven and earth, who knows the secrets of all hearts, and the sincerity of mine at this time, I doe, upon premeditation, and not rashly, implore the God of spirits to power down his vengeance upon mee and my posterity for ever, not in any ordinary manner, but in the highest nature, in giving the divell power over our soules and bodyes, and that we consume upon the earth, rott away alive, and be damned; and y<sup>t</sup> my name and ʒson may stinck upon earth, and molest y<sup>e</sup> nostrills of men; & that I may be a fearfull spectacle to all ʒfidous men; and that I may never walk upon the earth, but with dreadfull hideous shapes about me, & terrified conscience; & that I may linger & not die, but, as Cain, may have a mark sett upon me that men may shun me; & that I may outlive all my posterity; & that they may be all extinct & damn'd; & that the divell may have a good tytle to my body and soule; & take possession on me heare on earth, & carry me away alive; and that I may never appeare before God, but to receive y<sup>e</sup> dreadful sentence, Deʒt from me, you cursed, into everlasting fire, to be tormented by the divell and his angells.

Observe, this part is but to usher the rest—

“IF I do not utterly forbear all rash swearing, and all maner of drinking, and all manner of debauchery whatsoever; or if ever I am guilty of finding fault with any thing my intended wife shall doe or say; or if ever I undertake any business, or any thing, how great a concern soever, or small, without the knowledge, assent, consent, advice of Mary Weeks, my intended wife, and is to be

Mary Broughton when this shall effect; or if shee shall make any request unto me in her life-time, it shall be of force never to be violated by me, although I surviving her, concerning body & soule, life or fortune, children or friends, how unreasonable soever; or if there shall happen any difference betwixt her & me, as there hath been betwixt me and my first wife, then, if I am the cause of it, lett these and all the plagues imaginable fall on me, and all the plagues God can inflict; or if shou'd arise any quarrell, & shee the only cause, yet, when I remember hereof, or shee these vows, I most heartily pass by, forgive, & endeavour to pacifie, & use all the art imaginable to please here, & if she could impose more, I wou'd most willingly doo it; or else may all those plagues, if there were greater curses or imprecacions, I heartily pray they may all be powered downe, as the rain fall on the thirsty ground, and upon my posterity for ever: & this I doe heartily & voluntarily, & with serious consideration & premeditation, having taken a long time to consider this; and now most readily signe itt with my owne hand, & seal it with my own seale.

“EDWARD BROUGHTON.”

April 12<sup>o</sup> 1660.

N° VII.

OF OWEN GLYNDWR. Vol. ii. p. 2.

THE name of Owen Glyndwr's father was Gryffydd Fychan; of his mother, Elena, of royal blood, and from whom he afterwards claimed the throne of Wales. She was eldest daughter of Thomas ap Llewelyn ap Owen, by his wife Elinor Goch, or Elinor the red, daughter and heiress to Catherine, one of the daughters of Llewelyn last prince of Wales, and wife to Philip ap Ivor of Iscoed. She probably was concealed by some friend on the death of her father, otherwise the jealousy of Edward, about the succession, would have made her share the fate of her sister Gwenllian, who, perforce, took the veil in the convent of Shaftesbury.

Writers vary in the account of the day of the birth of Glyndwr. One manuscript fixes it on the 28th of May 1354: that preserved by Lewis Owen places the event five years earlier; for the year 1349, says he, was distinguished by the first appearance of the pestilence in Wales, and by the birth of Owen Glyndwr.

Heroes are often introduced into the world by some strange phænomenon, that presages their future celebrity, or the happiness or misery they were to bring upon their country; but it is probable that their course is finished, before superstition invents the tale, and adapts it to their actions. Holinshed relates one on this occasion, correspondent to a blemish from which we could wish to clear the character of our countryman. His cruelty was foretold at his nativity, by the marvellous accident of his father's horses being found standing that night in the stables up to their bellies in blood. Shakespear omits this circumstance; but, in his spirited character of Owen, puts these beautiful lines into his mouth, finely descriptive of the vain-glory and superstition of the old British chieftain.

At my birth

The front of heav'n was full of fiery shapes;
The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds
Were strangely clamorous in the frighted fields:
These signs have mark'd me extraordinary,
And all the courses of my life do shew,
I am not in the roll of common men.

His bard, Jolo Goch, gives him incense of a far superior kind; and I fear the poet's ardor to celebrate his patron, carried him to the borders of blasphemy; for in his Cowydd y Seren, or Poem of the star, he describes three that appeared to mark three great events; for, to the star which foretold the birth of our SAVIOUR, he adds another which presaged that of Arthur; and a third which marked the great deeds of Glyndwr, in 1402, the meridian of his glory<sup>a</sup>.

He appears to have had a liberal education. His ambition overcame the prejudices of his country against the English; and determined him to seek preferment among them. He entered himself in the inns of court, and studied there, till he became a barrister. It is probable that he quitted his profession; for we find, that he was appointed scutiger, or squire of the body, to Richard II. whose fortunes he followed to the last; was taken with him in Flint castle; and, when the king's household was dissolved, retired, with full resentment of his sovereign's wrongs, to his patrimony in Wales. I judge that he was knighted before the deposition of his master; for I find him among the witnesses in the celebrated cause between Sir Richard le Scrope and Sir Robert le Grosvenour, about a coat of arms, under the title of Sir Owen de Glendore. His brother also appears there by the name of Tudor de Glendore. This cause lasted three years, and ended in 1389<sup>b</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> Cowydd y Seren, a Ymddangoses mis mawrth, B.A. 1402.

JOLO GOCH, the celebrated poet of this period, resided here for some time. He came on a pressing invitation from Owen; who, knowing the mighty influence of this order of men over the antient Britons, made his house, as Jolo says, a sanctuary for bards. He made them the instruments of his future operations, and to prepare the minds of the people against the time of his intended insurrection. From Jolo I borrow the description of the seat of the chieftain, when it was in full splendor. He compares it, in point of magnificence, to Westminster abbey; and informs us, that it had a gatehouse, and was surrounded with a moat.

That within were nine halls, each furnished with a wardrobe; I imagine, filled with the cloaths of his retainers, according to the custom of those days.

<sup>b</sup> Collins's Peerage, vii. 507.

Near the house, on a verdant bank, was a wooden house, supported on posts, and covered with tiles. It contained four apartments, each subdivided into two, designed to lodge the guests.

Here was a church, in form of a cross, with several chapels.

The seat was surrounded with every conveniency for good living; and every support to hospitality: a park, warren, and pigeon-house; a mill, orchard, and vineyard; and fish-pond, filled with pike and gwyniads. The last introduced from the lake at Bala.

A heronry, which was a concomitant to the seat of every great man, supplied him and his guests with game for the sport of falconry.

A place still remains, that retains the name of his park. It extends about a mile or two beyond the site of his house, on the left hand of the valley.

The vestiges of the house are small. The moat is very apparent: the measurement of the area it inclosed, is forty-six paces by twenty-six. There is the appearance of a wall on the outside, which was continued to the top of a great mount, on which stood the wooden house. On the other side, but at a greater distance, I had passed by another mount of the same kind, called Hêndom; which probably might have had formerly a building similar to that described by the bard. This, perhaps, was the station of a guard, to prevent surprize or insult from the English side°. He had much to apprehend from the neighboring fortress of Dinas Brân, and its appendages, possessed by the earl of Arundel, a strenuous supporter of the house of Lancaster.

The bard speaks feelingly of the wine, the ale, the braget, and the white bread; nor does he forget the kitchen, nor the important officer the cook; whose life (when in the royal service) was estimated by our laws at a hundred and twenty-six cows<sup>d</sup>. Such was the hospitality of this house, that the place of porter was useless; nor were locks or bolts known. To sum up all, no one could be hungry or dry in Sycharth, the name of the place.

The bard pays all due praise to the lady of the house, and her offspring.

A Gwraig orau o'r gwragedd,
Gwynn y myd, o'i Gwin a'i medd.
Merch eglur, Llin marchawglyw,
Urddol, hael, o reiol ryw.
A'i blant, a ddeuant bob ddau
Nythod tég o bennaethau!

His wife, the best of wives!
Happy am I in her wine and metheglin.
Eminent woman of a knightly family,
Honorable, beneficent, noble.
His children come in pairs;
A beautiful nest of chieftains.

The lady whom he thus celebrates, was Margaret daughter of Sir David Hanmer of Hanmer, in the county of Flint, one of the justices of the king's bench, by appointment of Richard II. in 1383, and knighted by him in 1387°. Her nuptials were previous to her father's promotion; for it is certain that some of the daughters were married, and his sons grown to men's estate, before Glyndwr appeared in arms in the year 1400. They followed him into the field, and commanded under him. It is probable that most of them fell gloriously in battle. Mr. Browne Willis, indeed, says, that on their father's death, they fled into Ireland; that one of them settled in Dublin, and took the name of Baulf<sup>t</sup>, or the strong; and was ancestor to a reputable family in that city.

° Since the publication of the first edition, many of these vestiges have been ploughed up, or otherwise destroyed.

<sup>d</sup> Leges Walliæ.

He matched his daughters into considerable families.

His eldest, Isabel, to Adam or Adda ap Jorwerth Ddu.

His second, Elizabeth, or as some say Alicia, was married to Sir John Scudamore of Ewjas, and Holm-Lacy, in the county of Hereford.

Jonet, to John Crofts of Croft Castle, in the same county.

Lord Grey of Ruthyn took, through necessity, Jane, after he was made prisoner by her father, who forced him into the alliance.

His youngest daughter, Margaret, was married to Roger Monnington of Monnington, in the county of Hereford, towards the borders of Brecknockshire. The estate still continues in the name and family. I have had the pleasure of seeing at my house two ladies, owners of the place, direct descendants from the daughter of Glyndwr.

° Collin's Baronets, 1720, ii. p. 235.

<sup>t</sup> Hist. of St. Asaph Cathedral, 61.

His illegitimate issue were, his son Jevan; a daughter, married into the house of Givernan; another, named Mjfanwy, to Llewelyn ap Adda of Trefor; and Gwenllian, to Philip ap Rys of St. Harmon in Radnorshire.

Lewis Glyn Cothi, a bard of the time of Henry VI. speaks in high terms of her father Glyndwr:

Ei Thad oedd dwysawg cadarn,
A holl Gymru fu'n ei farn.

Her father was a potent prince,
All Wales was in his council.

I must not omit notice of a mistake of the English historians, who mention the marriage of another daughter of Glyndwr to Edmund earl of March. This, they assert, was also effected by force, after the earl became his prisoner: but it does not appear that he ever was Glyndwr's captive; or March had any other wife than Anne<sup>g</sup>, daughter to Edmund earl of Stafford; besides, the Welsh histories are totally silent on that head.

Such was the state of the domestic affairs of Glyndwr at the change of government in 1399. His resentment against the usurper was whetted by wrongs public and private: by the murder of the unhappy Richard, to whom he was strongly attached as a personal favorite; and by the strong partiality the Welsh had for their late king.

In the very first year of the new reign, he experienced the frowns of the court. Reginald lord Grey of Ruthyn, taking advantage of the deposition of Richard, instantly seized on a certain common, called Croeseu, which Glyndwr, in a former reign, had recovered from him by course of law. Owen sought justice without having recourse to violence: he laid his case before parlement: but his suit was dismissed without redress.

<sup>g</sup> Vincent's Discoverie, &c. 329.

This insult was aggravated by another injury. When Henry went on his expedition against the Scots, Owen was to have been summoned, among other barons, to attend the king with his vassals. The writ for that purpose was entrusted to Reginald<sup>b</sup>, who designedly neglected to deliver it till the time was nearly elapsed, and it became impossible for him to obey. Reginald returned to the king and misrepresented the absence of Owen as an act of wilful disobedience; and by this piece of treachery, took possession of all his land; and, under pretence of forfeiture, invaded such parts of Glyndwr's estates as lay adjacent to his own.

The danger of driving into desperate measures a person of his interest, spirit, and abilities, was foreseen by John Trevor bishop of St. Asaph, who advised more temperate proceedings; adding, that Owen was by no means a despicable enemy; and that the Welsh would certainly be provoked into a general insurrection. His advice was rejected, and he was told there could be no fear about such a bare-footed rabble<sup>i</sup>.

It does not appear that Glyndwr, till this period, had any settled design of flinging off the English yoke. Ambition now came in, and joined with his revenge. He revolved in his mind his own genealogy: he derived himself from the antient race of British princes; and apparently laying aside all sense of private wrong, made open clame to the throne of Wales. To encourage his countrymen, strongly attached to the prophecies of antient times, he reminded them of those of Merlin and other sages. His bards set before them the great qualities of their leader; and taught them to expect from his valor and conduct, the liberation of antient Britons from the galling weight of the Saxon yoke. His chief bard, Gryffydd Llwyd, after regretting his absence, chaunts his praise, and predicts the success of thə war. The Cowydd, or poem, begins thus in the original:

<sup>b</sup> Vita Ricardi, ii. 171.

<sup>i</sup> Leland's Collect. i. 310.

Eyr digrif afrifed,
OWAIN, &c.

The reader will receive it agreeably paraphrased by a bard of 1773.

I.

CAMBRIA's princely eagle, hail!
Of Gryffydd Vychan's noble blood!
Thy high renown shall never fail,
Owain Glyndwr, great and good!
Lord of Durdwy's fertile vale,
Warlike, high-born Owain, hail!
Durdwy, whose wide-spreading streams,
Reflecting Cynthia's midnight beams,
Whilom led me to thy bower;
Alas! in an unguarded hour!
For high in blood, with British beverage hot,
My awful distance I forgot;
But soon my generous chief forgave
The rude presumption of his slave.

2.

But leave me not, illustrious lord!
 Thy peaceful bow'r, and hospitable board
     Are ill exchang'd for scenes of war,
     Tho' Henry calls thee from afar.
 My prayers, my tears were vain;
 He flew like lightning to the hostile plain.
     While with remorse regret and woe,
     I saw, the god-like hero go;
     I saw with aching heart,
     The golden beam depart.
 His glorious image in my mind
 Was all that Owain left behind.
     Wild with despair, and woe-begone, }
     Thy faithful bard is left alone, }
     To sigh, to weep, to groan! }

3

Thy sweet remembrance, ever dear,
 Thy name, still usher'd by a tear,
     My inward anguish speak;
 How could'st thou, cruel Owain, go,
 And leave the bitter streams to flow
     Down Gryffydd's furrow'd cheek ?
 I heard (who has not heard thy fame ?)
 With extasy I heard thy name
 Loud echo'd by the trump of war,
 Which spoke thee brave, and void of fear;
     Yet of a gentle heart possess'd,
     That bled within thy generous breast,
     Wide o'er the sanguine plain to see
     The havock of hostility.

4.

Still with good omens may'st thou fight,
 And do thy injur'd country right!
 Like great Pendragon* shalt thou soar,
 Who bade the din of battle roar,

* The omen alluded to was a star and fiery dragon; which, according to the interpretation of Merlin, predicted the reign of UTHER, afterwards sur-named Pen-Dragon, from having caused two golden dragons to be made,

What time his vengeful steel he drew
 His brother's grandeur to renew,
     And vindicate his wrongs;
 His gallant actions still are told
 By youthful bards, by Druids old,
     And grateful Cambria's songs.

5.

On sea, on land, thou still didst brave
 The dangerous cliff and rapid wave;
 Like Urien, who subdu'd the knight,
 And the fell dragon put to flight,
     Yon moss-grown fount beside;
 The grim, black warrior of the flood,
 The dragon, gorg'd with human blood,
     The water's scaly pride.
 Before his sword the mighty fled:
 But now he's number'd with the dead.
 Oh! may his great example fire
 My noble patron to aspire
 To deeds like his! impetuous fly,
 And bid the Saxon squadrons die:
 So shall thy laurel'd bard rehearse
 Thy praise in never-dying verse;
 Shall sing the prowess of thy sword,
 Beloved and victorious lord!

6.

In future times thy honor'd name
 Shall emulate brave Urien's fame!
 Surrounded by the numerous foe,
 Well didst thou deal th' unequal blow.
     How terrible thy ashen spear,
     Which shook the bravest heart with fear,
     Yon hostile towers beneath!
 More horrid than the lightning's glance,
 Flash'd the red meteors from thy lance,
     The harbinger of death.

one of which he presented to the cathedral of Winchester, the other he carried along with him in his wars; or, what is more likely, wore by way of crest on his helmet. His son Arthur adopted the same. Vide Jeffrey of Monmouth, 254. 257. 283.

Dire, and more dire, the conflict grew;
 Thousands before thy presence flew;
 While borne in thy triumphal car,
 Majestic as the god of war,
 Midst charging hosts unmov'd you stood,
 Or waded thro' a sea of blood.

7.

Immortal fame shall be thy meed,
 Due to every glorious deed;
 Which latest annals shall record,
 Beloved and victorious lord!
 Grace, wisdom, valor, all are thine,
Owain Glyndwr divine!
 Meet emblem of a two-edg'd sword,
 Dreaded in war, in peace ador'd!
 Steer thy swift ships to Albion's coast,
 Pregnant with thy martial host.
     Thy robes are white as driven snow,
     And virtue smiles upon thy brow:
 But terrible in war thou art,
 And swift and certain is the dart
 Thou hurlest at a Saxon's heart. }

8.

Loud fame has told thy gallant deeds;
 In every word a Saxon bleeds.
 Terror and flight together came,
 Obedient to thy mighty name:
 Death, in the van, with ample stride,
 Hew'd thee a passage deep and wide.
 Stubborn as steel, thy nervous chest.
 With more than mortal strength's possess'd;
     And every excellence belongs
     To the bright subject of our songs.

9.

Strike then your harps, ye Cambrian bards!
 The song of triumph best rewards
 An hero's toils. Let Henry weep
 His warriors wrapt in everlasting sleep;
     Success and victory are thine,
     Owain Glyndwr divine!

Dominion, honor, pleasure; praise,
 Attend upon thy vigorous days!
 And when thy evening sun is set,
 May grateful Cambria ne'er forget
 Thy noontide blaze; but on thy tomb
 Never fading laurels bloom!

He first appeared in arms in the summer of the year 1400. He naturally directed his attack against the lands of his enemy lord Grey; and immediately recovered what he had unjustly been dispossessed of. As soon as the news reached Henry, he sent lord Talbot and lord Grey to reduce him. They arrived with such speed, that they surrounded his house before he had any notice; but he had the good fortune to escape into the woods. He immediately raised a powerful band of men; and after causing himself to be proclaimed prince of Wales, on the 20th of September, surprised, plundered, and burnt to the ground the town of Ruthyn, at the time a fair was held there. After which he retired to his fastnesses among the mountains. One I imagine to have been of great strength, surrounded by a vast rampart of stones, near Corwen, called Caer Drewyn.

Henry, determined to suppress this revolt in the beginning, marched in person against Owen, and penetrated as far as the isle of Anglesey, putting to the sword all that resisted. He plundered the convent at Lanfues<sup>k</sup>; slew some of the monks, and took the rest away with him; at length set them at liberty, and made restitution to the monastery; but peopled it again with English religious. The monks of Llanfaes had been Franciscans; an order who were firm adherents to the late prince; and I who, in general, were suspected of promoting the insurrection of Glyndwr, and even of inviting him to invade England. This occasioned a persecution of them, and several<sup>1</sup> were executed on that account. Their intelligence with Glyndwr is very evident from the favor he shewed the order on the taking of Cardiff, in the year 1402; when he burnt the whole town, excepting the street inhabited by the Franciscans<sup>m</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> Leland Collect. i. 311.

The king returned without effecting any material action; for, on his approach, Owen retired among the Snowdon hills<sup>n</sup>.

The proclamation for assembling the forces for this expedition, was dated on the 19th of September, from Northampton, and addressed to the lieutenants of Warwickshire, Leicestershire, and eight other counties; in which all persons capable of bearing arms, within their jurisdiction, were directed to array themselves, and be ready to march to such place as his majesty directed; who acquaints the lieutenants, that he should lie at Coventry on his road to Wales the Monday following<sup>o</sup>.

On the same day he issued out an order to the bailiffs and good people of Shrewsbury, to take proper steps to

<sup>1</sup> Leland's Collect. i. 313.

<sup>m</sup> Ibid.

<sup>n</sup> Holinshed, 519.

<sup>o</sup> Rymer's Fœdera, viii. 159.

secure that important place; and that they should oblige all the Welsh resident in the town, to give security for their loyal behaviour; and in case of refusal, to commit them to prison<sup>p</sup>.

On the eighth of November in the same year, he made a grant of all the estates of Glyndwr, in North and South Wales, to his brother John earl of Somerset<sup>q</sup>; an act as weak as it was irritating: for Owen was so far from any danger of being dispossessed of them, that at this very time he was growing more powerful by the accession of new forces. It is remarkable, that his revenue in money at this period did not exceed three hundred marks; which shewed that his rents in kind must have been very considerable.

But the last public act of this year was conciliating. The king made one endeavour to bring back the Welsh to their allegiance by fair means; and for that end issued a proclamation, on the 30th of November, offering to take under his protection all that would resort to the city of Chester, and there make their submission to his son Henry prince of Wales; after which they should be at liberty to return to their respective homes<sup>r</sup>. Henry was at that time but twelve years of age; so early was he initiated into state affairs; so early appeared those sparks of genius which shone afterwards with such brilliancy.

<sup>p</sup> Rymer, viii. 160.

<sup>q</sup> Idem, 163.

<sup>r</sup> Idem, 167.

1401.

The first half of this year passed without any memorable action. Owen was busied in augmenting his forces, he made considerable levies in Wales; and received continual addition to his strength, by the great resort of his countrymen of all orders, who had gone into England for the sake of education, or to gain a livelihood by different occupations.

The state of Henry's affairs, in respect to the European monarchs, the badness of his title to the crown of England, and the repentance of several of the great men for their disloyalty to their late prince, were circumstances highly in favor of Glyndwr.

Charles VI. of France, father-in-law to the unhappy Richard, prepared to revenge his deposition and murder. The confusion of his own affairs, luckily for Henry, prevented the resentment of the French monarch. He contented himself with receiving back his daughter Isabel, and her paraphernalia; and Henry gladly renewed a truce with him for thirty years.

The Scots taking advantage of his situation, threatened him with invasion. This made it dangerous to engage in a distant war, and obliged him to continue for a considerable time in the central parts of his dominion, to act according to the necessity of events. In respect to the Welsh, he contented himself with issuing out pardons* (at the instance of prince Henry) to all that had appeared in arms in the counties of Caernarvon, Anglesey, and Flint, and the people of Denbigh and Meirionedd; to the inhabitants of Chirkland, Bromfield, and Yale; to the hundred of Oswestry; and to those of Ellesmere and Whittington; which I find were then reckoned parts of Wales. Owen himself, Rys ap Tudor, William ap Tudor, and all such as were in actual custody, or such who should continue in arms, were excepted. The first pardon was given out the 10th of May; the latest the 5th of June, and, as will appear, with some effect.

* Rymer, viii. 181, 182.

Glyndwr's fortune and interest lay, as was before mentioned, both in North and in South Wales. This summer he marched with a hundred and twenty men of arms, and, with great policy, posted himself on Plinlimmon hill, a lofty mountain, the limits of Cardiganshire and Montgomeryshire, admirably adapted for receiving succours from his vassals and friends in each part of the principality. From hence his followers made plundering excursions, and were the terror of all that declined espousing his cause. The county of Montgomery suffered greatly. He sacked the capital town<sup>t</sup>, burnt the suburbs of Pool, and ravaged all the borders. He destroyed the abby of Cwm hir in Radnorshire; took the castle of Radnor, and caused the whole garrison, to the number of three-score, to be beheaded on the brink of the castle-yard<sup>u</sup>. The provocation to this piece of cruelty does not appear.

The Flemings, inhabitants of Ross, Pembroke, and

<sup>t</sup> Leland, Itin. v. 4.

<sup>u</sup> Ibid.

Cardiganshire, suffered so greatly from Glyndwr, that they determined to attempt to remove so troublesome a neighbor. They assembled a body of fifteen hundred men, and made so expeditious a march, as to surround Owen and his forces, at a place called Mynydd Hyddgant, before he had any notice of their approach. They hemmed him in on every side; and, notwithstanding he could make no retreat without great disadvantage, he made a long and manful defence. At length, finding it impossible to subsist in that place, he determined to cut a passage through the enemy, or perish in the attempt. He knew that neither he nor his men were to expect any mercy; so, actuated by despair, they fell furiously on the Flemings, and, after a strong dispute, flung them into great disorder; which Owen taking advantage of, redoubled his attack, and at length put them to flight, leaving two hundred of their party dead on the spot.

This victory added greatly to the reputation of Glyndwr. Multitudes resorted to his standard, and contributed to make him a most formidable enemy.

Henry alarmed at his successes, marched a second time in person. He entered Wales with a great army about the beginning of June<sup>x</sup>, destroyed the abby of Ystrad Eflur in Cardiganshire, and ravaged the country; but was obliged to make a disgraceful retreat, after his forces had suffered greatly by famine, and the great fatigues they continually underwent.

<sup>x</sup> Vita R. II. 174.

The monk of Evesham<sup>y</sup> relates an instance of paternal affection, much to the honour of our country. A Welshman, having made a rash promise to the king to betray Glyndwr, refused afterwards to perform it; and, eagerly stretching out his neck to the headsman, told him to strike, for that he had two sons at that time in the service of his chieftain; therefore would on no account reveal his councils, which would prove so penal to them.

It is probable, that during this expedition Henry found means to corrupt the fidelity of several of the friends of Glyndwr; for we find a free pardon granted to William ap Tudor (a gentleman who had been excepted in the pardon of last year), and to thirty-one principal persons of the country. This is dated from Westminster on the 8th of July<sup>z</sup>.

This defection seemed to have very little effect on the spirit of Glyndwr. He acquired new friends, and such addition of strength, that the king resolved to go again in person against him. He issued out his orders to the sheriffs of Devonshire, and one-and-twenty other counties, to repair with their forces to Worcester<sup>a</sup> on the first of October. Our old historians are silent about the event of this expedition; but Mr. Carte says, that it was as unfortunate as the former. Thus concluded the transactions of this year.

1402.

This year was ushered in with a comet, or blazing-star; which the bards interpreted as an omen favorable to the cause of Glyndwr. ‘And in the iiii yere of Kynges ‘Henric’s reigne ther was a sterre seyn in the firmament

<sup>y</sup> Vita R. II. 174.

<sup>z</sup> Rymer, viii. 209.

<sup>a</sup> Ibid. 225.

 ‘y<sup>t</sup> shewed him self thurgh all the world for di’use token‘ynges y<sup>t</sup> should befall sone after, the which sterre was ‘named and called by Clargie, Stella Comata.’ Caxton’s
Cronclis, printed at St. Albans. It served to infuse spirit into the minds of a superstitious people: the first success of their chieftain confirmed their belief, and gave new vigor to their actions.

Lord Grey was the first who felt the effects of Owen’s power. That nobleman, strongly attached to Henry, and impatient of the injuries which he and his friends received from Glyndwr, raised a considerable army; encountered him; was defeated, and made prisoner. Historians differ about the scene of action. The Welsh lay it on the banks of the Fyrnwy, in the county of Montgomery. The English say that it was in the neighborhood of Ruthyn; and that Owen advancing towards the castle with a party of men, drew his incautious rival into the field, where he fell into an ambush, and was taken, and carried fast bound into confinement, amidst the savage fastnesses of the Snowdon hills<sup>b</sup>. This relation seems probable, not only as the castle of Ruthyn was the chief seat of lord Grey, but a fortress of such strength as to baffle all the attempts of Glyndwr, in the infancy of his insurrection, without having recourse to stratagem.

Lord Grey remained for a long time in captivity, nor did he gain his liberty till he paid the vast sum of ten thousand marks. He was such a personal favorite, that the king, pitying the severity with which he was treated, and admiring the firmness with which he resisted the offers of Glyndwr to make him swerve from his loyalty, issued out a special commission, dated the 10th of October in this year, empowering Sir William de Roos, Sir Richard de Grey, Sir William de Willughby, Sir William de Zouch, John Herny, William Vaus, John Lee, John Longford, Thomas Payne, and John Elustow, to treat with Owen and his council about the ransom. It was agreed to pay six thousand marks on the day of St. Martin<sup>c</sup> following, and to give, as hostages for the payment of the remainder, his eldest son, and some other persons. And, in order to raise the money, Henry gave licence to Robert Braybrook<sup>d</sup> bishop of London, and two others, feoffees of divers lordships for lord Grey, to sell the lordship of Herteleigh in Kent. He also absolved him for six years from the forfeiture of two-thirds of the profits of his Irish estates, usually exacted from such who were non-resident in that kingdom.

<sup>b</sup> Vita Ricardi II. 178.

After this he was set at liberty, and he and his tenants suffered to enjoy their property without molestation. It is probable, that Owen engaged his lordship to observe a neutrality, as another term of redemption. Lord Grey seemed likewise to think it necessary to secure both his people and himself by an alliance with Owen; for no sooner was he released, than he married Jane, third daughter of the furious chieftain. He had no issue by this lady. The match was probably compulsive; at best, political. Some of the English historians pretend that he died in captivity: but that he obtained his liberty, and long survived this treaty, is evident: for in 1409, he was ordered by Henry to his estates, to repel the ravages his father-in-law made on the borders. He even lived to serve in the French wars in the reign of Henry V. and his successor, and died in the year 1440.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>c</sup> Rymer, viii. 279.

<sup>d</sup> Dugdale's Baron, i. 717.

Owen, after securing this potent enemy, began to give a free rein to his revenge; to punish such of his countrymen whom he considered as traitors to the generous cause of freedom, by an unnatural adherence to the English, whose yoke they had borne for such a length of time.

He burnt the houses of Cefn y Fan, and Cesail gyfarch, belonging to Jevan ap Meredydd, a partizan of the house of Lancaster; and to whom, and Meredydd ap Hwlkin Llwyd of Glynllifon, was intrusted (under an English captain) the castle of Caernarvon. This place was so closely blocked up by the friends of Glyndwr, that Jevan happening to die there at that time, it was found necessary to carry his corpse by sea, in order to inter it in the parish church of Penmorfa, on the other side of the county†.

Howel Sele of Nanneu in Meirioneddshire, first cousin to Owen, had a harder fate. He likewise was an adherent to the house of Lancaster. Owen and this chieftain had been long at variance. I have been informed, that the abbot of Cymmer, near Dolgelleu, in hopes of reconciling them, brought them together, and to all appearance effected his charitable design. While they were walking out, Owen observed a doe feeding, and told Howel, who was reckoned the best archer of his days, that there was a fine mark for him. Howel bent his bow, and pretending to aim at the doe, suddenly turned and discharged the arrow full at the breast of Glyndwr, who fortunately had armour beneath his cloaths, so received no hurt. Enraged at this treachery, he seized on Sele, burnt his house, and hurried him away from the place; nor could any one ever learn how he was disposed of, till forty years after, when the skeleton of a large man, such as Howel, was discovered in the hollow of a great oak, in which Owen was supposed to have immured him in reward of his perfidy. The ruins of the old house are to be seen in Nanneu park, a mere compost of cinders and ashes.

<sup>o</sup> Collin's Peerage, ii. 382.

† Hist. Gwedir, 53.

It must be observed, that when Owen was carrying him away, his relation Gryffydd ap Gwyn, of Ganllwyd in Ardudwy, attempted his rescue, but was defeated with the loss of numbers of his men, and of his houses of Berthlwyd and Cefn Coch, which were burnt to ashes.

It was about this period that Owen wreaked his revenge on the ecclesiastics who had favored the cause of the English. His conduct in this instance seems indefensible, for he paid no regard to the most sacred edifices, but sacrilegiously destroyed the cathedrals of Bangor and

St. Asaph, with the episcopal palace, and the canons houses belonging to the latter. He vented, in a particular manner, his resentment against St. Asaph; as the bishop, John Trevor, received his preferment from Richard, yet was so disloyal as to pronounce against his unfortunate master the sentence of deposition, in favor of the usurping Henry; and afterwards to accept an embassy to the court of Spain, to justify Bolingbroke's proceedings to the reigning prince.

Henry considered him as a sufferer in his cause; therefore gave power to the bishops of Hereford, Voltorno, and Bangor, to suffer him to hold in commendam the living of Meifod, with the chapels of Pool and Kegidva, or Guilsfield, in order to support his dignity during the ravage of his diocese<sup>g</sup>.

Trevor returned to England about the time of the destruction of his cathedral. Two years after this, he revolted from Henry, and joined with Glyndwr, to whom he adhered the rest of his days. He appeared in arms with him in the year 1409<sup>h</sup>. In the year following, on the decline of Owen's affairs, he retired to Paris, died, and was buried in the chapel of the infirmary of the abby de St. Victoire, where the following epitaph was inscribed to his memory.

Hic jacet Reverendus in CHRISTO Pater Johannes Episcopus Asaphensis in Wallia, qui obiit A.D. 1410. Die Veneris x mensis Aprilis; cujus anima feliciter requiescat in pace. Amen.

<sup>g</sup> Rymer, viii. 222. 246; the bishop of Voltorno probably acted as the pope's legate.

<sup>h</sup> Rymer, viii. 588.

Glyndwr was pleased to confirm Trevor in his see; but deposed from that of Bangor<sup>i</sup> Richard Younge, for his adherence to the usurper, and kept him in close confinement. Owen also appointed in his room Llewelyn, or, as some call him, Lewis Bifort; whose name is mentioned in 1406, among the chief of the inhabitants fined or outlawed on account of Glyndwr's insurrection in the isle of Anglesey. He afterwards joined with the earl of Northumberland and lord Bardolph, and was taken prisoner in the castle of Bramham Moor, in February 1407-8, when those two noblemen were slain: but the bishop's life was spared, as he was found unarmed<sup>k</sup>.

Henry was alarmed at the successes of Glyndwr, and resolved to march in person against him once more. He issued out writs<sup>l</sup> to the lieutenants of Nottingham and Derby, and to those of thirty-two other counties, dated from the castle of Berkehamstede, June 5th; in which he requires them to assemble the forces of their respective jurisdictions, and to attend him at Lichfield on the 7th of July, in order to suppress this dangerous revolt.

Before the king could assemble his forces, news arrived of the great victory which Glyndwr obtained, on the 22d of June, over Sir Edmund Mortimer. Owen, after the defeat of lord Grey, pursued his resentment against all the chieftains unfavorable to his designs; advanced with his army towards Herefordshire, and the borders of South Wales; and carried fire and sword through the lands of his opponents. None suffered so severely as the vassals and tenants of Edward Mortimer earl of March, a child of ten years of age, who, with his brother Roger, was in the custody of the king at that time. Henry was very sensible of the just title this child had to the crown, being descended from Lionel duke of Clarence, third son to Edward III. His title had even been acknowledged in parlement. This increased the king's apprehensions, and made him consider the misfortunes of that family the strengthening of his own throne.

<sup>i</sup> Willis's Bangor, 84.

<sup>k</sup> Goodwin, 648.

<sup>l</sup> Rymer, viii. 264.

Sir Edmund Mortimer, uncle to this youth, unable any longer to bear the depredations of Owen, collected a large body of his nephew's tenants and retainers out of the county of Hereford, and the adjacent parts, particularly from Melienydd in Radnorshire, and with these marched against the invader. A bloody action ensued on Brynglas, a mountain near Pilleth, a little south-west of Knighton, in Radnorshire. Victory declared in favor of our countryman. Some writers assert, that the archers of Mortimer's army bent their bows against their own party<sup>m</sup>. Another says<sup>n</sup>, that March's Welsh tenants took to flight at the first onset, and occasioned the defeat. The loss chiefly fell on the people of Herefordshire. Eleven hundred fell on the side of Mortimer. 'The 'shamefull villanie used by the Welshwomen towards the 'dead carcasses,' says Holinshed, 'was such as honest 'eares would be ashamed to heare, and continent toongs

<sup>m</sup> Stow, 357.

<sup>n</sup> Vita Ricardi II. 178.

‘ to speak thereof. The dead bodies might not be buried, ‘ without great summes of monie given for libertie to ‘ conveie them awaie°.’

Shakespear flings a fine horror over this dreadful tale, in relating:

When, all athwart there came
 A post from Wales loaden with heavy news:
 Whose worst was, that the noble Mortimer
 Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
 Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken;
 A thousand of his people butchered,
 Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse,
 Such beastly, shameless transformation
 By those Welshwomen done, as may not be,
 Without much shame, re-told or spoken of.

I wish I could exculpate my countrywomen from this heavy charge. It originates from Thomas de Walsingham, an historian who, it must be confessed, wrote within forty years of this event. To his authority I beg leave to oppose that of another antient writer, who ascribes these barbarities to a follower of Glyndwr, one Rees a Gyrech<sup>p</sup>. I flatter myself that this was the case; for, had it been otherwise, it would have been totally unnecessary to discourage the English, by an express law<sup>q</sup>, from marrying with such furies as the Welshwomen were represented to have been.

Many historians pretend, that the young earl of March

<sup>o</sup> Holinshed, 520; who relates it from Walsingham. Those who wish to read the horrid tale, may consult the last, p. 377. Camdeni Script. Angl.

<sup>p</sup> Vita Ricardi II. 178.

<sup>q</sup> Statute 4th Henry IV. c. 34.

was present at this defeat; was made prisoner; and, to ensure his allegiance, was obliged to marry a daughter of Glyndwr. But at this time he endured another species of confinement at Windsor: his uncle commanded the forces of the family, and lost his liberty in the battle. Great instances were made to Henry for leave to ransom him; but the jealous king, rejoicing in the misfortunes of this rival house, suffered him to continue in the power of his enemy; alleging, that Sir Edmund had treacherously flung himself into the hands of Glyndwr.

After this victory, Glyndwr received from all parts of Wales accession of strength. Notwithstanding Henry was indifferent about the fate of the Mortimers, his own safety now required him to act with vigor. The design of assembling his army at Lichfield was laid aside. New writs were issued out, dated the 31st of July. It was resolved to distract the Welsh by three invasions from different quarters. The rendezvous of the first army was to be at Shrewsbury, to be commanded by the king in person; the second at Hereford, to be assembled by Edmund earl of Stafford, Richard earl of Warwick, and the lords Grey, Abergavenny, Audeley, and Berkly; and the third, under the conduct of prince Henry, at Chester. The forces were to be assembled at each place by the 27th of August.*

Owen, assured that these preparations could not take effect till a certain time, gave loose to his resentment, in the beginning of August, against the inhabitants of Glamorganshire, who had sided with the English. He marched into that county, ravaged it on all parts; and, after burning the bishop's castle and the archdeacon's house* at Llandaff, he in the same inroad burnt Cardiff and Abergavenny; and then returned to make head against the English.

* Rymer, viii. 271.

The Scots, at this time, took advantage of the commotions of the Welsh; and, under the command of the great Douglas, invaded England with a body of twelve or thirteen thousand men. It is almost certain, that they acted in concert with Glyndwr. Both nations were united in a common hatred of the English. Both had felt the weight of their power. The Scots meditated their inroad at the very time that Henry had drawn his forces to the borders of Wales, and, as they hoped, left the northern borders unguarded. Henry had intelligence, that it was to take place on the assumption of the blessed Virgin, or the 15th of August; and, in order to defeat it, directed the lieutenant of the county of Lincoln to hasten towards the north, with all the men he could raise.

Henry, during this time, proceeded on his expedition against the Welsh. It does not appear whether the army under his son, and that under the earl of Arundel (on whom the command of the second army was bestowed) made separate diversions into different parts of the country in his favor; or whether he united their forces with his own. The event of his invasion was very unfortunate. Glyndwr, who had too much prudence to hazard a battle against so superior an army, retired to the fastnesses of the mountains, drove away the cattle, and destroyed every means the English had of subsistence. The season proved uncommonly bad; for the very elements seemed to have warred against them. A continued course of storms and rains, with the continual watching against an enemy ever hovering over them, and ready to take every occasion of falling on them from the heights, wasted the army with sickness and fatigue; and obliged the king once more to make a most inglorious retreat.

* Willis's Llandaff, 30, 31.

The English, willing to cover their shame, attributed the cause of their disgrace to the incantations of the British chieftain; 'who,' as an old historian expresses, 'through art magike (as was thought) caused such foule weather of winds, tempest, raine, snow, and haile, to be raised for the annoiance of the king's armie, that the like had not beene heard of.' Perhaps Glyndwr, as well to infuse terror into his foes, as to give his people a more exalted notion of him, might politically insinuate his skill in spells and charms, that they might suppose him aided by more than mortal power. This species of credulity was not only strong at this time, but even continued to more enlightened days.

Owen, by the mouth of Shakespear, speaks thus of his intercourse with the tribe of spirits, and of his skill in the mystic arts of divination:

Where is he living, clipt in with the sea
That chides the banks of England, Wales, or Scotland,
Who calls me pupil, or has read to me?
And bring him out, that is but woman's son,
Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,
Or hold me pace in deep experiments.
I can call spirits from the vasty deep!

The poet, on this occasion, plays finely with the warmth of Glyndwr; and draws from him that characteristic spirit of our country, which is nobly prompt to rise on the appearance, or sometimes even on the very apprehension of insult.

Henry quickly received news from the north, that served to alleviate the ill success of his invasion. The earl of Northumberland, and other northern barons, had assembled their forces to oppose the Scots, then on their return home; overtook them on Holyrood-day, or the 15th of September, on Homeldon hill near Wooler, and gained over them a complete victory. Numbers of the Scotch nobility were slain in the fight; and numbers taken, among whom was their gallant commander Archibald earl of Douglas, styled by his countrymen Tyneman, from the loss of men that attended him in all his conflicts.

This battle was productive of great events; and proved in the end the destruction of the Percy family. It was usual for the prisoners to fall to the share of the victors; and for each person who was fortunate or brave enough to make a captive, to receive the reward of his valor, by having liberty to ransom him, according to his rank or abilities. Henry Percy surnamed Hotspur, had himself, by the fortune of war, been made prisoner by the Scots, and was redeemed according to the antient custom of arms. The victors at this time expected and claimed the same right; but Henry, wishing to detain these illustrious captives, as hostages for the peaceable conduct of the Scottish nation, sent directions to the earl of Northumberland, that he should by no means set them at liberty; but that he should deliver them to him. Henry softened this demand by rewarding Northumberland with a considerable grant of lands on the borders of Scotland<sup>t</sup>; and parlement even sent him a letter of thanks for his good services. Notwithstanding this, the Percies were greatly dissatisfied. Whether their high spirit resented the invasion of the antient title of victors to their prisoners; or whether they were seized with remorse for their disloyalty to their former master; or whether they were actuated by the ambition of becoming independent; or whether all these causes might not co-operate, is not very certain; yet, from this time, they formed their design of flinging off their allegiance to Henry.

A great discontent with his government at this period began to seize the nation. The affection for the murdered Richard revived. So willing were the people to imagine him still alive, that the many reports invented on that subject were greedily swallowed; and a proneness to revolt almost generally appeared.

The first step taken by the Percies, was the release of the Scottish prisoners without ransom. This gained the heart of Douglas; who went home, raised a body of men, and joined in the enterprize.

<sup>t</sup> Rymer, viii. 289.

Sir Edmund Mortimer, from the time of his defeat, was treated with the utmost humanity and respect. Glyndwr politically determined to make use of this important prisoner as an instrument of his ambition, reminded him of the right of his house to the crown of England, and flattered him with the hopes of restoring him to the throne<sup>n</sup> of his ancestors. The Percies, to whom he was allied, had made frequent instances to Henry for his ransom, who, on false and injurious pretences, constantly refused attention to their request; notwithstanding, he never rested till he had procured the enlargement of his favorite, lord Grey.

The Percies now began to extend their views; and to form a confederacy that promised fair to effect another revolution. They entered into an alliance with Glyndwr; obtained the release of Mortimer; and, like the famous triumvirate of Rome, determined to divide the empire between them.

Their place of meeting, the Mutina of those heroes, was at the house of Dafydd Daron, or of Aberdaron, dean of Bangor<sup>x</sup>, son of Evan ap Dafydd ap Gryffydd, descended from Caradoc ap Jestyn, a prince of Wales. He was a man of interest and wealth: entered strongly into their views; and in consequence, in the year 1406, was outlawed for his attachment to them.

<sup>n</sup> Vita Ricardi II. 179.

<sup>x</sup> Willis's Bangor, 122.

Here the three chieftains formed the division of Britain. Sir Edmund Mortimer, in behalf of his nephew the earl of March, took all the country from the Trent and Severn to the eastern and southern limits of the island; Northumberland was to have all the counties north of the Trent; and Glyndwr every thing that lay beyond the Severn westward.

It was on this occasion that Owen, to animate his countrymen, called up the antient prophecy, which predicted the destruction of Henry, under the name of the Moldwarp, cursed of GOD's own mouth. Himself he styled the dragon; a name he assumed in imitation of Uther, whose victories over the Saxons were foretold by the appearance of a star with a dragon beneath, which Uther used as his badge; and on that account it became a favorite one with the Welsh. On Percy he bestowed the title of lion, from the crest of the family; on Mortimer, that of the wolf, probably from a similar reason. And these three were to divide the realm between them.

Glyndwr was now in the meridian of his glory. He assembled the estates of Wales at Machynlleth, a town of Montgomeryshire: he there caused his title to the principality to be acknowledged, and was formally crowned.

At this meeting he narrowly escaped assassination. Among the chieftains, who appeared to support his title, came a gentleman of Brecknockshire, Dafydd Gam, or the one-eyed; a man, says Mr. Carte, who held his estate of the honor of Hereford, who had long been in the service of Bolingbroke, and was firmly attached to his interest. Notwithstanding he had married a sister of Glyndwr, yet such a furious hatred had he conceived to his cause, that he appeared at the assembly with the secret and treacherous resolution of murdering his prince and brother-in-law. Carte says, that he was instigated to it by Henry; but gives no authority for his assertion. Party-zeal, or hopes of reward, probably determined him to so nefarious a deed. He was a fit instrument for the purpose: a man of unshaken courage; which was afterwards put to the proof in the following reign, at the battle of Azincoort. This was the gentleman who was sent to explore the numbers of the enemy before the action; and who informed the king, that there were enough to kill, enough to be taken prisoners, and enough to run away. In that battle, Dafydd, his son-in-law Roger Fychan, and his relation Walter Llwyd, rescued the king, when environed with his foes. They saved his life at the expence of their own, and fell with many mortal wounds. The king, after the victory, approached the place where they lay weltering in their blood; and, in the moment of death, bestowed on them the only reward of their valor which he could confer in that sad time, the honor of knighthood.

But to return to the subject immediately under consideration. The plot of Dafydd against Glyndwr was discovered. He was arrested and imprisoned; and would have met with his merited punishment, if he had not been saved by the intercession of Owen's best friends and warmest partizans<sup>z</sup>. He was pardoned on a solemn promise of adherence to the cause of Glyndwr and his country. It appears that our chieftain did not chuse to rely on his promise; but kept him in close confinement till the year 1412, as will appear in the transactions of of that period.

Glyndwr, as usual, wreaked his vengeance on the lands and dependents of Dafydd Gam; entered his country, and burnt his house; and, while it was burning, calling one of Dafydd's tenants, spoke thus merrily to him in verse; which shews the general turn of our people to the rhyming art:

O gwel di wr coch Cam
Yn ymofyn y Gyrnigwen:
Dywed ei bod hi tan y lan
A nôd y glo ar ei phen.

1403.

Preparations were made with great vigor by all parties. Hotspur, leaving his father ill at Berwick, marched with his forces from the north; and, passing through Cheshire, a county ever affectionate to Richard, was joined there by a numerous party. Percy sent to Owen, to desire he would meet him; but our countryman declined to comply: nevertheless numbers of the Welsh joined Hotspur, and marched with him to Lichfield, carrying the stag, the badge of the late king, as a party distinction. In that city he published his reasons for taking arms against Henry, whom the family had so lately placed on the throne<sup>a</sup>. From hence he led his army towards Shrewsbury; probably because he found himself too weak to attack the usurper; for it seems as if his intention had been to have met him on his march, had Glyndwr joined him with his whole force. Glyndwr, on the other hand, had formed a considerable army in Wales; and Sir Edmund Mortimer raised the vassals of his nephew.

* Wynne's Hist. of Wales, 321.

In the month of March, Henry gave a strong proof of the high opinion he had of his son Henry of Monmouth, afterwards king of England, at this time only fifteen years of age; for by writ, dated from Westminster the 7th of that month, he appoints him his lieutenant for Wales<sup>b</sup> and all the adjacent counties, with full powers to raise men, and to act against the insurgents as he should think proper: to enquire into all treasons; to examine who supplied the rebels with arms or provisions; and to grant pardon to all who would lay down their arms, and give security for their peaceful behaviour.

Having thus provided, as he imagined, for the security of the borders of England on the side of Wales, he began to consider of his march against the Percies. But hearing that Glyndwr<sup>c</sup>, by reason of want of provisions, was preparing to make an inroad into the borders, he issued orders from Westminster, dated June 12th, to the lieutenant of Gloucestershire<sup>d</sup>, to prepare to repel the invasion, with forces he should assemble for that purpose. Henry then made a most expeditious march to Burton upon Trent,

<sup>a</sup> Leland's Col. ii. 312.

<sup>b</sup> Rymer, viii. 291.

<sup>c</sup> Idem, 304.

<sup>d</sup> Idem, 314.

where we find him on the 16th, on his way against the northern rebels<sup>e</sup>. Here he understood that Percy with his army, had advanced towards Shrewsbury, and was preparing to effect a junction with the forces of Glyndwr and Mortimer. He well knew the importance of preventing it from taking place; and directed his march towards that town, as is said, by the advice of the earl of Dunbar, a Scottish nobleman, who had espoused his cause. The dispatch with which the king executed this resolution, saved his crown. Glyndwr, who had assembled his forces at Oswestry, had sent off only his first division, amounting to four thousand men, who behaved with spirit on the day of action<sup>f</sup>; in which fell his brother-in-law Sir Jenkin Hanmer<sup>g</sup>. Henry prevented him from proceeding with the rest, by posting himself between Glyndwr and Shrewsbury, and at the critical time that the northern rebels were about to scale the walls. Percy quitted the attempt; and, after rejecting the offer of peace, attacked the royal army at Battlefield, three miles from the place. He behaved with the spirit worthy of his name; fell valiantly, and with him the hopes of his party. This action happened on the 21st of June. Glyndwr had the mortification of being obliged to remain all the time inactive, at the head of twelve thousand men, at Oswestry. The Welsh historians pass an unjust censure on him for his conduct on this occasion, and blame him for what, it seems, he could not effect. His great oversight appears to me to have been the neglect of attacking Henry immediately after the battle, when the royal forces had sustained a vast loss, and were overcome with fatigue; when his own followers, and the remains of the northern troops, would have formed an army nearly double to that of the king; when Northumberland, now recovered from his illness, was in full march towards him, the army of Mortimer entire, and that of the king constrained to go northward. Glyndwr carried on a marauding war, and plundered the now defenceless marches. The king returned successful from the north to the borders of Wales, determined to chastise the insurgents; but was obliged to desist from his enterprise, for want of money to pay his troops, and provisions to subsist them. He did propose to remedy the first, by seizing on the superfluous wealth of the prelates; but was prevented by the spirit of the archbishop of Canterbury, who boldly declared, that none of his province should be spoiled on any account; which frustrated Henry's intent on Glyndwr. The prelate was afterwards better advised, and made a grant of the tenth towards the king's necessary charges<sup>h</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> Rymer.<sup>f</sup> Holinshed, 523.<sup>g</sup> Collins's Barons, ii. 236, ed. 1720.

Nothing more was done this year than the securing of the Welsh castles, and placing over them persons of known fidelity. The king dates his writ from Worcester, the 8th of September; and, addressing it to Guy Mohun bishop of St. David, at that time keeper of the privy-seal, and treasurer of England, commits to him the custody of the castle of Llangadyn; that of Llanyndoverly to John

<sup>h</sup> Holinshed, 524.

Touchet lord Audley; Laghern to Sir Henry le Scrope; Crickhowel to John Pauncefort; Tretour to James Berkeley; Abergavenny and Harald Ewyas to Sir William Beauchamp; Goderych to Sir Thomas Nevil de Furnivale; Erdesley to Sir Nicholas Montgomery; Carleon and Usk to Sir Edward Charlton of Powys; Caerphili and Gwialacy to Constantia lady Despenser; Menerbere to Sir John Cornwall; Payne Castle and Royl to Thomas earl of Warwick; Huntyngdon to Anne countess of Stafford; Lynhales and Dorston to Sir Walter Fitz-Walter; Stepulton to John Brian baron of Burford; Brampton to Brian de Briampton; and to Sir John Chandos the castle of Snowdon<sup>1</sup>.

The last public act relating to the insurrections of the marches, was to empower the prince of Wales to treat with certain Cheshire<sup>k</sup> gentlemen about their fines, for appearing in arms in the battle of Shrewsbury.

On the 14th and 15th of the same month he gives power to William Beauchamp to pardon certain of the vassals on his lands of Abergavenny and Ewyas Harald, who had appeared in arms in behalf of Glyndwr; and to the famous Sir John Oldcastle, John ap Henry, and John Fairford, clerk, to pardon the inhabitants of Brecknock, Built, Cancresselly, Hay, Glynbough, and Dynas; to receive their weapons; and to oblige them to take an oath of fidelity. In this the king only secures their persons, but reserves to himself their forfeited lands, goods, and chattels. The first is dated from Hereford; the other from Devenok<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Rymer, viii. 328.

<sup>k</sup> Idem, 333.

<sup>1</sup> Idem, 331.

1404.

Notwithstanding the French king had consented, through the necessity of his own affairs, to a truce of thirty years with Henry, yet he never could be brought to acknowledge his title to the crown. In his treaties, Charles styles him only notre cousin d'Angleterre<sup>m</sup>, or Henry of Lancaster, or our adversary of England, or the successor of the late king Richard<sup>n</sup>. There is all the appearance of a correspondence between Charles and the English and Welsh insurgents in the last year; and that the expedition towards Shrewsbury, and an invasion of England by the French, were concerted, to distract the attention of Henry. Their fleets hovered over our coasts under other pretences. They even landed in the isle of Wight, and did considerable damage to the country.

An open war was daily expected with France. The parlement took the safety of the king's person into consideration. His household was regulated; and in particular, it was ordered, that no Frenchman or Welshman should remain about his majesty's person<sup>o</sup>.

The wisdom of this provision soon became very apparent. A league, offensive and defensive, was formed between Charles and Owen. Owen sent his chancellor Griffith Yonge, archdeacon of Meireonedd and doctor of laws, and his kinsman John Hammer, ambassadors to the French. Their appointment is dated from Dolgellu, in a princely style: Datum apud Doleguelli, 10 die mensis

<sup>m</sup> Rymer.<sup>n</sup> Carte, ii. 656.<sup>o</sup> Parliamentary Hist. ii. 79.

Maii, MCCCC. quarto et principatus nostri quarto; and begins, OWINUS Die gratia princeps WALLIÆ, &c.<sup>p</sup>.

Charles received them with open arms. The league was signed at Paris on the 14th of June. The persons who acted on the part of Charles were James Bourbon earl of March, and John bishop of Carnot. Owen's ambassadors signed their part on the 14th of July, in the house of Ferdinand de Corbey, chancellor of France; several prelates and persons of high rank attending as witnesses<sup>q</sup>. Glyndwr ratified this treaty on the 12th of January 1405, from his castle of Lampadarn<sup>r</sup>.

The affairs of Glyndwr bore so prosperous an aspect, that about this time Trevor bishop of St. Asaph revolted from Henry, and joined with his countryman; whether actuated by remorse for his dealings with his old master, or tempted by the hopes of preferment under a new government, is not evident. It is very certain that in this period Owen's interest was so great with the Pope, that his holiness, at the request of Glyndwr, promoted to the see of Bangor, Llewelyn Bifort, who was afterwards outlawed for his adherence to the cause of his patron<sup>s</sup>.

Owen opened the campaign of this year with vigor. He laid waste the country of his enemies; took several castles, among others, those of Harlech and Aberystwyth. Some he dismantled, and others he reserved, and garrisoned. He then directed his march into Montgomery-

<sup>p</sup> Rymer, viii. 356.

<sup>q</sup> Idem, 365, 366, 367.

<sup>r</sup> Idem, 382.

<sup>s</sup> Willis's Bangor, 84.

shire, and fell in with an English army at Mynydd cwm du. They attacked him, slew many of his men, and obliged him to retreat. He soon repaired this disgrace; for, collecting his forces again, he pursued the victors with such expedition, that he overtook them at a place called Craig y Dorth, near Monmouth; defeated, and followed them to the very gates of every town or castle they had fled to.

The English historians mention the defeat of Glyndwr. They inform us, that the English army was commanded by Richard Beauchamp earl of Warwick, who took the banner of Glyndwr<sup>t</sup>; but are silent in respect of the revenge that so immediately followed. Owen's standard-bearer was Ellis ap Richard ap Howel ap Morgan Llwyd, of Allhrey, descended from Rhiwallon ap Dungad ap Tudor Trevor<sup>u</sup>. The king undertook nothing this year against Glyndwr. Beauchamp had large possessions in the county of Monmouth, and found it requisite to raise his vassals to preserve his country from desolation.

1405.

This year opened with an attempt of a very extraordinary nature; nothing less than to free from confinement the young earl of March and his brother, with the intent of setting up the title of the first against that of Henry, and to involve the whole kingdom in his quarrel. There were many engaged in the design. Wales was to have been his asylum, and Glyndwr his protector: such deep intelligence had he with the disaffected, even near the seat of the court. March was kept in close custody at Windsor, a royal residence, amidst guards, and secured by every precaution that a jealous usurper could invent. Notwithstanding, a plot was laid. Constance lady Spencer, widow to lord Spencer, and sister to the duke of York, contrived their deliverance. She procured false keys, stole away the two youths, and was hastening with them towards Wales, when they were seized and brought back. The lady was imprisoned. A severer fate attended the poor smith that made the keys, who was beheaded, after having both his hands chopped off<sup>x</sup>.

<sup>t</sup> Dugdale's Baron. i. 243.

<sup>u</sup> Antient Pedigrees MS. in possession of Th. Griffith, Esq. of Rhial.

Fortune now began to frown upon Glyndwr. The first experience he had of her mutability was on the 11th of March: a body of his partizans, to the amount of eight thousand had assembled out of Glamorganshire, Usk, Netherwent, and Overwent. As usual, they began their march with desolating the country; and burnt part of the town of Grosmont, in the county of Monmouth. Henry prince of Wales was at that time at Hereford, with the army entrusted to him by his father, ready to open the campaign. He there received an account of the defeat of these malecontents, by a handful of men commanded by Sir Gilbert Talbot, joined by Sir William Newport and Sir John Greindre. He transmitted the intelligence to his father, in a letter written in an uncommon strain of piety and dutifulness, contradictory to the popular opinion of his early licentiousness; for at that time he was only seventeen years of age. He begins with imploring Heaven for its favor towards his father: Je supplie vraiment que DIEU vous montre gracieusement pour vous son miracle on toutes parties, loez soit il en toutes ses œures.— Il est bien voirs, que la victoire n'est pas en la multitude de people mes en la puissance de DIEU.

<sup>x</sup> Holinshed, 527.

It seems that the Welsh forgot the antient spirit of their country; and yielded an easy victory to the enemy. Eight hundred or a thousand were slain. No quarter was given on the occasion, except to one person, un grant chiefteyn entre eulx. The humanity of young Henry appears to great advantage on this affair. He tells his father, that he would have sent the prisoner to him, but that he could not yet ride with any ease (I suppose on account of his wounds), mes il ne poet chivacher uncore a son aise<sup>7</sup>.

To repair this disaster, Glyndwr instantly sent one of his sons with another army, which probably was reinforced by the fugitives from the last action. Another battle was fought on the fifteenth of the same month, at Mynydd y Pwll Melyn in Brecknockshire, again fatal to the cause of Owen. Fifteen hundred of his men were slain or taken prisoners: among the last was his son: among the first his brother Tudor, who resembled Glyndwr so greatly, that a report was spread of his death, to the great dejection of his countrymen: but on examining the dead body, it was found to want a wart over the eye, which distinguished our chieftain from his brother. According to Carte<sup>z</sup>, young Henry commanded at this battle.

<sup>7</sup> Rymer, viii. 390.

Holinshed<sup>a</sup> mentions another defeat which the Welsh sustained in the month of May, in which Gryffydd Yonge Owen's chancellor, was made prisoner. I suspect that the historian confounds this action with that near Gros-mont; but that the chancellor was the great chieftain there made prisoner, must be a mistake; for we find him witness, the next year, to a pardon granted by Owen to one Jevan Goch.

After these defeats, all Glamorganshire submitted to the king, a few faithful friends only excepted; who, on discovering that Owen was alive, fled and joined him. It was at this time that he suffered those distresses which the English attribute to the latter part of his life. During this dispersion of his friends, he was obliged to seek protection from a few trusty partizans; and often to conceal himself in caves and desert places. A cavern near the sea-side, in the parish of Llangelynin, in the county of Meirioneth, is still called Ogof Owain, in which he was secretly supported by Ednyfed ap Aaron, of the tribe of Ednowain ap Bradwen.

The bard Jolo Gôch deploras his absence; and calls him home from different parts of the globe, to re-possess himself of his principality. He in one place supposes him to be at Rome, and entreats him to return laden with tokens from St. Peter.

<sup>a</sup> ii. 665.

<sup>a</sup> 528.

About this time the earl of Northumberland, began another conspiracy; which was detected, and several of his adherents were executed. Among others, one Sir John Griffith, a Welsh knight; which makes it probable, that the earl and Glyndwr still acted in concert. The king, by his activity, quickly frustrated this plot; seized on the earl's castles, and obliged him to fly into Scotland for protection. With him fled the bishops of St. Asaph and Bangor<sup>b</sup>, and the abbot of Welbeck. The two first were probably placed by Glyndwr about the earl, to concert the proper measures for the successful execution of their designs.

Henry then returned, and marched into Wales with an army of 37,000 men. The same ill fortune attended him in this as in former expeditions. The weather proved so bad, that he was obliged to make a hasty retreat to Worcester, aggravated with the loss of fifty of his carriages<sup>c</sup>. Shakespeare makes our chieftain thus vaunt the frequent defeats of his antagonist, even before the battle of Shrewsbury:

Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head
Against my pow'r; thrice from the banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent Him bootless home, and weather-beaten back.

Notwithstanding the ill success of the king, the affairs of Owen would, in all probability, have found a sad change, had not, at this very period, his ally Charles VI. sent him a most seasonable assistance; which, for a considerable time, prolonged the war, and delayed his total ruin. A considerable armament was made in the ports of France. It was planned by the duke of Orleans<sup>d</sup>, regent of France during the insanity of Charles. The invasion was to have taken place the preceeding year; and (as Rapin observes) seems to have been intended to coincide with the insurrection of Scroope archbishop of York, and other noblemen in the north. Their attempt proved fatal to them. But the fleet, consisting of a hundred and forty ships, sailed from Brest the latter end of June, with an army of twelve thousand men. According to the historian of this reign, Mademoiselle de LUSSAN<sup>e</sup>, there were among them eight hundred men at arms<sup>f</sup>, six hundred cross-bows, and twelve hundred foot-soldiers, all chosen troops.

<sup>b</sup> Fordun, Scotichronicon. ii. 441.

<sup>c</sup> Walsingham, 566.

Our historians say, that they were commanded by the Marechal de Montmorency; but I cannot discover that any of that great house was engaged in the expedition. The fleet was under the command of Renaud de Trie, lord of Serifontaine, admiral of France; the land forces under that of Jean de Rieux, lord of Rieux and Rochfort, Marshal of France. Under him served Jean, or, as Moreri calls him, Aubert de Hangest Sire de Hugueville, master of the cross-bows; and who, by reason of the age and infirmities of Rieux, seems to have been the acting general. According to the genius of the nation, the officers made the most brilliant appearance; and Hugueville actually sold to the church of Paris his fine estate of Agencourt near Mondidier, in order to furnish himself with a magnificent equipage<sup>g</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> Histoire et Regne de Charles VI. tom. iv. 190.

<sup>e</sup> Ibid.

<sup>f</sup> A MAN AT ARMS, Homme d'armes, or Lance journir, as the French called it, in the reign of Charles VII. was to consist of three archers, one coutillier or squire, armed with a sort of couteau, and one page, who was likewise to be a gentleman. Hist. de la Milice Françoise, i. 154.

The fleet had a very favorable passage; but, by the neglect of providing a sufficient quantity of fresh water, most of the horses perished. According to the best authority<sup>h</sup>, the forces landed under the command of Hugueville, in Milford Haven. He immediately marched towards Caermarthen, which he besieged and took by capitulation. The garrison were suffered to depart, and had liberty to take their effects with them<sup>i</sup>.

He declined making any attempt on Pembroke, by reason of the strength of the castle; but sat down before Haverford-west: where the earl of Arundel made so gallant a defence, that the French were obliged to raise the siege with considerable loss. Glyndwr had, by this time, reached Tenby with ten thousand men, where he was joined by Hugueville. As soon as the necessary preparations were finished, they marched through Glamorganshire, reached Worcester, and burnt the suburbs, and ravaged the country round<sup>k</sup>.

As soon as Henry heard of the intended invasion, he issued out a proclamation<sup>l</sup>, dated from Westminster, July

<sup>g</sup> Histoire et Regne de Charles VI. tom. iv. 190.

<sup>h</sup> Rymer, viii. 406.

<sup>i</sup> Walsingham, 566.

<sup>k</sup> Monstrelet.

<sup>l</sup> Rymer, viii.

2d; in which he directs the lieutenants of several counties to raise forces to repel the foe. Lord Berkley, and Henry Pay admiral of the cinque ports, commanded at sea, and burnt, according to our accounts, fifteen of the French ships as they lay at anchor in Milford Haven; and afterwards (joined by Sir Thomas Swinborn) took fourteen more in their passage to Wales, laden with ammunition and provisions for the army<sup>m</sup>. Mademoiselle de LUSSAN takes notice of the first; but candidly confesses, that the French were so terrified with the appearance of thirty sail of our ships, that they themselves directed the destruction of those vessels.

In the beginning of August, Henry received advice that the French were landed; and again issues a proclamation, dated from Pontefract, August 7th, addressed to the lieutenant of the county of Hereford, with orders to raise his forces without delay, and repair with them to the city of Hereford. It is in this proclamation he expressly calls the French general, lord of Hugueville.

Henry marched in person to oppose an enemy now grown so very formidable; but Hugueville, after plundering the country, on the king's approach, made a sudden retreat, and posted himself on a high hill, about three leagues from Worcester, with a deep valley between his and the royal army. Each endeavored to induce the other to make the attack; and for eight days they respectively presented themselves in order of battle, and so continued from morning till night; but neither party ventured to descend from its advantageous situation. During this time, there were several skirmishes. The loss on both sides was about two hundred, besides numbers wounded. The French lost Patrouillard de Trie, lord of Mouci and Plessis, chamberlain to the king, and brother to the admiral; a gallant officer, whose fate was much lamented by the army<sup>n</sup>. There fell that day also the lord of Martelonne, and the lord of La Valle; and, as Hall says, the bastard of Bourbon. Our historians seem to exaggerate their loss, adding to it that of five hundred other gentlemen; but Monstrelet asserts, that on a review of the French troops, when they returned home, only sixty were found missing.

<sup>m</sup> Walsingham, 566; who adds, that a marshal and seven captains were taken at the same time.

The camp that Owen is supposed to have possessed, is on Woodbury hill, in the parish of Whittley, exactly nine miles north-west of Worcester. It is surrounded with a single foss; and contains near twenty-seven acres. It probably had been an antient British post; but was extremely convenient for Glyndwr, not only by reason of its strength, but, as Wales lay open to him, he had it in his power to retreat among the mountains whenever he found it necessary. The hill is lofty, and of an oblong form. One end is connected with the Abberley hills, which, with this of Woodbury, form a crescent, with the valley, by way of area, in the middle. Henry lay with his forces on the northern boundary. The brave spirits of each army descended from their posts, and performed deeds of arms, in the center between either camp. They had a fine slope on each side to rush down to the duel. The Welsh especially had a hollowed way, as if formed expressly for the purpose. I surveyed the spot in company with my friend Doctor NASH, and found it answered precisely to the account given by Monstrelet°.

<sup>n</sup> Moreri; who says he fell at the attack of Haverford-west.

Henry acted the part of a prudent general, by cutting off the means of every supply from the enemy; who, worn with famine and fatigue, in the midnight of the eighth day decamped with the utmost secrecy, and retired into Wales<sup>p</sup>. Monstrelet makes the king quit his station first, and return the same night to Worcester; and adds, that the French attacked him in his retreat, and took from him eighteen waggons laden with provisions. Hall, on the contrary, assures us, that Henry ‘chased the enemy ‘from hilles to dales, from dales to woddes, from woddes ‘to marishes, and yet could never have them at any ‘advantage. A worlde it was to see his quotidiane re- ‘moving; his paynfull and busy wanderyng, his trouble- ‘some and uncertayne abiding, his continual mocion, his ‘daily peregrinacion in the desert felles and craggy ‘mountains of that barreine, unfertile, and depopulate ‘countrey.’ In the end, the king, unable any longer to subsist his army in a country which Glyndwr had expressly destroyed to distress his enemy, was obliged to desist from his pursuit, and to return to Worcester; and, as Hall owns, in his retreat lost ‘certayn cariages laden with vitayle, to his great displeasure, and to the great comferte of the Welsh.’

° See the plan of the camp on Woodbury hill, in Doctor NASH’s Hist. Worcestershire, ii. p. 465, and plate opposite to it.      <sup>p</sup> Monstrelet, 16. Hall, 19.

I must enquire when Henry had leisure for so long and tedious a campaign; for I find him, the 22d of August, at Pontefract; the 27th, at Worcester; and the 4th of September, at Hereford. In four days from that time, it appears he was at Faxflete. At Beverley, the 13th of the same month. At Bishopthorp, in the same county, from the 16th to the 21st; the next day at Cawood. After which there is an unaccounted gap of time, till he appears again at Worcester, the 6th of October. I am thus minute, to shew that Henry possessed a strength of body equal to his activity of mind; otherwise he never could have flown with that rapidity from place to place, nor have guarded against enemies so remote as the Scots and Welsh, at nearly the same period.

It seems as if all his forces, destined to oppose the last, were arrived at their places of rendezvous before the 6th of October<sup>a</sup>. From that time he was in all probability engaged in this expedition; Hall assigning (among other reasons for the king’s desisting from his enterprize) the approach of winter, which rendered a campaign amidst the mountains highly unsafe. Accordingly we find him at Dunstable, on his road to London, the 3d of November<sup>r</sup>, and at his palace at Westminster soon after<sup>s</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> Rymer, viii. 420.

<sup>r</sup> Ibid. 421.

<sup>s</sup> Ibid.

The French, after their flight, never made any farther attempt. Glyndwr placed them in quarters, where they remained till they quitted the kingdom; when he furnished the greater part with vessels to transport them to France. Fifteen hundred remained in Wales till the March following, when they were carried home by a person styled by De Lussan, Le Begue de Volay<sup>t</sup>.

After the defeat of Gryffydd son of Glyndwr, by Henry prince of Wales, that youthful warrior undertook the siege of Llanbedr castle, in the county of Cardigan. After some time, the governor placed there by Glyndwr agreed to give it up, in case it was not relieved between the 24th of October and the feast of All Saints. He was to surrender it in good condition; not to injure the habitations in the town, nor seize any ships that should be driven into the port by stress of weather: that he should have free pardon, and liberty, at the end of the term, to depart with all his effects, and those of his friends. I observe, among the instruments of war which were to be delivered up, were canones, Anglicè gunnes; which had been invented by the French about twenty-six years before this period. He took the sacrament in witness of his sincerity, and delivered hostages for the performance of his agreement. He probably relied on the assistance of the French for relief. Henry apprehended the same. But, in order to frustrate any attempts of that kind, he issued out a writ, dated from Cawood the 22d of Septem- ber, to the lieutenants of Devonshire, and of other counties, to raise their forces, and to rendezvous at Evesham on the 10th of October<sup>a</sup>. This caution took effect so far, as to oblige Rees ap Gryffydd ap Shenkin, alias Rees ap Llewelyn, to agree to the terms proposed; but seemingly without any design of preserving them; for, no sooner was the prince departed, than Rees permitted Glyndwr to turn him and his garrison out, under pretence that they had been guilty of treason in submitting without his consent<sup>x</sup>.

<sup>t</sup> De Lussan, iv. 195.

I must conclude the transactions of this year, with remarking the solicitude of the lords and commons about the relief of the lord of Coitie, then besieged in the castle of the same name, seated near the river Ogmore in Glamorganshire. Henry was little concerned about his fate; but several prelates and persons of rank in both houses offered a loan, for the purpose of raising forces for his rescue. At length it was agreed by king and parlement, that those loans should be repaid out of the first payments of the subsidy at that time granted<sup>y</sup>.

1406.

From the conclusion of last year, the affairs of Glyndwr began to decline. He had still strength sufficient to keep within his mountainous territories: but was too weak to meditate any thing more than marauding invasions. The

<sup>a</sup> Rymer, viii. 419, 497.

<sup>x</sup> Walsingham, 568. Holinshed, 533.

<sup>y</sup> Drake's Parliamentary History, ii. 85. This was a very considerable fortress, as appears by Buck's view of it, vol. ii. N<sup>o</sup> 398.

French continued to give him some assistance. They sent a fleet of thirty-eight sail. I imagine, from the small number, that they were wearied of their ally; yet were willing to keep up, for their own interest, the spirit of the insurgents. Eight of these ships, laden with men at arms, were taken; the rest escaped in great confusion to Wales<sup>2</sup>.

About this time Owen was considerably weakened by the defection of the inhabitants of Ystrad Tywy.

The presence of that brave and active prince Henry of Monmouth, who at the express request of parlement<sup>a</sup> resided in some part of Wales, was no small check on the enterprising temper of Glyndwr, nor a less terror to the Welsh, who had felt the force of his arms. At the same time, parlement, sensible of the folly of the premature grants before made of the estates of the insurgents, entered on record, that no heritages conquered from the Welsh, be given away till one quarter of an year after<sup>b</sup>; so precarious seemed the tenure, even in the declining state of our chieftain. I may remark, that he still had strength enough to give protection to the English fugitives. The great earl of Northumberland, and lord Baldorf, found here a hospitable asylum, after the Scots, to whom they had entrusted themselves, meditated the surrender of them up to Henry, in exchange for certain prisoners. Sir David Fleming of Cumbernauld generously warned them of the intentions of his countrymen; who in revenge took away his life<sup>e</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> Walsingham, 566.

<sup>a</sup> Parliamentary Hist. ii. 93.

<sup>b</sup> Ibid.

Before the expiration of this year, Henry made a grant in fee to Sir John Tibetot, speaker of the house of commons, and father to the accomplished peer John earl of Worcester, of the estates of Richard ap Gryffydd ap Fychan, in the counties of Caermarthen and Cardigan, forfeited by his adherence to the party of Glyndwr<sup>d</sup>.

Glyndwr again was not behind hand in acts of regal power; for about this time he grants a pardon to one John ap Howel ap Jevan gôch; anno principatus nostri VI<sup>o</sup> datum apud Cefn Llanfair X<sup>o</sup> die Jan. per ipsum principem. On the seal was the portrait of Owen seated in a chair, holding a sceptre in his right hand, and a globe in the left.

It is observable, that among the witnesses are Gryffydd his eldest son, and Gryffydd Yonge his chancellor; both of whom, the English historians say, were made prisoners, and sent to the Tower. As Henry shewed no mercy to the partizans of Owen, it is not probable that these two would have escaped his rage, had they ever been in his power. The other two witnesses are Meredydd, another of his sons, and Rhys ap Tudur, and Gwillim ap * * * *.

Notwithstanding this ostentation of regal power, the affairs of Glyndwr evidently declined. The garrisons placed in most of the different fortresses of North Wales had kept the maritime parts from rising in any numbers in his favor. In the island of Anglesey, he seems to have had a very strong party. It does not appear that there ever was any battle in that island. It is my opinion, that the partizans of Owen had passed the Menai, and while their zeal was warm, had joined his army; and, like the custom in all feudal times, returned to their homes when wearied with the campaign, or satiated with plunder.

<sup>e</sup> Walsingham, 566.

<sup>d</sup> Parliamentary Hist. ii. 106.

By the latter end of this year, they had submitted to the royal authority: for I find, from a transcript of a manuscript found among the papers of the learned EDWARD LLWYD of the Musæum, this particular:

‘ In an inquisition taken at Beaumaris, upon Tuesday,
 ‘ the day next before the feast of St. Martin the bishop
 ‘ (which is the 11th of November) in the 8th year of king
 ‘ Henry IV. anno Domini 1406, before Thomas Twkhwl, ‘ Philip de Mainwaring, and Robert Paris the younger,
 ‘ commissioners, by virtue of a commission from prince ‘ Henry, son and heir apparent of the king, prince of ‘ Wales, duke of Acquitaine, Lancaster, and Cornwall,
 ‘ and earl of Chester, unto them, or any two of them,
 ‘ directed, were indicted, presented, and fined, the several ‘ persons and inhabitants of the isle of Anglesea, whose ‘ names are hereunder written, for being in arms and ‘ rebellion with Owen Glyndyfrdwy and others.’

I only shall observe here the Cwmwds, the numbers of persons fined in each, and the sum total of them and the fines.

				£	s.	d.
In Llifon	...	...	411	...	100	18 8
Menai	...	...	308	...	65	10 8
Talybolion	...	...	399	...	123	16 4
Twrcelyn	...	...	279	...	83	5 8
Malltraeth	...	...	326	...	83	16 0
Tindaethwy	...	...	389	...	79	19 8
			2112		537	7 0

I must observe, that the greatest of the fines is £8 3s. 4d. and the lest, 2s.; and that two priests are fined five pounds each, I suppose, for misleading their flocks. Several persons are outlawed, and the goods of those slain in battle forfeited to the king, according to the following valuation:

			£	s.	d.			£	s.	d.
A horse	...	...	0	2	0	A yearling calf	...	0	0	4
mare	...	...	0	1	4	sheep	...	0	0	4
cow	...	...	0	1	8	cronnach of wheat	...	0	3	4
steer or heifer	...	...	0	1	0	ditto oats	...	0	2	0

1407.

History furnishes us with very few materials respecting the transactions of this year. They were probably few and unimportant. Owen had lost the fortresses of Llanbedr* (which was soon retaken) and of Harlech. He was confined to the hills, and seems never to have quitted his fastnesses but to make a prædatory war. The earl of Northumberland and lord Bardolf, about this time, apprehending that Owen was too weak to protect them, quitted Wales, and soon after lost their lives in a desperate effort to restore their cause, on Bramham moor in Yorkshire.

* Near Aberystwyth is an old embattled house (as I am informed) called Ty Cryf, reported to have been Glyndwr's.

1408.

In this year I discover nothing relative to the Welsh affairs, farther than a due compliment paid to the prince of Wales by the commons; who, by their speaker, desired the king to give public thanks to young Henry for his great fatigue and good conduct in Wales; for which both king and prince returned their compliments again to the commons<sup>f</sup>.

1409.

In this year Glyndwr again began to make head. By himself, or his partizans, he made great devastations on the marches, and in those parts of Wales that were well affected to the English government. The estates of Edward de Charlton lord Powys suffered greatly. Henry therefore directs a writ to that nobleman to raise his forces, and suppress, in the most vigorous manner, this new disturbance, headed, as it appears, by Glyndwr himself and the bishop of St. Asaph. Lord Powys was at the same time instructed not to quit the country, but to keep all his castles garrisoned, and not to permit any of his estates to be deserted. This is dated from Westminster the 16th of May<sup>g</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> Rymer, viii. 547.      <sup>g</sup> Ibid. 588.

Like orders were issued to Edward duke of York, Thomas earl of Arundel, Richard earl of Warwick, Reginald lord Grey, Constantia lady Despenser (who had now made her peace with the crown), Francis Court, and William Beauchamp.

This activity proved fatal to Rhys Ddu and Philip Scudamore, two of Owen's best officers, whom he had sent into Shropshire, where they committed great excesses. They were both made prisoners, sent to London, and executed. Caxton<sup>h</sup> relates, that Rhys was taken before the justices, condemned, and drawn on a hurdle through the city to Tyburn, where he suffered the death of a traitor. His quarters were sent to four other cities; his head placed on London bridge.

On the 18th of November, in this year, Henry issued out an order to the constable of Windsor castle to deliver to Sir William Lisle knight, marshal of England, the following Welsh prisoners:

Howel ap Jevan ap Howell .	Rhys ap Meredydd .
Walther ap Jevan Fechan .	Madoc Bery .
Rys ap Jevan ap Rys .	Jenkin Backer .
Jevan Goch ap Morgan .	David ap Cad .
David ap Tudor .	Thomas Dayler <sup>i</sup> .

After this follows a warrant to Sir William to receive them. I imagine, that all these gentlemen were delivered to the marshal for execution; who, by his commission, seems to have been expressly appointed for that purpose; certis de causis ad ea omnia et singula quæ ad officium Marescalli Angliæ pertinent exercenda per litteras nostras patentes quam diu nobis placuerit, duraturas deputavimus.

<sup>h</sup> Cronycle of Englonde, 143.

<sup>i</sup> Rymer, viii. 603.

Towards the latter end of the year, several of the officers of the lords marchers, either through dislike to the war, or for the sake of preserving their country from the fury of the Welsh, formed a truce of their own authority with Glyndwr and his partizans. This only served to enable them to make their inroads on other parts with more security. Many of the loyal borderers were slain, and others plundered, in consequence of these agreements. Henry was highly irritated, and immediately issued out writs<sup>k</sup> to Thomas earl of Arundel, Sir Richard L'Estrange lord of Knockyn, Ellesmere, and other bordering manors, Edward Charlton lord Powys, and Reginald lord Grey of Ruthyn, and to the deputy-lieutenant of Herefordshire, directing them to cause all such illegal compacts to be rescinded, and Glyndwr and his adherents to be pursued, and attacked with the utmost vigor.

From this period Owen never made any attempts worthy of historic notice. Numbers of his followers deserted; which obliged him to confine himself to the hills, and to act entirely on the defensive. Notwithstanding his power was reduced, he was far from being subdued.

* Dated from Northampton, 23d November. Rymer, viii. 611.

The years 1410 and 1411 were passed without any memorable actions. The English were content with the ease they enjoyed by restraining the outrages of the mountaineers. Glyndwr maintained that extensive tract that forms the Alps of our country, and kept his prisoners so securely confined, that even Henry, in 1412, was under the necessity of permitting (by writ<sup>1</sup>) his esquire Llewelyn ap Hoel, father to the noted David Gam, to make use of Sir John Tiptofte and William Botiller, to treat with Owen about the redemption of his son, who was kept forti et durá prisoná, or to endeavor to seize some of Glyndwr's friends to exchange for Gam. What the result of this affair was, does not appear. It serves, though, to disprove the opinion, that David escaped to England after his infamous attempt in 1402; for which, as is now evident, he suffered a most severe, but merited captivity of ten years, from which all the power of his English friends could not release him.

The prison where Owen confined his captives was not far from his house, in the parish of Llansantfraid Glyndwr; and the place is to this day called Carchardy Owen Glyndwr. Some remains are still to be seen near the church, which form part of a habitable house. It consists of a room thirteen feet square, and ten and a half high. The sides consist of three horizontal beams, with upright planks, not four inches asunder, mortised into them. In these are grooves with holes in the bottom, as if there had been originally cross bars, or grates. The roof is exceedingly strong, composed of strong planks almost contiguous. It seems as if there had been two stories; but the upper part at present is evidently modern.

<sup>1</sup> Dated July 14th. Rymer, viii. 753.

It is singular, that the government did not take advantage of two Welshmen of rank, whom they had this year in their power, and whom they might have made the price of the liberty of their partizan. These were Rhys ap Tudor of Penmynydd in Anglesey, and his brother. Perhaps they were taken after the treaty had its effect; perhaps their crimes were too enormous for pardon: but whatsoever the case was, they were both conveyed to Chester, and there put to death.

I must not omit, that in 1410, Henry prince of Wales gave a free pardon to certain of his tenants in the comot of Coleshill, in the county of Flint<sup>m</sup>, for the share they had in what was styled the rebellion of Glyndwr. That county was much divided in those troubles. Howel Gwynedd, descended from Edwin lord of Tegengle, a valiant gentleman, who sided with our chieftain, was in one of the preceding years surprised by his enemies from the town of Flint. He probably was posted within the trenches of Moel y Gaer, in the parish of Northop; on which he was, without process, beheaded.

<sup>m</sup> Harleian MSS. N° 1999. 32.

1413.

Henry died in the beginning of this year; and left his youthful successor so engaged in his preparations for the conquest of France, as to lose all thoughts of the entire subjection of his British dominions. Glyndwr remained still inaccessible; but was so closely guarded, as to cease to be tremendous. The Welsh who had submitted, now began to indulge their revenge against such of the English who had slain, or otherwise injured, any of their relations or friends in the late war. This revenge was taken by various kinds of distress and imprisonment, till they had cleared themselves by compurgation, or made some satisfactory agreement. To remedy this, Henry the Vth, in his first year, abolishes<sup>n</sup> the Assach, or oath of 300 men, necessary, according to the custom of Wales, to clear a person accused of any crime. Before that, an Englishman was liable to continue in jail for life, as it seems impossible for one of that hated nation to procure even a far less number of compurgators than this strange law required for his acquittal. Henry made the attempt penal, and the prosecutor liable to an imprisonment of two years, to pay treble damages, and to pay beside, a fine and ransom before he could be released.

This was the last of the many laws enacted against the Welsh on occasion of this insurrection. They were certainly very severe; yet, perhaps, no more than what any government would have directed, against a people that had submitted to conquest near a hundred and twenty years, and who were considered in no other light than that of rebellious subjects.

<sup>n</sup> Statutes at Large, Ruffhead's ed. i. 484. Par un ASSACH solonc la custume de GALES c'est à dire par la serement de CCC hommes. See also Leges Wallicæ, 188. & seq.

On the first insurrection, conciliatory methods were tried, and pardons offered. After experience of the little effect these had on the minds of the Welsh, every lenient step was laid aside, and laws of a very severe nature were put in force against them.

The first was in the year 1400. It was found expedient to prevent, as much as possible, all intercourse between the Welsh and English. The first were strongly attached to the cause of Richard; the last had many secret favorers of that unhappy prince among them. There appeared much danger, if the former were permitted to strengthen their interest in England: a coalition fatal to the new government was apprehended. As a preventative, it was enacted: that no person born on both sides of Welsh parents should purchase lands or tenements near any of the cities or towns on the marches of Wales, on pain of forfeiting them to the lord paramount where such estates lay: that no Welshmen should be received into any corporation town; and if they had been settled in any such before, they were to find security for their good and loyal behaviour; they were to be totally disqualified from any civil office, and never allowed to carry any weapons.

In case any Welshman refused to restore to an Englishman the cattle, horses or the like (which he had forcibly taken), within seven days, the Englishman was allowed to retaliate.

So little trust was there in justice from our countrymen, that it was enacted, that no Englishman should be condemned at the suit of a Welshman, unless by English justices, or English burgesses.

So greatly did the government apprehend the seduction of English loyalty by the charms of our countrymen, that the English were prohibited from marrying with a Welshwoman, under the pain of being disqualified from holding any office in Wales.

In 1402, there is a very particular statute, intended to remedy the mischiefs resulting from some customs peculiar to Wales. This directs, that nul westour, rymour, ministrall, ne vacabond, soit aucunement sustenuz en la terre de Gales, par faire kymorthas ou coillage sur le commune people illoeqes. I cannot give a better translation, than that in the observations on the antient statutes, by my esteemed friend the honorable DAINES BARRINGTON: which is to this purpose: THAT no host<sup>o</sup>, rhymer, minstrel, or other vagabond, should presume to assemble or collect together.

The word kymhortha is mis-spelt from the Welsh cym-morth, or the plural cymmorthau, assemblies of people to assist a neighbor in any work. Such are very frequently in use at present. There are cymmorthau for spinning; for works of husbandry; for coal-carriage. But at this time, these meetings were mere pretences; and their end was the collecting a sufficient number of able-bodied men to make an insurrection. Of such a nature, in old times, were the hunting-matches in Scotland. The legislature in that part of Great Britain found the evils resulting from them, and at length suppressed them by a law.

<sup>o</sup> I beg leave to render the word westour differently; it seems derived from the Welsh, gwestur, which signifies a person who kept a place of public entertainment; and such a place was very proper for a rendezvous of this nature.

But cymmorthau of our countrymen were at this period of a most tremendous nature. They were composed of men the most dreaded by tyrants and usurpers; of BARDS, who animated our nation, by recalling to mind the great exploits of our ancestors, their struggles for liberty, their successful contests with the Saxon and Norman race for upwards of eight centuries. They rehearsed the cruelty of their antagonists, and did not forget the savage policy of the first Edward to their proscribed brethren. They brought before their countrymen the remembrance of antient prophecies. They shewed to them the hero Glyndwr, descended from the antient race of our princes; and pronounced, that in him was to be expected the completion of every prediction of our oracular MERLIN. The band of minstrels now struck up; the harp, the crwth, and the pipe, filled the measure of enthusiasm which the others had begun to inspire. They rushed to battle, fearless of events, like their great ancestry, moved by the Druids songs; and scorned death, which conferred immortality in reward of their valor.

Inde ruendi

In ferrum mens prona viris, animæquæ capaces
Mortis, et ignavum est redituræ parcere vitæ.

LUCAN.

Hence they no cares for this frail being feel,
But rush undaunted on the pointed steel:
Provoke approaching fate, and bravely scorn
To spare that life which must so soon return.

ROWE.

We find that Glyndwr maintained his situation for two years longer. In 1415, his affairs bore so respectable an aspect, that the king condescended to enter into a treaty with him; and for that purpose deputed, from the castle at Porchester<sup>p</sup>, Sir Gilbert Talbot, with full powers to negotiate with Owen, and even to offer him and his followers a free pardon, in case they should request it. Some writers say, that this grace was obtained by the mediation of David Holbetch, deputy steward of the lordships of Bromfield and Yale. The event of this affair does not appear. It is probable that it was interrupted by the death of our hero, which happened on the 20th of September, on the eve of St. Matthew, in the sixty-first year of his age, at the house of one of his daughters; whether that of his daughter Scudamore or Monnington, is uncertain; but, according to the tradition of the county of Hereford, it may be supposed to have been at that of the last. It is said, that he was buried in the church-yard of Monnington; but there is no monument, nor any memorial of the spot that contains his remains.

<sup>p</sup> The writ is dated July 5th. Rymer, ix. 283.

Both the printed histories, and the manuscript accounts, represent his latter end to have been very miserable; they state that he wandered from place to place in the habit of a shepherd, in a low and forlorn condition; and that he was even forced to take shelter in caves and desert places, from the fury of his enemies<sup>a</sup>. This does not wear the face of probability; for, had his situation been so deplorable, majesty would never have condescended to propose terms to such a scourge as Glyndwr had been to his kingdom. His retreat, and the distresses he underwent, were probably after the battle of Pwll Melyn in 1405, from which he quickly emerged. Death alone deprived Owen of the glory of accepting an offered accommodation. The treaty was renewed by the same minister, on the 24th of February 1416, with Meredydd ap Owen, the son of Glyndwr; which it is to be supposed took effect, and peace was restored to England, after an indecisive struggle of more than fifteen years. Our chieftain died unsubdued; unfortunate only in foreseeing a second subjugation of his country, after the loss of the great supporter of its independency.

<sup>a</sup> Rymer, ix. 330.

N<sup>o</sup> VIII.

CAPITULATION OF DENBIGH CASTLE.

Vol. ii. p. 158.

Articles of agreem<sup>t</sup> concluded and agreed vppon the fourteenth day of Octob. 1646, by and betweene Luitenant Coll. Mason, L<sup>t</sup> Coll. Twisleton, Simon Thelwall, Esq; Roger Hanmer, Esq; Thomas Edwards, Esq; Cap<sup>t</sup> Robert Farrar, and Nathaniell Barnett, Clerke, commission<sup>rs</sup> appoynted by Generall Mitton, on y<sup>e</sup> one ptie; L. Coll. Griffith, L. Coll. Wynne, Major Manley, Major Reynalds, John Eaton, Esq; John Thellwall, Esq; Kentricke Eaton, Esq; com<sup>rs</sup> appoynted by Coll. William Salusbury, gou<sup>r</sup>nor of the towne and castle of Denbigh, on thother party; for, touchinge, and concerninge y<sup>e</sup> surrender of the s<sup>d</sup> towne and castle, as ffolloweth:

1. THAT the towne and castle of Denbighe, wth all y<sup>e</sup> ordinance, armes, amunitō, and p<sup>ro</sup>visions of war, wth all magazines and stoores therevnto belonging; as allsoe all goodes, money, plate, and householdstuffe, of w<sup>t</sup> kind soeu<sup>r</sup>, belonging to any p<sup>er</sup>son or persons whatsoever, except such as bee allowed in the ensuinge articles, shall be deliuered to Generall Mitton, or whom he shall appoynt, wthout any willfull spoyle or embezelm<sup>t</sup>, vpon the 27 day of this instant Octob. for y<sup>e</sup> service of y<sup>e</sup> plim<sup>t</sup>.

2. That Coll. William Salusbury, gou<sup>r</sup>ner of y<sup>e</sup> towne and castle of Denbigh, wth his servants, and all that to him belongs, and all officers and souldiers of horse and foote, as well reformed officers and volunteere souldiers as others, and all other officers wth there servants, and all y<sup>t</sup> apptaynes to them, shall march out of the towne and castle of Denbigh, wth there horses, and armes proportionable to there p<sup>r</sup>sent or past comands, flying colours, drums beatinge, matches light at both ends, bullet in the mouth; eu<sup>r</sup>y souldier to have 12 chardges of powder, match and bullet p<sup>p</sup>portionable, wth bag and baggage p<sup>p</sup>orly to them belonginge; and all p<sup>s</sup>ons of quality, clergymen, and gentlemen, wth there servants, horses, and armes, in like manner wth bag and bagage, and all goods to them p<sup>p</sup>orly belonginge, to any place wthn x miles, such as the gou<sup>r</sup>nor shall make choyce of; where, in regard y<sup>e</sup> kinge hath noe army in the field, or garrison vnbeseidged, to march to, the comon souldiers shall lay downe there armes (there swords excepted): w<sup>ch</sup> armes, soe layed downe, shall be deliuered vp to such as Generall Mytton shall appoynt to receaue them.

3. That all officers and souldiers, as well reformed as others, and all other the p<sup>s</sup>ons aforesaid, who shall desire to goe to there homes or ffrinds, shall have y<sup>e</sup> generalls passe and p<sup>t</sup>extion for the peaceable repaire to, and abode at y<sup>e</sup> seuerall places they shall soe desire to goe into; and such of them as shall desire it, shall haue free q<sup>t</sup>er allowed them in all there march from Denbigh to those seu<sup>r</sup>all places, they marching 6 miles a day, and stayinge but one night in a place; the officers, as well reformed as others, wth equipage of horses, and compleate armes, answerable to there p<sup>r</sup>sent or past comands; y<sup>e</sup> p<sup>s</sup>ons of quality, clergymen, and gentlemen, wth there servaunts, horses, and armes; and comon troopers wth there horses and swords; and all to passe wth bag and bagage, as afores<sup>d</sup>; and y<sup>t</sup> it shall be noe p<sup>r</sup>judice to any of there ffrinds for receavinge or intertainm<sup>t</sup> of any of them; and y<sup>t</sup> all officers and souldiers, who shall desire to take intertaynm<sup>t</sup> for any foreigne kingdome or estate, shall have free q<sup>ter</sup> allowed them for 40 dayes, from there march out of Denbighe, they marchinge 6 miles a day, and stayinge but one night in a place, as afores<sup>d</sup>; and shall haue passes for officers and there servants, wth there horses and armes, to goe and treat wth any foreigne embassador or agent, for entertainm<sup>t</sup>; and all of them to haue passes to march, the officers wth there compleate armes, and horses p<sup>ro</sup>portionable to there p<sup>r</sup>sent or past comands; and the comon souldiers wth there swords only, and all wth bag and bagage, to any convenient port of this kingdome, to be transported; and the gou<sup>r</sup>n<sup>r</sup> of such port or garrison, or gou<sup>r</sup>ner next adjoyninge, shall take care for there safty duringe there aboade there and vntill shippinge can be p<sup>ro</sup>vided, and weather seasonable, they payinge for there q<sup>ter</sup> after the s<sup>d</sup> forty days expired; and shall assist them for p<sup>ro</sup>curinge vessels for there transportance, at the vsual rates accustomed for fright; and noe oathes or engagem<sup>ts</sup> whatsoever, duringe their s<sup>d</sup> stay, or at there transportation, be imposed vppon them, savinge an engagem<sup>t</sup> by p<sup>ro</sup>mise not to doe any p<sup>r</sup>judiciall to the parliam<sup>t</sup>.

4. That the gou<sup>r</sup>no<sup>r</sup> and officers, and all others wthin the s<sup>d</sup> garrison, shall be allowed, and assisted in p<sup>ro</sup>curinge a sufficient number of carts, teams, and other necessaries, for the caring away of the goods allowed them by these articles, at any tyme wthin 4 dayes, besides Sunday, before the surrender of the garrison, and for the space of 2 monthes after, to there seuerall houses: provided it be to any place wthin the generalls quarters.

5. That noe gentleman, clergyman, officers, or souldiers, nor any other pson or psons whatsoe<sup>r</sup>, comprized wthin this capitulation, shall be reproached, or haue any disgracefull speeches or affronts offered to them, or be stopped, plundered, or injured in there march, rendezvouz, q<sup>t</sup>ers, journeyes, or places of aboade; if any such thing shall befall, satisfan to be given at the judgm<sup>t</sup> of 2 or more of y<sup>e</sup> com<sup>rs</sup>, they beinge equall in number of each party; nor shall the psons afores<sup>d</sup>, nor any of them, be entised or compelled to take vp armes agst the kinge, nor be imprisoned, restrained, sued, impleaded, or molested for any matter or cause w<sup>t</sup>soe<sup>r</sup>, before the surrendering of this garison, be it publique or priuate interest, duringe the space of 6 monthes, after the rendringe hereof, they doinge nothingse p<sup>r</sup>judiciall to the parliam<sup>t</sup>. And if any officer, souldier, or psons w<sup>t</sup>soeuer, be sicke or wounded, soe that they cannot at p<sup>s</sup>ent enjoy the benefitt of these articles, y<sup>t</sup> such shall haue libertie to stay at Denbigh vntill they be recouered, and fitt accomodato and subsistance shall be p<sup>r</sup>vided for them duringe there stay there; and then to enjoy the benefitt of these articles.

6. That the clergymen now in the garrison, who shall not, vppon composition, or otherwise, be restored to the church livinges, shall haue liberty and passes to goe to

London, to obtayne some fittinge allowance for the liuelyhood of themselues and families.

7. That these articles shall extend to the vse and benefitt of strangers, of any foreigne kingdome or state, residing wthin this garrison, together wth there wiues, children, servants, horses, armes, and bag and bagage, as is allowed in the precedinge articles.

8. That the aldermen, bayliffes, burgesses, and all other p<sup>rs</sup>ons y<sup>t</sup> are p<sup>ply</sup> members of the corporation of Denbigh, shall continue and enjoy there ancient gouernm<sup>t</sup>, charters, customes, ffranchises, liberties, lands, goods, debts, and all things els, w<sup>ch</sup> belonge vnto them as a corporation, subordinate to the imediate authority and power of parliam<sup>t</sup>; and shall not be molested, or questioned, by colour of any thinge done or ordered by them in the capacite of a corporation, before the rendringe of this garrison, relatinge to the differences betweene his ma<sup>tie</sup> and the parliam<sup>t</sup>. And y<sup>t</sup> noe officer or member of the s<sup>d</sup> corporato, or other inhabitant of the towne of Denbige, or liberties thereof, shall be troubled or questioned for takinge vp armes, duringe the tyme it was a garrison, for the defence thereof.

9. That all the s<sup>d</sup> persons, who haue there dwellinge houses and families wthin the garrison, shall continue in there houses and dwellings, and enjoy there household stuffe, all there owne priuate stoore p<sup>ply</sup> to them belonginge, and all other there goods and p<sup>visions</sup> w<sup>t</sup>soeue<sup>r</sup> (except armes and amunitō as before is excepted) or remoue

wth there s<sup>d</sup> goods and p<sup>v</sup>ision out of the garrison, at there choyce and election; provided y<sup>t</sup> this extend not to any who haue houses and families wthin y<sup>e</sup> inward ward, but that they remoue there habitations wthin 14 dayes after the surrendring of the s<sup>d</sup> castle: and haue libertie to carry all there goods and p<sup>v</sup>isions, to them proply belonginge, alonge wth them, they dooinge nothinge hereafter p<sup>r</sup>judiciall to y<sup>e</sup> parliam<sup>t</sup>.

10. That the townsmen, and the rest of the inhabitants of the towne, shall be charged wth noe free q<sup>t</sup>er further than the rest of the countrey, and then but in a proportionable way: and y<sup>t</sup> the distribution of q<sup>t</sup>ers shall be wth the advise of the baliffes.

11. That all those p<sup>s</sup>ons comprized wthin these articles, who are resolued to goe beyond seas, shall haue libertie to haue and dispose of there goods and moueables allowed by these articles, wthin the space of 6 monthes after the surrendringe of the garrison, and to depart the kingdome, if they shall thinke fitt; and that during the s<sup>d</sup> space they shall be free from all oathes, ingagemen<sup>ts</sup>, and molestation (except an engagem<sup>t</sup> by promise, not to bear armes agst the parliam<sup>r</sup>, nor willfully doe any thing p<sup>r</sup>judiciall to there affaires).

12. That noe p<sup>s</sup>on or p<sup>s</sup>ons included wthin these articles, shall be molested or questioned for any one thinge s<sup>d</sup> or donn in or concerninge this war, or relating to the vnhappy differences betweene his ma<sup>tie</sup> and y<sup>e</sup> parliam<sup>t</sup>.

13. That Major Generall Mytton allow the gou<sup>r</sup>no<sup>r</sup>, for his p<sup>r</sup>sent subsistance, soe much of his owne pp corne, graine, and p<sup>r</sup>vision, as he shall conceaue expedient, now wthin the castle, by reason all his estate at p<sup>r</sup>sent is seized vppon, and imployed to the vse of the state.

14. That if any of these articles shall in any poynt be brooken or violated by any p<sup>r</sup>son or p<sup>r</sup>sons whatsoever wthin the garrison, or comprized wthin the capitulan̄, the fault and punishm<sup>t</sup> shall be vpon him or them only who made the violation, and not imputed to, nor chardged vppon, any other not assenting therevnto, or not an actor in it.

15. That all persons comprized wthin these articles shall, vppon request, haue a certificate vnder the hand of Generall Mytton, that such p<sup>r</sup>sons were in the garrison at the tyme of the surrender thereof, and are to haue y<sup>e</sup> benefit of these articles.

16. That the gou<sup>r</sup>no<sup>r</sup> and others in Denbigh castle, after surrender thereof, shall haue the liberty to compound for there delinquencyes, at such rates as if they had come before the first of December last; and y<sup>t</sup> this libertie shall extend to all but such as beinge vnder the first and 2<sup>d</sup> exception, are exempted from pardon: This is voted by parliament.

COPPIES OF HIS MAJESTY'S LETTERS β.

CHARLES R.

WHEREAS we have resolved to comply with the desires of our parliament, in every thing which may be for the good of our subjects, and leave no means un-assayed for removing all difference betwixt us: Therefore we have thought fit, the more to evidence the loyalty of our intentions of settling a happy and firm peace, to authorise you, upon honorable conditions, to quit and surrender the castle of Denbigh, entrusted to you by us, and disband all the forces under your command: for your so doing, this shall be your warrant. Given at Newcastle, the 14th of September, 1646.

To our trusty and well-beloved Colonel William Salusbury, governor of the castle of Denbigh.

A Cobby of the private Letter which his Majesty sent to the Governor.

Newcastle, 13th of September 1646.

COLONEL Salusbury, I heartily thank you for your loyal constancy. I assure you, that whensoever it shall please God to enable me to shew my thankfulness to my friends, I will particularly remember you. As for your answer, I refer it to the messenger, to whom I have clearly declared my mind.—Commend me to all my friends. So I rest,

Your most assured friend,

CHARLES R.

N° IX.

ORIGIN OF SHERIFF'S MEN IN NORTH WALES.

Vol. ii. p. 226.

[Corsegeddol MS.]

JEVAN, alias John ap Gruffudd ap Madog, lived in great credit and esteem in the days of Edward III; who gave him an annual stipend for guarding and conducting of the justice of North Wales, with a company of archers, whilst he should sojourn and stay in the county of Meirionedd. This was occasioned by the people of North Wales, (being unacquainted, in those days, with the English government) did often transgress; and the justices, for the reducing them to obedience, were driven to use severity; which incensed people sometimes to use violence against their justices: as in South Wales, Geoffry Clement, justice of that country, was killed at Buelt; and W. Sutton, in North Wales. Afterwards the sheriffs of the counties were enjoined to meet the justice at his entrance into the county, and to guard and conduct him to the utmost bound of the county; where the sheriff of the next county did receive him.

N° X.

SIR JOHN WYNNE OF GWEDIR'S INSTRUCTIONS TO HIS CHAPLAIN, JOHN PRICE, HOW TO GOVERN HIMSELF IN HIS SERVICE. Vol. ii. p. 299.

FIRST. You shall have the chamber, I shewed you in my gate, private to yourself, with lock, and key, and all necessaries.

In the morning I expect you should rise, and say prayers in my hall to my household below, before they go to work, and when they come in at nygt—that you call before you all the workmen, specially the yowth, and take accompt of them of their belief, and of what Sir Meredith taught them. I beg you to continue for the more part in the lower house: you are to have onely what is done there, that you may inform me of any disorder there. There is a baylyf of husbandry, and a porter, who will be comanded by you.

The morninge after you be up, and have said prayers, as afore, I wo<sup>d</sup> you to bestow in study, or any commendable exercise of your body.

Before dinner you are to com up and attend grace, or prayers if there be any publicke; and to set up, if there be not greater strangers, above the chyldren—who you are to teach in your own chamber.

When the table, from half downwards, is taken up, then are you to rise, and to walk in the alleys near at hand, until grace time; and to come in then for that purpose.

After dinner, if I be busy, you may go to bowles, shuffel bord, or any other honest decent recreation, until I go abroad. If you see me voyd of business, and go to ride abroad, you shall command a gelding to be made ready by the grooms of the stable, and to go with me. If I go to bowles, or shuffel bord, I shall lyke of your company, if the place be not made up with strangers.

I wold have you go every Sunday in the year to some church hereabouts, to preache, giving warnynge to the parish to bring the yowths at after noon to the church to be catekysed; in which poynt is my greatest care that you be paynfull and dylygent.

Avoyd the alehowse, to sytt and keepe drunkards company ther, being the greatest discredit your function can have.

N° XI.

INVENTORY OF SIR JOHN WYNN'S WARDROBE.

Vol. ii. p. 299.

A noate of all my clothes: taken the eleventh day of June, 1616.

IMPRIMIS. i tawnie kloth cloake, lined thoroughe with blacke velvett; one other black cloake of clothe, lined thouroughe with blacke velvett; another blacke cloake of velvett, lined with blacke taffeta.

Item. ii ridinge coates of the same colour, laced with silke and golde lace; i hood and basses of the same; one other olde paire of basses.

Item. ii blacke velvett jerkins; two clothe jerkins laced with goulde lace, of the same colour.

Item. One white satten doublett, and blacke satten breeches; one silke grogram coloured suite; and one suite of blacke satten cutt, that came the same time from London.

Item. One other blacke satten suite cutt; and one blacke satten doublett, with a wroughte velvett breeches.

Item. One leather doublett, laced with blacke silke lace; one suite of Pteropus, laced with silke and golde lace; another suite of Pteropus, laced with greene silke lace.

Item. One old blacke silke grogram suite cutt; two blacke frise jerkins.

Item. One blacke velvett coate for a footman.

Item. One redd quilte waskoote.

Item. ij pare of olde boothose, toppes, lined with velvett in the topps.

Item. ij pare of blacke silk stockings; and two pare of blacke silke garters, laced.

Item. One pare of perle colour silke stockings; one pare of white Siterop stockings; three pare of wosted stockings.

Item. ij girdles, and one hanger, wroughte with golde: one also blacke velvett girdle; one blacke cipres scarf.

Item. Nine black felte hattes, whereof fowre bee mens hattes; and five cipres hatbands.

Item. One guilte rapier and dagger, and one ridinge sworde with a scarfe, with velvet scabbards.

Item. ij pare of Spanishe leather shooes.

Item. One russett frise jerkin.

Item. Two pare of leather Yamosioes, and one of clothe.

Item. ij pare of white boots; one pare of russet boots.

Item. iij pare of newe blacke boots, and five pare of old blacke boots.

Item. ij pare of damaske spurres, iij pare of guilte spurres<sup>(1)</sup>.

N° XII.

INSCRIPTION ON A MONUMENT OF THE GWEDIR FAMILY, IN LLANRWST CHURCH. Vol. ii. p. 303.

This Chappel was erected Anno Domini 1633.

By S<sup>r</sup> Richard Wynne of Gwydir, in the county of Cuernerarvon, Knight and Barronet, treasurer to the high and mighty Princess Henrieta Maria, queen of England, daughter to King Henry the fourth, king of France, and wife to our soveraign king Charles. Where lieth buried

(1) "The words Pteropus, Siterop, and Yamosioes, were scarcely legible in the MS.; nor could any explanation be obtained about them: they are therefore printed as nearly as possible to the writing." Note in the errata to the edition of 1784.

his father, S<sup>r</sup> John Wynn of Gwidir, in the county of Caernarvon, Knight and Baronet, son and heyre to Maurice Wynne, son and heyre to John Wynne, son and heyre to Meredith; which three lieth buried in the church of Dolwyddelan, with tombs over them. This Meredith was son and heyre to Evan, son and heyre to Robert, son and heyre to Griffith, son and heyre to Carradock, son and heyre to Thomas, son and heyre to Roderick lord of Angleasy, son to Owen Gwynedd, prince of Wales, and younger brother to David prince of Wales; who married Eme Plantageinet, sister to King Henry the second. There succeeded this David three princes: his nephew Leolinus Magnus, who married Jone, daughter to King John; David his son, nephew to King Henry the third; and Leoline, the last prince of Wales of that house and line, who lived in King Edward the first's time. S<sup>r</sup> John Wynne married Sydney, who lieth buried here, the daughter of S<sup>r</sup> William Gerrard, Knight, lord chancellor of Ireland; by whom he had issue, S<sup>r</sup> John Wynne, who died at Lucca, in Italy; S<sup>r</sup> Richard Wynne, now liveing; Thomas Wynne, who lieth here; Owen Wynne, now liveing; Robert Wynne, who lieth here; Roger Wynne, who lieth here; William Wynne, now liveing; Maurice Wynne, now liveing; Ellis Wynne, who lieth buried att Whitford, in the county of Flint; Henry Wynne, now liveing; Roger Wynne, who lieth here: and two daughters; Mary, now liveing, married to S<sup>r</sup> Roger Mostyn, in the county of Flint, Knight; and Elizabeth, now liveing, married to S<sup>r</sup> John Bodvil, in the county of Caernarvon, Knight.

N° XIII.

SIR JOHN WYNN'S LETTERS. Vol ii. p. 304.

Letter from the Bourbonnoisse to his Father, dated 1st April, 1614, giving an Account of the Discontents in France in the beginning of the Reign of Louis XIII.

MY humble duty premised—Our ambassador being returned to England, and my acquaintance in Paris retyred with him; I am uncertayn where to dyrect my lres, that I may be assured they may come to hand.

This state of France is in division with ytselفة; for certain of the princes are discontentedly retyred to their governments; where they fortify themselves in the strongest cytties. Those of them who want place of importance in their own countrey, joyn with the rest to make good the hould they fynd fitt to make resistance: and so many are joynd together in Champaigne, being the government of the duke of Nevers, who also is one of the number. But the chiefe of all is the prince of Conde, with whom also is the duke of Vendosme, bastard son to the late king of France; who not long since was committed to pryson; but finding that opportunitie to shift himself into the habit of a scullion, he escaped, and put himselfe into the companie of the malecontents, being in number about six or 7 dukes, besides others, asssembled together, upon there garde, in the cytty of Misiers and Cedan, upon the borders of the Low Countreys, being frontyre towns of Champaign. Whence the prince of Conde writt to the king and queen, shewing the cause of his retyrednes, so far as touched himselfe, being, as he sayed, out of the care he had of the king and kingdome, to reform the one, and give contentment to the other; which could not be don without the assembly of the states, which he earnestly desired, principally to abridge the extrem taxations of the subjects; to purge the kingdome of the unnecessarie offices, who served to no other use than to impoverish the people; and withall to forbear to proceed in the marriage between France and Spain, untill the assembly of the estates wear dissolved, least any thinge should be concluded to the prejudice of those of the reformed religion. The Ire was well written, and carried with yt a shewe of great good to the comon wealth; but the people are so fearfull of the name of civil warre, that very fewe stirr of the parte of the princes. It is very true that the prince of Conde was drawn into the number by some other of the dukes, and not out of any just cause that he hath of discontent, more than for the love of some of them who he wo<sup>d</sup> protect.

Ther ys watch and ward in all towns, and good order for provision of arms, whereof ther ys no want in these partes.

The queen maketh great preparation to go to meete the king of Spain, to conclude the marriage, notwithstandinge the distaste the princes have of that proceedinge.

The report hear ys, that the princes will submit themselves to the kings mercie, and will offer themselves to attende the kinge to his marriage; but how that will prove, ys uncertain: for they fortifie themselves daylie; and while they speake of peace, they prepare for warre. But that w<sup>ch</sup> will turn to there mischiefe ys the want of money, w<sup>ch</sup> all knowe; otherwise they are well seated to do the kinge a shrewd turne. These sturrs in France causeth the kingdome to be more difficult for travaile, and maketh many strangers remove to other countreys; myself amonge the rest an resolved of my remove, with as much speed as I may, to Savoy, and so to Piemont, and to see some part of Lombardie, before the extremitie of the heate. I have continued here in Burbonnoise to exercise myself to ride, whereto I have applyed myselfe among the best-natured people of the world. God continewe you your health, and make my return as happy as you desire! I rest your obedient son,

JOHN WYNN.

1st Aprilis 1614.

---

His next Lre<sup>re</sup> is dated 26 April 1614, from Marseilles; and directed to his Father.

My humble duty remembered—

SYTHENCE the writinge of my last, I removed from the place where I was to Lyons, being 30 leagues of Burbonnoise. Before I set foorth, I ridd to the Bath, w<sup>ch</sup> ys 5 leagues distant from Moulins, as well to see the castle as other remarkable things, w<sup>ch</sup> are well worthy a stranger's observion. The governor of the country sent expressly to cause all things to be shewed me. Being arrived, I bestowed that nyht to see the new work, w<sup>ch</sup> the last king caused to be built near the springe; but that w<sup>ch</sup> was wonderfull, was 3 inclosed places within the bath, the waters whereof ys so extream hot, that there ys not any that care adventure to goe bath himselfe within, though the weather be never so could: for experience whereof, the last great frost, a younge mayd goinge to take up water, her feet slipt, because of the yce, and falling into the water, was taken up dead, being boyled by reason of the extraordinarie heat of the springe. The next morning I sawe the castle of Bourbon, w<sup>ch</sup> ys extraordinarie well seated for strength, and adorned within with a very fayr chappell, beinge on of the rarest pieces of worke of France; within w<sup>ch</sup> there ys a piece of the very true crosse of our Saviour (if wee may give credit to them that have the keepinge thereof) w<sup>ch</sup> was brought from Jerusalem by St. Clovis, king of France, with on of the thorns of the crown of our Saviour, w<sup>ch</sup> marvilouslie doth flour upon the Passion day, between nine and ten of the clock; and after 10 doth vanish away. I wo<sup>d</sup> upon that day have gone to see yt, but I found all men at their devotion; so that none wo<sup>d</sup> travaile that day. I doubt nothinge of the omnipotencie of the Almightye, who hath made all things of nothinge; but I make question of many superstitious observations of these Papists, who have often belyed God, attributinge to relikes more than to

God. This thorn is inclosed in christall within the same that the crosse ys, beinge all set in gould, with works of imagerie, contayninge the passion of our Saviour; w<sup>ch</sup> the houldinge in your hand, the bud appeareth at that tyme of the day, upon Good Fryday, remayneth on flowr, and so vanisheth.

From thence to Lyons, where I contynued a week; and so by water I voyaged to Avignon, w<sup>ch</sup> ys belonging to the Pope: where entring into the town, I was demanded by the gard at the gate, whence I was, and of what religion? Where havinge related all things, according to their demand, I was let passe towarde my lodginge, beinge somewhat melancholick, because I supposed that I sho<sup>d</sup> not have that libertie to see all places in that towne, as I desired; but havinge encountred with a French lord of that country, of whom I inquired whether I might freely see all places in town; who used me with that extraordinary kindness, that being invited to supper that night, he speake of me to the cardinal, being vice-legat; and the next morninge brought me to the cardinal, who was returned from masse, having a hundred gentlemen well appointed, who in ranke went before him, by three and by three, until the pallaisie; my selfe coming by with that lord, I was saluted by the legat, and honourably entertayned with many good words, tellinge me that yt was not lawfull for those of our religion to remayne above three dayes; but for me, I might stay as longe as I wo<sup>d</sup>—with many other circumstances of love and curtesie; enjoyninge that I<sup>d</sup> to shewe me all places in town, and principally to conduct me to see a companie at a gentlemans house, who wear ready to maske and dance, in honor of a babtisme, whereunto the cardinals brother was intreated as godfather. In ende, beinge after dinner at the church, to see the manner of yt, though I had before seen the like, behould a great number of violens and musitiens came marching before the godfather, who brought the child upon his arme (accordinge to the French manner) to the church; and then the ladies and gentlewomen accompanyinge the godmother entred, and so they went to the ceremonie; my selfe went amonge the rest, and stood by to hear and see what they did: which some gentlemen perceivinge, who had taken notice of me in the morninge, demanded of me how I liked of the ceremonie? I sayd well. And whether there wear great difference betwen the English manner and that of France for the babtisme? I answered, for that I had seen that they differed from us. I was further pressed by those gent, whether yt pleased me to see the manner of yt or not? I sayd yea; but that I co<sup>d</sup> not enter for the presse. Then the gent made me place, and brought me close to the place; where, in interpretinge unto me the manner of all circumstances, he was louder than the curit who babtized the child. When all was done, the godfather kissed the godmother openlie in the church. The companie, being many that came about me, seeing I was a stranger, to hear what the other gent and I discoursed of. I was asked by the parent of the child, in what sort we differed in England from the manner of

France in bapisme? I answered, that our children wear not so well fed, before they received bapisme, as this child was. The gent fell all to a laughter; for indeed the child was so ould that he was almost ready to goe, and had such a broad face, that all the companie were made merry with the mouths the child made at the priest, duringe the time he was using his office. The gent tould me that yt was the manner in these countreys also to christen them when they wear 4 or 5 dayes ould; but for this, the godfather beinge in Italy, they wear constrained to stay till his return. After the bapisme I was offered all the curtesie that I could desire. And so I went to Aix, being the Parliment of Provence, and from thence to Marselles, where I now am. From hence to Nezi, beinge the duke of Savoys countrey; and from thence to Genua; and thence to Lucca; and so to Florence: w<sup>ch</sup> ys 500 miles hence: where I shall not have so much money as will conduct me further, but only what will maintayn me untill I receive money from England, which I humbly entreat you to use means to send me my Michaelmas rent. Have patience with me, if I continewe a little longer then you wo<sup>d</sup>; I do yt for my experience, w<sup>ch</sup> I wo<sup>d</sup> gayne, if I may, as well as others; but without tyme, a man can do but what he can. I hope you would not that I should be less sufficient than other gent, who seeke out ther experience by the same means that I doe. I hope that yt shall not repent you anythinge of the course I have taken, no more than yt doth me. God send you your health, and my mother hers; and make both of you partakers of my prayers!

Y<sup>r</sup> ever obed<sup>t</sup> son, till death,

JOHN WYNN.

---

N<sup>o</sup> XIV.

WARRANT FOR A STAGG OUT OF SNOWDON FORREST, 4 JULY, 1st YEAR OF QUEEN ELIZ. 1558. Vol. ii. p. 332.

I REQUIRE you to deliver, or cause to be delivered, unto the bringer hereof, for the furniture and provision of the queens majestys houshold of her great council in the marches of Wales, one stagge of this season, to be taken out of her highness forrest of Snowdon. And this bill signed with my hand, with the queens highness warrant dormant to the lord president, and Sir Rob<sup>t</sup> Townessend, Knight, justice of Chester, and either of us, made for the same, the copie whereof remayneth with you, shall be your sufficient warrant and discharge in that bequest. Given at her highness town of Salop, the 4th day of July, in the first yere of her majestys reigne.

ROBT. TOWNESSEND.

To the master of the game, ranger and keeper of the queens highness forrest of Snowdon, in the county of Carnarvon, there duputy or deputies there.

ANOTHER.

AFTER my hearty commendations—These are to require you to delyver to my friend Maurice Wynne, Gent. or to the bringer hereof in his name, one of my fee staggs or bucks of this season, due to me out of the queens majestys forrest of Snowdon: and this my lre shall be your warrant of the same. Soe far you well. From Cardigan the 14th August, 1561.

Y<sup>r</sup> loving friend,

H. SIDNEY.

To my very loving friende John Vaughan, forrester of the queens forrest of Snowdon, in the counties of Anglesey, Merioneth, and Carnarvon; and in his absence to his deputy there.

N<sup>o</sup> XV.

OBSERVATIONS ON THE "TRIFURCATED HAKE," "THE BEAUMARIS SHARK," AND "THE MORRIS," BY THE REVEREND HUGH DAVIES.—Vol. iii. p. 39.

Dear Sir,

SOME strange and unaccountable doubts having lately been suggested concerning the existence, as a distinct species, of a fish, which occurs in the British Zoology of Mr. Pennant, under the name of "Trifurcated HAKE," regard for accuracy in natural history, and for the respectable authors, who, after Mr. Pennant, have noticed the fish, viz. the Comte de la Cépède, Dr. Walbaum, Dr. Shaw, Dr. Turton, and others, urges me to a wish to give more extensive circulation to a short essay of mine, which has already appeared in the Gentleman's Magazine for June, 1809, on that subject.

In my said essay, which originated in considering the observations of the Comte de la Cépède and Dr. Walbaum, concerning the Trifurcated Hake, I am inclined to submit it, with deference, to the decision of those gentlemen, whether it may not rather appear in future under a different generic name. I mean that very characteristic one of BATRACHOIDES of the Comte de la Cépède, whose definition of that genus, written in his own language, runs to this effect :

BATRACHOIDES. Caput depressum, maximum. Rictus oris amplissimus, uno pluribusve cirris ad maxillam inferiorem.

Of this genus that author has only two species, viz.

1. BATRACHOIDES Tau, cirris pluribus e maxillâ inferiore, spinis tribus in pinnâ dorsali primê et utroque operculo branchiali.

GADUS Tau, Lin. Syst. 439. Shaw Gen. Zool. vol. iv. 159.

2. BATRACHOIDES blennioides, uno pluribusve cirris ad basin maxillæ inferioris, pinnæ jugularis utriusque radiis duobus primis filamentis longis terminatis.

BLENNIUS raninus, Lin. Syst. 444. Shaw, Gen. Zool. vol. iv. 183.

Into this genus may surely with great propriety be admitted GADUS fuliginosus of Walbaum.

3. BATRACHOIDES fuliginosus dipterygius, pinnis setosis, cirro mentali.

Then I would introduce

4. BATRACHOIDES trifurcatus in foveola dorsali pinnæ primæ rudimento, serie verrucarum utrinque 9—10, cirro mentali.

TRIFURCATED HAKE, Pen. Br. Zool. iv. 172.

BLENNIUS trifurcatus. Shaw, Gen. Zool. iv. 174. Turton's British Fauna. p. 93.

BLENNIUS tridactylus. De la Cépède. Hist. des Poissons, vol. v. p. 486.

I cannot avoid being a little surprised, that the Count de la Cépède made the Trifurcated HAKE a BLENNIUS, as it is so very nearly allied to both his species of BATRACHOIDES; from BATR. Tau it differs not much in the general form, but greatly in wanting the fringe of beards on the lower jaw, and the spines on the gill covers.

From BATR. blennioides it differs still less, as I judge by Muller's figure, Zool. Dan. t. 45. but the single cirrus on the lower jaw distinguishes it from BATR. Tau. and the rudiment of a first dorsal fin placed in a sulcus, and the series of tubercles on each side of it, distinguish it perfectly from BATR. blennioides, as well as from BATR. fuliginosus of Walbaum, who, exclusive of the last mentioned particular, seems inclined to suppose it a variety only of his G. fuliginosus, but those proving constant, which I have found in as many as I have seen, he does not hesitate to pronounce it a distinct species.

Indeed, the series of tubercles, and the arrangement of them, seem to constitute a particular specific distinction between BATR. Tau, and BATR. trifurcatus, exclusive of every other; in B. Tau they surround the eyes, oculi utrinque serie duplici verrucarum minorum cincti. Gmel. Syst. p. 1172. In B. trifurcatus, they run in nearly parallel lines, one on each side of the sulcus, which contains the rudiments of the first dorsal fin.

OF THE BEAUMARIS SHARK.

A difference of opinion has likewise prevailed with regard to another subject in Natural History, viz. the Beaumaris SHARK; respecting which it has fallen to my lot, to be able to speak more particularly than any other person.

This fish, an account of which is given in Mr. Pennant's British Zoology, vol. iii. N<sup>o</sup>. 50, and in Dr. Shaw's General Zoology, vol. v. p. 350, under the name of SQUALUS Monensis, has but rarely occurred, and writers have entertained a doubt, whether it be specifically distinct from the Porbeagle SHARK of Mr. Pennant, iii. 103; the SQUALUS Cornubicus of Dr. Shaw, p. 349, and of Gmelin, Syst. p. 1497, the latter of whom, indeed, makes it only a variety. The Bishop of Carlisle, has, in the third volume of the Transactions of the Linnæan Society, endeavoured to distinguish between the Porbeagle and the Beaumaris from Linn. S. M. tab. 15.

The

PORBEAGLE SHARK

BEAUMARIS SHARK

from the Original Drawing by the

REV. HUGH DAVIES.

SHARK, which attempt Mr. Donovan, in his History of British Fishes, under the article SQUALUS Cornubicus, treats very lightly.

I abstain, for the present, from entering into any particular discussion on the subject; and shall merely refer to the description already given in the British Zoology. Let, however, the figure in the annexed plate, which is most accurately taken, with portional compasses from my original drawing made by a scale, and which is now in the possession of David Pennant, esq. of Downing, speak for itself. To this I have thought proper to add a copy of the figure in the Transactions of the Linnæan Society, of the SQUALUS Cornubicus, taken after the same manner, that the public may be enabled to form some judgement. These sketches may likewise assist in future investigations, where these subjects may accidentally occur, and when the Transactions of the Linnæan Society, or Mr. Pennant's British Zoology, may not be at hand to be consulted.

I do not pretend to aver, that the SQUALUS Cornubicus and SQUALUS Monensis are distinct species, as I have seen but one specimen. My wish is, that there may be given a fair and candid representation of each, as it happens to offer itself to observation, which may at length lead to accuracy and certainty.

OF THE MORRIS.

I find an attempt has also been made to cancel out of the British Zoology another subject, viz. the MORRIS.

This is the LEPTOCEPHALUS of Gronovius in his Zoophylacium, No. 410. tab. 13. f. 3; LEPTOCEPHALUS Morrisii, Gmel. Syst. p. 1150. and of Shaw's General Zoology, iv. p. 84. tab. 10. A specimen of this curious fish was communicated by Mr. Pennant to Dr. Gronovius, then resident at Leyden, as he acknowledges in his Zoophylacium, p. 136. That great natural historian has given a figure of it, and described it, with that minute accuracy, which he was so perfect a master of. This being the case, we should wonder, that any one should give it as his opinion, "that the little fish called the Morris is by no means "correctly ascertained."

Here then I beg leave to add, that I know the fish well; it has been my lot to see four specimens of it; one was taken in Llienawg wear, about three miles distant from Beaumaris, the other three below Beaumaris green, to the N.E. in the amusement of prawning, on the recess of the tide, in shallow water, among some bushy seaweed. (FUCUS Serratus.)

Of late years there has been an end of that employment, by the destruction of this article in making kelp, and the prawn, which was abundant when I was a school-boy, has quite deserted this part of our coasts, which is likewise probably rendered unfit for the accommodation of the little animal, the subject of our present consideration.

At the time that these, as well as the few specimens, for I have seen more than one, of the Trifurcated HAKE fell into my hands, my acquaintance with authors in natural history both living and dead, was much more confined than it has since happened to be; I therefore did not know but these fish might have been common in Britain, otherwise they had all been certainly preserved, to prevent future doubts about them.

A person, who is acquainted with the principles of the Linnean system of ichthyology, cannot view the delicate creature, which is our present subject, without surprise; as I believe it is the only fish in nature, with which we are acquainted, that has neither rudder, feet, nor wings. The singular make of it, therefore, and the seeming privations or imperfections which it appears to suffer, will excite in the contemplative mind, some reflections on this point, as well as on the singular formation of the existing parts of the animal.

They who have taken most pleasure in bestowing attention on the works of Providence, cannot fail to admire, with Ray and Derham, how the several parts of animals are peculiarly formed and adapted to their different modes of living, and the places which they are intended to inhabit. Under this idea, I cannot help thinking, that the make of this animal may be accounted for. See the description of it in Gronovius, Pennant, and Shaw.

Now the particular circumstances under which I know that three of the four specimens, which I have seen, were taken (nor do I know that the fourth was not taken in a like situation), suggest to me the following considerations: that as they were found in a dense mass of wrack or seaweed, I may reasonably conclude, that the animal was designed, by the Great Author of nature, to pass his life in such a situation; the parts of it were, therefore, adapted to its condition. The small head is well calculated to lead the way through so intricate a maze; its very compressed body to glide between the numerous folds and confined passes, formed by the frequent ramifications of these vegetables; its large eyes to discover its minute prey, in the gloom of so dense a grove, where without doubt, feet, wings, and rudder, that is to say, caudal, pectoral, and ventral fins, would not only be useless, but absolute encumbrances.

The observation on the haunt of this fish may possibly be the means of rendering future searches for it more successful.

I am, &c.

HUGH DAVIES.

Beaumaris, Nov. 10, 1809.

N° XVI.

ACCOUNT OF SIR RICHARD BULKELEY; IN WHICH IS A STRONG DESCRIPTION OF THE TYRANNY OF THE FAVORITE EARL OF LEICESTER.—Vol. iii. p. 40.

SIR Rich<sup>d</sup> Bulkeley served in parl<sup>t</sup> for the county of Anglesey, the 2<sup>d</sup> and 3<sup>d</sup> sessions of Q. Mary, the 3<sup>d</sup> of Elic. and 1st of James.

He was of goodly person, fair of complexion, and tall of stature. He was temperate in his dyet, not drinking of healths. In his habit, he never changed his fashion; but always wore round breeches, and thick bumbast doublets, though very gallant and rich. In the last year of Queen Eliz. being then somewhat stricken in years, he attended the council of marches at Ludlow, in winter-time. When the lord president Zouch went in his coach to church, or elsewhere, Sir Richard used to ride on a great stone horse; and some time he wo<sup>d</sup> go from his lodging to church, in frost and snow, on foot, with a short cloak, silk stockings, a great rapier and dagger, tarry all prayers and sermon in very cold weather; insomuch y<sup>t</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Zouch was wont to say, he was cold to see him.

He was a great reader of history, and discourses of all estates and countries; of very good memory; and understanding in matters belonging to housekeeping, husbandry, maritime affayres, building of ships, and maintaining them at sea. He drew his own letters, and answered all letters with his own hand: and being complayned of at the council of the marches for breach of an order of that court, he drew his own answer—that he c<sup>d</sup> not be evicted out of his possession but by course of common law—pleaded Magna Charta—and demanded judgement: which answer being put into court, the chief justice, Sir Richard Shuttleworth, called for a sight thereof; and after perusal, said to the counsellors at the bar, “Look, my “masters, what a bone S<sup>r</sup> Rich<sup>d</sup> Bulkeley hath cast into “the court, for you to tire upon:” and the matter being argued, it was referred to the comon law.

He was a great housekeeper, and entertainer of strangers, especially such as passed to or from Ireland. He nobly entertained the earl of Essex in his way there to be lord lieutenant. He made provision of all necessaries for his table beforehand. He sent yearly two ships to Greenland for cod, ling, and other fish; which he did use to barter in Spain for Malaga and sherrie wines; and always kept a good stocke of old sack in his cellar, which he called Amabile, besides other wines. He kept two parks well stored with Red and Fallow deer; w<sup>ch</sup> did afford such plenty of venison, as furnished his table 3 or 4 times every week in the season, besides pleasuring of friends. He kept several farms, besides his demesne, in his hands, w<sup>ch</sup> furnished his house with fat beef, mutton, lamb, &c. &c. He was an excellent horseman, and an expert tilter; keeping two great stables of horses, one in Cheshire, and another in Beaumaris, and a great studd of mares. His estate in Anglesey was £2500, in Carnarvonshire £800, and in Cheshire £1000, a year: having always a great stock of ready money lying in his chest. He kept many servants and attendants, tall and proper men: two lacqueys in livery always ran by his horse: he never went from home without 20 or 24 to attend him. He was a great favorite of Queen Eliz. He had powerful friends at court, and had the gentry and commonalty of the county of Anglesey at his service, except the Woods of Rhosmore, who were always his enemies.

He had great contests with Dudley earl of Leicester; who obtained the queens letters patents under the great seal, to be chief ranger of the forrest of Snowdon: in which office he behaved very injuriously to the counties of Merioneth, Carnarvon, and Anglesey; attempting to bring within the bounds and limits of that forrest most of the freeholders lands in those 3 counties; and for that purpose the earl procured several commissions from the queen to inquire of encroachments and concealments of lands. The return of the jury, in Anglesey, not being agreeable to the earls commissioners, they went in a rage to Carnarvon, forcibly entered the exchequer there, ransacked the records, and carried away what they pleased; but the earl, after making many attempts, to the great grievance of the country, was obliged to desist, being defeated in all schemes upon Snowdon, by the power and interest and spirit of Sir Rich<sup>d</sup> Bulkeley. But, manet alta mente repostum, the earl bore a poysonous hatred to Sir Rich<sup>d</sup>; yet he continued still in favor with the queen and counsel, though often molested by the earl, his agents and creatures.

S<sup>r</sup> Richard being one of the deputy lewtenants of Anglesey (upon intelligence of the Spanish Armadas threatening England), was to cesse the country in arms; and cissing Mr. Woods of Rhosmore, he was highly offended, and thought himself too heavily loaden: therefore went up to court to the earl of Leicester, carrying a false tale with him, that Sir Richard Bulkeley, (a little before the attainder and execution of Tho<sup>s</sup> Salusbury, one of the accomplices of Anth<sup>y</sup> Babington, the traytor, 1585) had been in the mountains of Snowdon conferring with him, and that at a farm of Sir Richards, called Cwmligie, they had layne together two or 3 nights. The earl, glad of this information, presently acquaints the queen and council therewith. Sir Richard being called before the council, and examined, absolutely denied the whole matter. And when the earl, at y<sup>t</sup> time president of the queens council, did severely inforce it ag<sup>t</sup> him, he told the earl to his face, "Your father, and the very same men as now informe against me, were like to undoe my father: for, upon the death of K. Edw. 6, by letters from your father, he was commanded to proclayme Queen Jane, and to muster the country; which he did accordingly: and had not my mother been one of Queen Maries maids of honor, he had come to great trouble and danger." Hearing these words the counsil hushed, and rose; and Sir Richard departed. The earl hastened to the queen, and told her the counsil had been examining Sir Richard Bulkeley about matters of treason; that they found him a dangerous person, and saw cause to comit him to the Tower; and that he dwelt in a suspicious corner of the world. "What! Sir Richard Bulkeley!" said the queen; "he never intended us any harm. We have brought him up from a boy, and have had special tryal of his fidelity: you shall not comit him." "We," said the earl, "have the care of your majestys person, see more and hear more of the man than you doe: he is of an aspiring mind, and lives in a remote place." "Before God (replied the queen) we will be sworn upon the holy Evangelists, he never intended us any harm;" and so ran to the Bible and kissed it, saying, "You shall not comitt him: we have brought him up from a boy." Then the lords of the counsill wrote a letter to D<sup>r</sup> Hugh Bellot, lord bishop of Bangor, to examine the truth of the accusation layd to Sir Richards charge: which the bishop found false and forged; and so certified to the counsil. Whereupon he was cleared, to the queens majestys great content, to the abundant joy of his country, and to his own great credit and reputation: and afterwards diverse of the lords of the councell wrote letters to the justices of assize of North Wales, to publish Sir Richards wrongs, and to notify to the queens subjects his clear innocence.

But that Sir Richard might not rest in peace, one Green, belonging to the earl of Leicester, in the name of one Bromfeild, a pensioner, came to him, to challenge him to meet Bromfeild in the feild. "Have you no other errand (quoth Sir Richard)?" "No," says Green. Then Sr Richard drew his dagger, and broke Greens pate, telling him to carry that as his answer; he scorning to meet such a knave as Bromfeild. This treatment of Green highly increased the anger of the Earl. Bromfeild, Green, and others of his retayners, plotted mischief to the person of Sir Richard; but he stood upon his guard, keeping always 24 stout men, with swords, bucklers, and daggers, to defend him from their attempts. They hired boats and wherries upon the Thames, with a design to drown Sir Richard, as he sho<sup>d</sup> go from Westminster to London; but he, being privately informed thereof, borrowed the lord mayor of Londons barge, furnished it with men, musquetts, billets, drums, and trumpets, and rowed along the Thames, shot the bridge, and went down to Greenwich, where the queen kept her court at that time; and at the landing place, over against the palace, he caused his companie to discharge their musquets, to beat their drums, and sound their trumpets. The earl of Leycester hearing thereof, repaired to the queen, and informed her that Sir Richard Bulkeley, more like a rebel than a subject, had come with barges, men, musquets, drums, and trumpets; and had shot several pieces over against her majestys palace, to the great terror of her court; a matter not to be suffered. The queen sent for Sir Richard, and, after hearing his apology for himself, made the earl friends with him. Within a while after, the earl sent for S<sup>r</sup> Richard, to his chamber; who coming thither, the earl began to expostulate with him on several wrongs and abuses he pretended to have received at his hands; and that he had lost £10,000 by his opposition. But the discourse ended in milder terms, and Sir Richard was bidden to dinner; but did eat or drink nothing, save what he saw the earl tast, remembring Sir Nic<sup>s</sup> Throgmorton, who was said to have received a fig at his table.

But the earl of Leycester dying in Oct<sup>r</sup> 1588, Sir Richard Bulkeley, and his country, enjoyed peace and quietness from his tyrannical oppressions, his devices, and wicked practices: and Sir Richard survived to the 28 June 1621, when he dyed, aged 88. He had attended the coronation of y<sup>e</sup> queens Mary and Elizabeth, and of James the 1st. His cloak, at this last coronation, cost him £500.

N° XVII.(<sup>1</sup>)

OBSERVATIONS ON THE PRESENT STATE OF PARYS MOUNTAIN, COMMUNICATED BY MR. PRICE, AGENT. Vol. iii. p. 57.

THE Parys mountain copper vein is very extensive, and contains ore in bellies of various magnitudes; such bellies or bunches are commonly called Stock Works.

The excavations in the mine are in extent agreeable to the quantities of ore they contained. But it must be observed, that these vacancies were not entirely filled with copper ore, but partially with mineral stone or matrix of the vein, mixed with ore and dead ground which was requisite to be cut to give room to pursue the ramifications of the vein.

This vein has been worked on a very large scale, upwards of seven hundred yards, beside considerable workings to the east and west of this length of ground. This length includes the Parys and Mona mines, which are both in the same grand vein.

From the boundary of the two mines to the west end of the Parys mine, is an open cast excavation two hundred yards long, one hundred and fifty yards broad, and from twenty to forty yards deep, which gives a content of nine hundred thousand cubic yards of removed natural ground. This part of the mine contained grand bodies of ore of various qualities; besides the above-mentioned open cast: there are several large subterraneous excavations in this part of the mine, and several trials westward.

(<sup>1</sup>) The same remark applies to this as to No. II. Appendix. J.R.

From the boundary of the two mines to the east end of the principal workings in the Mona mine is a length of vein of five hundred yards, in which extent are three large open cast excavations, out of which full four hundred and sixty-eight thousand cubical yards of natural ground have been taken.

Some of the subterraneous excavations in this part of the mine are very grand; one of them is fifty yards long, thirty yards wide, and forty yards high from the bottom to the rugged crown of the arch, supported only by one pillar in that cavity. In another part of the mine is an excavation forty yards in length, fifteen in width, and forty yards high in one entire arch. The underground workings are too numerous to particularize. The whole of them will amount to a vacuity of two hundred thousand yards cubical measurement, besides shafts, levels, &c. Some idea may be formed of the vast bodies of ore this part of the mine contained, by the quantity of ore raised by two bargains in three months in the year 1787, in the first two thousand nine hundred thirty-one tons of good copper ore and only ninety-two tons of waste, in the other four hundred eighty-eight tons of copper ore and two hundred sixty-seven tons of waste, besides the ore raised by sundry other smaller bargains.

The ore of this mine is in general the yellow copper ore; it contains pyrites, sulphur, and from four to fifteen per cent. of copper. Some black copper ore has been raised in Parys mountain, that held from fifteen to twenty per cent. of copper, some parts of the vein produced fine specimens of native copper adhering in a foliated form to the side of the interstitial rock. This copper has undoubtedly been held in solution and precipitated by the ferruginous quality of the rock to which it stuck.

There is upwards of four hundred sixty yards of ground in length in the east part of this mine, which has been only partially worked, and in that space there are in all probability several bodies of ore undiscovered, but that can only be ascertained by future trials.

The ore after being dressed, that is, broken down to a proper size, and the waste extracted therefrom as much as is compatible with this extensive concern, is carried to kilns and burnt.

The walls of the kilns are from four to five feet high, and sufficiently strong to support the lateral pressure of the copper. The width of the kiln inside from eighteen to twenty-two feet, and commonly filled with ore from three to four feet above the level of the top of the walls. The length undetermined, but continued agreeably to the quantity of ore, that is intended to be put therein. The kilns will contain from four hundred to thirteen hundred tons of ore. The ore on the top of the kiln is covered and covered close, excepting the flues that run along the top of the kiln, and convey the smoke to receivers erected for that purpose; they are about six feet high and five feet wide, arched with brick, and kept as dry as possible.

The smoke becoming stagnant in the condensers, the sulphur subsides to the bottom, and is taken from thence, boiled and depurated for sale. There are flues in the front wall of the kiln at which the ore is set on fire, and after it has sufficiently taken fire, it burns per se.

The ore of this mine abounds with the sulphureous acid which, united to water, percolates through the fissures of the vein, combines with the copper, and holds it in solution. The water thus impregnated is conveyed into pits in which iron has been put; the acid, having a greater affinity to iron than copper, combines with the iron, and leaves the copper at liberty to be precipitated in a metallic form. This precipitated copper is a congeries of minute granules closely united, and is nearly pure metal. To expedite the process of precipitation, the surface of the iron is repeatedly scraped and cleared, to give the acid a fresh surface to act upon, by which some of the decomposed iron is mixed with the precipitate, which impairs its qualities.

The copper is taken from the pits in form of mud, and when dried is sent to the furnace to be smelted. This precipitate holds from ten to twenty-five per cent. But if wrought iron is put into the mineral water and left undisturbed, that is, without cleaning it to give a fresh surface, till it be wholly dissolved, it will precipitate nearly its weight of pure copper.

The pits in which the copper is precipitated from the mineral water, are in ranks, one row beneath another, according as the declivity and extent of the ground will admit; the water is let off from one set of pits into another, till the water has let go all the copper it held in solution. The water that runs off from the lower or last row of precipitation pits is conveyed into reservoirs, where the decomposed iron subsides. The ferruginous ochre is useful as paint. The dimensions of the pits are commonly thirty-six feet by twelve, and about two feet deep, with a space of six or seven feet between each of them.

The number of men employed in the underground workings of the Mona mine in the year 1806 were 227, the consumption of gunpowder 17,036lb. and of candles, 26,283lb.

In the year 1807, 237 men were employed, the consumption of gunpowder 15,345lb. and of candles 23,321lb.

In the year 1808, 122 men employed, 6300lb. of gunpowder and 9200lb. of candles consumed.

PRODUCES OF DIFFERENT ORES IN THE MONA MINE.

DRESSED RAW ORES.

The best raw ore on an average holds 8 per cent.

The inferior raw ore on an average holds 4 per cent.

BURNT ORES.

The best burnt ore, when the smaller are riddled out, holds ten per cent.

The inferior burnt ore, when dressed, but rounds and smalls mixed, holds four and a half per cent.

DIMENSIONS OF THE KILNS.

	FEET.
Length within . . . . .	58
Breadth within . . . . .	22
Height of walls . . . . .	4½
Filled with copper above the walls	4

A kiln of the above dimensions will contain 699 tons of copper ore, or 700 tons.

REFERENCES TO THE PLATE.

- B, Body of the kiln.
 W, Wall of the kiln and receivers.
 R, Parallel receivers.
 C, Cross receivers.
 F, Flues in front wall.
 T, Top flue of the kiln.
 S, Flues from kiln to the receiver.
 A, Apertures of communication.
 V, Vent holes.

N° XVIII.

A LETTER OF ARCHBISHOP WILLIAMS, WHILE FELLOW OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE. Vol. iii. p. 97.

Right Wor.

THE concurrence of wisdom and affection, in your last action of intending the remove of your son, made me silent in perswading or dissuading one way or other; though, I confess, I like better of his continuance, considering his

Plan of a Kiln
 for burning
PYRITACEOUS COPPER ORES
 & Extracting the SULPHUR.

SECTION

late desire to his book, and profitable endeavours thence amounting; w<sup>ch</sup>, if it were not so surely, love shou'd not so blind me, as to abuse your wor. with any the like relation. For though I confess I affect him more than I think I shall ever do kinsman after him; yet, as Pliny speaks of his friend, Amo cum judicio, eoq. magis quo magis amo.

His scholarship being gone, upon his return from London I was bold to put him unto fellows commons, until, either in this or some other coll. I shall enquire out some fellowship for him; of the w<sup>ch</sup> preferment he shall not be capable until he be full bachelor of arts; and that will be Easter at soonest. This removing of him to our commons, will be some ten pounds a year more chargeable unto you; but I do hold his choice of company (wh<sup>ch</sup> now can be none but fellows and gentlemen) and his occasion of hearing their discourses, will, in your own judgment, counter-vail the charges: only this, for his entrance you are to bestow a silver piece of plate upon the college, of what price you please, above 5 marks; and to engrave your arms thereupon: and that is all the charge of admission.

He shall not want an honourable place in commencing, since you are content to undergo the charges.

I thank you, Sir, for your charges always with me. Your former so many courtesies, devoided of all requital of my side, might very well free your wor. from any future cost that way. I have indeed with my proctorship light upon a most loving and respectful lord, my lord chancellor; who hath rather an indulgent fatherly care of my estate, than a lordly respect, as I have, by many immediate favors, lately tasted.

It was likewise my good fortune, for I do not, I protest, attribute it to any merit, to give his majesty, and the prince, some extraordinary contentment at Newmarket upon Tuesday last; what time, by appointment, I preach'd before them. I had a great deal of court holy water, if I can make myself any good thereby.

I pray you, Sir, by Lent next, when your son is capable of a place, let there be some order taken, that the money you are willing to disburse for his place, be at London in some readiness for me to call for; for magistri nostri oculatas habent manus, credunt quod vident.

I have brought to execution a bond of a 100*l.* to pay 50*l.* due to me from my coz. Henry Williams. For God's sake, if you can tell me of any means to catch them, or get any money, let me have your direction. It is all I have towards the loss of time, expence of money, and toiling of my body, w<sup>ch</sup> I had in my good uncle's executorship. Thus ceasing to trouble you further at this time, as not knowing how long this letter may be in coming, I recommend my service to your wor. and it to God's protection. Resting ever,

Your wor. to command to the uttermost of his power,

JOHN WILLIAMS.

St. John's Coll. in Cam.

this 22d Nov. 1611.

N<sup>o</sup> XIX.

THE BISHOP OF LINCOLN'S (WILLIAMS) LETTER TO SIR JOHN WYNN OF GWEDIR, BART. AFTER HIS LORDSHIP LOST THE GREAT SEAL. Vol. iii. p. 97.

Sir,

WITH the remembrance of my love and best affections unto you—Being very sensible of that great good will you have ever borne me, I thought it not unnecessarie to take this course with you, which I have done with noe one other freynd in the worlde, as to desire you to be noe more troubled with this late accident befallen unto me, than you shall understand I am myselfe. There is nothinge happened which I did not foresee, and (sithence the death of my dear master) assuredlye expect; nor laye it in my power to prevent, otherwise than by the sacrificinge of my poor estate, and that which I esteeme farre above the same, my reputation. I knowe you love me to well, to wish that I shold have been lavishe of either of these, to continue longer (yeat noe longer then one man pleas'd) in this glorious miserye and splendid slaverye, wherein I have lived (if a man maye call such a toilinge a livinge) for these five years almost. By loosinge the seale, I have lost nothinge, nor my servants, by any fault of myne; there being nothinge either layde, or soe much as whispered to my charge. If we have not the opportunitye we hadd before to serve the kinge, we have much more conveniencye to serve God; which I doe embrace as the onely end of Gods love and providence towards me, in this sudden alteration.

For your sonne Owen Wynn (who, together with my debte, is all the object of my wordlye thoughts and cares) I will performe towards him all that he can have expected from me, if I live; and if I dye, I have performed it all-readye.

You neede not feare any misse of me, beinge soe just and reserved in all your desires and requests; having alsoe your eldest sonne near the kinge, and of good reputation in the court, who can give you a good accompt of any thinge you shall recommend unto him.

Hopinge therefore that I shall ever hold the same place I did in your love; which was first fixed on my person, not my late place, and which I will deserve by all the friendlye and lovinge offices which shall lie in my power; I end with my prayer unto God for the continuance of your health; and doe rest your very assured lovinge freynd,

and cozen,

JO. LINCOLN.

Bugdon, 1 Dec<sup>r</sup> 1625.

Directed to my very much honored worthy freynd and cozen, Sir John
Wynne, Kn<sup>t</sup> and Bar<sup>t</sup>.

N° XX.

EXPORTS OF POTATOES FROM THE PORT OF CONWY, TO SHEW
THE CULTIVATION OF THAT USEFUL ROOT IN SO SMALL A
DISTRICT. Vol. iii. p. 119.

AN account of potatoes exported and carried coastwise from the river Conwy, from the year 1758 to the year 1781, both years inclusive; as appears by the custom-house books of the port of Conwy.

Year.	Bushels.	Year.	Bushels.
1758,	1,006.	1770,	1,141.
59,	260.	71,	4,358.
60,	nil.	72,	9,685.
61,	nil.	73,	9,334.
62,	180.	74,	4,992.
63,	nil.	75,	13,653.
64,	nil.	76,	10,460.
65,	nil.	77,	11,356.
66,	2,129.	78,	5,928.
67,	252.	79,	13,318.
68,	132.	80,	13,200.
69,	180.	81,	5,140.

---

Total, 106,704.

N. B. Before the year 1758, all Nant-Conwy was obliged to import this necessary article.

N<sup>o</sup> XXI.

LETTER FROM EDWARD EARL OF CONWY, ABOUT
UNROOFING, &c. THE CASTLE OF CONWY.

Vol. iii. p. 127.

Hono<sup>ble</sup> friends,

I HAUE had the honour to receive yo<sup>r</sup> letter of the 20th Sept. in which you are pleas'd to enquire of me, whether my servant Milward doth act by my order, for the taking down of the lead, timber, and iron, of Conway castle: in answer to which question, I doe by this acknowledg it to be my act and deed; and that the said Milward is employed by me to dispose of the timber and iron, according to such directions as I gaue him; and to transporte the lead into Ireland, where I hope it will be more serviceable to his ma<sup>tie</sup>, then it was in this country. And having this opportunity of addressing myselfe to you, I humbly beseech you to take off the restraint which you haue put vpon his proceedings, and to affoord him yo<sup>r</sup> favour in it; for I am already prejudiced by the losse of shipping, and an opportune season for transportation of the lead: yet I shall esteeme this as a particular obligation vpon mee, and be ready to expresse it by all the service in my power to every one of you, that you are pleased to grant this att my request; which otherwise may put me to some trouble and delay. And I doubt not of meeting occasions to testifie my being,

Hon<sup>ble</sup> Sirs,

Yo<sup>r</sup> affectionate and obedient serv<sup>t</sup>

CONWAY and KILULTA.

Ragley, in Warwickshire,

6th October, 1665.

Sup<sup>r</sup> scriptio.

For the hono<sup>ble</sup> Thomas Bulkely, Esq; Colonel Wynn, Hugh Wynn, Esq; Thomas Vaughan, Esq; his ma<sup>ties</sup> Deputy Livetennants in North Wales.

N<sup>o</sup> XXII.

HOSPITALITY AT BODSCALLAN DURING THE TIME OF THE LATE ROBERT WYNN, ESQ. Vol. iii. p. 133.

A Bill of Fare of the Freeholders Christmas Dinner at Bodscallan.

60 or 70 used to dine at the two tables.

No other liquour but black strap, 7 years old, being 24 bushels to a hogshead, permitted to be drunk on St. John's day.

N.B. also some wheat roasted and thrown into this beer, to ripen it.

2 legs of boiled mutton and dressed turneps.	A rump of boiled beef and dressed cabbage Rem <sup>d</sup> by sirloin of roast beef.	Boiled pork and potatoes.
Fruit pudding, baked.	Roasted turkey.	Mutton pye.
Saddle of roasted mutton.	Goose with sweet groat pudding under it.	Custard pudding.
Boiled suet pud- ding.	19 minced pies.	Legs of roasted pork.
Mutton pie.	Goose with sweet groat pudding.	Fruit pudding, baked.
Hand of boiled pork and potatoes.	Roasted turkey.
	Rump of beef boiled; Rem <sup>d</sup> by sirloin of roast beef.	2 legs of mutton and dressed turneps.

SECOND TABLE.

Boiled leg of mutton.	Boiled beef.	Dressed roots.
Baked pudding.	Goose and sweet groat pudding.	Mutton pie.
Mutton pie.	Minced pies, a dozen.	Baked pudding.
Pease pudding.	Goose and sweet groat pudding.	Leg of mutton.
	Leg of boiled pork and potatoes.

N° XXIII.

ADDRESS OF THE INHABITANTS OF CAERNARVONSHIRE TO RICHARD CROMWELL.

The humble addresse of the justices of peace, the gentry, ministers, and others, your highnesse dutifull and loyal subjects the inhabitants of the county of Carnarvon,

Expresseth,

THAT the present dispensation of divine providence as to his late highnesse's death, and ordering your royall highness as successor in the government of these nations, cannot but affect us with different considerations, as well of judgment on the one, as of mercie on the other; and therefore, besides our requests to the All wise disposer of these providences, that they may have suitable improvements to his glorie, and the good of the nation, we make bold, by this our address, to expresse our acknowledgment of your highnesse in that governm<sup>t</sup>, under which, as seated in your father, of happie memorie, judgement did runne down like water, and righteousness as a mightie streame; pietie was promoted, and the enemies of truth and peace were discountenanced; and these our nations were made the habitation of justice, and mountain of holiness. And seeing we find that the God of heaven, (in whose hands are the hearts of princes) hath cloathed your highness with a spirit, by which he hath fitted you for the management of the weightie affairs of these nations, and the conduct of this great people, we looke upon ourselves as concerned to beg of the Lord, that he wo<sup>d</sup> prosper your counsels, and high undertakings for the reformed religion abroad, and reformation at home. Beseeching also your highnesse, that, treading in your fathers steps, you wo<sup>d</sup> goe on where he began, and answer the great expectations of the nation, in the suppression of hæresie, superstition, profanesse, and injustice, and in supporting the divine ordinances of magistracie and ministerie; in being a father to those that fear the Lord, and in making your person and government awfull in the hearts of all your people, by your appearance in the defence of those divine truths that tend to the exalting of Christ, and the quiet of these nations. And for your highness happy progress herein, you will have prayer of

Y<sup>r</sup> highnesse most faithfull serv<sup>ts</sup>,

Thomas Madryn.

John Jones, Minister,

Ellis Rowlands,

Rob<sup>t</sup> Jones, Min<sup>r</sup>,

David ap Rob<sup>t</sup>,	Henry Glynne,
Evan Lloyd,	Owen Robert,
Gruffyth Jones,	Will<sup>m</sup> Richard,
Rob<sup>t</sup> Owen,	David Evans,
Hugh Gwynne,	Thomas Owen,
Richard Glynne,	Will<sup>m</sup> Lloyd.
Owen Hughes,
William Owen,

N° XXIV.

CHARTER OF GWENWYNWYN TO THE MONKS OF STRATH-
MACHEL. Vol. iii. p. 203.

OMNIBUS sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis tam presentibus quã futuris notum sit, quod ego Wenynwyn filius Owen Kyfciliog dedi Deo et gloriosæ virgini matri et Monachis de Stradmchell, pro salute animæ meæ in liberam et quietam et perpetuam eleemosynam omnes pasturas totius provinciæ quæ dicitur Kyfciliog infra istos terminos, scilicet Avon Maen melyn, usq; ad Llwyn y groes, & inde in directum usq; ad blaen nant hannag, & inde a nant hannang usq; ad ejus Aber, inde usq; ad Abernant garth branddu, & per longitudinem ipsius rivuli usque ad suum blaen, & inde indirectū usq; ad Carneddwen, & inde usq; ad Gobleiddie & a Pen Gobleiddie blaen nant tylinge usq; ad suum Aber, & inde Bache usq; ad Aber Dyfyngwm inde per Dyfyngwm usque ad ejus ortum, & inde usque ad Relligogey & inde usque ad Rhydiol, & per Rhydiol usque ad gwrydkay & inde Rhydiol iterum usque ad Aber Kamddwr Kyfciliog & ab Aber Kamddwr Kyfciliog usque ad ejus ortum, & inde in directum usque ad blaen Einiawn, & inde per Einiawn usque ad ejus Aber, & inde per Dyfi, usque ad Aber Dulas, & inde per Dulas usque ad ejus ortum, & inde in directum usque ad Kefn y Bwlch, & inde usq; ad blaen Llwydo, & per Llwydo usq; ad ejus Aber, & inde Dyfi, & inde usque ad Aber Llywenith & sic per Llywenith usque ad ejus ortum, & inde in directum rhyd pebyll va super Clawedog, & inde per Clawedog usque ad Gwernach & per Gwernach usque ad ejus ortum, & inde sicut ducit mons superior usque ad Rhyd Derwen, & sic per Derwen usque ad y Vyrnwy, and inde Nant er cira, usque ad Lledwēr & Ablaen Lleddwern in directum usque ad bôn Maen Melyn. Omnes itaque pasturas dedi ego prædictus Wenynwyn prænominatis monachis infra præfatos terminos.———Anno Dom. 1201.

---

N<sup>o</sup> XXV.

PENNANT'S EPITAPH IN WHITEFORD CHURCH.

This Monument is erected rather as a token of filial piety, than with a design of adding duratlon to the memory of

THOMAS PENNANT.

His active benevolence and private virtues will ensure him a more lasting remembrance in this neighbourhood.

His literary labours will obtain him immortality among those who by a laudable use of their talents have instructed and benefited mankind.

He died at Downing, his native seat, Decr. 16th, 1798, in the 73rd year of his age.

---

N<sup>o</sup> XXVI.

THOS. PENNANT'S PROTECTION AGAINST THE PRESS GANGS.

THOMAS PENNANT, the bearer, aged 25, five foot eight inches, of comely person, well proportioned, such as are rated able, with his own hair, of ffair complexion, sound of wind and limbe.

N<sup>o</sup> XXVII.

AN ACCOUNT, DRAWN UP BY RICHARD FENTON, THE HISTORIAN OF PEMBROKESHIRE, OF A PROJECT FOR AN ENLARGED EDITION OF PENNANT'S TOUR IN NORTH WALES. FROM A MS. IN THE POSSESSION OF O. B. DAVIES, ESQ., WRITTEN ABOUT 1808.

STATEMENT of facts respecting a new edition of Mr. Pennant's North Wales, which R. Fenton had contracted with Messrs. Longman & Co. and Mr. White, to superintend and enlarge to the bulk of another volume.

In consequence of a proposal made to R. F. for a new edition of Mr. Pennant's N. Wales, R. F. consulted with his friend Sir R. Hoare before he had acceded to it, who encouraged him much to undertake it; at the same time saying that he would be happy to furnish a new set of drawings for the work, and agreed with R. F. as to the propriety of writing to Mr. Pennant on the subject, which was accordingly done. To R. F.'s letter Mr. Pennant condescended to return a most polite answer, wherein, after declaring his sentiments as to the mode of publishing the work; the substance of which was, that the text of his father should not be disturbed, or as in a letter written at the same time to Mr. White, that no new matter should be intermixed with the old; he says that he is happy to think that the business was to be placed in the hands of R. F., and pays a very handsome but just compliment to Sir Richard Hoare for the proffer of his services, with an invitation to Downing when he and R. F. should pass, as they had it in contemplation to do, his way. This letter of course was shewn to Sir Richard Hoare, but neither he nor R. F. considered it as calling for any answer, and indeed, R. F. thought it might be impertinent in him as a stranger to obtrude without cause a correspondence on Mr. Pennant. R. F. soon after this went to London, and had a meeting on the above subject with the Booksellers, bringing with him Mr. Pennant's letter to form the basis of the negotiation, at the same time considering that Mr. White had full powers and authority to treat with him. It was then agreed between the parties, that Mr. Pennant's work should be published without in the least disturbing his text, and that new matter should be introduced, when it was called for, with a separating or distinguishing bracket between the original and the addition, and that any notes R. F. should insert should be particularized by the letter F. Now in this business, even suppose R. F. had acceded to a proposal totally contrary to Mr. Pennant's ideas, he was acting ministerially, and the blame, if any, should be imputable to those by whom he was employed; but R. F. wishing to conduct himself with more delicacy, conceived that the plan of publication adopted was such as could not militate against Mr. Pennant's wishes as expressed in his letter to Mr. White, where he says, that the new observations should not be intermixed with the original, that is, as R. F. and his employers seemed to understand it, incorporated. Contracts on the above plan were signed, yet not a line was written, and consequently the work of the late Mr. P. remained uncontaminated by the pen of R. F., when he received a letter from Messrs. L. & Co. shewn to Sir J. W., and afterwards another subsequent to that, containing terms too humiliating for R. F. to have acceded to, even could he have decided independently of Sir Richard Hoare, who had given his ultimatum on the subject to the Booksellers, so that R. F., though he might have insisted on his contract, that it might be no annoyance to Mr. P. who had started as editor himself, totally abandoned it.

N° XXVIII.

THE "ROYAL AND NOBLE TRIBES."

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY W. TREVOR PARKINS, ESQ;

THE following very interesting account of the ROYAL and NOBLE TRIBES was printed as an Appendix to the History of Whiteford and Holywell, with one exception the last work of Mr. Pennant, which appeared in 1796. The enumeration of the descendants of the several tribes, which forms so large a portion of this account, is to be ascribed to Pennant. The catalogues of families have been carefully prepared by him, and as they are here given, they rest upon his authority.

Different lists of the fifteen tribes are said to vary;

and the tribes are frequently numbered differently, where the names are themselves the same. Thus, in the Salisbury Pedigree Book the tribes correspond with those of Pennant, but the order is entirely different; the list commencing there with Efnjydd, whom he ranks as the 14th, and terminating with the three tribes whom he places first.

The real origin of the tribes must be looked upon as obscure. They are not noticed by Giraldus Cambrensis, who was himself the grandson of Rhys ap Tewdwr, one of their supposed founders, and who travelled through Wales with archbishop Baldwin, when he preached the Crusade there in 1187. This silence is the more remarkable, as Giraldus devoted a chapter of his Topographia Cambriæ to describe the love of the Welsh for high birth and antient genealogy, and particularly explains the manner in which their pedigrees were reckoned. If the tribes were established a century before he wrote, it is difficult to understand why he has not alluded to them.

The traditional history of the tribes, as delivered by Robert Vaughan, has been often quoted: the passage which occurs at the end of the Five Royal Tribes of Cambria is as follows:—

“ Prince Gruffydd ap Cynan, Rhys ap Tewdwr, and Bleddyn ap Cynjyn, made diligent search for the arms, ensignes, and pedegrees of their ancestors, the nobility and kings of the Britons. What they discovered by their pains in any papers and records, was afterwards by the bards digested, and put into books. And they ordained five royal tribes (there being only three before,) from whom their posterity to this day can derive themselves: and also fifteen special tribes, of whom the gentry of North Wales are, for the most part, descended. And in our books we have mention of the tribe of March, &c.; besides other tribes called Gwehelyth and Gwehelythau.”

In considering this narrative it is necessary to remember that Bleddyn ap Cynfyn, after a reign of ten years, was slain in 1072; that Gruffydd ap Cynan remained in Ireland until after the death of Bleddyn, and that he reigned from 1075 to 1136; and that Rhys ap Tewdwr, who was sovereign of South Wales from 1077 to 1089, when he was defeated and killed by Jestyn ap Gwrgant, was also an exile during the reign of Bleddyn. The narrative appears to represent these princes as acting together to carry out a common purpose, which their history shews to have been impossible: and it describes them as forming the fifteen tribes, though several of those tribes commence as late as the reign of Owain Gwynedd, the son and the successor of Gruffydd ap Cynan. It further describes them as searching for the "arms" of their ancestors, though they all lived and died before the time when hereditary arms were borne or heraldry existed.

In addition to these difficulties in the narrative, there is a further circumstance which discredits it as an authentic account of the real origin of the tribes. It is obvious that a tribe, which is the union of several families descended from a common ancestor, must be the growth of time, and come into existence slowly, and that it cannot be established in the lifetime of its ancestral patriarch; and, if this be so, it is impossible to believe that the great personages from whom the principal royal tribes derive their origin, can have exercised the power, with regard to themselves and their descendants, which is here assigned to them.

The heraldic bearings ascribed to the tribes appear to throw some further light upon their history. Those of Bleddyn ap Cynfyn seem to be adopted from the arms of the Fitzalans, the great earls of Arundel, lords of Oswestry, and long potent in the Welsh marches. Those of Jestyn ap Gwrgant are slightly altered from the arms of the earls of Gloucester and Clare. While the three lions of England, similarly changed from gold to silver, have been attributed to Gruffydd ap Cynan. It may be further noticed that Ethelystan Glodrydd, who lived towards the close of the tenth century, and Cilmin Droed-ddu, who is said to have lived much earlier, have their arms quartered; and as quartering arms was not generally adopted until the end of the fourteenth century, this circumstance has a strong significance as regards the time when the heraldry of the tribes originated.

If the royal and noble tribes could be shown to have served any important purpose, as a political or a social institution, the anachronisms which abound in their heraldry might be disregarded as matters of no real consequence; but if the tribes have played no part in history, and if their origin in all probability is due to bards and genealogists, rather than to lawgivers and princes, these manifest imperfections may assist us to determine the real period of their establishment.

The fifteen tribes belong exclusively to North Wales. They are principally found in Anglesey and Caernarvonshire, and in those parts of Denbighshire and Flintshire, which did not belong to Powis. Their distribution is exceedingly irregular, but there seems to be something local in their arrangement. The heads of both classes of tribes are a variety of chieftains differing widely in character and in importance, some of whom lived as early as the 9th century, some as late as the 12th century, and it is impossible to ascertain the grounds on which many of these persons have been selected. "Other founders," as Mr. Yorke observes in the Preface to his Royal Tribes, "are recorded, but not included in the tribes, although of greater merit than some who were honoured with that distinction."

Many difficulties will be explained if the tribes are believed to have been constituted subsequently to the reign of Owain Gwynedd, in the last years of national independence, and to have been limited to the districts which remained unconquered. The heraldic bearings, some of which appear to be more modern, may have undergone changes, and been finally determined upon at a later period. The tribe of March, which Mr. Pennant classes as the XVIth noble tribe, includes a number of families that trace their descent from Tudor Trevor, and belong all of them to Powis. This tribe has no connection with the rest, and its formation is certainly more recent.

It is possible that the tribes may, in some degree, derive their origin from the old tribal system, which appears by the ancient laws of Wales to have once been general. In those laws the "chief of kindred," the Pencenedd, is described as an important personage, chosen as it seems to represent all the members of the kindred, who were bound together by a variety of regulations. A number of provisions made it necessary for a freeman to have an accurate acquaintance with the history of his family, and encouraged, if they did not occasion, that fondness for genealogical learning which caused the wonder of Giraldus.

It was the duty of the bards to preserve this learning, and they continued through the whole of the middle ages to be "the recorders of the arms of the Welsh gentry, and the grand repositories of the genealogies of families." They depended upon the favour of the rich and powerful, and as they were necessarily inclined to flatter the vanity of their patrons, the accounts which have been handed down by them are not always similar.

The royal and noble tribes, whatever may have been the causes which led to their formation, are a highly interesting record, including many families, and of great value for the historian as well as the genealogist. Pennant's account of them, which is here reprinted, still remains the best. Mr. Yorke, in his Royal Tribes, has collected many anecdotes, which he has told agreeably, and the lovers of biography will always find amusement from his somewhat desultory pages. But his knowledge was less accurate; and as regards the real history of the tribes, he has added scarcely anything to the clearer outline of his predecessor.

NOTE.

An Ordinary of the armorial bearings of many Welsh families will be found in the Archæologia Cambrensis for 1851 (Vol. 2 of the second series). The compiler, who signs himself A. C., apparently for Anglo-Cambrian, prefaces this Ordinary with an interesting letter, which contains some valuable observations on the history of Heraldry in Wales. T.P.

V. ROYAL TRIBES OF CAMBRIA.

THE FIVE ROYAL TRIBES.

---

The Five Royal Tribes of Cambria, from the 'British Antiquities revived:' By ROBERT VAUGHAN, Esquire, of Hengwrt, in Merioneth- shire.<sup>(1)</sup>

I.

GRYFFITH AP CYNAN, King of North Wales, is the first registered in our books. He was the grand-child of prince Iago ap Edwal, whose son Cynan was forced to fly into Ireland for safety, where he married Ranullt, daughter of Auloedd, king of Dublin, Man, and the Isles, and the relict of Mathganyrn, king of Uls- ter, and had issue by her this Griffith.—**He beareth*
gules, three lioncels passant in pale barry argent, armed azure.

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

WYNNE3, ... of Pengwern, Merionethshire.

<sup>(1)</sup> Robert Vaughan of Hengwrt died in 1666. His British Antiquities Revi- ved was published in 1662, and a second edition was printed at Bala in 1834.
Pennant has added to each tribe a list of the descendants in the male and female line; no such list being given by Robert Vaughan, in his brief account of the five Royal Tribes. T.P.

* Most of his descendants give the coat of his son Owain Gwynedd, viz.
xert, three eagles displayed in fess or.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

WYNNES,	... of Gwydir, Caernarvonshire. of Wynnstay, Denbighshire. of Bodscallan, and Berth ddu,	} Caernar- of Conwy, of Maes Mochnant, Denbighshire. of Ystymcegid. of Clynneney, Caernarvonshire.
LLOYD,	... of Rhiwaedog, Merionethshire, now Dolben.
POWELL,	... of Penmachno, Caernarvonshire.
DAVIES,	... of Tal-llynt ar deni,	} Merionethshire.
PRYSE,	... of Yscarweddan,
ANWYL,	... of Park.

II.

RHYS AP TEWDWR MAWR, (the second Royal Tribe) who took upon him the government of South Wales, A.D. 1077.—Gules, a lion rampant or, within a bordure indented.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

WYNNES,	... of Dole Bachog.
	... of Llan Erfyl, Montgomeryshire.
ST. OWEN AP	} of Tal-y-llyn, Merionethshire.
GWILIM,
WYNN,	... of Coed-llai, or Leeswood, Flintshire.
OWEN,	... of Cefn Hafod.
LLOYDS,	... of Plâs uwch Clawdd, Denbighshire.

- KYNASTONS, ... of Morton. of Llwyn-y-Mapsis.
                                   of Pont-y-Byrsley.
- WILLIAMS,           { of Hinchinbroke, Huntingdonshire, of { whom Cromwell, the Protector.
- NANNEYS,     ... of Nanney, Merionethshire.
- MAURICES,    ... of Lloran, Shropshire.
- KYFFINS,     ... of Bodfach, Montgomeryshire. of Maenan, Caernarvonshire. of Glasgoed, Shropshire.
- TANATS,<sup>1</sup>     ... of Abertanat, } Montgomeryshire.
 MEREDYDD, ... of Glantanat, }
- POWELS,     ... of Whittington, Shropshire.
- JONES,        ... of Treweithian.
- MAESMOR,    ... of Maesmor, Denbighshire.
- HUGHES,     ... of Gwerclas, Merionethshire.

IV.

ETHELYSTAN GLODRYDD, (the fourth Royal Tribe) Prince of the *country between Wye and Severn. He was the son of Cyhelyn ap Ifor, by Rhiengar, the daughter and heir of Gronw ap Tudor Trevor, from whom he had derived to him the title of the earldom of Hereford. Athelstan, King of England, was his god-father.—Ethelystan, (or, as he is sometimes called, Elystan) bore two coats quartered, azure, three boars heads caboched sable,

* The country between these two rivers was antiently called Ferlys; and it had its own princes, independent of the princes of South Wales.

langued gules, tusked or. His mother's coat, parted per bend sinister ermine and ermines; over all a lion rampant or.

DESCENDANT EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

CLYN, ... of Clyn, Shropshire.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

PRICES, ... of Cery,
                   of Bodfach, } Montgomeryshire. of Newtown, } of Penarth.
                   of Park.
                   of Pilale, Radnorshire.
                   of Llanbister.

OLIVERS, ... of Nevoddwen. of Llangyniw.

LLOYDS, ... of Cery, Montgomeryshire. of Mochdre.

WYNNS, ... of Gellidywyll. of Llanfendigedd.

OWEN, ... of Rhiw Saeson, Montgomeryshire.

PHILIPS, ... of Llan Ddewi.

VAUGHANS, ... of Bugeildy. of Pant-y-Garreg.

MEREDYDD, ... of Llanasan.

OWEN, ... of Morbend.

MORRIS, ... of Cery, Montgomeryshire.

JAMES, ... of Croesgynan, Montgomeryshire.

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

- WILLIAMS,* ... of Tame. Earl of Abingdon.
 NEWTONS, ... of Heathley.
 JONES, ... of Craftwyn, Caernarvonshire. of Dól in Edeirnion, } Merionethshire. of Dól-y-Môch.        }
 MYTTLEY, ... of Myttley.

PRINCE Griffith ap Cynan, Rhys ap Tewdwr, and Blethyn ap Cynfyn, made diligent search for the arms, ensignes, and pedegrees of their ancestors, the nobility and kings of the Britons. What they discovered by their pains, in any papers and records, was afterwards, by the bards, digested and put into books. And they ordained five royal tribes (there being only three before) from whom their posterity to this day can derive themselves: and also fifteen special tribes, of whom the gentry of North Wales are, for the most part, descended. And in our books we have mention of the tribe of March, &c., besides other tribes called Gwehelyth and Gwehelaethau.

* Lord Williams, of Tame, was made Lord President of the Marches of Wales, in the first year of Queen Elizabeth; and died, I believe, the same year, at Ludlow Castle, where the courts of the Marches were then held.

THE FIFTEEN TRIBES.

---

The Fifteen Tribes of North Wales; from a MS. in the Possession of the Reverend L. Owen.<sup>(1)</sup>

I.

HWFA* AP CYNDDELW (the first of the fifteen tribes) lived in the time of Owain Gwynedd, prince of North Wales. Some books of pedigrees allege that he was steward to the said Prince.† His office, by inheritance, was to bear the Prince's coronet, and to put it upon his head when the Bishop of Bangor annointed him, (as Nicholas, Bishop of Bangor, affirmeth.) His house, I believe, was Presaddfed, in Anglesey. What lordships he had besides that, are mentioned, in the Extent of North Wales, to be divided among his five sons, viz. Methusalem, Cyfnert, Jeuan, Jorwerth, and Blettrws. Many of the gentlemen of Anglesey hold lands

(1) The Reverend Lewis Owen, of Erwgoed, in the parish of Dolgelley, was rector of Llanbedr Dyffryn Clwyd. This manuscript was given by his son, the Reverend Robert Owen, to the late Colonel Vaughan of Rug, and it is now preserved with the Hengwrt manuscripts at Peniarth. It is in the handwriting of Robert Vaughan, the antiquary. Robert Owen, who died in 1850, was the last male descendant of John, the eldest son of Baron Lewis Owen, now represented in the female line by Mr. Evan Garnons Lloyd of Blaen-y-glyn, the present owner of Erwgoed. T.P.

* Commonly called Lord of Llys Llifon, in Anglesey.

† Mon. Ant. p. 131.

XV. TRIBES OF NORTH WALES.

from him by lineal descent, but who his heir is, I know not. Sir Howel-y-Pedolau* was a famous man in his time, and descended from him, being the son of Griffith ap Jorwerth ap Meredydd ap Methusalem ap Hwfa ap Cyn-ddelw. Sir Howel's mother was King Edward the Second's nurse; and he being the King's foster-brother, was in great favor with him, who knighted him. He was a very strong man, insomuch that he could break or straiten horse-shoes with his hands.—His arms he beareth gules between three lioncels rampant, a cheveron or.

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

OWEN,                    } of Bodeon, Anglesey; and Orielton, Pem- } brokeshire.
                              ... of Penrhos, Montgomeryshire.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

WILLIAMS,   ... of Llanbeder.
BOULD,       ... of Tre'r Ddól.
OWEN,       ... of Porkinton, Shropshire. of Llanvaethley.
MORRIS,     ... of Tre Jorwerth.
WYNNES,    ... of Bodjchen, of Bodowyr,                    }
GRIFFITHS, ... of Chwaen,                    } Anglesey.
LEWIS,      ... of Presaddfed,

* Or, of the horse-shoes.

II.

* LLOWARCH AP BRAN, (the second of the fifteen tribes) lived in the time of Owain Gwynedd, and was the Prince's brother-in-law, for both their wives were sisters, the daughters of Grono ap Owain ap Edwyn, Lord of Tegaingle, (as Griffith Hiraethog, and Sir Thomas ap Jevan ap Deicws, and also an old parchment MS. written about four hundred years ago, do testify.) What office he bore under the Prince, I do not know. Some say he was Owain's steward, as in a book of Sir Thomas ap Williams of Trefriw, I found. I believe he dwelled in the township which from him is called Tref Llowarch, which hath in it Caer Gybi, (or Holyhead) and three parcels of land, bearing the name of his three sons, viz. Gwely Jorwerth ap Llowarch, Gwely Cadwgan ap Llowarch, and Gwely Madoc ap Llowarch, as in the Extent of North Wales is manifest. He had a grand-child by his son Jorwerth, called Meredydd, who, for his good services, had the freehold of the township of Escyniok, given him and his heirs for ever, by Prince Llewelyn ap Jorwerth; whose posterity, viz. Jeuan +Wyddel, and Tudur ap Howel ap Tudur, held the same by the grant aforesaid, in the twenty-sixth year of King Edward the Third, as is to be seen in the Extent Book of North Wales. Jeuan Wyddel's mother was the daughter of the Lord Cywchwr in Ireland, descended of the Earl of Kildare, of whom * Llywarch was lord of Cwmwd Menai, in Anglesey.

† Or the Irishman.

the gentlemen of Mosoglen, Bodowyr, Porthamal, and many others are descended.—He beareth argent, between three crows with ermine in their bills, a cheveron sable.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

LLOYDS,	... of Rhiwgoch ,	} Merionethshire. of Maes-y-Neuoedd ,
	of Hendre'r Mâr ,
	of Bryn Hîr .
	of Coed-y-Rhygyn .
	of Llandecwyn .
	of Cefnfaes .
	of Cae Adda .
WYNN,	... of Mosoglen .
PRICE,	... of Bodowyr ,	} Anglesey.
PARRY,	... of Bodafon ,
GRIFFITH,	... of Celynnog fawr , Caernarvonshire .
MEREDYDD,	... of Monachdy Gwyn .
	of Hafod Lwyfog .
	of Porthamal .
OWEN,	... of Ruthin , Denbighshire .

III.

GWEIRYDD AP RHYS GOCH, of the hundred of Tal-Ebolion in Anglesey. He dwelt at Caerdegog, the hamlets and tenements whereof bear the names of his children and grand-children, as Gwely Madoc ap Gweirydd, Gwely Llowarch ap Gweirydd, Gwely Howel ap Gweirydd, and Gwely Meuric ap Gweirydd, whose great grand-child Howel ap Jewan ap Ednyfed ap Meuric ap Gweirydd, enjoyed Gwely Meuric in the twenty-sixth year of Edward III.—**He beareth argent on a bend sable, three lions' heads caboched of the first.* He lived in the time of Owain Gwynedd, and of his son David ap Owain.

DESCENDANT EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

FOULKES, ... of Guernygron, Flintshire.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

LLOYD,	... of Gwardog,	} Anglesey.
WYNN,	... of Bodewryd,
HUGHES,	... of Beaumaris,

IV.

CILMIN TROED-DU† lived in the time of Merfyn Frych,‡ King of Man, being his brother's son, with whom he came from the north of Britain, when Merfyn married Esyllt, the daughter and heir of Conan Tindaethwy, king of the Britons. What offices he bore, I have not been able to find out. His posterity were wise and discreet men in all their ages; and many of them were learned in the laws in the time of the kings and princes of Wales, and were judges; as Morgeneu §Ynad ap Gwrydr, and * According to other authors, he bore argent, on a bend sable, three leopards' faces of the first.

† For a further account of Cilmin Troed-du, or Cilmin with the black foot, see Tour in Wales, vol. ii. p. 391.

‡ Merfyn Frych reigned from the year 818 to 843.—Powel's Hist. of Wales.
§ Or Judge.

Cyfnert his son, whose Law-Book is yet extant, fairly written on parchment; Morgeneu Ynad ap Madoc; Morgan Ynad ap Meuric, and Madoc Gôch Ynad. Robert ap Meredydd ap Hwlkin Llwyd, a wise and couth gentleman, lived in the time of Henry the Seventh; and of him are descended the *Glynn*s of Nanlley. His house, I believe, was Glynllifon, whence some of his descendants took the name of Glynn.—He beareth quarterly 1, argent; an eagle displayed with two heads sable; 2, argent, three fiery ragged sticks, gules; the 3d as the second; the 4th as the first. Over all, upon an escutcheon of pretence argent, a man's leg coupé a la cuisse, sable.

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

GLYNNS, ... of Hawarden Castle, Flintshire. of London.
HUGHES, ... of Bodryn.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

GLYNNS, ... of Glynllifon, } of Lleyar, } Caernarvonshire.
of Nanlley, }

V.

COLLWYN AP TANGNO is said to be Lord of Efionydd, Arduwy, and part of Llŷn: and it is true, that his progeny have, and do to this day, possess and enjoy the greatest part of the said country. His grand-children Asser, Meirion, and Gwgan, the sons of Merwydd ap

Collwyn, lived in the beginning of Griffith ap Cynan's time, as by the Life* of the said Griffith is manifest, whereby may be known what time Collwyn lived and flourished. It is said that he lived for some time in Bronwen's tower at Harlech, calling the same town after his own name Caer-Collwyn. But his said grand-children, when Griffith ap Cynan challenged the principality of Wales, lived in Llŷn, as in the said book of his life is extant. His posterity were always the noblest and best men in Efionydd and Arddudwy, next to the princes and their issue. His heir, from eldest son to eldest son, is hard to be known, in regard that by the British laws every man's inheritance was to be divided among his children, and the youngest son had the principal house; whereby every one having an equal portion of his parent's land, his posterity was forgotten.—He beareth sable, between three flower-de-luces a cheveron argent.

SIR Hewel-y-Fwyall†, descended of Collwyn, was a noble warrior, and was in the battle of Poictiers with the Black Prince, when the French King was taken prisoner: where, with his pole-ax, he behaved himself so valiantly, that the prince made him a knight, and allowed a mess of meat to be served before his ax or partizan for ever, to perpetuate the memory of his good service: which mess of meat, after his death, was carried down to be given to the poor for his soul's sake; and the said mess had eight yeomen attendants found at the king's charge, which were afterwards called Yeomen of the Crown, who had eight-pence a day of standing wages, and lasted to the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth: (as by the relation of Serjeant Roberts, of Hafod-y-Bîch, near Wrexham, and Robert Turbridge, of Caerfallen, near Ruthin, esquire, is recorded in the history of the noble house of Gwydir, wherein you may find this relation more at large.) Besides, he had the constablership of the castle of Crickieth, where he kept house; and the rent of Dee-mills at Chester, for the term of his life. His father was Griffith ap Howel ap Meredydd ap Einion ap Gwrganen ap Merwydd ap Collwyn. His arms* were sable, between three flower-de-luces a pole-ax argent.

* Written in the British tongue, by a very antient bard. † Of the Ax.

DESCENDANT EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

WILLIAMS, ... of Aberarch, Caernarvonshire.

DESCENDANTS EXTINGUISHED, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

BODWRDA,	... of Bodwrda ,	} Caernarvonshire .
BODVELS,	... of Madryn ,
JONES,	... of Castell-March ,
WYNN,	... of Pant-du .
	of Pennardd .
	of Bodsanan .
	of Pen-y-Berth .
	of Pen Coed .
LLOYD,	... of Bodfan .
	of Gardd .
	of Dol-y-Pennhyn .
RHYDDERCHS,	of Tregaenan .

* Sir Howel y Fwyall's.

VAUGHANS,	... of Plás Hên , Caernarvonshire .
	of Perkin ,	} Merionethshire .
OWEN,	... of Plás-du ,
	of Maentwrog ,
ELLIS,	... of Ystymllyn , Caernarvonshire .

VI.

NEFYDD HARDD, of Nant Conwy, lived in the time of Owain Gwynedd, who gave Idwal his son to be fostered by him; but Nefydd, for what cause I know not, caused Dunawt his son to kill the young prince, at a place called of him Cwm Idwal. Wherefore Nefydd and his posterity were degraded, and of gentlemen were made bond-men of Nant Conwy. His son Rhân, to expiate that foul murder, gave the lands whereon the church of Llanrwst was built, whose grand-child, (and Madoc Gôch ap Jorwerth ap Gwrgynon ap Cyfnerth, his son) were stewards to Llewelyn ap Jorwerth, Prince of Wales, (as Griffith Hiraethog says.) He dwelled at Crygnant, as I take it, near Llanrwst.—**He beareth argent, three spears' heads imbrued, sable pointed upwards.*

DESCENDANTS EXTINGUISHED, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

EVAN MORGAN,†	of Gwibernant , Caernarvonshire .
EVANS,	... of Llanrwst .
DAVIES,	... of Coed-y-Mynydd .

* Other books say, that he bore argent, a cheveron inter three javelins sable, pointed upwards gules.

† This family produced the learned Dr. W. Morgan, Bishop of St. Asaph, who translated the Bible into the Welsh tongue.—Tour in Wales, iii. p. 166.

VII.

MAELOC CRWM, of Llechwedd-isaf, and Creuddyn,* lived in the time of Prince David ap Owain Gwynedd, about the year of our Lord 1175, (as Sir Thomas ap Williams' book averreth.) What offices he bore, I have not learned. The most famous men descended of him were, Sir Thomas Chaloner, and others of that name, descended of David Chaloner, of Denbigh, whose ancestor Trahaiarn Chaloner was so called, because his grandfather Madoc Crwm of Chaloner had lived in a town in France called Chaloner, whence he took that name.—He beareth argent, on a cheveron sable, three angels or.

DESCENDANT EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

CHALONERS, ... of Gisborough, Yorkshire.

DESCENDANT EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

THOMAS, ... of Caer Pill.

VIII.

MARCHUDD AP CYNAN, Lord of Abergeleu: His house was Bryn Ffenigl. He lived, (as Sir Thomas ap Williams' book saith) in the time of Rodri Mawr,† King of the Britons, about the year of our Lord 849.‡ Of him was Ednyfed Fychan descended, who being general of the prince's§ host, was sent to the Marches, to defend the * Both these places are in Caernarvonshire.

† Roderick the Great. ‡ Dr. Powel says 856. § Llewelyn ap Iorwerth.

frontiers from the approach of the English army, which was ready to invade them, under the command of Ranulph, earl of Chester, (who met them) and killed three of their chief captains and commanders, and a great many of the common soldiers. The rest he put to flight, and triumphantly returned to his prince; who, in recompence of his good service, gave him, among many gifts and honors, a new coat of arms; for the coat, which he and his ancestors had always given before, was the coat of Marchudd, being gules, a Saracen's head erased proper, wreathed or.—The new coat was thus displayed, gules between three Englishmen's heads, a cheveron ermin.—From the death of the last Llewelyn, Ednyfed's posterity were the greatest in Wales, (as by the works of the bards and records is very manifest.) If I should go about to reckon all the famous men descended of him, it would require more time than I can well spare. Let it be sufficient to remember Henry the Seventh, king of England, Henry the Eighth, Edward the Sixth, Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, all of whom were descended lineally and paternally of Ednyfed Fychan, who likewise was descended of Marchudd.

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

- WYNNS,       ... of Melay, now Lord Newborough. of Garthewyn.
- FOULKES,     ... of Eriviet.
- LLOYDS,       ... of Plás Madog, in Llansannan; now of Plás Power.

- *PRICE, ... of Maentwrog, Merionethshire; now of Gerddi Bluog.
MORGAN, ... of Gwlgre, Flintshire.
GRIFFITH, ... of Garreg Lwyd.

DESCENDANTS EXTINGUISHED, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

- WYNNS, ... of Dyffryn Aled, Denbighshire.
... of Trefarth.
ROBERTS, ... of Gwasane, Flintshire.
LLOYD, ... of Gydros.
... of Dól.
... of Trebul.
HUGHES, ... Bishop of St. Asaph.
SMITH, ... Chancellor of St. Asaph.
VAUGHANS, ... of Hên Blás and Bronheulog.
LLEWELIN, ... of Llanelian.
JENKIN, ... of Efenechtyd.
JONES, ... the Regicide.†
WILLIAMS, ... of Cochwillan, Maenol, Marl, Meillion-
... of ydd, and Ystumcolwyn.
HOWEL MAELINYDD.
CONWAY, ... of Nant.
GRIFFITH, ... of Festiniog.
HUGHES, ... of Cefn y Garlleg.

* Of this family was Edmund Price, Archdeacon of Merionydd, who collected the Psalms into Welsh metre.

† Vide Tour in Wales, ii. p. 265.

IX.

HEDD MOLWYNOG,* of Uwch-Aled, (as Sir Thomas ap Williams' book hath it) was steward to Prince David ap Owain. His lands and lordships were Llanfair Talyhaern, Dyffryn Elwy, and Nanhaled, the which his three sons, viz. Meuter, Gwillonon, and Gwrgi, divided, and their posterity have enjoyed, and do still enjoy, some part of them. Rhys ap Jewan ap Llewelyn Chwith of Chwibren, was an esquire of the body to King Edward the Fourth, (as the book of Evan Lloyd Jeffrey hath it) : he and his cousin-german, David Jenkin, were very turbulent in the Lancastrian war.

Meuric Llwyd, of Llwyn y Maen, near Oswestry, was a valiant captain under the earl of Arundel, who by his prowess atcheived a very noble coat of arms, viz. The field argent, an eagle displayed with two heads sable.

And here, I think, Jolo Goch,† Owain Glyndwr's bard, whose mother was the Countess of Lincoln, (as Griffith Hiraethog saith) may well bear a place among the worthy descendants of this tribe; who, for his lofty strain, and singular skill in British poetry, was and is as famous and renowned as any that hath been these four hundred years.—And also ‡ Tudur Aled, another learned bard, and a doctor of the chair in his profession; but their learned works will make them famous and ever glorious.—He beareth sable, a hart passant argent, attired or.

* He lived at a place called Yr Henllys, in the parish of Llanfair Talyhaern.

† Oliver the Red.

‡ This celebrated poet lived about the year 1490.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

- LLOYDS,* ... of Havodunnos, Denbighshire. of Llwyn-y-Maen, near Oswestry.
 of Llanforda.
 of Dre-newydd, in Whittington parish.
 of Blaen-y-Ddól.
- PARRY, ... of Llangerniw.
- WYNN, ... of Bryn Cynrick.
- GRIFFITHS, ... of Bodychwyn. of Hafod-y-Garreg.
 of Blaen Iâl, Denbighshire. of Plás Newydd.

X.

BRAINT HIR, of Is-dulas, lived, as I conjecture, about the time of the sons of Roderic† the Great. His posterity did not much increase, for there are not many, at present, known to be descended from him, yet some there are.—His arms are vert, a cross flowery or.

DESCENDANTS.

- VAUGHANS, ... of Pont-y-Gwyddel, Mrs. Gifford, of Nerquis.

* These Lloyds, descendants of Hedd Molwynog, were the first persons that bore that name in North Wales.

† Others say that he lived about the year 650, in the time of Cadwallon, whose nephew and chancellor he was.

XI.

**MARCHWEITHIAN* was called Lord of Is-aled; his lands were Carwed Fynydd, Dincadfael, Prees, Beryn, Llyweni, Gwytherin, and many other townships within the hundred of Is-aled, as appears by the extent of the lordship and honor of Denbigh, made in the eighth year of Edward the Third; at what time, Cynwric Fychan, being the ninth in descent from Marchweithian, lived; whereby some aim may be made at the time he flourished.

The families and houses descended of him are many, but the most eminent are these, Berain, formerly incorporated to the house of Llyweni, by the marriage of Mrs. Catherine, of Berain,† the daughter and heir of Tudor ap Robert Fychan, of Berain, esquire, with John Salisbury, the son and heir and of Sir John Salisbury, of Llyweni, knight; after whose death she married Richard Clough, esquire, of Denbigh, a rich merchant; after whose decease she married Maurice Wynne, of Gwedir, esquire, and had issue by both; and last of all she married Edward Thelwall, of Plás y Ward, esquire. Mr. Robert ap Rees, descended of this tribe, and ancestor to the family of Rhiwlas, was chaplain to Cardinal Wolsey, and a very great man in the reign of Henry the Eighth.—Ellis Price, of Plás Yolyn, doctor of the law, who, I believe, was one of the scholars of Cambridge that disputed with Throgmorton, and other scholars of Oxford, at Cambridge, in * His court is said to be Llys Llyweni.

† See her singular story in vol. ii. p. 141.

the year of our Lord 1532, and got the best; (as James Caius, in the first book of The Antiquities of Cambridge, affirmeth.) He bore, in a shield gules, a lion rampant argent, armed azure.

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

- PRICE ... of Rhiwlas, of Boch-y-rhaiadr, } Meirionethshire.
 WYNN, ... of Llangynhafal, Denbighshire, PANTON, ... of Coleshill Manor, Flintshire.
 PARRY, ... of Tywysog, and Pistill.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

- PRICE, ... of Giler, Denbighshire. of Tyddyn Sieffrey. of Cwmmein.
                   of Fedw dég.
                   of Llanrwst.
                   of Dugoed, in Penmachno.
 WYNN, ... of Voelas, Denbighshire. of Plás Newydd, Yspytty. of Hafod-y-maidd.
 FOULKES, ... of Llŷs Llywarch. of Carwed Fynydd, and Meriadog.
 VAUGHANS, ... of Pant Glás. of Blaen-y-Cwm.
                   of Llysfaen.
 WILLIAMS, ... of Aberconwy. of Hafod Garregog.
 DAVIES, ... of Llathwryd.
 GETHIN, ... of Cerniogeu, Denbighshire.

XII.

EDWIN, commonly called King of Tegaingle,* was the twelfth tribe, whose son Owain had a daughter called Angharad, married to Griffith ap Cyman, king of Gwynedd, or North Wales. Many worthy and noble gentlemen in Flintshire and Denbighshire are descended of him, as the Bishop of Bangor, now living—(I believe he means William Roberts, D.D. who was consecrated Bishop of Bangor, in September 1637, and died at Llandurnog, August 12th, 1665, aged 80.) Thomas Owen, judge of ———, father of Sir Roger Owen, late of Cundover, knight. †Howel Gwynedd, a very valiant and stout man, who, siding with Owen Glyndwr, against Henry the Fourth, did much annoy the English; but on a time, being more secure than he ought to have been, he was taken by his adversaries of the town of Flint, who, upon a place called Moel-y-Gaer, cut off his head; and long time before, one Owain ap Uchtryd, being grandson of Edwin, kept by force of arms all Tegaingle under subjection, notwithstanding all the power of the king, lords, and country to the contrary; and the third year, having his pardon, he delivered the owners their lands.—He beareth argent, between four Cornish choughs armed gules, a cross floury engrailed sable.

* Or Englefield; it is a division of Flintshire, consisting of three hundreds, viz. Rhuddlan, Coleshill, and Prestatyn.

† For a fuller account of Howel Gwynedd, see vol. i. pp. 107, 108.

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

- LLOYDS, ... of Pentre Hobin, now of Trefor.
 WYNNS, ... of Copparleni.
 PARRIES, ... of Llaneurgain.

DESCENDANTS EXTINGUISHED, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

- MOSTYNS, ... of Mostyn, &c. }
 LLOYDS, ... of Farm, } Flintshire.
 WYNNS, ... of Nhercwys, }
 EDWARDS, ... of Stansty. of Rhual.
                   of Gallt-y-Celyn, and Crogen Iddon. of Llangollen Fechan.
 EVANS, ... of Coed Llai, and Treuddyn.
 HUGHES, ... of Diserth.
 JONES, ... of Gvernaffield, and Mold.
 OWENS, ... of Coed Llai, Gwasane, Caerfallwch,
                   Treuddyn, Arddunwynt, and Hope.
 PRICE, ... of Llwyn Ynn.
 BROMFIELDS, ... of Bromfield.

XIII.

EDNOWAIN BENDEW was Lord of Tegaingle in the year of our Lord 1079 (as the book of Ednop saith.) He is said by Peter Ellis, the counsellor, to be chief of the fifteen tribes. Of him are descended Ithel ap Rotpert, Archdeacon of Tegaingle, the Bithels, and a great many worthy families besides.—He beareth argent, between three boars heads, a cheveron sable.

The residence of Ednowain is supposed by some to have been at Ty-maen, in the parish of Whiteford, (see History of Whiteford and Holywell, p. 119.)

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

LLOYD,	.. of Wygfair ,	} Flintshire.
FOULKES,	... of Mertyn ,
GRIFFITH,	... of Rhual ,
HUGHES,	... of Halkyn ,
	of Bagillt ,
GRIFFITH,	... of Plás isa' , Caerwys ,	}

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

WYNNS,	... of Galedlom , and Caerwys ,	} Flintshire
PUGHE,	... of Skeifiog ,
PIERS,	... of Llanasaph ,
PARRY,	... of Coleshill , and Basingwerk ,
GRIFFITH,	... of Pant y Llongdu ,
	of Caerwys Hall ,
EVANS,	... of Llaneurgain ,
JONES,	... of Skeifiog ,
WILLIAMS,	... of Clommendy Skeifiog ,
HUGHES,	... of Coed-y-Brain ,	}

XIV.

EFNYDD, commonly called the son of **Gwenllian*, the daughter of Rhŷs ap Marchen, who was lord of seven townships in Dyffryn Clwyd, called Ruthin land, viz. Tref-ben-y-Coed, and Fenechdyd, y Groeslwyd, Pant Meugen, and three more, all freehold land. He had no children besides Gwenllian aforesaid, who by the interest of Blethyn ap Cynfyn, king of Wales, was given in marriage to this Efnuydd's father, being nearly related to the said king, who gave him likewise seven townships, to wit, Almor, Tref-alen (or Alynton), Gresford in Bromfield, Lleprog-fawr, Lleprog-fechan, and Tref-y-nant, in Tegaingle, &c. He had a daughter called Hunydd, who was the wife of Meredydd ap Blethyn, prince of Powys. Of him was descended John Almor, one of the marshals of the hall to king Henry the Seventh, father of John Almor, serjeant at arms to king Henry the Eighth, (as I think,) who bare azure, a lion rampant or, armed and langued gules; and of Sir William Meredith, who lived in Yorkshire, or somewhere else in England.—He bare a lion rampant saliant or, wherewith he quartered his mother's coat, being azure, between three nags heads erased argent, a fess or.

DESCENDANTS EXTINGUISHED, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

SIMUNT,	... of Coed Llai ,	} Flintshire.
PRICHARD,	... of Caergwrley ,

* This Gwenllian was stiled the heiress of Dyffryn Clwyd, in regard that she possessed a very great portion of it.

- ROGERS, ... of Flint.
 MEREDYDD, ... of Trefalen. of Pentre Bychan. of Stansty.
 ALMORS, ... of Almor.
 ALYNTONS, ... of Alynton.
 LLOYDS, ... of Gresford, and Alynton.

XV.

EDNOWAIN AP BRADWEN* is by writers called Lord of Meirionydd: but surely the princes and their issue were always lords of Meirionydd; howbeit it might be, that he (as others) took the same to farm, and therefore might be called lord thereof. And yet he and his issue were possessed of all Tal-y-Bont, save Nanney, and the prince's demesnes, and for the most part of Ystumanner in the like manner. The offices he bore under the prince, I know not. Some books of pedigrees say that he lived in Griffith ap Cynan's time, but I think he was not so antient.† The ruins of his Llys, or palace, are to be seen in the township of Cregenau, in Tal-y-bont, Iscregenau. Llewelyn ap Tudor ap Gwyn ap Peredur ap Ednowain ap Bradwen, lived in the time of Edward the First, and did him homage with the lords and gentry of Wales, as by the said King's records, is manifest. Aaron, his grandchild, by his son Ednyfed, had two sons more eminent than the rest of his children, Ednyfed and Griffith; of the last of whom William David Lloyd, of Peniarth, esquire, lately deceased, was descended; whose inheritance is come to Margaret, the mother of Lewis Owen, of Peniarth, esquire, now living. Ednyfed ap Aaron is said to have entertained Owain Glyndwr, when he was overcome by King Henry the Fourth, the usurper, but secretly in a cave, by the sea-side, in the parish of Llan Gelynin, which of him is called **Ogof Owain*. Of this Ednyfed was descended Morgan ap Griffith ap Eincon, a courageous and stout man, who, as it is reported by his kinsmen, by chance, in the streets of the city of London, late in the night, met with king Henry the Eighth, with a small guard about him, coming to see what rule was kept in the city; and when neither would yield to the other, they drew and fought hardly, until a person, who accompanied Morgan, bade him take heed what he did, for that he feared it was the king with whom he fought. Whereupon Morgan crying mercy, yielded, and craved pardon; and the king did let him go, saying that he was a lusty man, and ever after he was called Lusty Morgan. This is a report, I cannot tell how true.

* Of Llys Bradwen, near Dolgelley. Vide vol. ii. p. 234, et seq.

† He lived in the time of Llewelyn ap Jorwerth, probably about 1194.

“Morgan hir, mawr gan Harri,

“Mae Llundain dan d'adain di.”

—He bore gules, three snakes enowed in a triangular knot argent.

* Owen's Cave.

DESCENDANT EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

OWENS, ... of Cae'r Berllan, Merionethshire.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

LLOYDS, ... of Nant-y-Mynach, and Peniarth.

OWENS, ... of Peniarth, and Morben.

GRIFFITH, ... of Garth, and Cloddiau Cochion.

Out of our antient books of pedegrees, we are enabled to add another Tribe; by no means inferior to any of the foregoing, in the respectability and number of its descendants.

XVI.

TUDOR TREVOR, the Tribe of **March*, called likewise in our books Llwyth Maelor (or the tribe of Maelor,) was the son of Ynyr ap Cadfarch, descended of Cadell Deurnllug, King of Powys. He is said to have been the founder of, and to have resided at, Whittington Castle, which continued in his posterity for many generations after. His mother was Rhiengar, daughter to Lluddocca ap Caradoc Vreichfras, earl of Hereford, who was one of the knights of King Arthur's Round Table. Tudor had large possessions in Herefordshire, in right of his mother, as well as in that country called Ferlys, which lies between the rivers Wye and Severn. He was contemporary with Howel Dda, king of Wales, whose daughter

* So called, because a great number of the gentlemen in the Marches of England and Wales are descended from him.

Angharad he married, by whom he had three sons and one daughter. Powell, of Edenhope, in his Pentarchia, describes his arms in the following manner:

Erminiis fulgens Theodori parma Trevori,
 Dat rapidum fulvumque sinistro verte leonem;
Mostonis sunt nota satis simul arma Trevoris.

Which may be thus expressed in plain English: ‘Parted per bend sinister ermine and ermines, over all a lion rampant or; the well-known arms of the Mostyns, and also of the Trevors.’

DESCENDANTS EXTANT IN THE MALE LINE.

Viscount Hambden, and Baron TREVOR.

MOSTYNS, ... of Mostyn, of Trelacre, } Baronets. of Bryngwyn.
                   of Segroit.

PENNANT, ... of Bychton.

RICHARD PENNANT, Baron Penrhyn.

JEFFRIES, ... of Acton.

EDWARDS, ... of Chirk.

WYNNE, ... of Gerwyn-fawr.

JONES, ... of Llwyn-onn.

DESCENDANTS EXTINCT, OR IN THE FEMALE LINE.

TREVOR, ... of Brynkinallt. of Pentre Cynric. of Daywen.
                   of Trefalen.

TREVOR,	... of Plás-tég .
	of Oswestry .
LLOYDS,	... of Halton .
YOUNG,	... of Bryn Yorkin .
DYMMOCK,	... of Willington .
PUGHE,	... of Llan-y-Mynach .
LLOYDS,	... of Plás isa' y Clawdd .
	of Dal-y-wern .

Here it may not be improper to mention, that though the tribes are generally considered as the nobility of Wales, yet are there many antient Welsh families of high respectability, who derive not their descent from any of them. Such as the Middletons, of Chirk castle and Gwaunynog; the Vaughans, of Glan-y-llyn, afterwards of Llwydiarth and Llangedwyn, but now extinct, who are descended from Ririd Flaidd, lord of Penllyn, &c. The Vaughans, of Cors-y-gedol; and the Wynnes, of Dol-egwyn, whose stock was Osburn Wyddel, (or the Irishman.) The Eyttons, of Leeswood; the Wynnes, of Tower; the Davises, of Gwasane (whose representative in the male line is Peter Davies, esquire, of Broughton); the Parrys, of Pwllhalog, and the Williamses, of Fron, who are descended from Cynric Efell, baron of Eglwyseg.

In Anglesey are the Williamses of Ty-fry, descended from Cadrod Hardd, (or the Handsome) lord of Talebolion; and from them the Williamses, of Nantanog, ancestors of the present Sir Watkin Williams Wynne; the Williamses of Penbedw, and the Williamses of Bodelwyddan.

Though many others may be added to these, we shall now close this account with the descendants of Brochwel Ysgithrog, prince of Powys, viz. the Blanneys of Tregynon, the Wynnes of Garth, the Lloyds of Leighton, and the Thomases of Llechweddgarth, whose present representative is Tho. Thomas, esquire, of Downing Ucha.<sup>(1)</sup>

(1) Referring to the manner in which the founders of tribes were selected, Mr. Forke writes forcibly. "Why Jestyn ap Gwrgant, a petty lord of Glamorgan, and a character in everlasting disgrace, should be thus dignified, while he was the founder only of ignominy and loss of dominion to himself, of slaughter and slavery to his country, is difficult to adjust; and that Brochwel Ysgithrog, a prince of Powis in its highest splendour, having Shrewsbury for his capital, and a chief of great power and martial character, should have his name omitted even in the fifteen tribes, is alike inscrutable." T.P.

FIVE ROYAL TRIBES.

	PAGE.
I. GRIFFITH AP CYNAN ... ..	421
II. RHYS AP TEWDWR MAWR ... ..	422
III. BLETHYN AP CYNFYN ... ..	423
IV. ETHELYSTAN GLODRYDD ... ..	424
V. JESTYN AP GWRGANT ... ..	426

FIFTEEN TRIBES.

I. HWFA AP CYNDELW ... ..	428
II. LLYWARCH AP BRAN ... ..	430
III. GWEIRYDD AP RHYS GOCH ... ..	431
IV. CILMIN TROED-DU ... ..	432
V. COLLWYN AP TANGNO ... ..	433
VI. NEFYDD HARDD ... ..	436
VII. MAELOR CRWM ... ..	437
VIII. MARCHUDD AP CYNAN ... ..	ibid.
IX. HEDD MOLWYNOG ... ..	440
X. BRAINT HIR ... ..	441
XI. MARCHWEITHIAN ... ..	442
XII. EDWIN ... ..	444
XIII. EDNOWAIN BENDREW ... ..	445
XIV. EFNYYDD ... ..	447
XV. EDNOWAIN AP BRADWEN ... ..	448

The number of Tribes in the MS. is only XV.—We retain the title, but add that of TUDOR TREVOR, or the Tribe of MARCH, as is done by some of our writers.

TRIBE OF MARCH.

	PAGE.
XVI. TUDOR TREVOR    ...    ...    ...    ...	450

I N D E X .

---

* * * When the volume is not mentioned, the figures refer to vol. i.

Aber-arch, ii. 365
Aber cascade, iii. 105
Aber Cegid, iii. 82
Aberdaron, ii. 368
Aberffraw, iii. 7
 ——— Princeps de, iii. 6
Abergeleu, iii. 147
 ——— land submerged at, ii. 110
Aber Llienawg, iii. 34
Abermenai, iii. 1
Aberystwyth, 61; iii. 186
Acton, 384
Acton Burnel, iii. 250
Ad dictam, 208
Ælian's, St., well, iii. 55, 69, 149
Aergol, ii. 26
Afon Glaslyn, ii. 342
 — Lliw, ii. 216
 — y Llan, ii. 216
Agricola, 2; ii. 26
Alberbury, iii. 212
Albrighton, iii. 242
Alyn, course of, ii. 12
Amianthus, at Rhoscolyn, iii. 69
Amlwch, iii. 64
Amobyr or Ammobragium, 283, 284
 Ancient smelting, 69
Anglesey, iii. 1—77
Aran mountain, ii. 205, 216
 — Mowddwy, ii. 205

Arenaria verna, 27
Arennig, the, ii. 205
Aria Theophrasti, iii. 112
Asaph, St., cathedral of, ii. 127, &c.
Asbestos, iii. 65
Assach, iii. 353
Atiscross, 10

B

Bacheograig, ii. 135
Bachymbyd, ii. 180
Bala, &c. ii. 204, 206
 — Deulyn, ii. 350
Bangor, in Arvon, iii. 77, 78
 ——— on the Dee, 285, 288: iii. 78
Bards, ii. 81, &c.
Bardsey island, ii. 369
Barmouth, ii. 253
Baron Hill, iii. 40
Barrow, bishop, ii. 130
Basingwerk, 30, 35, 98
Bathafarn, ii. 190
Battle of Buttington, iii. 203
 ——— Carno, iii. 182
 ——— Chester, 155
 ——— Coed Eulo, 111
 ——— Crogen, 344
 ——— Cymmryd, iii. 128
 ——— Llanjaes, iii. 34
 ——— Montgomery, iii. 192

- Battle of Mynydd Digoll, iii. 196
 ——— Shrewsbury, iii. 238
Beaumaris, iii. 25—29
 Beavers, ii. 291
Bedd Gurtheyrn, ii. 380
 — Kelert, ii. 344, &c.
 — Porus, ii. 248
 — y Deon du, iii. 79
Beddau Gwŷr Arduwy, ii. 286
Beddrawd, note on, ii. 13
Bedesme, Robert de, iii. 220
Bellot, bishop, 378
Benglog, the, ii. 313
Berth-lwyd, iii. 184, 311
Berwyn mountains, ii. 197
Bettisfield, 279
Bettws Garmon, ii. 403
 ——— in Montgomeryshire, iii. 186
 ——— Wyrion Iddon, ii. 292
Beuno, St. 46, ii. 385
Blackhall, iii. 196
Blayneys, the, iii. 174, 186, 452
Blethyn ap Cynfyn, iii. 423
Blodwell hall, iii. 207
Bod-drudau, iii. 11
Bodfach, iii. 165
Bodidris, ii. 11, 16
Bodlewyddan, iii. 155
Bodrhuddan, ii. 115
Bodscallan, iii. 131
 ——— dinner fare at, iii. 407
Boduon, ii. 374
Bodvel family, the, ii. 367
Bodychan, iii. 75
Bog Myrtle, ii. 307
Bordari, 10
Bostock, Bridget, iii. 179
Bovium or Bonium, 287
Bradwen, ii. 234; iii. 448
Braich y Dinas, iii. 110
Braint Hir, iii. 441

Brass made by the Britons, 84
Brende-tiide, ii. 19
Breos, William de, iii. 105
Brigantes, 8, 77
British coins, 88
 ——— gold, 86
 ——— posts of—
     Bryn y Castrelau, ii. 323
     — Cloddiau, ii. 62
     Bryn Gwyn, iii. 169
     Caer Careg y Frân, ii. 323
     — Cwm Glo, ii. 323
     Carn Boduan, iii. 111
     — Madryn, iii. 111
     Castell Caer Lleion, iii. 116
     Coppa yr Wylfa, iii. 148
     Dinas, iii. 143
     — Dinorddwy, ii. 322, 323
     Gwern Ddu, iii. 173
     Moel Arthur, ii. 60, 62
     — Fenlli, ii. 63
     — Garthen, 373
     — Hiraddug, ii. 61, 114
     — y Crio, ii. 62
     — y Gaer, ii. 62, 63, 138
     Montgomery, iii. 193
     Pen Caer Helen, iii. 130
     Penmaen Mawr, iii. 110
     Pen y Gaer, ii. 323
     Rhiw'r Cynr, ii. 322
     Tre'r Caeri, iii. 111
     Woodbury hill, iii. 339
     Brochwel Yscithrog, iii. 221
     Broughton, 275
     Bruce, Edward, iii. 50
     Brutus the elder, 16
     Brychan, or Bracha, ii. 236
     Bryn Dychwelwch, 113
     — Euryrn, iii. 145
     — Gwydryn, iii. 14
     Brynkinallt, 356

Brynkir, ii. 360
Brynodol, ii. 376
Bryn y Pys, 292
 — y Saethau, ii. 108
 — Yorkyn, ii. 52
Bulkeley, Sir Richard, iii. 388
Burgh, Hugh de, ii. 223
Burnel family, the, iii. 249—251
Buttington, iii. 203
Bwlch Agricola, ii. 26
 — Oerddrws, ii. 228
 — Pen y Barras, ii. 28
 — Rhiw Felen, ii. 11
 — y Cwm Brwynog, ii. 326
 — y Groes, ii. 218
 — y Maescwm, ii. 326
Bwrdd Arthur, iii. 42
Bychton, 20
Byssus Jolithus, 52

C

Cadeirfardd, ii. 84
Cader Idris, ii. 231—234
Cudfan, iii. 6
Cadwalader, iii. 6, 267
Cadwgan hall, 375
Cae Dwn, 334
 — nef, 320
Caer Arianhod, ii. 390
 — Bont, ii. 199
 — Caradoc, iii. 256
 — Crwyni, ii. 205
 — Drewyn, ii. 191; iii. 301
 — Estyn, 118; ii. 50, 63
Caerfach, iii. 180
Caer fechan, iii. 184
 — Gai, ii. 214
Caergrwle, ii. 46—49
Caer Hen, 17; iii. 129
 — Leb, iii. 11
 — Leon, 140; ii. 48

Caernarvon, ii. 391; iii. 409
Caer Ogyrfan, 331
 — Seiont, ii. 391
 — Senial, ii. 191
 — Sws, iii. 181
Caerwys, ii. 76—79
Calamine, 84; ii. 70
Camp, of Owen Gwynedd, iii. 148
 — Roman, iii. 188
Cangani, 8
 — Promontory called after the, ii. 372
Cangi, 7
Cantre'r Gwaelod, ii. 266
Cantref y Rhiw, ii. 48
Cantrefs, 264, 265
Capel Curig, ii. 311
 — Fair, ii. 372
 — Gelli, 19
 — Meugan, iii. 25
 — Trillo, iii. 145
 — y Gorlles, iii. 73
Carn Boduan, ii. 383; iii. 111
 — Madryn, ii. 366; iii. 111
Carnedd, at Tregarnedd, iii. 51
 — Dafydd, iii. 100, 102
 — Llewelyn, iii. 100, 102
 — Plas Newydd, iii. 17
 — y Ffiliast, iii. 100, 101
 — y Lladron, iii, 100
Carneddau Hengwm, ii. 262
 — Penmaen Mawr, iii. 112
Carreg Carn March Arthur, ii. 29
 — Clommenod, ii. 265
 — Hova, iii. 207
 — Lwyd, iii. 66—68
 — y Big, ii. 196
 — y Gwach, lii. 297
Caruce, 117
Cassiterides, 81
Cassivellanus, 818

- Castell Aber Llienawg*, iii. 34
 ——— Aeloedd Frenin, iii. 15
 ——— Brogyntyn, 336
 ——— Caereneon, iii. 173
 ——— Cordochon, ii. 214, 216
 ——— Crickaeth, ii. 363
 ——— Dinas Brân, 361
 ——— Dinas Cortin, ii. 263
 ——— Dolbadern, ii. 319
 ——— Dolforwyn, iii. 174
 ——— Dolwyddelan, ii. 252, 293
 ——— Eulo, 111—114
 ——— Hawarden, 116—136
 ——— Holywell, 53
 ——— Mawr, iii. 53
 ——— Powys, iii. 197, 200
 ——— Prysor, ii. 250
Castle of Aberystwyth, 61
 ——— Acton Burnel, iii. 250
 ——— Bangor, iii. 81
 ——— Beaumaris, iii. 25
 ——— Caergwrlle, 392
 ——— Caernarvon, ii. 392
 ——— Carreg Hwva, iii. 207
 ——— Chester, 203—210
 ——— Chirk, 347—351
 ——— Coed Eulo, 111
 ——— Coitie, iii. 34g
 ——— Conwy, iii. 117, 406
 ——— Crogen, 345
 ——— Denbigh, ii. 156; iii. 359
 ——— Diganwy, ii. 113; iii. 117, 138
 ——— Diserth, ii. 113
 ——— Ellesmere, 296, &c.
 ——— Harlech, ii. 274, &c.
 ——— Holt, 260, 267—272
 ——— Llanbedr, iii. 342
 ——— Montgomery, iii. 190, 193
 ——— Oswestry, 322
 ——— Overton, 290
 ——— Powys, iii. 197
Castle of Prestatyn, ii. 111
 ——— Rhuddlan, ii. 116; iii. 273
 ——— Ruthin, ii. 181
 ——— Shocklach, 272
 ——— Shrawardine, iii. 213
 ——— Teberrri, ii. 239
 ——— Wattleburg, iii. 211
 ——— Whittington, 311—314
Castlemain, earl of, iii. 197
Castles, wooden, ii. 13
Caswallon Law-hir, iii. 55, 72
Catherine Tudor, ii. 141
Ceangi, 7, 76
Cefnamtwch, ii. 373
Cefn Coch, iii. 311
 ——— Ogo, iii. 146
 ——— Ucha, 358
 ——— y Castell, iii. 209
 ——— y Fan, iii. 310
Cegidoc, iii. 148
Ceiiriog brook, 343
Cernunnos, ii. 264
Cesail Gyfarch, iii. 310
Charles vii. of France, iii. 329
Cheese-making, 153. 168
Chert, 26
Chesnut trees, ii. 181
Chester, 139—142
 ——— abbey, 222
 ——— assassination at, 231
 ——— bridge, 193
 ——— canal, 253
 ——— cathedral, 228
 ——— chapter-house, 225
 ——— charters, 210
 ——— ecclesiastical state, 220
 ——— hospital, 240
 ——— parishes, 241
 ——— public stews, 187
 ——— quays, 245
 ——— Roman altars, 149

- Chester* Roodeye, 241
 ——— Rows, the, 142
 ——— school, 225
 ——— sculptures, 148, 152
 ——— St. Mary's nunnery, 239
 ——— Nicholas' chapel, 233
 ——— Werburgh's shrine, 231
 ——— trade of, 167—169, 249—253
 ——— walls of, 197
 ——— Whitson plays, 177—186
Chirbury, iii. 189, 191
Chirk, monuments at, 345
 Church of Battlefield, iii. 242
 ——— Beaumaris, iii. 30
 ——— Bettws, iii. 186
 ——— Carno, iii. 183
 ——— Chirk, 345
 ——— Clynnog, ii. 384
 ——— Diserth, ii. 112
 ——— Fittes, iii. 217
 ——— Gresford, 387
 ——— Hawarden, 131
 ——— Holyhead, iii. 70, 71
 ——— Holywell, 52
 ——— Hope, ii. 52
 ——— Kilken, ii. 57—9
 ——— Llanddwyn, iii. 6
 ——— Llandudno, iii. 144
 ——— Llandysilio, 394
 ——— Llangadwalader, iii. 6
 ——— Llangollen, 360
 ——— Llanrwst, ii. 302
 ——— Marchwiel, 393
 ——— Mold, ii. 31
 ——— Montgomery, iii. 195
 ——— Northop, 109
 ——— Oswestry, 316
 ——— Pennynydd, iii. 49
 ——— Pennant Mclangell, iii. 163
 ——— Sellatyn, 341
 ——— St. Cross, 47
 Church of Whittington, 315
 ——— Wrexham, 377—382
Cilmin Troed-du, 133; ii. 391; iii. 432
Clogwyn Du, ii. 316
 ——— yr Helwr, iii. 100
Clomendy, ii. 28
Cloud Berries, ii. 198
Clough, Sir Richard, ii. 136
Clwydian hills, ii. 57
Clynnog, ii. 384
Cneifiwr Glás, ii. 11
 Coal known to the Britons, 24
Cochwillan, iii. 110 (footnote)
Coed Eulo, 111
 ——— Marchan, ii. 191
Coleshill, 56, 67, 112
Collen, St., 360
 Collieries, 23
Collwyn ap Tangno, iii. 433
Concen, ii. 9
Condolanus, 306
Condover, iii. 247
Conna's He, 118
Conovium, 83; ii. 139; iii. 129
Constable's sands, 32
Conwy, iii. 116—119
 ——— abbey, iii. 120
 ——— castle unroofed, iii. 406
 ——— potatoes exported, iii. 405
 ——— tombs at, iii. 122
Copa'r'leni, ii. 107
Coppa yr Wylfa, iii. 148
 Copper cakes, mines, &c., 17, 82;
 iii. 55—64
 Copper mine in Anglesey, iii. 57
Coracles, 288
Corarian, iii. 95
Corineus, St. Cybi, iii. 69
Coritani, 8
Cornavi, 117
Cors y Gedol house, ii. 261

Corwen, ii. 195
Coytmor house, iii. 103
 ———, Howel, ii. 305
Craig y Deryn, ii. 238
 ——— y Dorth, iii. 331
 ——— y Park, 25
Crannage, George, his desperate action, 329
Cregynnog, iii. 174
Crib Goch, ii. 340
Crikaeth, ii. 363
Cro, 354
Cromlech Bodowyr, iii. 12
 ——— Bryn y Focel, ii. 264
 ——— Clynnog, ii. 387
 ——— Llugwy, iii. 54
 ——— Natural, at Llanberis, ii. 337
 ——— Plas Gwyn, iii. 41
 ——— Plas Newydd, iii. 18, 19
 ——— Tre'r Dryw, iii. 10
 ——— Ystum Cegid, ii. 360
 Crosses, { Atiscross, 68, 118
           { Croes Eineon, ii. 113
           { Maen Achwynfan, 18; ii.
           { 106
           { Tremcirchion, ii. 134
Crwth, ii. 87
Crystal (Iceland), ii. 67
Cunobeline, 88
Cwm Bychan, ii. 267
 — Croesor, ii. 286
 — Cwmorthin, ii. 285
 — Dyli, ii. 338
 — Idwal, and lake, ii. 314
 — in Flintshire, ii. 115
Cwmwads, 264
Cwmorthin, ii. 285
Cyfnicht, ii. 358
Cymmer abbey, ii. 245
Cymru, Tri Thlws, 360
Cyneddu Wledig, ii. 215

Cynjael falls, ii. 285
Cynwyd, ii. 198
Cyttiau'r Gwyddelod, ii. 280

D

Dacre Manor, 76
Dafydd Daron, iii. 321
 ——— Ddu, ii. 134
 ——— Gam, iii. 322
Damps in mines, ii. 72—75
Daniel, St., bishop of Bangor, iii. 78
Datceiniad, ii. 101
David, prince, 120
Davies, Edward, Cneifiwr Glás, ii. 11
Deceang, 76
Dee, Dr., a Welshman, ii. 259
Dee sacred, ii. 208
Demons, ii. 243; iii. 152, 153
Denbigh, ii. 151, &c.
Derfel Gadarn, ii. 201
Derwen Ceubren yr Ellyll, ii. 243
Deuwen, St., iii. 6
Deva, 3, 141
Devil, spitting at his name, iii. 150
Dictum, what it means, iii. 138
Dietam, ad, 208
Diganwy, iii. 138, 139
Dinas Brán, 265, 266; ii. 1
 — Dinlle, ii. 389
 — Dinorwig, ii. 322
 — Emris, ii. 342
 — Mowddwy, ii. 222
Dinotb, St., 285
Divining rod, 72
Doddleston, 137
Dolau cothi, 86
Dolgelleu, ii. 230
Dol y Melynlyn, ii. 246
Domitian, his name on a pig of iron, 77
Downing, 5

Drama, modern Spanish, corresponding to our modern mysteries, 185
Druidic circles at Llugwy, iii. 54
Druids, iii. 9
Drws Arduwly, ii. 265
 — y Coed, ii. 349
Dudestan, 258
Dulas, bay of, iii. 54
Dumnonii, 8, 81
Dwarfs, ii. 361
Dyffryn Aled, ii. 172
 ——— Clwyd, mines, ii. 64
 ——— Mymbyr, ii. 310
Dyfi, 1, 8
Dyfnaint, 8
Dylassy, 377
Dyscybl dyscyblaidd, ii. 93
 ——— pencerddiaidd, ii. 94, 97
 ——— yspâs, ii. 93

E

Earls of Chester, 161
Eaton, 256
Eccleston, 255
Edeirnion, vale of, ii. 203
Edgar, 159
 ——— rowed up the Dee by six petty kings, 159
Edgar's Palace, 148
Ednowain ap Bradwen, iii. 448
 ——— Bendew, 21; iii. 445
Ednyfed Fychan, iii. 49
Edwin, 11, 161; iii. 444
Efnydd, iii. 446
Egbert, 156
Ererton, baron Ellesmere, 137
Eglwys y Bedd, iii. 71
 ——— Fair, iii. 171
 ——— Rhos, iii. 137
Eiŷt mountains, ii. 381
Eisteddfods, ii. 89, 102, 92; iii. 114
Eleven towns, 328

Elisseg, pillar and inscription, ii. 7—9
Ellesmere, 294
Ellyce, colonel, 349
Elphin, Taliesin's poem to, ii. 308
Emral, 282
Englefield, 11
 ——— Sir Francis, iii. 217
Entrochi, ii. 53
Erbistock, 273
Erddig, 374
Eric, 354
Ethelfleda, 157
Ethelfrida, 155
Ethelystan Glodrydd, iii. 424
Eulo Manor, 114
Eurgen, St., 109
Evans the conjuror, ii. 258
Exchequer in Chester, 205
Explosion, terrible, at do. 217
Eyton in Denbighshire, 289
Eyton, John ap Ellis, his tomb, 368

F

Fairies, their butter, ii. 71
 ——— their haunts near Llyn Coch, ii. 326
Falcon, long flight of one, 13
Falconry, iii. 141
Falcons, ancient Welsh, iii. 141
Falls of the Conwy, ii. 290
 ——— Cynjad, ii. 284
Farn, 258,
Fasting woman, ii. 254
Felynrhyd, ii. 283
Fenechdyd, iii. 446
Festa Asinaria, 183
Festiniog, ii. 285
Ffordd Gan Elen, iii. 181
 ——— Helen, ii. 198
Ffynon Asaph, ii. 113
 ——— Fair, ii. 133; iii. 150
 ——— Lâs, ii. 339

Ffynnon Leimw, ii. 59
 ——— Llanddeiniolen, 52
 Fire-brick, 115
 Fish, curious in Anglesey, iii. 39
 ——— of the Vyrnwy and Tanat, iii. 208
Fittes, fine views near, iii. 217
Fitzalans, earls of Arundel, 322
Fitzwarines, the, 308—10
Flint, antiquities found near, 68, 89
 ——— a Roman station, 57
 ——— complaint of the men of, 60
 ——— town, 56
Flintshire, 5
 ——— by whom subdued, 9
 ——— fish of, 29
 ——— revenues in the time of
     Edward III., 67
Folebroc, 22
 Forest of Snowdon, ii. 332
Foxhall ii. 171
Freiddin hill, iii. 209
 Frier Forest's cruel execution, ii. 201
Friers, Bangor, iii. 80
Froissart, a beautiful copy of, iii. 136
Fron, ii. 29
 Funerals, customs at, iii. 151
Fwyall, Howel y, ii. 364
Fwyall, Sir Howel y, 194

G

Gadlys, 113
Gai, Arthur's foster-father, ii. 217
Galanas, 352, 354
 Gale, or bog myrtle, ii. 307
Galnes, 354
Gallt-vaenan, ii. 133
Gum, Dafydd, an account of, iii. 322
 Games, ancient Welsh, iii. 114
Ganion, Pentir, 8
Ganllwyd, iii. 311
Gareg, a Pharos, ii. 105
Garn Gwch, ii. 383

Garthen, 373
Garthewin, ii. 176
General Mytton, 303
Germanus, St., ii. 55
George, St., iii. 149
Gestes of Guarine, 312
Gherbod, earl of Chester, 162
Gibson, the dwarf painter, iii. 103
Gilesfield, iii. 203
Giraldus Cambrensis, iii. 416
Glannog's Isle, iii. 35
 Glass imported into Britain, 90
Glisseg Valley, ii. 10
Gloddaeth, iii. 133
 ——— rare plants at, iii. 135
Glyder Bach, its curious columnar stones, ii. 312
 ——— Fuwr, ii. 317
Glyn Llugwy, ii. 310
Glyndwrwy, ii. 1
Glynllifon, 133
Glynne, chief justice, 133
Gobowen, 331
Gogarth, iii. 140
Gogingstoole, iii. 195
 Gold, found in Britain, 85, 86
 ——— a temptation to the Roman invaders, 85, 86
 ——— the Britons early acquainted with its uses, 88
Goodman Dr., ii. 184
Gorphwysfa, ii. 338
 Gorseddau at Tre'r Dryw, iii. 10
Gosteg yr Halen, ii. 82
Grasses, Welsh, ii. 324
Gredington, 277
Gresford, 287, 388
 Greyhound, singular story of one, 64
Grey of Ruthin, lord, iii. 308
Gronant, ii. 109
Grosvenor, vast mineral grant to the family, 96

- Gryffydd ap Cynan*, ii. 82; iii. 80.
421. 444
————— Madoc, 361
————— Llwyd, iii. 297
Gwaenynog, ii. 168
Gwaenyskor Register, ii. 108
Gwalchmai, a fine fragment of his poetry, iii. 210
Gwdhw Glás, iii. 112
Gwedir, ii. 297
Gwehelyth, iii. 416, 427
Gweirydd ap Rhys Goch, iii. 431
Gweli, what it means, iii. 132
Gwersilt, 391, 392
Gwespyr, ii. 109
Gwerth, 352
Gwindy, ii. 125
Gwyddel, Ynys y, iii. 68
Gwyddelwern, ii. 192
Gwyddno Goronhir, ii. 266
Gwynedd, Howel, 107, 108; iii. 444
Gwynedd, Owen, 111; iii. 79
—————, his sons defeat the flower of Henry's army, 111
—————'s tomb, iii. 79
Gwynniaid, ii. 207
Gwysaney, ii. 33
Gwytherin, 46; ii. 174
Gyrys, first collector of Welsh proverbs, ii. 26

H

- Hafod Lwyfog*, ii, 341
Hafodtai, ii. 325
Hafren, see Severn
Halkin, 96, 106
Halston, 302—304
Hanbridge, 139
Hanmer, 276
Hanmer, Sir Thomas, &c., 280—282
Harlech, ii. 274

- Harp*, silver, 17; ii. 87
Hartsheath, ii. 44
Hawarden, 9, 116, 117
————— castle, Saxon owner, 118
————— Norman, 118
————— ceded to Llewelyn the Great, 119
————— surprised by Dafydd ap
Gryffydd, 120
————— granted to Montacute, earl of Salisbury, 122
————— granted to Sir Thomas
Stanley, 123
————— acquired by chief justice Glynne, 125
————— besieged, 127
————— rectory, 131
Hedd Molwynog, iii. 440
Helen, Pen Caer, iii. 130
Helig ap Clunog, iii. 26
Hendre, ii. 125
Hen Ddinas, 331
Henllan, ii. 170
Hen Llys, ii. 176
Henry VII. protected at Mostyn, 14
Henry, prince of Wales, iii. 303
Herbert, lady Mary, iii. 199
Hesp-alun, ii. 57
Hilbree isles, 28
Hirlas Owen, 374; iii. 89
Hoielse-tiide, ii. 19
Hoigold, ii. 19
Holt, 259
Holland family, the, iii. 154
Holyhead, iii. 69
—————, Pharos, iii. 74
Holywell, 30—55
Hoopoe, ii. 75
Hope, ii. 52
Horns, drinking, account of, iii. 87
Hotspur joins with Glyndwr, iii. 324

Hospitality, antient Welsh, ii. 235;
 iii. 407
Howel Gwynedd, 107, 108; iii. 444
Howel Sele of Nanneu, iii. 310
Howel y Fuyall, Sir, iii. 434
Howl (Irish), ii. 169
 Hunting, antient, ii. 271
Hypocaust, 145—147

I &amp; J

James I. at Chester, 190
Ictis, 82
Jeffries, chancellor, 384
Jestyn ap Gwrgant, iii. 426
 ——— St., iii. 43
Inigo Jones, ii. 300
 Inscriptions,—
Basingwerk, iii. 263
Bedd Porus, ii. 248
Cail Wart, ii. 260
Chester, 141, 151, 152
Corwen, ii. 196
Cwm, ii. 115
Gresford, 388
Gwytherin, ii. 175
Llan-Gadwaladr, iii. 6, 7
Llanrhaidr, ii. 178
Llanuwchllyn, ii. 216
Newborough, iii. 2
Northop, 110
Rhiwabon, 368
St. Asaph, ii. 130, 131
Shrewsbury, iii. 226, 227
Tremeirchion, ii. 134
Tŷ Coch, iii. 82
Valle Crucis, ii. 6, 7
Wrexham, 378—380
 Interment, ancient, ii. 18—25
John de Cromwell, ii. 51
 ——— Trevor, iii. 312
Joan, princess, her coffin, iii. 33

Jolo Goch, iii. 290, 291. 440
Jones of Cadwgan, his sad end, 376
Jones, the regicide, where born, ii. 265
Jorwerth Drwyndwn, his tomb, iii. 164
 Iron, 84
Ithyphallus, an amulet, 93
Judas, breast smiting at his name,
 iii. 150
Jungermannia, a moss, 51

K

Kelchyn, 354
Kerrig y Druidion, ii. 211
Kilken, ii. 57—59
Kinmael, iii. 154
Kistvaen, what is it, ii. 212
Klogwyn Du, ii. 316
 Knockers, the, ii. 71
Kymhortha, iii. 355
Kynastons, 300

L

Lakes, high in Snowdon, ii. 326
 Lead, ancient state of its mines, 69
 ——— how smelted by the Britons, 78
 ——— mines worked by the Saxons, 80
 ——— ore, singular clayey species of,
 iii. 63
 ——— Roman pigs of, 74
 ——— regulations in respect to mining, 71
 ——— silver extracted from it by the
Romans, 78
Leeswood, ii. 30
Leicester, earl of, his insolent letter,
 ii. 164
Lever's Museum, Sir Ashton, 293
Lewis, Glyn Cothi, ii. 43; iii. 295
 Lime works, iii. 205
Lindisfarn, 80
Lladmer, etymology, 310
Llam y Lladron, ii. 242

- Llanaelhaiarn*, ii. 384
Llanarmon, tumuli, ii. 17, 18
Llanasaph, ii. 108
Llanbadrog, ii. 368
Llanbeblig, ii. 399
Llanberis, ii. 319—321
Llanddinam, iii. 183
Llanddona, iii. 42
Llanddwyn, iii. 5
Llandegai, archbishop Williams's monument there, iii. 95
Llandegla, ii. 14
Llandeniolen, ii. 322
Llandrinio bridge, iii. 209
Llandrillo, ii. 200; iii. 145
Llandudno, iii. 141
Llandysilio, 394; iii. 22
Llanelian, iii. 54
Llan Elltyd, ii. 252
Llanerch, ii. 171
Llanfaes, iii. 32
Llanferres, ii. 27
Llanfyllin, iii. 168
Llan-Gadwaladr, iii. 6
Llangar, ii. 199
Llangerniew, ii. 176
Llangollen, 359
Llangynog, iii. 162
Llanidan, iii. 8
Llanidlos, iii. 184
Llan Jestyn, iii. 43
Llanrhaiadr, ii. 178
Llanrhaiadr yn Mochnant, iii. 166
Llanrwst, ii. 300—302
Llansanan, ii. 173
Llantrissant, iii. 75
Llanuwchllyn, ii. 215
Llanyckil, ii. 214
Llanymynach, fosses and Roman lead works, iii. 204—206
————— great lime works, iii. 205
- Llan Ystyndwy*, ii. 365
Lleder river, ii. 293
Lleuci Llwyd, her story, 110
Llewelyn the Great, his coffin, ii. 305
Lleweni, ii. 139
Llwyn, or Llŷn, ii. 374
Llŷder mountains, ii. 318
Llowarch ap Brân, iii. 430
————— Hên, ii. 12
Lloyd Kenyon, 277
Llwyd, Edward, ii. 175; iii. 346
————— Humphrey, ii. 149
————— Sir Griffith, iii. 50
Llwydiarth, iii. 166
Llwyn y Groes, ii. 8
Llyn Aled, ii. 173
————— Beris, ii. 319
————— Bodlyn, ii. 261
————— Cader, ii. 348
————— Cawellyn, ii. 348
————— Conwy, ii. 288
————— Cwm Howel, ii. 261
————— Dinas, ii. 342
————— Ffynon Las, ii. 327. 339
————— Gcirionydd, ii. 307
————— Goch, ii. 326
————— Gwynan, ii. 341
————— Irddin, ii. 262
————— Llydaw, ii. 339
————— Llyffant, iii. 102
————— Nantlle, ii. 349
————— Ogwen, iii. 101
————— Rathlyn, ii. 250
————— Tegwyn, ii. 282
————— yr Afangc, ii. 291
————— y Bwchllwyd, ii. 313
————— y Cwm, ii. 316
————— y Cwn, ii. 318
————— y Dywarchen, ii. 348
————— y Myngil, ii. 240
————— yr Ogo, ii. 173

- Llyn y Tri Graienyn*, ii. 242
Llyniau Cregeuan, ii. 234
Llys Bradwen, ii. 234
 ——— Dinorddwig, ii. 322
 ——— Edwin, 107
 Locusts, a great fall of, ii. 362
 ——— drowned in the sea, ii. 362
Londinium, 8
Loton hall, iii. 212
Longnor, pictures, iii. 248
Lugan, 106
Lupus, Hugh, earl of Chester, 162
 ——— his hall in Chester castle, 204
 ——— invades Anglesey, iii. 34

Lyre-wyte, 283, 284

M

- Madoc's* insurrection, iii. 196
 ——— Gloddaeth, iii. 137
Maelgwn Gwynedd, iii. 78, 138
Maeloc Crwm, iii. 437
Maelors, the, 263, 273, 274
Maen Achwynfan, 18; ii. 106
 ——— Gwynedd, iii. 181
 ——— Mordwyd, iii. 9
 ——— Sigl, iii. 143
 ——— Twrog, ii. 283
 ——— y Campiau, iii. 113
 ——— y Mellt, ii. 373
Maes Garmon, ii. 54—56
 ——— hir, 317
 ——— Mynan, ii. 139
 ——— y Gaer, iii. 105
 ——— y Garnedd, ii. 265
Malltraeth, iii. 6
Mallwyd, ii. 224
 Manors in Flintshire, ii. 78, 79
 Marble, with asbestos in it, iii. 65
 Marchers, lords, account of, iii. 266

- Marcheta mulierum*, 283
Marchudd, ii. 172; iii. 147, 437
Marchweithian, iii. 442
Marchwiel, 393
Margaret of Anjou, 277
Margaret uch Evan, ii. 320
Marle house, iii. 131
Maserfield, 318
Mathrafal, ii. 1; iii. 172
Maynan abbey, ii. 305
Mediolanum Ordovicum, iii. 170
Meifod iii. 169
Menai, iii. 24
 Merch-gobr, ii. 85
Meredydd ap Jevan reforms Wales, ii. 295
 ——— ap Meirchion, ii. 172
Merfyn, 263
Mertin, ii. 343
Milddir Gerrig, iii. 161
 Mineral property, &c., 97, &c.
 Mines, rich, ii. 67
 ———, royal society for, when founded, 102
 Minstrelsy, ii. 236
Milton, ii. 216
Moel Arthur, ii. 60
 ——— Eithinen, ii. 26
 ——— Famma, ii. 36
 ——— Fenlli, ii. 26, 27
 ——— Hiraddug, ii. 61, 114
 ——— y Dôn, iii. 15
 ——— y Gaer, 107, 108
 ——— y Gollfa, iii. 209
Mold, ii. 31—40
Moldwarp, iii. 322
Monacella, St., iii. 163
Montford, iii. 215
Montgomery, Roger de, iii. 190
 ——— town of, iii. 190—194
Montgomeryshire, the name, iii. 161

Morgan, Dr. William, iii. 166
Morris, the, iii. 39, 385
Mortimer, Sir Edmund, iii. 314
Mostyn, 12—17
 Mount, at Pen y Gaer, iii. 187
 ——— Rhosddiarbed, iii. 182
 ——— Shrewsbury, iii. 219
 ——— Sycharth, iii. 292
 Mounts, at Aber, iii. 105
 ——— Abergeleu, iii. 148
 ——— capel St. Ffraid, iii. 69
 ——— Chirk, 343
 ——— Coleshill, 113
 ——— Erddig, 374
 ——— Gresford, 387
 ——— Gwern Ddu, iii. 173
 ——— Llanddona, iii. 42
 ——— Mathrajal, iii. 172
 ——— Mitton, iii. 218
 ——— Montgomery, iii. 193
Mowddwy, vale of, ii. 219
Myfanwy Vechan, 362
Myddeltons, the, ii. 145—149
Mynydd Digoll, iii. 196
 ——— Hyddgant, iii. 306
Mytton, General, i. 303; ii. 121. 158.
 184. 277; iii. 29. 126. 246
 ——— William, 304; iii. 216

N

Names, Welsh, when first abridged, 17
Nannerch, ii. 59. 63
Nanneu, ii. 243; iii. 310
Nant Beris, ii. 318
 ——— Francon, iii. 101
 ——— Colwyn, 348
 ——— Conwy, ii. 295
 ——— Gwynan, ii. 338. 341
 ——— y bele, 369
 ——— y Gwytherin, ii. 379
Nefydd Hardd, iii. 436
Nefyn, ii. 377

Nerquis, ii. 30
Newborough, iii. 1
Newtown, iii. 178
Norman conquest, 161
Northop, 108
 Nut Breakers, 29
 O
Offa, 4; his dyke, 332
Oldford, 257
Ordovices, 3. 6. 108
Orme's Head, iii. 134
Ostorius conquers Caractacus, iii. 256
Oswald, St., 318
Oswald's Well, 320
Oswestry, 301, 316—320
 ——— old, 330
Ottley Park, 295
Overton, 289
Owen, Sir John, 337
 ——— Glyndwr, iii. 289, &c.
 ——— Gwynedd, camp of, iii. 148
 ——— tomb of, iii. 79
 ——— Tudor, iii. 44—49
 Owl, little, 293

P

Panton of Foxhall, ii. 172
Panton, Paul, iii. 41
Pant y Groes ii. 2
 ——— y Polion ii. 9
 ——— yr Ysgraphiau, iii. 12
Parfew, bishop of St Asaph, ii. 33
Parry, Dr. William, 109
Parys mountain, iii. 55. 395
 Patriarch of Tregaiian, iii. 53
 Pedigree, specimen of Welsh, ii. 179
Pelagius, a monk of Bangor, 286
Pen y Pil, iii. 148
Pen y Gaer, iii. 187
Penbedw, ii. 59
Pencerdd Gwlad, ii. 86. 95
Pengwern, iii. 156

Pengwern, llys, 358
Penmaen Mawr, iii. 107
 ——— Rhos, iii. 145
Penmon Priory, iii. 35
Pennorfa, ii. 358
Pennynydd, iii. 44
Pennant-higi, ii. 228
Pennant Melangell, iii. 163
Pennar Lâg, 9, 117
Penrhyn, iii. 84
Perry river, 303
Petre, George, his epitaph, iii. 263
Pharos of Garreg, ii. 105
 ——— Holyhead, iii. 74
Piers Gryffydd, iii. 85
 ——— drinking horn of, iii.
 87
Pistill Cain, ii. 248
 ——— Maw, ii. 248
 ——— Rhaiadr, iii. 167
Pitchford, iii. 247
 Plague at Chester, 189. 192
 Plants at Gloddaeth, iii. 134, 135
 ——— of Snowdon, ii. 307. 318. 324
Plas Gwyn, iii. 14. 53
 ——— Hén, ii. 365
 ——— Newydd, iii. 17
 ——— Teg, ii. 45. 52
 ——— yn Yale, ii. 12
 Plygan, iii. 153
Plynlinmon, iii. 185
Pont Aberglas Lyn, ii. 350, &c.
 ——— Gilan, ii. 200
 ——— Riffith, ii. 138. 144
 ——— y Pair, ii. 292
 ——— yr Allt Goch, ii. 132
Porkington, 337
Porthaethwy, iii. 22
Porthamel, iii. 12
Porth Din-Ulaen, ii. 376, 377
 Port Penrhyn, iii. 83

Posts, see British
 ——— their uses, 107, 108
Powys castle, iii. 197—201
Powysland, 261
Presaddfed, iii. 74
Prestatyn, ii. 111
Priestholm, iii. 37. 134
Pryse, Ellis, iii. 132. 442
 ——— Sir John, iii. 178
Prysor castle, ii. 250
Puffin Auks, iii. 37
Pulesdon, Roger de, ii. 398
Pulestons, 283
Pulpit Hugh, ii. 285
Putecaine, 10
Pwll Ceris, iii. 21
Pwllheli, ii. 365

Q

Queen's gate at Caernarvon, ii. 395

R

Radman, what it is, 56
 Razor-bill bird, iii. 39
 Religious customs, iii. 150
Rhaiadr Cynwyd, ii. 199
 ——— y Graig Lwyd, ii. 290
 ——— y Wenol, ii. 296
Rheidol, iii. 186
Rhiwabon, 365
Rhiwaedog, ii. 203
Rhirw Goch, ii. 250
Rhirwlas, ii. 204
Rhos Ddiarbed, iii. 182
Rhos-fair, iii. 3
Rhos Fynach, iii. 145
Rhual, ii. 56
Rhuddlan, marsh of, ii. 116; iii. 146
 ——— parliament at, ii. 123
Rhyd yr Halen, ii. 251
Rhyddyn, ii. 54

Rhys ap Tewdwr, iii. 422
 — Goch, ii. 352
Richard II. betrayed, iii. 146
 ——— taken at Flint, 62
Ripley hall, 77
Robert of Rhuddlan, ii. 122
 ——— slain at Diganwy, iii. 139
Robert of Sicyle, a play acted at Chester, 176
Robinson, colonel, account of, 392
 Rocking-stone, iii. 143
Roderic the Great, 263; iii. 7
Rofts, the, 390
Roman camp, ii. 251
 ——— coins, 88
 ——— pigs of lead, 74—78
Roman remains, at—
   Caerfach, iii. 180
   Caergwrle, ii. 47
   Caer Hen, iii. 129
   Caersws, iii. 181, 182
   Chester, 141—153
   Garreg, ii. 105
   Holyhead, iii. 72, 74
   Llanymynach, iii. 205, 206
   Routon, iii. 213
   Segontium, ii. 401
   Shrewsbury, iii. 226, 227
   Wroxeter, iii. 222
   Y Gaer, iii. 188
Roman roads, 148; ii. 47
 ——— sculptures, 148. 152
Romans, their management of mines and smelting, 81
 Rood eye at Chester, 241
Routon, the old Rutunium, iii. 213
Row, the, ii. 132
 Rude times, ii. 177
Rug, ii. 194
Ruthin, ii. 181

S

Sabrina, or Sabra, iii. 175
Sacheverel, Dr., 342
Saith Marchog, ii. 192
 Salmon, how far they ascend rivers, iii. 185
 Salt springs at Rhyddyn, ii. 54
Saltney marsh, 137
Salisbury family, the, ii. 140
Sandford, captain, 128, 129
Sarn Badrig, ii. 266
 — Helen, ii. 249
 — Swsan, Roman road, iii. 180
 — yr Afangc, iii. 101
Saxon Chester, 159—161
 Sea, encroachment of, ii. 109; iii. 147
 Sea-fowl, vast wreck of, ii. 362
Segontium, ii. 401
Seiriol, St. iii. 35
Sele, Howel, iii. 310
Sellatyn, 335
 Sepulchre, ancient, iii. 52
Seteia, 5; ii. 105
Severn river, iii. 177
Shakerley, colonel, 391; iii. 283
 Shark of Beaumaris, iii. 39, 384
Shartar Gwtta, 324
 Shell sand, a rich manure, iii. 42
 Sheriff's men in North Wales, origin of, iii. 357
Shew-glass, ii. 260
 Shield, a curious, ii. 352
 Shingles, iii. 185
Shocklach castle, 272
Shrawardine, iii. 213
Shrewsbury, abbey, iii. 330
 ——— Augustine friers, iii. 234
 ——— battle, iii. 238
 ——— charters, iii. 223
 ——— churches, iii. 235
 ——— Dominicans, iii. 235

Shrewsbury, free school, iii. 225
 ——— Grey Friars, iii. 233
 ——— parliaments, iii. 237
 ——— Richmond, passing through, iii. 244
 ——— St. Mary's, iii. 218
 ——— the quarry, iii. 233
Sicyle, Robert of, an ancient morality, 176
Silver, British, known to the Rom- ans, 87
Sirigi, iii. 71
Skerries, iii. 66
Slate quarries, iii. 82
Smelting, British, 78
 ——— Roman, 75
Snowdon, Dominus de, iii. 6
 ——— height, ii. 330
 ——— name, ii. 336
 ——— plants, ii. 307. 318
 ——— sacred, ii. 334
Soddylt, 291
Sontley house, 375
Sorbus aucuparia, ii. 307
South, Dr., iii. 167
Stag, warrant for one from Snowdon,
 iii. 380
Standard-bearer, Owen Glyndwr's,
 iii. 331
Stanlies, their power in Flintshire,
 107
Stones and stone-circles, ii. 262. 382;
 iii. 10, 11. 112
Strata Marcella abbey, iii. 203
 ——— its charter, iii. 411
Strath of the Alun, ii. 29
Stylus found near Flint, 91
Suetonius, his invasion of Anglesey,
 iii. 12
Superstitions, ancient Welsh, iii. 149
Sweating sickness, iii. 244

Swelly, a dangerous place in the Me-
nai, iii. 21
Sycharth, the seat of Owen Glyndwr,
 iii. 293
Sychnant, iii. 108

T

Taleithiog, tri Thywysog, 263
Taliesin, his history, ii. 307
Tal y Cafn, iii. 129
 ——— Llyn, singular coffin found at,
 ii. 240
Tanat, the river, iii. 207
Tan y Bulch, ii. 283
Teberri castle, ii. 239
Tecla's well, ii. 15
Tegangle, 6, 7. 22. 77. 107
Terrig, ii. 44
Teuluwr, ii. 84
Thellwalls, the, ii. 190
Threapwood, 275
Tin, early exported by the Phœni-
cians, 81
Tomb of Jorwerth Drwyndwn, iii. 164
Tombs at Chirk, 345
 ——— Gresford, 387
 ——— Hope, ii. 52
 ——— Llanarmon, ii. 17
 ——— Mold, ii. 31
 ——— Northop, 108
 ——— Rhiwabon, 365
 ——— St. Asaph, ii. 130
 ——— Wrexham, 378
 ——— Ysptyty, ii. 289
Tommen y Bala, ii. 205
 ——— y Castell, ii. 205
 ——— y Fardra, ii. 25
 ——— y Rhodwydd, ii. 13
Torques, 17; ii. 278
Tower, in Flintshire, ii. 41
Towyn, inscription there, ii. 238

Traeth Coch, iii. 42
 Transmutation of metals, ancient opinion of, 99
Trawsfynydd, ii. 264
Tre Faldwyn, iii. 161, 190
Tref Wry, iii. 11
Tref y Waen, 347
Tre-garnedd, iii. 49
Trelawnyd, ii. 107
Tre'r-abbot, 19
   — Beirdd, iii. 12
   — Ceiri, ii. 381
   — Dryw, iii. 10
   — Yrys, ii. 26
Trevaen, singular hill, ii. 313
Trevalyn, 390
Trevor house, 358
   — Sir John, 357
   — Tudor, iii. 450
Trevors, the, 387, 388
 Tribes of North Wales, iii. 159. 428
   — five royal, iii. 415
Tudor, Owen, iii. 44
Tudwal isles, ii. 368
Tumuli, Copar'leni, ii. 107
   — Llanarmon, ii. 18, 60
   — Nant Gwrtheyrn, ii. 380
   — Penbedw, ii. 60
   — see also Tommen
Tull-du, ii. 315
Tŷr Bronwen, ii. 274
Tydecho, St., ii. 220
Tysilio, St., 394

U

Up Rossal, isle of, iii. 216

V

Vád felen, the, iii. 138
Vaenol, in Caernarvonshire, iii. 20
   — Flintshire, 155
Vale of Clwyd, ii. 133; iii. 160

Valle Crucis, ii. 2—7
Varis, ii. 138
 Vassalage, barbarous, iii. 23
Vaughan, engraver, ii. 304
Waynor, iii. 187
Verde di Corsica, iii. 65
Veronica, St., ii. 32
Victoria Alleluaiatica, ii. 54
Virgula divinatoria, 72
Vitilia navigia, 288
Voelas, ii. 289
Vortigern builds Dinas Emris, ii. 342
   — his grave, ii. 380
   — 's valley, ii. 379
Vreken Ceaster, iii. 222
 Vulture, new, 292
Vyrnyw, iii. 208

W

Walcheria, 329
Warner, lady, her story, 280
Warton, bishop of St. Asaph, vide
   Parfew, ii. 33
 Waterfalls, the most curious, ii. 173,
   199, 246, 248, 296
Wat's Dyke, 31, 331
Wattleburg castle, iii. 211
 Weapons, ancient, iii. 16
 Weather about Snowdon, ii. 337
Wedge, Roman, found in a lead mine, 71
 Wells, Nant Beris, ii. 320
   — St. Elian's, iii. 142
   — St. George, iii. 149
   — Helen's, ii. 402
   — Tecla's, ii. 15
Welsh, mountaineers, their way of life, ii. 325
   — not all drunkards, ii. 280
   — religious customs, iii. 150
Welshpool, golden chalice, account of, iii. 202

Wenefrede, St. 40—44; ii. 174
Wepre, township of, 116
Werburgh, St., her shrine, 231
Were-geld of the Saxons, 352
Whiff, a species of flounder, 29
Whitchurch, ii. 144
Whiteford, 10
 ——— its products, 22
Whitson Plays, see Chester
Whittington, 306
Williams, archbishop, iii. 97, 99, 125,
 400, 403
Woodbury hill, iii. 339
 Wooden castles, ii. 13
Woods, Plás Newydd, iii. 17
Worthenbury, 273
 Wreck of birds, ii. 362
Wrexham, 376—383
Wroxeter, iii. 222
Wyddfa, highest hill in Snowdonia,
 ii. 330
Wygfair, ii. 133
Wynn, Sir John, the father, ii. 297
 ———, instructions to his chaplain, iii. 368
 ———, inventory of wardrobe, iii. 369
 ———, the son, ii. 304
 ———, his letters, iii. 373

Wynn, Sir Richard, ii. 300, 301
Wynne, William, doctor, of Tower, his epitaph, ii. 34
Wynnes of Pengwern, iii. 421
Wynstay, 369—373

Y

Yale, Elihu, some account of, 379
 ——— epitaph of his son at the Cape of Good Hope, 380
 ——— hundred of, ii. 12
Yarnton, Andrew, 246
Ynyr ap Howel, Llewelyn ap, ii. 16
Ynys Dywyll, the ancient name of
Anglesey, iii. 17
 ——— Glannog, iii. 35—37
 ——— Gybi, iii. 69
 ——— St. Seiriol, iii. 35
Yonge, Griffith, Glyndwr's chancellor and ambassador to France, iii. 329
Younge, Richard, bishop of Bangor,
 iii. 313
Ysgithrog, Brochuel, iii. 221
Ysgolion Duon, iii. 102
Yspytty Jevan, ii. 288
Ystrad Alyn, ii. 29

Z

Ziment copper, iii. 62

A LIST OF SUBSCRIBERS.

---

- Anglesey, The Most Hon. the Marquis of, Plas Newydd, Llanfair P. G.
Aberdare, The Right Hon. Lord, Duffryn, Mountain Ash, South Wales
Atkins, Robert Augustus, Esq., 1, Brownlow Villas, St. Asaph
Acland, Arthur H. Dyke, Esq., M.A., Plas Bryn, Clynnog
Allanson, John B., Esq., Bryn Seiont, nr. Carnarvon
Anwyl, Captain, Eryl Aran, Bala
Apsimon, Thomas, Esq., 14, Amberley Street, Liverpool
Anderton, Peter, Esq., Brondyffryn, Denbigh
- Bangor, The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of, The Palace, Bangor
Beor, Richard White, Esq., The Rhydding, Swausea
Beale, W. John, Esq., Bryntirion, Bontddu. Dolgelley
Bevan, John, Esq., New College, Oxford
Brittain, Mrs., Bryn Aber, Carnarvon
Brown, Rev. T. B. Ll., M.A., Rectory, Bodvari, Rhyl
Barker, Hugh Longueville, Esq., 19, Hough Green, Chester
Bowen, J., Esq., C.E. & Crown Agent, Plas Treflan, Carnarvon
Bayne, William, Esq., Menai View, Upper Bangor
Blackwell, Hy., Esq., 244, East, 21 Street, New York, America
Blundell, Jos. Hight, Esq., Marlowe's Cottage, Hemel Hempstead
Bamber, John, Esq., Beech Grove, Ashton Freehold, near Preston
Browne, Peter, Esq., Chief Constable, Rhyl
Beedham, B., Esq., Ashfield House, near Kimbolton
Bebb, Nathaniel, Esq., 21, Kelvin Grove, Prince's Park, Liverpool
Bate, Thomas, Esq., Kelsterton Hall, Flint
Byrne, Rev. Edward, St. Mary's Mount, Flint
Bernard, Rev. F., St. David's Monastery, Pantasaph, Holywell
Berry, Thomas, Esq., Brynyfuches, Amlwch, Anglesey
Brereton, A. J., Esq. (Andreas o Vôn,) Mold
Baneroft, J. J. Esq., Glasfryn, Ruthin
Bryan, Mr. J. D., Bridge street, Carnarvon
Barnwell, Mr. W., Ch. School, Llangerniew, Abergele
- Coleridge, The Right Hon. Lord, Lord Chief Justice of England
Corbett, John, Esq., M.P., Impney, Droitwich; and Ynys-Maengwyn, Towyn Merioneth two copies
- Crawshay, W. T., Esq., Cyfarthfa Castle, Merthyr Tydfil
Cooke, Lieut. Col. Bryan George Davies, Colomendy, Mold

Clemenger, W. G. W., Esq., Coedmawr, Carnarvon two copies
 Carreg, Robert, Esq., Plas Carreg, Pwllheli
 Chilton, Thomas, Esq., The Elms, Gresford, Wrexham
 Cowell, E. B., Esq., M.A., Prof. of Sanskrit in the University of Cambridge
 Cory, R., Esq., Oscar House, Cardiff
 Cooke, Philip B. Davies, Esq., Gwysaney, Mold
 Crawshay, Mrs. Alfred, Dan-y-Park, Crickhowell, Breconshire
 Coxon, Alfred, Esq., 72, Longton Grove, Sydenham, London, S.E.
 Cleaton, Edmund R., Esq., Vaenor Park, Llanidloes
 Charlton, St. John, Esq., Pentrefynon, Holywell
 Corbett, John, Esq., 9, Wrexham Street, Mold
 Coopers, Robert, Esq., Grove House, Bromley Road, Lee
 Clark, Geo. T., Esq., Talygam, Glamorgan
 Cameron, Mr. Donald, The Rofft, Upper Bangor
 Carman, Mr. John, Chemist, Holywell

Denbigh, The Right Hon. the Earl of, Newnham Paddox, Lutterworth
 Dynevor, The Right Hon. Lord, Dynevor Castle, Llandilo
 Davies, Richard, Esq. M.P., Treborth, Bangor
 Davies, David, Esq., M.P.; Broneirion, Llandinam, Montgomeryshire
 Davies, Dd., Esq., F.R.C.S. &c., Bryngolwg, Aberdare
 De Winton, Jeffrey P., Esq., Tan-y-graig, Carnarvon
 Davies, John, Esq., The Treasury, Whitehall, London
 Davies, Ebenezer, Esq., Brunswick House, Swansea
 Davids, Richard J., Esq., Glanhelen, Carnarvon
 Davies, John, Esq., (Gwyneddon), Bodgwyuedd, Carnarvon
 Davies, R. Norman, Esq., Tŷ Fry, Carnarvon
 Davies, E. W., Esq., Penrhiwarddwr, Conway
 Davies, W. Cadwaladr, Esq., District Bank, Bangor
 Davies, James, Esq., (Iago Tegeingl), Gwynfa Villa, Rhyl
 Davies, W. T., Esq., Chester
 Davies, Rev. Owen, Baptist Minister, Carnarvon
 Denman, Francis Lemoine, Esq., 17, Horuton Street, Kensington, W.
 Davies, Rev. Evan, Rectory, Llanllyfni
 Davies, Rev. J. Issard, M.A., Senior Curate, Carnarvon
 Davies, Griffith, Esq., B.A., 200, High Street, Bangor
 Davies, Miss M. A., Dolbadarn Board School, Llanberis
 Davies, Rev. D. T. Ffrangcon, B.A., Pwllheli
 Davies, Rev. J. Beynon, Congregational Minister, Talysarn, near Carnarvon
 Davies, W. Robert, Esq., Solicitor, Dolgelley
 Davies, Rev. J. Cadvan, Wesleyan Minister, Dolgelley
 Davies, Rev. W., B.A., F.L.S., Vicarage, Llanfihangel Genau'r Glyn, Borth
 Davies, Rev. E. T., B.A. (Dyfrig), The Vicarage, Aberdovey

- De Burgh, Alex. A. Hussey, Esq., Carnarvon
 Davies, Ellis, Esq., Irlam House, Liscard, Birkenhead
 Davies, Robert, Esq., 6, South Castle Street, Liverpool
 Davies, Rev. D., Glan Conway Rectory, Conway
 Davies, Rev. E. W., The Vicarage, Llanerchymedd
 Davies, Rev. John Evan, M.A., Rector of Llangelynin, Llwyngwrl, Merioneth.
 Davies, D., Esq., Maes-y-ffynon, Aberdare
 Davies, John, Esq., 55, Peel Street, Princes Park, Liverpool
 Dugdale, John, Esq., Llwyn, Llanfyllin
 Davies, Robert, Esq., Bodlondeb, Bangor
 Davies, Edward, Esq., Llwynderw, Llandinam, Mont.
 Davies, Thomas, Esq., 30, Balliol Road, Bootle
 Davies, William, Esq., Caebllaidd, Festiniog
 Davies, Rev. T. Z., The Vicarage, Whitford, Holywell
 Davies, Miss A. J., 141, Bedford Street, Liverpool
 Dyson, Capt., C.E., Flint
 Davies, Mr. C., Deputy Chief Constable, Carnarvon
 Davies, Mr. J., Stationer's Hall, Lampeter, Cardiganshire
 Davies, Mr. John, Draper, &c., London House, Aberayron
 Davies, Mr. John, Blue Peris, Llanberis
 Davies, Mr. William, (Glan Ceulan), Talybont, via Glandovey
 Davies, Mr. John, Board School, Dinorwic
 Davies, Mr. William, Bookseller, Glynceiriog
 Davies, Mr. William, Glynafon, Nantlle, Carnarvon
 Davies, Mr. David (Tremlyn), Pengwern, Carnarvon
- Edwards, F. W. Lloyd, Esq., Chairman of Carnarvonshire Quarter Sessions, Nanhoron, Pwllheli
- Edwards, The Very Rev. H. T., M.A., Dean of Bangor
- Evans, Joseph, Esq., J.P., D.L., Hurst House, nr. Prescot three copies
- Evans, Col. Herbert Davies, Highmead, Llanybyther, Cardiganshire
- Evans, The Ven. Archdeacon, Rectory, Llanllechid
- Evans-Lloyd, Lieut. Col. Edward, Moel y Garnedd, Bala
- Ewing, The Lady Alice, Coed Derwen, Bettws-y-coed
- Eld, Rev. J. M., B.D., Rector of Belbroughton, Worcestershire
- Edwards, Rev. William, The Rectory, Llanberis
- Edwards, John, Esq., M.R.C.S. London, L.R.C.P. Edinburgh, Principal Medical Officer Her Majesty's Prison, Leeds
- Evans, Edward, Esq., Bronwylfa, Wrexham
- Ellis, Thomas, Esq., Chief Constable of Merioneth, Bala
- Eachus, J. T., Esq., Cross Street, Holywell
- Edwards, Richard, Esq., Litherland, nr. Liverpool
- Edwards, H., Esq., J.P., D.L., Rosemount, Holyhead

- Edwards, The Rev. Professor Ellis, M.A., C. M. College, Bala
 Edisbury, J. F., Esq., Belgrave House, Wrexham
 Evans, Rev. David, Llansantffraid Rectory, Corwen
 Evans, Rev. David, Vicar, Abergele
 Evans, Rev. Ellis W., M.A., Pensarn, Abergele
 Evans, Rev. John (Eglwysbach), 373, City Road, London
 Egerton, Miss, Gresford Lodge, Gresford
 Edmondson, Rev. Thomas, M.A., Cowbridge, Glamorgan
 Evans, Rev. Daniel, D.D., The Vicarage, Carnarvon
 Evans, Rev. E. Herber, Carnarvon
 Edwards, T. Gold, Esq., Gwynfryn, Denbigh
 Emrys-Jones, A., Esq., M.D. Edin., M.R.C.S. Eng., 10, St. John Street, Manchester (Surgeon to the Eye Hospital)
 Evans, Rev. John Hugh (Cynfaen), 30, Meadow Street, Moss Side, Manchester
 Edwards, John, Esq., Bronfelen, Abergele
 Ellis, G. H., Esq., Pen-y-Mount, Festiniog
 Ellis, Saxon G., Esq., Plas Newydd, Ruthin
 Edwards, Rev. E. Wood, M.A., Vicar of Ruabon
 Evans, Rev. D. W., St. George's Rectory, nr. Abergele
 Ellis, Rev. J. R., Gyffin Rectory, Conway
 Edwards, Thomas, Esq., 31, Tarlton Street, Liverpool
 Edwards, Dr. James, Elm Bank, Anfield, Liverpool
 Ellis, Edward, Esq., 51, Huskisson Street, Liverpool
 Edwards, Rev. Thomas, Llanfihangel y Pennant, R.S.O., Towyn, Merioneth.
 Edwards, G., Esq., Mentmore House, Parkfield Road, Princes Park, Liverpool
 Evans, Wm., Esq., Surgeon &c., Llanerchymedd, Anglesey
 Ellis, Rev. Griffith, M.A. 10 Pembroke Road, Bootle
 Ellis, Robert, Esq., Bangor Villa, Hartington Road, Liverpool
 Evans, John K., Esq., Greenfield House, Greenfield, Holywell
 Elias, Thomas, Esq., The Brewery, Llanrwst
 Evans, T. Forcer, Esq., Forcer Hill, Holyhead
 Evans, Dr. T. Lloyd, Glanrafon, Amlwch
 Evans, Mr. Daniel, Agent, Penmaen Isaf, Penmaen Mawr
 Ellis, Mr. Edward, Auctioneer, Aberystwyth
 Evans, Mr. Evan, Tanner, Carnarvon
 Edwards, Mr. Thomas, Glanybala, Llanberis
 Evans, Mr. Owen, junr., Coal Merchant, Carnarvon
 Evans, Mr. D., C.M., Trefilan, Talsarn, Cardiganshire.
 Evans, Mr. Owen, Bookseller, Conway
 Evans, Mr. John, 10, Fern Grove, Liverpool
 Edwards, Mr. W. A., 167, Bedford Street South, Liverpool
 Edmunds, Mr. Thomas, Printer, &c., Corwen
 Ellis, Mr. J. W., 36, Market Street, Holyhead

Evans, Mr. Samuel, Bodeudaf, Carnarvon
 Ellis, Mr. William, National School, Llandwrog
 Evans, Mr. A. Ll., National School, Maentwrog
 Evans, Mr. John, Ironmonger, Corwen
 Evans, Mr. William Glyn, 9, Bouverie Street, Chester
 Ellis, Mr. Goodman, Mine Agent, North Hendre, nr. Mold
 Evans, Mr. William, National School, Llandinorwic

Finchett-Maddocks, T., Esq., Caegwyn, Carnarvon
 Foulkes, W. Wynne, Esq., M.A., Judge of County Court, Old North Gate House, Chester
 Fanning, Wm., Esq., Waenfair, Amlwch
 Foster, A., Esq., Plas Padoc, Bettws-y-coed
 Francis, George, Esq., C.E., Tŷ Cerrig, Caergwre
 Francis, Absalom, Esq., C.E., Rhosddu, Wrexham
 Ffoulkes, The Venerable Archdeacon, Whittington Rectory, Oswestry
 Fluit, Thomas, Esq., Grey Friars, Chester
 Felix, Rev. John, Glan-Conway
 Francis, Mr. James, Bridge Street Row, Chester
 Foulkes, Mr. Isaac, Bookseller, 18, Brunswick Street, Liverpool
 Farrant & Frost, Messrs., 8, Canon Street, Aberdare

Grosvenor, The Rt. Hon. Lord Richard, M.P., 12, Upper Brook Street, London
 Griffith, J. G. Wynn, Esq., Llanfair Hall, Carnarvon
 Grey, H. D., Esq., Mount Stone, Stonehouse, Plymouth two copies
 Griffith, Samuel, Esq., M.D., Portmadoc
 Griffith, G. R., Esq., M.B. M.C., Castle Square, Carnarvon
 Griffith, John Lloyd, Esq., M.A., Frondeg, Holyhead
 Gardner, W. A., Esq., Redland House, Hough Green, Chester
 Griffith, Dr. O. W., The Plas, Nevin
 Griffith, Edward, Esq., Springfield, Dolgelley
 Griffith, William, Esq., Solicitor, Dolgelley
 Griffith, Rev. R. Williams, Vicar of Llandegai, Bangor
 Griffith, Rev. William, C. M. Penmachno
 Gee, Thomas, Esq., Solicitor, Greenhill, Allerton, nr. Liverpool
 Griffith, John, Esq., The Beehive, Bangor
 Gleave, Thomas, Esq., Rose Cottage, Flint
 Griffiths, D., Esq., 56, Smithdown Road, Liverpool
 Griffith, Mr. W. Lloyd, Corn Merchant, Carnarvon
 Griffiths, Mr. John, Eastgate Street, Chester
 Griffiths, Mr. Griffith, Emu, nr. Criccieth
 Griffith, Mr. John Richard, Schoolhouse, Llanfairfechan

- Hughes of Kimmel, H. R., Esq., Kimmel Park, Abergele
 Humberston, Col., Glan y wern, nr. Denbigh
 Humberston, Philip Hugh, Esq., Glan y wern, Denbigh
 Hughes, Thomas, Esq., F.S.A., The Grove, Chester
 Hudson, R. W., Esq., Bache Hall, Chester two copies
 Hemming, Mrs., Bentley Manor, Bromsgrove, and Caerhun, Carnarvonshire
 Hurlbutt, Mrs., 71, Maryland Road, St. Peter's Park, London, w.
 Hughes, D. G. Munro, Esq., N. P. Bank of England Ltd., Bethesda
 Hobson, Algernon, Esq., Rhos Fair, Carnarvon
 Hughes, Thomas, Esq., Greenfield Copper Mills, Holywell
 Hughes, J. A., Esq., Solicitor, Carnarvon
 Heaton, Rev. H. E., M.A., Vicar of Bettws-yn-Rhos, Abergele
 Hughes, Rev. Hugh Trevor, Dyffryn Elwy, Llaunfairtalhaiarn
 Hughes, Rev. John, Wesleyan Minister, Bathafarn House, Carnarvon
 Hughes, Walter, Esq., Penybryn, Carnarvon
 Harris, Thos., Esq., Old Bank, Amlwch
 Hilton, Thomas, Esq., Great Suffolk St., Southwark
 Hughes, Thos. Glwysfryn, Esq., 23, Woodville Terrace, Liverpool
 Hughes, E. Morgan, Esq., Fair View, Amlwch
 Hall, Charlton R., Esq., Tan-y-Bryn, nr. Llandudno
 Hood, Archd., Esq., Sherwood, Cardiff
 Humphreys, Thomas, Esq., Lily house, near Holywell
 Hayn, Henry, Esq., Bryn Cregin, Deganwy, Conway
 Hughes, William G., Esq., Whaley Grange, Foruby
 Hathawaye, Thomas, Esq., Architect and C. E., Fir Bank Cottage, Bangor
 Hughes, H. O., Esq., Cefu Mawr, Llangaffo, Anglesey
 Hughes, John, Esq., Llewelyn Terrace, Llanrwst
 Harding, George, Esq., Surgeon Dentist
 Hughes, George Jones, Esq., Clerk to the Guardians of the Anglesey Union, Llanerchymedd
 Hughes, Mr. Hugh, Llysdimael, Maerdy, Corwen
 Hughes, Mr. Owen, Belle Vue, Holyhead
 Hughes, Mr. Edward, Post Office, Sarn, Pwllheli
 Hughes, Mr. Owen, Dorothea Office, Nantlle, near Carnarvon
 Hughes, Mr. John R., Bronydre, Carnarvon
 Hughes, Mr. Henry G., Board School, Llanrwst
 Hughes, Mr. Edward, Ironmonger, &c., Carnarvon
 Hughes, Mr. Josiah, Ironmonger, Bangor
 Hughes, Mr. D., Llwynygwalch, Groeslon, Carnarvon
 Hughes, Mr. Thomas Herbert, National Schools, Glanogwen
 Hannah, Mr. John, Abergele
 Harker, Mr. John A., 8, Bridge Street, Chester
 Hughes, Mr. Robert, Bookseller, Tyn-y-Cefu, Corwen

- Hughes, Mr. R. R., Bookseller, Blaenau Festiniog
 Hughes, Mr. Robert, Mona Drug Hall, Llangefni, Anglesey
 Hughes, Mr. H., Llanddeiniolen National School
 Howell, Mr. Edward, Bookseller, Liverpool seven copies
 Humphreys, Mr. W. R., National School, Cynwyd
 Hughes, Mr. James, Fron Hyfryd, Corwen
- Jones-Parry, Love, Esq., M.P., F.S.A., Madryn, Pwllheli two copies
 James, Charles H., Esq., M.P., Brynteg, Merthyr Tydfil two copies
 Johnes, Mrs., Dolaucothy, Llandeilo, South Wales
 Jones, Griffith, Esq., Solicitor, Aberllofwyn, Aberystwyth
 Jones, Walter B. C., Esq., Mynydd Ednyfed, Criccieth
 Jones, Owen, Esq., Bank of England, London, E.C.
 Jones, J. Parry, Esq., Plas Clough, Denbigh
 Jackson, Fredk., Esq., C.E., Carnarvon and Nottingham
 Jones, Rev. J., St. Beuno's College, St. Asaph
 Jackson, John, Esq., Harbour Office, Carnarvon
 Jones, Rev. David, B.A. (Oxon.) Vicar of Llansantffraid Glyn Ceiriog, Llangollen
 Jones, Rev. D., Vicar of Llanrhaidr-yn-Mochnant, Oswestry
 Jones, J., Esq., Bridgend, Mayor of Aberystwyth
 Jones, William, Esq., Solicitor, Mayor of Conway
 Jones, Rev. D. Lloyd, St. John's, Portmadoc
 Jones, Rev. Richard, The Rectory, Hirnant, Oswestry
 Jones, Rev. David, B.A., Rector of Newborough, Anglesey
 Jones, Miss Esther Lloyd, Penrallt, Penmaenmawr
 Jones, Rev. David, Cae Coch, Brynsiencyn, Anglesey
 Jones-Williams, E., Esq., Bank, Aberystwyth
 Jenkins, J. R., Esq., M.D., Colomendy, Ruthin
 Jones, William, Esq., Park Place, Henley-on-Thames
 Jones, Griffith, Esq., 10, The Old Hall, Liverpool
 Jones, Rev. William R., C. M. Minister, Preswylfa, Holyhead
 Jones, Thomas, Esq., Bryn Ywen, Menai Bridge
 Jones, Rev. John, M.A., Llanbedr, Barmouth
 Jones, John, Esq., Ynysfor, Penrhyndeudraeth
 Jones, The Rev. Samuel, The School House, Bodfeirig, near Bangor
 Jones, R. Pughe, Esq., 28, Kensington Garden Terrace, Hyde Park, London
 Jones, William, Esq., Ty'n y Coed, Clyunog
 Jones, Owen, Esq., R.N., Penrhyn Marchog, Holyhead
 Jones, Chas. A., Esq., Bronhendre, Carnarvon
 Jones, John W., Esq., The Grange, Penn Road, Holloway, London, N.
 Jenkin, David, Esq., M.A., Bottwnog Grammar School, Carnarvonshire
 Jones, John T., Esq., Terfyn, Port Dinorwic
 Jones, Rev. Father, Twthill, Carnarvon

- Jones, Richard Owen, Esq., Henblas, Bala
 Jones, R. Owen, Esq., Land Agent, Pwllheli
 Jones, Rev. Michael D., Bala
 Jones, Rev. Michael, Flint
 Jones, J. Glynne, Esq., Solicitor, Bangor
 Jones, Price O., Esq., Everslie, Cressington Park, Aigburth, Liverpool
 Jones, Rev. E. Lloyd, Rhyl
 Jones, Rev. D. (Druisyn), Abergele
 Jones, Rev. J. R. Kilsby, Glen View, Llanwrtyd Wells
 Jones, Rev. Lewis, Vicar of Cadoxton, near Neath, S. Wales
 Jones, Rev. Francis, Waenfawr, Carnarvon
 James, Rev. David, B.A., Northop, Flintshire
 Jones, Rev. Robert, Curate of Llanerchymedd, Anglesey
 Jones, Thomas, Esq. (Cynhaiarn), Portmadoc
 Jones, John, Esq., St. John's, Wrexham
 Jones, John, Esq., 13, Hemans Street, Liverpool
 Jones, John Edwards, Esq., M.D., M.R.C.S. Eng., L.S.A. & L.M. Lond., Brynyffynon, Dolgelly
 Jones, Ellis W., Esq., 17, Verulam Street, Liverpool
 Jones, Thomas, Esq., Surgeon, Aberystwyth
 Jenkins, Josiah R., Esq., Colomendy, Ruthin
 Jones, Dr. D., Clarence House, 71, Everton Road, Liverpool
 Jones, Owen, Esq., Plasglasgwm, Penmachno
 Jones, Hugh, Esq., M.R.C.V.S., Brynarfon, Llangefni
 Jones, Peter Powell, Esq., 6, Water Street, Rhyl
 Jones, Dr. O. W., D.D.S. (A.M.) L.D.S., F.P.S.G., Dentist, Market Place, Bangor
 Jones, Rev. Griffith, Wesleyan Minister, Bagillt
 Jones, Rev. Richard, Darowen Rectory, Montgomeryshire
 Jones, Rev. M. Wheldon, The Vicarage, Trefeglwys, Caersws, Mont.
 Jones, W., Esq., 24, Upper Duke St., Liverpool
 Jones, D., Esq., 28, Brunswick Street, Liverpool
 Jones, W. Pryce, Esq., 16, Amberley Street, Liverpool
 Jones, Lewis E., Esq., 62, Mulgrave Street, Liverpool
 Jones, Ishmael S., Esq., 3, Great George's Place, Liverpool
 Jones, J. Harrison, Esq., 4, Thackeray Street, Liverpool
 Jesse, John F., Esq., Bathafarn, Ruthin
 Johnson, Rev. H. R., Aberdare, South Wales
 Jones, David, Esq., 8, Bedford Road, Bootle, Liverpool
 Jones, Rev. John Owen, Bronygraig, Llanberis
 Jones, Rev. Hugh, St. Domingo Grove, Liverpool
 Jones, R. Hughes, Esq., 6, Kelvin Grove, Prince's Road, Liverpool
 Jones, John William, Esq. (Cybi), Preswylfa, Carnarvon
 Jones, Peter, Esq., Halkyn, Holywell

- James, Richard, Esq., General Post Office, Liverpool
 Jones, David, Esq., Gloddaeth Hall, near Conway
 Jones, David S., Esq., 22, Brunswick Buildings, Liverpool
 Jones, Rev. J. B. Goodman, Llangristiolus Rectory, Llangefni
 Jones, Rev. John, Cerrigydruidion Rectory, Corwen
 Jones, Rev. E. Sinnett, M.A., Angorfa, Penmaenmawr
 Jones, Rev. Moses Morgan, Ship Hotel, Llanrug, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. John, Wine Merchant, Minafon, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. Thomas Henry, Nant Adda, Portdinorwic
 Jones, Mr. Thomas, Cottage, Port Penrhyn, Bangor
 Jones, Mr. Jno. Wm. (Andronicus), Bryn Tegid, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. W. H., 3, Alexandra Terrace, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. J. Owen, Bron Menai, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. G. W., Voelgron Schools, nr. Pwllheli
 Jones, Mr. W. D. (Seiriol Wyn,) Holyhead
 Jones, Mr. David R., Draper, &c., Gwalehmai
 Jones, Mr. William Williams (Gwilym o Fôn), Brân House, Towyn
 Jones, Mr. J. M., Board School, Llanberis
 Jones, Mr. J. D., Beech Bank, Llanberis
 Jones, Mr. Owen D., Summer Hill, Llanberis
 Jones, Mr. Samuel, Glan Dinorwic, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. John Beuno, Schoolmaster, Rhiwlas, near Bangor
 Jones, Mr. Robert, Visitor Office, Abergele
 Jones, Mr. E. O., Printer, 62, Arfon Terrace, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. John Closs, Upper Vale, Llanberis
 Jones, Mr. Hugh, Nelson Emporium, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. Robert, Llandegai, Bangor
 Jones, Mr. D. T., Quarry Manager, Plasynant Quarries, Bettws Garmon, Carn.
 Jones, Mr. David, Printer & Stationer, Amlwch
 Jones, Mr. John, Bookseller, Aberayron, Cardiganshire
 Jones, Mr. Thomas, Waenfawr Board School, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. William, Emral Villa, Rhyl
 Jones, Mr. Griffith (Glan Menai), Bryn Llwyd, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. J. R., Talbot Hotel, Aberystwyth
 Jones, Mr. Evan Price, Raglan House, Beaumaris
 Jones, Mr. Richard, The New Shop, Dolgelly
 Jones, Mr. O., (late Governor of H. M. Prison, Beaumaris) Menai Bridge
 Jones, Mrs. Mary Jane, Deubigh Villa, 17, St. Domingo Grove, Liverpool
 Jones, Mr. Robert, 14, Mulgrave Street, Liverpool
 Jones, Mr. Robert, 13, Violet Street, Liverpool
 Jones, Mr. William, 14, Admiral Street, Liverpool
 Jones, Mr. William, Bryn Owen, Borth, Cardiganshire
 Jones, Mr. R. Evans, Printer, Conway

Jones, Mr. Thomas, Postmaster, Flint
 Jones, Mr. Daniel Pryse, Glasfryn Board School, Cerrig-y-Druidion
 Jones, Mr. H., Blaenau Festiniog
 Jones, Mr. David G., Rhiw, Rhiwbryfdir
 Jones, Mr. W. Cadwaladr, Pengwern Arms Hotel, Festiniog
 Jones, Mr. E. Ll. (Rhuddlanydd,) Upper Bangor
 Jones, Mr. William Lloyd, C. E., 1, Brynteg Terrace, Bangor
 Jones, Mr. O. D., Draper, Bon Marché and Victoria House, Carnarvon
 Jones, Mr. Richard, Butcher, Holyhead
 Jones, Mr., 55, Rockfield Road, Liverpool
 Judd & Co., Messrs., St. Andrew's Hill, Doctor's Commons, London, E.C.

Keynon, Hon. George, Llanerch, Panna, County of Flint
 Kneeshaw, Henry, Esq., J.P., Penmaenmawr
 Kelly, Thos. T., Esq., Bryn Coch, Mold
 Kirk, John Smith, Esq. M.A., Ph.D., Grammar & Collegiate School, Carnarvon
 Killin, Rev. Richard, Rector of Festiniog & Rural Dean of Ardudwy
 Kirkham, Rev. J. W., M.A., Rural Dean of Cyfeiliog, & J.P., Llanbrynmair

Londonderry, The Most Noble The Marquis of, K.P., Plas Machynlleth
 Llandaff, The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of, The Palace, Llandaff
 Llanover, The Right Hon. Lady, Llanover, Abergavenny, South Wales
 Lloyd, Morgan, Esq., Q.C., M.P., 53 Cornwall Gardens, London, S.W.
 Lloyd, E. O. V., Esq., Berth, Ruthin two copies
 Lloyd, The Chevalier, M.A., K.S.G., Clochfaen, Llanidloes
 Lloyd, Rev. T. H., Nerquis Vicarage, Mold, Flintshire
 Lloyd, Morgan, Esq., Maesincla, Carnarvon
 Lloyd, R. Alfred, Esq., 16, South Molton street, London, W.
 Lloyd, J., Esq., 160, Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool
 Lewis, Thomas, Esq., Royal Goat Hotel, Beddgelert
 Lewis, John Rice, Esq., 39, Bentley Road, Prince's Park, Liverpool
 Leon, J., Esq., Artist, Carnarvon
 Lester, William, Esq., Bron Offa, Wrexham
 Lewis, Thomas, Esq., Gartherwen, Bangor
 Lewis, Rev. James S., Guilsfield Vicarage, Welshpool
 Lee, Rev. M. H., Hanmer, Whitchurch, Salop
 Luck, Richard, Esq., Plas, Llanfairfechan
 Lloyd, Rev. Henry, Bryn Eleth, Amlwch
 Lloyd, Edward, Esq., 16, Overton Street, Liverpool
 Lloyd, John, Esq., Victoria Park, Aintree, near Liverpool
 Longcroft, C. R., Esq., Llanina, New Quay, Cardiganshire
 Levi, Rev. Thomas, Aberystwyth
 Lloyd, Rev. D. Lewis, M.A., Christ College, Brecon

- Lewis, W. Thomas, Esq., Mardy, Aberdare
 Lewis, Rev. Daniel, The Vicarage, Waenfawr, Carnarvon
 Lewis, Rev. John, Curate of Llanystumdwy, Criccieth
 Lloyd, A. Eyton, Esq., Cynval Villa, Rhyl
 Lewis, Rev. Evan, M.A., Canon of Bangor, and Rector of Dolgelley
 Lloyd, Mrs., Hengwrt, Dolgelley
 Lloyd, Edward, Esq., Lorne Street, Chester
 Lloyd, Capt. T. E. J., Plas Tregayan, Llangefni
 Lewis, David, Esq., 69, Hope street, Liverpool
 Leathley, Mr. R. W., Manchester House, Colwyn Bay
 Lloyd, Mr. William, 26, High Street, Carnarvon
 Lloyd, Mr. John E. J., Stationer, Aberystwyth
 Lewis, Mr. Griffith, Stationer, &c., Penygroes
 Lewis, Mr. John, 24, Kimberley Street, Liverpool
 Lloyd, Mr., Landseer Road, Everton, Liverpool

 Martin, Sir Theodore, K.C.B., Bryntysilio, near Llangollen
 Meyrick, Sir George E. M. T. Fuller, Bart., Bodorgan, Anglesey
 Morris, Lewis, Esq., J.P., Barrister at Law, Penbryn, near Carmarthen
 Mesham, Major, Pontryffydd, Bodfari
 Millington, John, Esq., Penrhos, Carnarvon
 Menzies, John, Esq., Menai Bank, Carnarvon
 Mathews, William, Esq., Lee Cottage, Caerwys, Holywell                      three copies
 Morgan, William E., Esq., Rose Cottage, Union Road, Exeter
 Morgan, Owen, Esq., (Morien,) The Ashgrove, Treforest, Pontypridd
 Morgan, Edward, Esq., District Auditor, Machynlleth
 Morris, E. Rowley, Esq., 184, Camden Road, London, N.
 Morris, Evan, Esq., Highfield, Wrexham
 Marks, T. T., Esq., C.E., Commissioners' Office, Llandudno
 Morgan, Rev. D. C., (Nenog Wyn,) Curate of Chiseldon, Swindon, Wilts
 Marshall, F., Esq., 3, Harcourt Buildings, Temple, London
 Mortimer, Rev. Thos. Gwynne, Rector of Castle Bigh, The Court, nr. Fishguard
 Miller, S. H., Esq., F.R.A.S., Belle Vue Park, Lowestoft, Suffolk
 Morton, William, Esq., Albert Street, Birmingham
 Morgan (B.) Rev. Richard, Wesleyan Minister, Llanberis
 Morgan, Rev. John, Rector, Edeyrn, Pwllheli
 Murray, George J., Esq., Mytchett Place, Frimley, Surrey
 Morgan, Rev. D., B.D., Ysgcifog Rectory, Holywell
 Morris, Rev. Richard, Taliesin House, Taliesin, Cardiganshire
 Morgan, Jno., Esq., Surgeon, Pontrhydygroes, near Aberystwyth
 Morgan, Rev. David Watein, B.A., Curate of Borth, R.S.O.
 Morgan, William, Esq., Vice-Principal St. Mary's College, Carnarvon
 Morgan, Rev. Thomas, B.D., Dyserth Vicarage, Rhyl
 Morgan, Rev. John, The Rectory, Llandudno

- Morris, Evan, Esq., 20, Water Street, Liverpool
 Marsh, Miss E., Tybrith, Carno, Montgomeryshire
 Marshall, Mr. Alfred, 5, The Willows, Breck Road, Liverpool
 Morris, Mr. William, Post Office, Cerrig-y-Druidion
 Matthews, Mr. John, National School, Cerrig-y-Druidion
 Morris, Mr. Jno. S., Model School, Carnarvon
 Morgan, Mr. John, Cadnant, Menai Bridge
 Morris, Mr. M. T., Liver Establishment, Carnarvon
 Morgan, Mr. James, Ynys House, Aberystwyth
 Morris, Mr. J. Ll., Printer and Stationer, New Street, Mold
 Morris, Mr. Henry, Coach Builder, High Street, Bangor

 Nanney, H. J. Ellis, Esq., Gwynfryn, Criccieth
 Nicholl, John C., Esq., Merthyr Mawr, Bridgend, Glam.
 Nott, Mr. W. A., 9, Vale Street, Denbigh
 Nixon, Edward, Esq., Sasile House, Leeds

 Owen, John, Esq., High Sheriff of Carnarvonshire, Tŷ Coch, Carnarvon
 Owen, Edw. H., Esq., J.P., Tŷ Coch, Carnarvon
 Oakeley, William E., Esq., The Plas, Tanybwlich, Merionethshire
 Owen, John, Esq., (Owain Alaw,) Chester
 Owen, Dr. O. Elias, Glanaber, Llangedfni
 Owen, William, Esq., M.R.C.S.E., L.S.A.L. & C., The Hollies, Shore Road, Hackney, London
 Owen, A. C. Humphreys, Esq., Glansevern, Montgomeryshire
 Owen, Thos., Esq., R.N., Peurhyn Marchog, Holyhead
 Owen, Owen, Esq., Solicitor, Llwynrhudol, Pwllheli
 Owen, W. H., Esq., Plas Penrhyn, Dwyran, Anglesey
 Owen, Isambard, Esq., M.D., 41, Gloucester Gardens, London, W.
 Owen, Rev. R. Trevor, Llangedwyn, Oswestry
 Owen, Rev. David, Vicar of Bryn croes, Pwllheli
 Owen, Rev. John, M.A., Brynymor, Criccieth
 Owen, John, Esq., Bodnithoedd, nr. Pwllheli
 Owen, David E., Esq., (of Okell & Owen), E. I. Merchants, Liverpool
 Owen, Rev. Elias, M.A., Rector of Efenechtyd & Diocesan Inspector of Schools
 Owen, Rev. James Richard, A.M. Oxon, J.P., Rector of Llanferras, nr. Mold
 Owens, Richard, Esq., Rhiauva, Anfield Road, Liverpool
 Ormerod, Peter, Esq., Pen-y-lan, Ruabon
 Owen, Rev. David, Rector of Llandanwg and Llanbedr, Merionethshire
 Owen, Edward, Esq., Northville, Breeze Hill, Bootle
 Owen, W. R., Esq., 32, Bloom Street, Liverpool
 Owen Mr. Robert, 19, Cadogan Street, Prince's Road, Liverpool
 Owen, Mr. John, jun., 20, Gibson Street, Liverpool
 Owen, Mr. William Hugh, Auctioneer and Estate Agent, Carnarvon

- Owen, Mr. O. R., Printer, Turf Square, Carnarvon
 Owen, Mr. R., (R. O.), 8, Victoria Place, Bethesda
 Owen, Mr. W., British School, Trawsfynydd
 Owen, Mr. Edward, Bookseller, 108, North Hill street, Liverpool
 Owen, Mr. Henry, Butcher, Carnarvon
- Penrhyn, The Right Hon. Lord, Penrhyn Castle, Bangor two copies
 Powis, The Right Hon. The Earl of, Powis Castle, Welshpool
 Pennant, The Hon. George Douglas, Penrhyn Castle, Bangor
 Price, R. J. Lloyd, Esq., Rhiwlas, Bala
 Parkins, W. Trevor, Esq., Glasfryn, Gresford
 Puleston, J. H., Esq., M.P., 7, Dean Yard, Westminster
 Protheroe, E. Schaw, Esq., Dolwilym, Hebron, R.S.O., Glam.
 Prichard, Thomas, Esq., Llwydiarth Esgob, Llanerchymedd
 Penson, R. Kyrke, Esq., Dinham House, Ludlow
 Protheroe, Miss Schaw (of Dolwilym,) Brynteg, Goodwick, Fishguard
 Phillimore, Egerton G. B., Esq., Old House, 31, Hammersmith Road, London
 Pughe, Wm., Esq., Nat. Prov. Bank of England Ltd., Bangor
 Price, John, Esq., Vice Principal, Normal College, Bangor
 Pugh, Hugh, Esq., J.P., Llys Meirion, Carnarvon
 Pennant, Philip P., Esq., Nantllys, St. Asaph
 Pugh, L. P., Esq., M.P., Abermaide, Aberystwyth
 Pope, Sam., Esq., Q.C., Hafod y bryn, Llanbedr, Merionethshire two copies Prosser, David, Esq., Shcerness, Kent
 Passmore, W. B. Woodside, Esq., Whetstone, Middlesex
 Pochin, Henry D., Esq., Bodnant Hall, near Couway
 Price, Capt. Bulkeley, Plas Cadnant, Menai Bridge
 Powell, Mrs., Crug (late of Coedmawr,) Carnarvon
 Faget, Mrs. Clara, 2, St. Peter's Terrace, Cambridge
 Price, E. Owen, Esq., M.B., Bangor two copies
 Pritchard, Richard Owen, Esq., 83, Premier Street, Everton, Liverpool
 Piercy, Benjamin, Esq., Marchwiel Hall, nr. Wrexham
 Pugh, J. L., Esq., 7, Waverley Road, Sefton Park, Liverpool
 Powell, Rev. William, Bangor Teifi Rectory, Llandyssil, S. Wales
 Parry, William, Esq., 52, Claribel Street, Liverpool
 Prytherch, Hugh, Esq., Surgeon, &c., Menai Bridge
 Powell, Geo. H. Croxden, Esq., Reform Club Buildings, 8, Eberle St., Liverpool
 Pritchard, R. H., Esq., B.A., Solicitor, Bangor
 Prichard, John R., Esq., Chartered Accountant, 5, Cook Street, Liverpool
 Powell, W. B., Esq., Nant Eos, Aberystwyth
 Payne, William, Esq., Borough Treasurer, Portsmouth
 Pryce, Rev. John, M.A., The Rectory, Trefdraeth, Anglesey
 Prichard, Rev. Hugh, Dinam, Anglesey
 Peers, Joseph, Esq., Clerk of the Peace, Ruthin

- Prytherch, John, Esq., M.D., 77, Everton Road, Liverpool
 Parry, Rev. John, Rector, Llanarmon-Dyffryn-Ceiriog, near Llangollen
 Parry, R. Ivor, Esq., Mayor of Pwllheli
 Pryse, Rev. John, M.A., Rector of Trefdraeth, Cwm, Llangwyfan
 Powell, Dr., Newcastle Emlyn, South Wales
 Parry, H., Esq., Bank, Festiniog
 Parry, Rev. A. J., Baptist Minister, Swansea
 Parry, Mrs., Bookseller, 32, Heyworth Street, Everton, Liverpool
 Peters, Miss Jenny, 16, Upper Hill Street, Liverpool
 Pritchard, L. Jones, Esq., Inland Revenue, Somerset House, London, w. c.
 Poole, Henry R. Esq., 18, Pall Mall, London, S.W.
 Phillip, George, Esq., Huntly House, Fairfield, Liverpool
 Powell, David Price, Esq., Howey Hall, Radnorshire
 Price, John, Esq., 105, Duke Street, Liverpool
 Pritchard John, Esq., 25, Norwood Grove, Liverpool
 Potts, Rev. William, Wesleyan Minister, Dartford, Kent
 Pierce, Mr. W. R., Valley, Anglesey
 Pugh, Mr. John, Sportsman Hotel, Carnarvon
 Pierce, Mr. John L., Merchant, Valley, Anglesey
 Prosser, Mr. D., Board School, Penisa'rwaen, near Carnarvon
 Paynter, Mr. John R., Vron, Port Dinorwic
 Phillips, Mr. J., Deunant Board School, Aberdaron
 Pierce, Mr. David, Golden Goat, Carnarvon
 Pritchard, Capt. John, Rhos Fair, Carnarvon
 Pritchard, Mr. Hugh, Pool Street Market, Carnarvon
 Parry, Mr. Henry, 72, North Hill Street, Liverpool
 Parry, Mr. Richard, 4, St. Helen's Terrace, Carnarvon
 Powell, Mr. Ioan, Bryndedwydd, Ffrwd, near Wrexham
 Parry, Mr. Evan, Saddler, Llanerchymedd
 Pierce, Mr. Ellis (Ellis o'r Nant,) Bookseller, Dolwyddelen

 Richards, Brinley, Esq., St. Mary's Abbots, Kensington, London, w.
 Romer, Lieut. Colonel R.W., Bryncemlyn, Dolgelly
 Roberts, John H., Esq., Solicitor, Dinas, Carnarvon
 Roberts, Owen, Esq., M.A., F.S.A., (late of Dinas, Carnarvon), Clothworker's Hall, London
 Rowlands, John, Esq., Solicitor, Tanrallt, Machynlleth
 Rowlands, Rev. Daniel, M.A., Principal, Bangor Normal College
 Rowley, Walter, Esq., C.E., F.G.S., Alderhill, Meanwood, Leeds
 Rowland, Rev. Lewis Thomas, B.D., Vicar of Llanddewi Brevi, S.W.
 Roberts, E. G., Esq., Solicitor, Holyhead
 Roberts, W. Watkin, Esq., Surgeon, Uxbridge House, Carnarvon
 Rees, G. R., Esq., Mayor of Carnarvon
 Robinson, John, Esq., Talysarn, near Carnarvon

- Roberts, David, Esq., J.P., 63, Hope Street, Liverpool
 Roberts, Evan Samuel, Esq., North and South Wales Bank, Bala
 Roberts, David, Esq., 53, Willow Street, Oswestry
 Richards, Charles, Esq., Bank Buildings, Llangollen
 Richards, Rev. John, B.A., Curate of Criccieth
 Rees, Rev. David, Independent Minister, Capel Mawr, Anglesey
 Rowlands, John W., Esq., Surgeon, Llanaelhaiarn
 Roberts, Rev. Hugh, The Vicarage, Aberdaron, Pwllheli
 Roberts, Richard, Esq., Solicitor, Pwllheli
 Roberts, J., Esq., M.D., Abbey Square, Chester
 Roberts, R. D., Esq. (Mwrog), South Villas, Rhyl
 Roberts, Rev. Ellis (Elis Wyn o Wyrfa), Llangwm Rectory, Corwen
 Rees, Ebenezer, Esq., North and South Wales Bank Limited, Liverpool
 Roberts, Robert, Esq., 9, Northumberland Terrace, Liverpool
 Roberts, Robert, Esq., 27, Alvoy Road, Stanley Park, Liverpool
 Rae, George, Esq., North and South Wales Bank, Limited, Liverpool
 Richards, Owen, Esq., M.D., Vronheulog, Corwen, Merionethshire
 Roberts, N. E., Esq., M.B., 38, Mulgrave Street, Liverpool
 Roberts, T. D., Esq., The Grove, Malpas, Monmouthshire
 Roberts, Rev. Aaron, M.A., Vicar of Llangadoc Vawr, and Sinecure Vicar of Llanddeusant, R.S.O. Llangadoc.
 Rowland, J. C., Esq., School of Science and Art, Carnarvon
 Rees, Charles H., Esq., Plas Llanwnda, Carnarvon
 Roberts, Dr. R. D., M.A. (Cantab.) D.S. (London), Clare College, Cambridge Roberts, Edward, Esq., B.A., Assistant Inspector of Schools, Brynllwyd, Carnarvon
 Roberts, D. Lloyd, Esq., M.D., F.R.S.E., F.R.C.P. Lond., 11, St. John Street, Manchester
 Roberts, William, Esq., M.D., F.R.S., 89, Mosley St., Manchester, and Bryn Llanymawddwy
 Radcliffe, Josiah, Esq., Bryn Dinarth, near Conway
 Reese, Evan, Esq., Bank Place, Machynlleth
 Roberts, Robert, Esq., Surgeon, Oakeley Hospital, Festiniog
 Roberts, J., Esq., Bryn Adda, Bangor
 Rees, J. R., Esq., North & South Wales Bank Ltd., Aberystwyth
 Roberts, M. Davies, Esq., Solicitor, Rhyl
 Rogers, John Tudor, Esq., Bryn Tudur, Pen y Gelli, Wrexham
 Roberts, Miss Ellen, Bookseller, 15, High Street, Bala
 Roberts, Evan, Esq., 81, Burleigh Road South, Liverpool; of "The Prospect," Prestatyn, Rhyl
 Roberts, J. Rice, Esq., Tanygraig, Pentraeth, Anglesey

- Roberts, John Griffith, Esq., Physician and Surgeon, Elia House, Amlwch
 Roberts, Thomas, Esq., Assoc. M. Inst. C.E., Portmadoc
 Roberts, Mr. Owen, Bryn Hendre, Carnarvon
 Roberts, Mr. Robert, Rhiw Board School, via Pwllheli
 Roberts, Mrs. Anne, Voelas Hotel, Pentre Voelas
 Roberts, Mr. John D., Board School, Llanaelhaiarn
 Roberts, Mr. Simon, Pale, Corwen
 Roberts, Mr. Robert, Bookseller, Pwllheli
 Roberts, Mr. Richard E., Bookseller, Box 596, Utica, America      two copies
 Rees, Mr. Richard (Maldwyn), Paris House, Machynlleth
 Roberts, Mr. Isaac (Mynyddwr), Holywell
 Rowland, Mr. John, Hill Side, Pwllheli
 Rhys, Mr. Dan, 6, Segontium Terrace, Carnarvon
 Roberts, Mr. Wm. (School-master,) Rock House, Harlech
 Roberts, Mr. O. O., Board School, Dolgelley
 Roberts, Mr. William, Merchant, Valley, nr. Holyhead
 Roberts, Mr. Edward, Lonfa, Penmaenmawr
 Roberts, Mr. Robert, National School, Eglwysbach
 Richardson, Mr. Edwin, 394, Coventry Road, Birmingham
 Rowlands, Mr. D. J., Compositor, 20, Hill Street, Carnarvon
 Roberts, Mr. L. Wilson, Padarn Villa, Llanberis

- St. Davids, The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of, Abergwili Palace, Carmarthen
 Sackville-West, Col. The Hon. William E., Lime Grove, Bangor
 Smart, Rev. Edw., M.A., Vicar of Northop and Archdeacon of St. Asaph, Northop, Flint
 Salisbury, Rev. E. E. Baylee, B.D., Winceby Rectory, Horncastle, Linc.
 Stewart, Capt. N. P., Bryntirion, Bangor
 Sandbach, H. R., Esq., Hafodunos, Abergele
 Sorton-Parry, R., Esq., D.L., J.P., 14, Princes' Gardens, Hyde Park, London
 Smith, Thos., Esq., Bleacon Point, Chester
 Short, Edward H., Esq., 10, Marine Terrace, Aberystwyth
 Stuart, Major W. E., Betton Strange, Shrewsbury
 Sturkey, Rev. John, Marchwiel Rectory, Wrexham
 Sankey, Richard, Esq., J.P., Holywell
 Southern, Francis Richard, Esq., Ludlow
 Stanley, John M., Esq., Vron Don, Rhyl
 Savage, Capt. Hugh, Bodafon, Bangor
 Smalley, William Edward, Esq., Springfield, Rhyl
 Strachan, Y., Esq., Mayor of Wrexham

- Trevor, The Right Hon. Lord, Brynkinallt, Chirk, N. Wales
 Turner, Sir Llewelyn, Parkia, Carnarvon
 Thomas, Rev. Canon, F.S.A., Meifod Vicarage, Welshpool
 Turnour, Arthur E., Esq., M.D., J.P., Grove House, Denbigh
 Tynte, Col. Kemeys, Cefn Mably, Cardiff, S.W.
 Turberville, Lieut. Col. T. Picton, Ewenny Priory, Bridgend, Glam.
 Thomas, Lieut. Colonel W. Hugh, Trevor, Beaumaris, Anglesey
 Thomas, Richard, Esq., Estate Agent, 3, Church Street, Carnarvon
 Thomas, George, Esq., Ely Farm, Ely, Cardiff, Glam.
 Thomas, L. H., Esq., Caerffynnon, Merioneth
 Thomas, Lewis, Esq., Surgeon, Amlwch
 Thomas, Rev. Richard, Baptist Minister, Holyhead
 Thomas, Owen, Esq., Bronygaer, Carnarvon
 Thomas, Thomas, Esq., Tynywern, Pontypridd
 Thomas, John M., Esq., Attorney and Counsellor at Law, Niles, Ohio U. S. A.
 Thomas, William, Esq., Ashfield, Wrexham
 Thomas, John, Esq., 9, Market Street, Carnarvon
 Thomas, Rev. W. Glanffrwd, Vicar of St. Asaph
 Thomas, Rev. J. W., B.A., Curate, Carnarvon
 Thomas, J. Henry, Esq., Tanybryn, North Road, Carnarvon
 Thomas, David, Esq., Gwynfryn, Llanrwst
 Thomas, John, Esq., B.A., Normal College, Bangor
 Thomas, H. O., Esq., Surgeon, 11, Nelson Street, Liverpool
 Thomas, Rev. David, Rector of Llangadwaladr, Bodorgan
 Thomas, Wm. E., Esq., Brynhyfryd, Upper Bangor
 Thomas, W. G., Esq., The Moorings, Carnarvon
 Thomas, Rev. Ceinion, Congregational Minister, Llanfairfechan
 Thomas, Robert, Esq., Bodorgan Linnet Lane, Sefton Park, Liverpool
 Thomas, Richard Griffith, Esq., Architect, Fir Grove, Menai Bridge
 Thomas, Mr. John, Bodlondob, Nevin
 Thomas, Mr. David, National School, Trefdraeth
 Thomas, Mr. David, Registrar, Carnarvon
 Thomas, Mr. R., 1, Bryntirion Terrace, Criccieth
 Thomas, Mr. Maurice, Corris, Machynlleth
 Thomas, Mr. Robert, Salop Road, Oswestry
 Thomas, Mr. Robert, Bookseller, Blaenau Festiniog
 Thomas, Mr. William Owen, The Willows, Breck Road, Liverpool
 Thomas, Mr. G. W., Keartland Place, Bridge Street Row West, Chester
 Taylor, Mr. Thomas, The Schools, Flint

 Upton, M. J., Esq., 48, Clerkenwell Green, London

- Vivian, Sir H. Hussey, Bart., M.P., Park Wern, Swansea
 Venmore, William, Esq., Anfield View, 154, Anfield Rd., Liverpool
 Venmore, James, Esq., Mill Bank, Anfield Road, Liverpool
- Wynn, Sir Watkin Williams, Bart., M.P., Wynnstay, Rhiwabon
 Wynne, W. R. M., Esq., Peniarth, Towyn, Merioneth
 Williams, Sir W. Grenville, Bart., Pengwern, Rhyl
 Wyatt, Sir R. H., D.L., Garthyngarad, Dolgelly
 Williams, Colonel J. V. H., Bangor
 West, Major Cornwallis, Ruthin Castle
 Whitehead, J. D., Esq., Glangwna, Carnarvon
 Williams, A. Wynn, Esq., M.D., 1, Montague Square, Hyde Park, London
 Wilson, Capt. H., Hope, Mold
 Weldon, Thomas L., Esq., 62, Tufnell Park Road, Holloway, London
 Williams, J. Ignatius, Esq., Barrister at Law, Hendregadredd, Tremadoc
 Williams-Ap Ithel, Mrs., The College, Corwen
 Whitaker, Miss, Bryn Celyn, near Pwllheli
 Watts, Rev. E. T., H. M. Inspector of Schools, Plas Gwilym, Criccieth
 Williams, Rev. W. Wynn, Menaifron, Dwyran, Anglesey
 Williams, Gwilym, Esq., Miskin Manor, Glamorganshire
 Wingfield, John, Esq., M.A., 9, King's Bench Walk, Temple, London, E.C.
 Williams, John, Esq., Surgeon, Castle Square, Carnarvon
 Williams, John, Esq., M.D., 28, Harley Street, London, W.
 Williams, Richard, Esq., M.R.C.S., 82, Rodney Street, Liverpool
 Williams, William, Esq., M.A., H. M. Inspector of Schools, Aberystwyth
 Williams, Edward, Esq., M.D., Holt Street House, Wrexham
 Williams, Rev. Canon, Llanfaelog Rectory, nr. Holyhead
 Walker, James Richards, Esq., J.P., Plas yn dref, Corwen
 Williams-Hughes, T., Esq., Surgeon, &c., Belle Vue, Llanengan, Pwllheli
 Williams, Rev. John Lewis, Marley, Whickham, Gateshead-on-tyne
 Williams, Rev. Professor Hugh, M.A., The College, Bala
 Williams, Rev. R. S., Independent Minister, Bethesda
 Williams, J. J., Esq., F.G.S. (Josephus), C. and M. Engineer, Holywell
 Wayne, R. S., Esq., Aberartro, Llanbedr, Meirionethshire
 Williams, Hugh Henry, Esq., B.A., Jesus College, Oxford
 Wood, R. H., Esq., F.S.A., Pantglas, Trawsfynydd
 Wright, Thomas Oakes, Esq., Gresford Bank, Wrexham
 Williams, J. A. A., Esq., Glanbeuno, nr. Carnarvon
 Williams, Rev. St. George Armstrong, Rector of Llangybi, Carnarvonshire
 Wilkins, Charles, Esq., Editor of "The Red Dragon," Merthyr Tydfil
 Williams, W. Lloyd O., Esq., M.B., Llanberis

- Williams, Mrs., Bookseller, Boston House, Holyhead
 Wynne, Miss Frances, 62, Park Street, Grosvenor Square, London
 Williams, Rev. Thomas, B.A., Llecheynfary, Llangefni
 Williams, Hugh, Esq., Surgeon, Breckfield Road, Liverpool
 Williams, Edward, Esq., Surgeon, Dronwy, Llanfachraeth, The Valley, R.S.O.
 Williams, Rev. John, Stanley House, Llanerchymedd
 Williams, Robert ap Hugh, Esq., Plas Llwynon, Llanfair P.G., Anglesey
 Waddingham, T. J., Esq., Hafod, Aberystwyth
 Williams, Rev. R. A., Llanfihangel-y-Pennant, Towyn, Merionethshire
 Williams, David, Esq., Taff Vale Brewery, Merthyr Tydfil
 Williams, Owen J., Esq., Cefn, St. Asaph
 Williams, Rev. William, Llanfair Rectory, Abergelle
 Wood, John, Esq., J.P., Arden, Stockport
 Williams, Rev. D., Newmarket Rectory, Rhyl
 Williams, Rees, Esq., Aberdare
 Williams, John, Esq., Moss Bank House, Croxteth Road, Liverpool
 Williams, Richard, Esq., Solicitor, Vale Street, Denbigh
 Williams, John, Esq., 9, Perth Street, Liverpool
 Williams, Evan, Esq., F.C.A., 19 & 20 Barton, Manchester
 Williams, T. Marchant, Esq., B.A., 353, Camden Road, London, N.
 Williams, R. J., Esq., Solicitor, Flint
 Williams, Edward, Esq., The Royal Hotel, Cardiff, Glam.
 Williams, John, Esq., Gwernhefin, Bala
 Williams, Rev. John, 91, Burleigh Road, South, Liverpool
 Williams, Rev. Thomas Jones, M.A., Llanfaethlu Rectory, Valley, Anglesey
 Williams, Rev. Watkin, Rector of Nannerch
 Wynne, Mr. Robert, Eagles Hotel, Llanrwst
 Wynne, Mr. Llew., 17, Verulam Street, Liverpool
 Williams, Mr. John, T. C., Conway
 Williams, Mr. Owen R. (Cymro Cybi), 121, High Street, Bangor
 Williams, Mr. Robert, Gwalia Offices, Carnarvon
 Williams, Mr. Owen J., Llanrhyddlad, Anglesey
 Williams, Mr. Evan (Ieuan Ceredig,) Brynteg School, Wrexham
 Williams, Mr. William, National School, Clynnog
 Williams, Mr. R. J., 3, Summer Hill Terrace, Upper Bangor
 Williams, Mr. G. M. (Ap Morus), National School, Llangwnadl, Pwllheli
 Williams, Mr. Hugh, National School, Tydweiliog, Pwllheli
 Williams, Mr. Thomas Lloyd, Portdinorwic, near Bangor
 Watkins, Mr. Tom, Cefnfaes B. School, Bethesda
 Williams, Mr. Robert, Brunswick Buildings, Carnarvon
 Williams, Mr. W. Prichard, Upper Bangor

- Williams, Mr. Thomas, Golden Goat Establishment, Carnarvon
 Williams, Mr. W. J., Glan Menai House, Carnarvon
 Williams, Mr. Thomas, Ironmonger, Llanerchymedd
 Williams, Mr. Griffith, Printer & Bookseller, Post Office, Menai Bridge
 Williams, Mr. E., Gwalia Offices, Carnarvon
 Williams, Mr. W. T., 17, Verulam Street, Liverpool
 Williams, Mr. W. J., Ironmonger, Carnarvon
 Williams, Mr. John Edmund, Board School, Rhostryfan
 Williams, Mr. R. R., Cibyn y Mur, Carnarvon
 Williams, Mr. Robert, Draper, Amlwch
 Williams, Mr. John, Bookseller, Bridge Street, Carnarvon
 Wilson, Mr. William H., Brynderwen, Penmaenmawr
 Williams, Mr. D. R., 20, Erskine Street, Liverpool
 Williams, Mr. Hugh, Board School, Roe Wen, Conway
- Yorke, General John, C.B., Plas Newydd, Llangollen, and 89, St. George's Road, London, S.W.
 Yorke, Mr. Thomas, Derwen Villa, Mold

ADDITIONAL SUBSCRIBERS' NAMES

Which came to hand too late to be inserted in their proper places in the List.

---

Preece, W. H., Esq., Gothic Lodge, Wimbledon

Light, Miss, Brynllwelyn, Festiniog, North Wales

Hughes, Rev. J., B.A., 2, Mount Pleasant, Dolgelley

Williams Wynn, Mrs., Cefn, St. Asaph

Roberts, J. Meredydd, Esq., 20, Lowther St., Liverpool

Evans, W. Downing, Esq. (Leon,) Newport, Mon.

Evans, Rev. Richard, B.A., Llangwyfan, Llangefni, Anglesey

---

Just Published, by H. HUMPHREYS, Castle Square, Carnarvon,

Price 2s. 6d. Cloth neat,

OLD KARNARVON :

A Historical Account of the Town of Carnarvon, with notices of the Parish Churches of Llanbeblig and Llanfaglan.

---

BY W. H. JONES,

Author of "History of Swansea Castle," "Memoir of the Family of Napoleon," &c.

---

CONTENTS.

THE history of its Name.—The City of Segontium.—Six Hundred Years ago.—The Castle.—Its Constables.—Its History.—Madoc's Insurrection.—Edward I.'s Charter.—Owen Glendower's Insurrection.—Representation of the Borough in Parliament.—The Civil Wars.—The Progress of 600 Years.—Carnarvon at the commencement of this Century.—Perambulation of the Town.—Eminent Persons connected with the Town.—Miscellaneous.—Llanbeblig Church, History and Description of.—Vicars of Llanbeblig.—Antient Monuments.—Selections from the Church Accounts.—Appendix.—Llanfaglan Church, near Carnarvon.

Illustrated with Speed's Plan (1610) of Carnarvon, and Nine other Illustrations.

---

ENGLISH BOOKS, &c.,

PUBLISHED AND SOLD BY

H. HUMPHREYS, CARNARVON,

Printseller to her Majesty Queen Victoria.

---

ENGLISH-WELSH DICTIONARY, containing 37 000 leading English Words, and nearly 100,000 Welsh explanatory Words and Phrases. To which is added, a List of Proper Names of Places, &c., with their Welsh Synonyms. By JOHNSON, WEBSTER, and HUGHES. Price 2s. 6d.

WELSH-ENGLISH DICTIONARY, containing upwards of 48,000 leading Welsh Words, and upwards of 100,000 English explanatory Words. To which is added, a Geographical Nomenclature; and a List of Words of similar Sound, but different in Meaning, &c. By GWEIRYDD AP RHYS. Price 2s. 6ch.

THE ABOVE DICTIONARIES TOGETHER, half bound, 4s. 6d.; in leather, 6s. 6d., or 7s. 6d. in leather with gilt rim and clasp.

HISTORY of CARNARVON CASTLE—CONWAY CASTLE—BEAUMARIS CASTLE—DOLBADARN CASTLE, and HARLECH CASTLE. Separate Books, 1s. each.

HISTORY OF THE WELSH NATION; the BRITISH KYMRY, or BRITONS OF CAMBRIA; outlines of their History and Institutions, from the earliest to the present times; comprising the Gomic, Trojan, Roman, Arthurian, Saxon, Norman, Tudor, and Modern Eras; also, a sketch of the Ancient Druidic Religion of Britain. By the Rev. R. W. MORGAN. Price 2s. 6d. cloth.

KING ARTHUR'S WELL, Llanddeiniolen, near Carnarvon, North Wales. A Chalybeate Spring, equal to any of the German Spas, with directions for its use. Also, a description of British and Druidical Remains in the neighbourhood, &c. By A. WYNN WILLIAMS, M.D., M.R.C.S., and L.S.A. Price 1s.

VILLAGE SKETCHES; or Chapters from the History of John Jones and Robert Roberts, by Capt. VERNEY, R.N., Chairman of Quarter Sessions for the County of Anglesey. Price 1s.; or in Cloth, 1s. 6d.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LIBRARY
Los Angeles

This book is DUE on the last date stamped below.
<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

DEC 29 1965

INTERLIBRARY

DEC 8 1965

FOUR WEEKS FROM DATE OF RECEIPT
NON-RENEWABLE UCB

MAY 2 1988

JAN 8 1966
A.M. 7-4 4-2 9-10 P.M.

REC'D LD-URL
ORION LD/URL JAN 15 91

DEC 20 1990

REC'D LD-URL

ACNOV 9 1966
OCT 13 1966

LD AUG 31 1970
URL

APR 30 1975
LOANS

REC'D LD-URL

DEC 1 1990

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

See Spine for Barcode Number

